GIVE THANKS AND PRAISE IN NEW BUILDING

Many Worship In Park And Downs Cong. Church

REV. MR. AYRES' ADDRESS

For the first time the wide open doors of the new Park and Downs Congregational church beckoned a welcome on Thursday morning to the gathering groups wending their way from all directions to join in the Thanksgiving Day service of the society.

Without was the brightness of a clear winter day. Within amid surroundings of reverence and sanctity many of the parishioners silently clasped hands in the joy oftheir realization.

Many were there who had stood nobly by the wheel through the last two years of unceasing effort. Here and there were one or two who had seen the first church founded and followed it in its upward struggle to its present eminence. Truly all had true cause for gratitude this Thanksgiving day.

The voluntary started slowly and sweetly and for the first time in the new church were heard the distant voices of the vested choir. On their slow advancing heads a shaft of sunlight from the high leaded windows above seemed to cast the blessing of the Almighty upon the edifice erected in His service.

An inspiring invocation from the minister and the Doxology "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was sung with what seemed, in the new building, an added reverence and fervor.

Responsive reading was taken part in by all and the choir responded with "Glory be to the Father." A prayer of Thanksgiving was read and a Thanksgiving hymn was sung.

The Scripture reading was from Matthew 15 and "Oh Divine Redeemer" was beautifully sung by Miss Ruth Hardy.

A prayer by the pastor and a response "In heavenly love abiding" by a quartet formed by Arthur F. Capen, Charles Chase, Chester A. Boynton and Charles Bishop. Miss Henrietta C. Gram presided at the piano.

Among the choir numbers were "Praise the Lord, Oh my Soul" and "Oh Lord how manifold are Thy Works."

It consisted of Mrs. George Stebbins, Mrs. E. R. Whittacre, Mrs. Musgrave, Clara Coombs, Mildred Podbury, Grace Hunter, Lydia O'Neil, Flora Sass, Freda Klingenhagan, Myrle Daniels, Margaret Heasman, Lillian Hall, Natalie Scott, Ethel Axberg, Gertrude Sass, Artemus Dingley.

ALL OBSERVE THANKSGIVING

Various Institutions Enjoy Happy Holiday

TURKEY GALORE

Thanksgiving was observed at the several Quincy institutions as usual. At the Quincy Home all work, except that absolutely necessary, was omitted and the inmates gave the day up to enjoyment. At noon they were served with an appetizing Thanksgiving dinner which had been provided by the Overseer of the Poor. This consisted of turkey with all the "fixins" such as vegetables, pies and puddings.

At the National Sailors' Home, a genuine Thanksgiving dinner with turkey, etc., was served at noon. After dinner the old sailors gathered in the smoking room and fought over again some of the naval battles in which they had participated, as the smoke of the pipe of peace rolled skyward.

At the Sailors' Snug Harbor at Germantown, the same condition prevailed as at the National Sailors' Home. A turkey dinner with all that goes with it was served at noon and then the "old salts" gathered in the lounging rooms. Some indulged in checkers and others in cards so that the day was passed in a pleasant manner.

Some of the unfortunates at the City Hospital were necessarily deprived of their Thanksgiving dinner but those, whose physical condition would permit, were given a taste of the good things the more fortunate people enjoyed. In the afternoon, patients received visits from relatives and friends who brought goodies and flowers and everybody was made as comfortable as possible.

☞The Dorcas society of the Universalist church are to hold a Christmas fair in the vestry of the church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. On Wednesday evening a supper will be served at 6.30 followed by a series of illustrated songs by the young ladies of the Murray club assisted by Mrs. Lewis reader and soloists. On Thursday evening the three act drama, "The sisterhood of Bridget" will be given by the North Weymouth young people. The society have been busy with their needle the last six months and have many attractive articles to offer for sale.

MUCH MIRTH AT MASQUERADE

Miss Margaret Michael and Wallace Troup Lead March

THE OFFICERS

The fourteenth annual concert and masquerade ball of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor was held Thanksgiving eve at Music hall and was the occasion for an unusually large gathering. In fact it was one of the largest affairs that the society has ever held.

There were a large number in costume. These costumes were of a varied nature and all the well known characters were impersonated. There were the stately and handsomely gowned court officials and ladies, who touched elbows and danced with those who impersonated the more common characters such as dominoes, school boys and girls, milk maids, soldiers, clowns and the like. All were bent on having a good time and appearances indicated that it was being realized.

From 8 to 9 o'clock, Wilson's orchestra gave a promenade concert which included all the popular airs. Meanwhile the merry makers had begun to gather and were having oceans of fun when the grand march was announced. This was a very pretty affair and was led by Miss Margaret Michael, the floor directress, with Wallace Troup. They were followed by the other officers of the dance and nearly one hundred couples in costume.

Prizes were given for the handsomest dressed and the most comically dressed couples and after some difficulty, the judges announced that the prizes for the handsomest gowned couple had been awarded to Miss Florence Blackard and James Robbie who were attired in a Colonial costume. The other prizes for the most comical were awarded to Miss Ardel MacDonald and Robert Summers.

Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock, during a brief intermission, by an efficient committee.

The officers of the ball were as follows:

Floor Directress—Margaret J. Michael.

Assistant Floor Directress—Jennie G. Grassick.

Aids—Annie Norrie, Margaret McIntosh, Annie Walker, Belle Stronach, Helen C. Sherwin, Jennie S. Norrie.

Committee of Arrangements—Mrs. Margaret Stronach, president; Mrs. Jennie MacKay,, vice president; Mrs. Annie Mutch, secretary; Miss Alice Joss, treasurer; Mrs. Effie Scarborough, Mrs. Minnie McNeil, Mrs. Julia Dawson, Mrs. Mary Muckle, Mrs. Johann Norrie, Mrs. Margaret Ross,

CONSIDER NEW PARISH HOUSE

Special Meeting At St. Chrysostom's In Interest of Plan

BUILDING COM. APPOINTED

A special meeting was called for Wednesday evening by the wardens of St. Chrysostom's church, to consider the project of a new parish house. The chairman Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra opened the meeting with prayer and then outlined the object dear to all the hearts of the parishioners, that this fall seemed the right time to do something definite that he had spoken to Bishop Lawrence whose hearty cooperation was promised. Much time and thought had been spent by Mr. Cleveland in working out plans and he said the parish was fortunate to have in its vestry Frank E. Cleveland of Cram, Goodhue and Ferguson, architects of Boston, and Edward F. Parlee the builder.

He then called on Mr. Cleveland, who began by saying that our former rector Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg first put forth the project of a new parish house and set aside a small sum for that purpose. On an easel Mr. Cleveland had a large plan which all could see, and very explicitly explained his plans. Smaller plans as well as the elevation, were passed for the audience to see more closly the entire scheme as outlined and shown by him seemed perfect in every detail, the only discussion being over the seating capacity of the assembly room and that was a spirited one. Many questions were asked him, as well as Mr. Parlee and all answered most intelligently.

The different presidents of the various organizations were called on and all expressed the thought that their societies would surely do all in their power to help pay the cost.

A building committee was appointed, composed of the vestry, the presidents or leaders of each organization of the church, and they to appoint one member. The committee was asked to report at an early date and a meeting has been called for Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the parish rooms.

HAS PLAN TO ANNEX DEDHAM

Representatitve Frederick J. Grady of Dedham has leaped into sudden prominence because of his declaration that he has prepared a plan to annex Dedham to the Boston democratic machine.

Mr. Grady makes a Thanksgiving announcement that his bill provides for the annexation of Dedham to Boston and is modelled closely after the Hyde Park bill, which was accepted by Boston and Hyde Park at the State election.

'The Dedham bill will carry a referendum to the next State election and will designate the town as Ward 27 of Boston.

Politically, the bill is of great interest because of the physical union it brings about of Mr. Williams with the Boston Democracy, with which he sometimes agrees and often disagrees.

The Dedham annexation bill will not be the only annexation bill in the Legislature. There will be a Revere bill and also a Chelsea bill.

In fact, the entire question of annexation is likely to come up before the Legislature in the form of a petition under which any city or town may become an integral part of the Boston corporation if it sees fit to do so.

Mamma—"Ethel, the richest man you will meet in society will be Mr. Croesus. Mind! whenever he speaks to you, you must blush."

Ethel—"But, mamma, suppose I can't?"

Mamma— "Nonsense! Think of something that will make you blush."—Pittsburg Bulletin.

ANNUAL UNION THANKSGIVING DAY SERVICE

Was Held In The Wollaston Congregational Church

REV. DR. BUGBEE SPEAKS

The annual union Thanksgiving Day services of the Wollaston churches took place Thursday afternoon at five o'clock in the Wollaston Congregational church. A representative audience of the denominations filled the church and the congregational singing was full and spirited.

An organ prelude by Miss A. F. Hinckley opened the services and was followed by selections by an orchestra composed of George Critchley, Albert Fearing, Charles Chilstead, Elmer Noyes, S. B. Moorehouse, Ernest Pletsch, Max Pinkham and Miss May Critchley.

The Thanksgiving Day proclamation was read by Rev. Carl G. Horst pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

During the meeting two baritone solos "Sailor's Grave" and "Village Blacksmith" were sung by Adams Walker of Boston.

Rev. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church read the scripture lesson and prayer was offered by Rev. Wesley Wiggin of the Wollaston Methodist church, who conducted the remainder of the devotional services.

An address "The larger Thanksgiving" was delivered by Rev. Lucius H. Bugbee, D. D. of Malden.

"Our conventional causes for Thanksgiving," said the speaker" are legitimate enough I suppose but they are hardly adequate to express our deepest motives of gratitude.

"No nation stands on as high a level as ours. Nowhere in the world can one find a higher level of individual prosperity, whose cities smoke with industry, whose pastures are filled with the feeding flocks and her valleys covered with the growing corn.

"If however our gratitude is simply for well filled barns, a faithful harvest and immunity from plague and ealamity. If its significance concerns only the achievement of outward prosperity and peace and freedom from disaster then there are millions to whom Thanksgiving would be but mockery and confusion."

"There are some uncomfortable things in the world that do not minister to Thanksgiving. While the neighbor on our right is quaffing at sparkling wine of prosperity and peace he on our left is draining the bitter dregs of suffering and pain."

"The pains of progress have taken hold upon us. Any nation who em-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Chancellor Day says the trust law is paralyzing commerce. Evidently some people are determined to have a monopoly or they won't play.

We may not be able to get beef packers into a prison cell, but any way they have had to spend a lot of time closeted with their lawyers.

It has been found at the Cincinnati kindergarten training school, that a girl can live on seven cents worth of food a day. But never in the ice cream season.

They are still stealing masterpieces of painting from the European galleries, and our overworked tourists can reduce slightly the list of things they are under obligation to see.

We trust that Andy Carnegie and John D. will demonstrate their efficiency as trust magnates by the extent of their forgettery when they get before the steel trust investigating commitee.

C. W. Morse has been removed from Atlanta jail on account of sickness. If he could have kept his courage up, the prison with its simple fare would be quite as much of a health resort as the high life common among his crowd.

Uncle Sam is willing to do all he can to stop this revoluting business on the Mexican border. But it's a tiresome prospect if he has got to spend the entire winter walking back and forth across Arizona and New Mexico.

The granite cutters' international secretary seems slated for the big post at the head of the labor forces of the country sooner or later. And all the time, James Duncan is unconsciously preparing himself for the position; and he is doing it by constant association with the probelms of the union labor movement. In his position with the G. C. I. A., he has shown himself to be a leader.—Barre Times.

THE JEWISH PASSPORTS.

The Russian government has always protested a traditional friendship for the United States. This is a convenient asset when its sins against modern civilization excite the nausea of the neighbors.

But when it comes to assuring the rights of American citizens, it becomes quite another matter, particularly if those American citizens have any of the blood of Father Abraham in their veins. So the other day when our Ambassador Guild petitioned in behalf of American Jewish citizens whose passports are ignored, the Russian state department offered no redress.

The Russian government may be within its rights, in adopting the antediluvian policy of forbidding its own Jewish citizens to move from one place to another without a passport and special government permission. But it will get little further moral support from Uncle Sam if it declines to honor passports, the validity of which is usually recognized in countries whose rulers have gone beyond the cannibal stage. Already 321 Congressmen and others of our public men have joined the movement to persuade the Russian government to show some of the characteristics of a human being.

There are about 5,000,000 Jews in Russia by the last census, though a sizable fraction of them may since have been stabbed by the fierce lupes of the government. And there are 155,000,000 other inhabitants of the Russian empire. Yet the 155,000,000 are trembling with rage lest the 5,000,000 acquire possession of the country and erect a Jewish state over its ruins.

The Jews are unpopular in this country, principally because for centuries they have been herded in the slums, and most of them have acquired slum traits that do not make them very pleasant neighbors. Education is transforming them, and under the sweetening influences of culture, many of them are acquiring personal attractiveness. Whether one likes them or not, it will be generally admitted that the Jews are too brainy for the simple hearted Russians. Their long persecution has given them the same alertness that the street Arab acquires through his long game of tag with the police. The Russian, feeling himself outwitted when he trades horses with the Jew, gets his satisfaction by cutting his throat. It's a shade primitive for the year of our Lord 1911.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPER.

Although more and more is being said every year about doing Christmas shopping early, a large share of the public does not commonly decide what it wants until about Dec. 24. Such persons are hardly likely to do much preliminary buying.

There are a good many people who do not care to make such perfunctory gifts. They are sick of presents that are so ill-suited to the needs of the recipient that they find their way into closet shelves and waste baskets as soon as they can be safely put out of sight.

Such people have Christmas buying in mind all through the year. If you have your eyes open in that way the things you like turn up in unexpected quarters. If you wait until the before Christmas scrimmage, you almost never find what you want from the tousled assortment of pawed over goods.

The next two weeks are a golden time to buy Christmas gifts. The stores will have additional stocks which are fresher today than they ever will be subsequently. Think of that, if the tough plight of the poor clerk under the strain of the pre-Christmas week does not move your heart.

THE WINTER ON THE FARM.

The closing of the season of active agricultuarl operations brings again a period of comparative leisure to the farmer.

In other occupations, dull times are utilized by the merchant or manufacturer to prepare for more effective future campaigns. The successful farmer, too, does not spend his odd hours of winter in gossiping on the curbstone of the market town.

In these times when agriculture practice is being revolutionized, a farmer ought to put in quite a little technical study during the winter evenings. Many of the agricultural colleges get out correspondence course and furnish lecturers for their travelling expenses for use of granges and farmers' clubs so that the means of self education are handy and not at all costly.

Manyof the older farmers still think, because their grandfathers planted certain seeds in certain soils after a certain manner that that is reason enough why they must do the same. But the younger men are learning by actual experience that the experiment station can usually tell you how the production of any particular soil can be doubled.

IN INTEREST OF "NO-LICENSE"

Meetings At Various Places Will Be Held Sunday

THE SPEAKERS

Meetings in the interest of "No-License" will be held Sunday in the several wards of the city. In the centre, the meeting will be held Sunday evening at the Bethany church at 7.30. The speaker will be Daniel A. MacKay of Roxbury. Music will be by the Pilgrim quartet. At South Quincy, the meeting will be at the Presbyterian church on Water street at 7.45 with Charles E. Moody as the principal speaker.

At the Memorial church, Atlantic, at 7 o'clock the speaker will be Theophilus King.

Other meetings arranged are Washington Street Congregational church at 7.30; Hall Place M. E. church at 7, Union meeting at the Swedish Congregational church, Garfield street, at 3 in the afternoon. At this meeting the pastors of the Methodist and Baptist churches will speak.

At all of the meetings, in addition to those announced, there will be several local speakers and also good music. The object of these meetings is to arouse enthusiasm so that a rousing "No" vote may be rolled up at the election on Tuesday.

FINDING PRESENTS FOR MEN.

No, Genevieve, don't buy your best fellow that dinky little blotter holder that has to be rolled back and forth with a sea sick motion. Remember that George gets from his insurance agent flat strips of blotting paper that are twice as handy on his desk.

Nor don't offer him bunches of shaving paper with a lot of frills and fluffiness that will merely catch dust. George probably uses a safety razor and cleans it at the hot water faucet.

If you want to give him something he will really like, study the kind of neckwear he affects, and go down to the swellest men's furnishing goods store you can find, and buy him a tie as near in color tone and pattern as you can to those he is already wearing.

Man is a conservative critter in his personal habits. If he likes inconspicuous patterns in his negligee shirts, don't pick him stripes as noisy as a barber's pole, that will give him a grouch every time he puts it on for duty's sake.

FALL—CARRUTHERS.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carruthers, 16 Edison street this morning, occurred the wedding of their daughter Mary to Mr. Arthur Fall of Union, N. H. Rev. Richard E. Armstrong of Christ church officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in blue silk mossaline, with point lace trimming. She wore a hat of the same shade of blue trimmed with white plumes and carried bride roses and lilies of valley. Her sister Margaret was maid of honor and was gowned in a pretty modish white dress and black hat trimmed with pink rose buds and carried pink roses. Miss Mila Bates who played the wedding march carried pink and white carnations.

The best man was the groom's brother Everett Houghton. The double ring service was used, the wedding party standing under a bower of ferns and palms and kneeling on a satin cushion. Only the immediate friends of the family were present. Beautiful presents were showered upon the happy couple.

After a buffet lunch Mr. and Mrs. Fall left amid showers of good wishes and confetti the bride throwing her bouquet to be scrambled for by her friends.

barks upon the ocean of development must multiply its perils a thousandfold."

"If the ultimate end of our nation is an industrial Utopia. If the proclivity of every human life is to secure a path of comfort, security and ease then the infinite order of things is out of taste."

Dr. Bugbee showed how since the time of the Greeks men had come to feel the fruitlessness of outward prosperity and had clothed satisfaction in a new garment of meaning whose blessedness depended upon the freedom and power of the spirit.

The story of Jenny Lind was instanced as a noteworthy case of true spiritual renunciation. We are coming to see said the speaker, that the end and purpose of life is to build upon our physical foundation a spiritual superstructure that shall prick the heavens with our aspirations.

"The purpose of all is the bringing to life of a better character. If this is the goal then life is indeed worth living."

"Our sensitiveness to peril and pain determines our rank in the order of things. Only in proportion to the delicacy of an instrument is its capacity for either harmony or discord."

"We have something here to thank God for. We should be grateful for the sensitiveness that makes it possible to feel the pain and hardness of the world. This very fact determines the rank in our state of being. Who would not rather be a man instead of a jelly fish?"

"But the highest joy of which we are capable is the joy of vicarious sacrifice for other people."

"If service is what we desire let us give thanks to God that we are born under conditions that offer unlimited opportunities for sacrifice. Then it is our good fortune not to be be ministered unto but to minister and be able to give our lives in the service of mankind."

America was sung in closing by the congregation and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Joseph Walther.

SERVICE AT BRAINTREE.

Union Thanksgiving services were held at the South M. E. church and were participated in by all the Protestant churches in town except the First Congregational, which is without a minister and the Union Congregational of East Braintree.

The Governor's proclamation was read by Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman of All Souls' Church. The rest of the program included prayer, Rev. J. B. Magee of the East Braintree M. E. Church; Scripture reading, Rev. J. A. Mitchell of the Baptist church; sermon Rev. Tyler E. Gale of the South Congregational church; benediction, Rev. George H. Parkinson of the South M. E. Church.

During the services there were vocal solos by Mrs. Fred Swallow and Gilbert R. Pfinney.

Q.—What is the spiritual value of Daniel's marvelous deliverance from the den of lions? Would the spiritual value of the narrative be less or more if the story were only an allegory? (W. R. D.)

Answer.—The story of Daniel's faithfulness to the Lord; his confidence and trust under the trying conditions in which he was placed; and his courage in resisting the influences of evil and error that were brought to bear against him; and his willingness to die an awful death in the lions' den rather than violate his conscience by yielding to that which was unjust and sinful, has always been an incentive to the Lord's people to greater courage, and determination to be loyal and true to the principles of righteousness as expressed in the commands of their God. If this story were but an allegorical narrative it would lose much of its force. Personal example has always exercised a more potent influence than mere precept. What an individual says is never so effective as what he does. "Actions invariably speak louder than words." What an inspiration there is in the life of a noble, honest man! How we delight to meditate upon his God-like qualities of mind and heart! Would that we all might be Daniels in purity and sublimity of character; obedient in all ways to the will of the Aimighty Being who controls the Universe.

Q.—We read in Haggai ii, 9, that the Lord says—"The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former." Is this the "house" or Temple that was rebuilt by Zerubbabel, or what "house" is here referred to? (N. L. T.)

Answer.—The third verse of this chapter shows that the Lord did not refer to the Temple that was rebuilt by Zerubbabel, because it was inferior to the Temple that was erected by Solomon. The term "house" is sometimes used in the Scriptures in the sense of "household" or family arrangement. It is with this meaning that the Apostle refers to the nation of Israel as a "house of servants," and to the followers of our Lord Jesus as a "house of sons" (Hebrews iii, 5, 6). This "latter house," the house of sons, is called the "Temple of God" (I Corinthians iii, 16, 17). It is this house or Temple that is to be filled with the glory of the Lord, and it will be more glorious than any previous house or arrangement of the Lord. The prophet therefore, was foretelling of the future glorification of the Church of Christ; and then the Lord would give peace in this place—peace to the nations—that the angelic proclamation might be fulfilled—"Peace on earth good will toward men."

well, Allen Painton, Charles Richardson, Charles Tanner.

The pastor Rev. William Bingham Ayers spoke at length regarding the new church. It was not with exulting they moved into their new temple of worship but with a deepened sense of their tremendous responsibility.

The feeling was of having been through a battle and taken new territory at great cost to every member of the church and community. We should join in worship with a quickened spirituality. Here a deep sense of the spiritual presence is felt from the church itself.

As each piece of the material church retained its individuality and personality yet was lost in the union of the whole structure so we should all join and dovetail in harmonious movement and go forth in a great united endeavor toward the future.

A strong sermon was preached by the pastor with the text "Out of the old the new." Drawing a lesson from the miracle of the loaves and fishes he said in part:

"We cannot hold back the speculation:—'What would the master have done if the people present had no loaves and nothing else to offer in their place.' He simply took the poor frugal offering that was there and out of that he called the blessing that was to be their's.

It is this principle that is being continually worked out in life. Out of the things of yesterday come into being the things of today. Out of the old the new.

"Out of small seeds, humble beginnings and crude endeavors the great achievements of this world are wrought. There are no great spontaneous outbursts bringing with them all that meets the want of a peculiar issue or age. It is a world of growth, of development.

"Out of nothing comes nothing. If you go to the field and cry out for grain and food: 'How many seeds have you?' the fields will respond. Give me seed and a little of your toil and I will give you grain.'

"The Lord will not work his miracles out of nothing. 'Give me something,' he says, 'on which to base my work,' from the empty life he can work nothing. In the heart void of love and trust he cannot dwell. We need not go far to illustrate.

"Here in this community not twenty years ago a few souls, with some faith and a great deal of courage, took these seeds of religious hope and confidence and embodied them in an organization for the perpetuation of God's word in the community.

"These were the seven loaves and the fishes. They were broken to the service of the Master. They multiplied and the seven fold blessing comes now in the shape of this new temple of worship in which today we look to God for the first time.

"Two years ago the case seemed hopeless. How many loaves had we? A small tottering structure, groaning in every joint. A disheartened and wearied organization, very few men. Little hope and less money. 'How many loaves have you?' It was the Master's voice.

"He found some confidence some earnest prayers, some enthusiasm, some devotion some unflagging zeal. Some unselfish souls who were willing to yield up what little they possessed if only it might feed others.

"He took all these and crystalized them, and while he has fed us, filled us and multiplied our numbers, giving us of his own grace, this is what he returns to us. Seven-fold blessings for all we have given him.

"This church is not a new creation that God has flashed upon our community but it is the unifying of all the fruitful processes of the past. It is the fulfilment of all prayers. The seed come to harvest.

"This church has not reached her goal. This is not the end. We stand in triumph today, but it is not the final triumph. Tomorrow we take up the march afresh and move forward to newer life and larger achievements still.

"Nothing stands still in this world. Let us join the universal plan. We have advanced. Let us advance to higher spheres, fuller views, more glorious fields."

The service closed with the hymn "Come ye thankful people come" and a benediction by the pastor.

The new church will be occupied by the congregation at the Sunday morning service and temporary electric lighting connections will be made for the Sunday evening meeting.

The pulpit will be put in place next week and the pulpit furniture will be ready in January. The pews will be installed in February at which time the dedication of the church will take place.

The society is to be congratulated upon the attainment of a house of worship that not only will accommodate the ever growing parish but also lends a spirit of reverence and sanctity not possible in the old structure.

PRETTY WEDDING AT CHURCH OF SACRED HEART

Miss Mary E. McGrath Bride of John Joseph Burns

AT HOME AFTER FEB. 1

In the church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic Thanksgiving morning at nine o'clock Miss Mary Elizabeth McGrath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. McGrath of Fayette street, Wollaston was married to John Joseph Burns son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac J. Burns of Old Colony avenue, Wollaston by Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, the Rev. Fr. McNiffe celebrated the high nuptial mass.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a gown of white silk messaline cut en train. Her long tulle veil was fastened with lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses. She wore a pearl necklace a gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel T. McGrath, the bride's sister wore an embroided white muslin with pink sash and carried ping carnations with a small tulle veil on her head. Two little cousins of the bride Louise and Hazel McAdams daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McAdams of Quincy were train bearers and were dressed alike in embroidered muslin with wreaths of lilacs. Robert Burns was his brother's best man and the ushers were Messrs. James and Edward Keohane of Atlantic.

The altar was prettily decorated with white and red carnations. The organist Miss Louise Costello played the wedding march from Lohengrin and Miss Eva Rice of Standish avenue sang the "Ave Maria" and "O Salutaris Hostia" at the offertory of the mass.

The reception from 10 until 2 o'clock was held at the bride's home, the young couple were assisted in receiving by the bride and groom's parents and the bridesmaid and best man. A wedding breakfast was served. The decorations were white roses and pink carnations. They received many beautiful gifts of silver, cut glass, linen and china.

Mr. and Mrs. Burns left amid a shower of rice and confetti on a honeymoon trip to New York. They will be at home at 48 Prospect street, Atlantic after February first.

MILTON.

The pond at Cunningham park is all ready for skating. All that is needed now is a little cold weather to make some good smooth ice.

The Cunningham gymnasium team played a scoreless game of football Thanksgiving afternoon, with the Quincy A. A. The teams were very evenly matched. In the last period the game had to be stopped because the spectators crowded onto the field.

The Milton police auto was out after speeders Thanksgiving day and several were overhauled whose cars were making a greater milage than allowed by law. They will appear in court later.

Miss Joanna Rotch, aged 86, who is dead at her home in this town, was widely known here and in Boston through her long interest in philanthropic work. She came to Mitlon more than 60 years ago and was one of five children.

Among her usrviving relatives are William G. Rotch, Mrs. P. C. Severance of California, Mrs. John T. Bullard of Boston, Mrs. Fred Swift, Mrs. Francis H. Stone, Miss Mary R. Rotch, A. Lawrence Rotch, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Mrs. Horatio A. Lamb, Dr. Thomas Morgan Rotch and Thomas William Binney.

Observance of the centenary of the birth of Wendall Phillips, was held at the old Milton cemetery, Thursday. Both Dr. Phillips and his wife are buried here and the celebration which began at dawn was attended by a large band of pilgrims.

TRAGEDY AT A PARTY

Boy Accidentally Sends a Bullet Into His Father's Brain

Southbridge, Mass., Dec. 1.—In the midst of a gay Thanksgiving party, Sydney Clark, the 5-year-old son of John C. Clark, shot and killed his father at the Clark home on Lebanon Hill.

The shooting was accidental and occurred in a dark room, where the party had assembled in preparation for an early morning fox hunt.

The boy had secured his father's rifle and discharged it unintentionally while trying to half-cock the hammer. Mr. Clark was killed instantly, the bullet entering his brain through the left cheek.

EACH CONDUCTS OWN AFFAIRS

Standard Oil Subsidiaries Quit Main Corporation

END OF "FATHER OF TRUSTS"

Passes Out of Existence In Conformity With Decree of Federal Supreme Court—Dissolution Made Less Difficult Because Companies Retained Identity—Many Officials Will Be Obliged to Remove From New York

New York, Dec. 1.—The career of the "Oil Trust" has officially come to an end. The Standard Oil company of New Jersey, some time called the father of trusts and perhaps the most celebrated corporation in the world, will no longer control the affairs, as the holding company, of more than thirty corporations in various branches of the oil business.

Beginning today these subsidiaries which, under the decree of the United States supreme court, must conduct independently the various enterprises, will assume entire management of their own affairs.

The oil trust theoretically passed out of existence on Aug. 31, when the books containing the records of the company's stockholders were closed for distribution of the stock of the subsidiaries, but during the intervening period of readjustment it was necessary to preserve the old form to a large extent. Now the work of disintegration has been completed.

The task of effecting dissolution was made less difficult by the fact that the subsidiary companies never had lost their identity. They have retained their separate officers and boards of directors, and to a large extent have conducted their own affairs from their home offices, in whatever state they were.

These companies, however, have had representation at 26 Broadway, the home of the New Jersey corporation, which exercised general direction over all their affairs. It is this connection which will be severed and henceforth the affairs of each company will be conducted in its home state.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey will continue to exist, as it owns several large plants. To each stockholder will be forwarded today his proportionate share of stock in each of the subsidiaries, so that in place of one issue of stock he will have more than thirty.

The removal of the officials of subsidiaries who have had their offices at 26 Broadway will affect a large number of men who for years have lived in New York. A minor official of one company, who has just completed paying for a home in the suburbs, must go to Denver. Others will go all the way to California. Several score of officials will be transferred in this way.

LASTERS' UNION FAVORED

Wins Important Fight by Decision of Bay State Supreme Court

Boston, Dec. 1.—A strike to secure more uniform distribution of work and wages was held to be justifiable by the full bench of the supreme court, and an injunction was denied father and son who had been discharged as a result of the strike. The father had been helper for the son, who received the compensation for their joint labor, and to that the union objected.

In the course of his opinion Chief Justice Rugg wrote: "An honest effort to better conditions of employment by laborers is lawful." The full bench reversed the decree of Judge Pierce of the superior court.

The reversal of the decree of the superior court, which found against the union, is a triumph of union labor in its fight against the contract labor or cross-hand system. The decision is one of the most important to labor unions that has been handed down for some time.

Franklin Case the Latest Feature In Los Angeles Bomb Trials

Los Angeles, Dec. 1.—Three trials and a grand jury investigation all going on at once are the known possibilities of the McNamara murder trial.

Bert H. Franklin, chief of the special investigators employed by counsel for McNamara, was arraigned on a charge of bribery of a venireman. He obtained an extension of two days, instead of ten, for which he asked.

The trial of H. B. Conner, A. B. Maple and F. I. Bender, accused of attempting to dynamite the hall of records, is set for Dec. 11, and a grand jury will be asked to investigate further into the Franklin case soon.

McFarland Bests Murphy

San Francisco, Dec. 1.—Packey McFarland, the idol of the Chicago stock yards, got the decision over "Harlem Tommy" Murphy at the end of twenty rounds of fighting, before 6000 critical spectators.

SANTA CLAUS SUGGESTIONS

Befrilled Powder Box Makes a Useful Christmas Present.

Have you seen talcum powder boxes covered with ribbon? If you have observed these attractive additions to the toilet table you very likely made a note of them for use as Christmas presents.

The box seen in the cut is of the regulation size for holding talcum powder. Dresden ribbon sufficiently wide to fit over the sides of the box and allow a small frill to project is selected. The sort with a plain satin edge is prettiest for the purpose.

The ribbon is turned over at either end for about an inch to form a casing at the neck of the box. The rest of the ribbon lengths are gathered bag fashion around the box. Baby ribbon matching the predominating shade of the Dresden design is used to tie the ribbon covering in position around the neck of the box with loops and ends at the sides. A number of these little offerings may be made at small cost if the same coloring in ribbons is used. A bolt of the baby width will be enough to trim about six boxes.

Cretonne Bag.

Here is a fancy workbag with decidedly new and useful features. As every needlewoman knows, when work sewing silks, etc., are put into the same bag they have an unpleasant habit of being hard to extricate with out tumbling about on the floor. The bag illustrated obviates this difficulty. It is made of a dainty design in cre tonne. The bag proper is about a foot deep and lined inside with china silk. Coming halfway up on the sides of this bag are pockets of the cretonne also lined with silk, which are intended for holding the working materials. The large bag is drawn up with ribbon at the top, but the handles proper are of half inch stitched cretonne and are attached like those of a Boston shopping bag.

The Dainty Sachet Greeting.

Little sachets are always a dainty way to send the Christmas greeting, and sachets are always welcome. If one can use a brush at all attractive sachets can be easily and ipexpensively made by taking large envelopes and lettering them appropriately or painting sketchily some flower upon them. Envelopes legal size should be used, and they should be in some color—deep cream, rich brown or some other equally artistic tint. On this the message can be lettered in contrasting color or some flower spray painted. Slip inside a thin pad of cotton sprinkled with sachet powder.

Another dainty sachet is made of odds and ends of ribbon or silk in the shape of a flower. A pansy, for instance, can be fashioned of lavender and white ribbon, the two upper petals of the lavender, the other three of white tipped on the edge and striped in the center with lavender paint. This painting can be done by the veriest tyro, for it is merely little dabs and lines. The petals are simply snipped into shape with the scissors. Under one of the petals is a tiny bag holding the sachet. A flaming poinsettia made of scarlet ribbon would be most appropriate.

Hints For Homemade Gifts.

Sofa pillow cases of rudely stenciled denim—splendid winter colors—ready to make up and as low as 50 cents.

White felt padding for tea table cloths, cut in the required size and neatly bordered with white tape.

Bureau and pincushion covers of bright cretonne, edged with a coarse white curtain lace.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MADAME SIMONE.

Dec. 4, Madame Simone, the noted French-actress, who has been acclaimed by the French critics as the greatest emotional actress of the day, will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Plymouth Theatre. Mme Simone will present in English a repertoire of great plays, coming direct from Daly's Theatre, New York, where she has been appearing with great success. She will present as her opening bill Henri Bernstein's powerful drama, "The Whirlwind," and will include in her repertory other noted successes including Bernstein's "The Thief" and Rostand's "The Lady of Dreams."

"The Whirlwind" has been declared by eminent critics to be Bernstein's greatest play. Mme. Simone will appear as Helene, a young woman of fashion, the daughter of a wealthy banker, who is socially ambitious. To favor his advancement among the aristocracy he has married his daughter to a man of distinguished family many years her senior and totally unfitted to win or hold the affections of his high-spirited daughter. Several years after her marriage, in which the play opens, she has been carrying on an intrigue with a young man of noble family, who made sport and gaming at cards a life occupation. The young man coming to the end of his string decides to kill himself while Helene is determined to save him at any cost. How she grapples with this situation, at what cost she brings victory, only to be thwarted in the end, Mme. Simone denicts with febrile passion such as only a woman of Latin temprament can feel.

"BEN-HUR."

The record made by Klaw & Erlanger's new and greater production of Ben-Hur" at the Boston Theatre bids fair to eclipse that of any similar production that has ever appeared at that historic playhouse. The theatre-going public have been quick to realize that production is being presented that has set a new mark for American producers and that it will be long before another opportunity of witnessing anything of a like magnitude will be offered. The production is to be taken intact to the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, London, England, where it is scheduled to open on April 6, 1912.

Those who had the opportunity of seeing the play on its former presentations in Boston are unanimous in their verdict that the last word as far as scenic effects, perfect staging and orgeous investiture has been said. The cast is pronounced the best that has been seen in this country and from the length of time that it has now been running at the Boston Theatre the play is pronounced absolutely perfect as regards stage management and technique. Richard Buhler as Ben-Hur renders the part in a manly manner, and W. J. Kelly, as Messala is a sufficiently bold and aggressive young Roman patrician. Miss Alice Haynes as Tirzah, Miss Cecil Kern as Esther and Miss Lillian Lawrence as the Mother of Hur are excellently cast.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Irene Franklin, known the country over as "The Queen of Vaudeville," will be the principal feature at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. As a singer of character songs Miss Franklin stands in a class all by herself. Since she first sprang into the limelight by singing "Redhead, Redhead, Gingerbreadhead," one night over in New York, she has steadily climbed upward until she now stands in the very front rank of vaudeville artistes. Miss Franklin writes all her own songs. This is no doubt one of the foundations upon which her success is based, for Miss Franklin seems to have the happy faculty of writing songs that are especially adapted to her talents, and no one else has ever been able to imitate her. Among the new numbers she will sing at B. F. Keith's is "I Wish My Pa Was a Janitor Man," the pathetic plea of the little rich girl who envies the ragged urchins next door; and such established favorites as "The Talkative Waitress" "Expression;" "I Knew Her Then;" "What About it?" "The Chambermaid" and "I, bringing up the family" Burt Green, the composer will assist Miss Franklin at the piano. The bill surrounding this splendid feature is not quite complete as yet, but the acts already engaged indicate that it will be one of the strongest of the season. Donette the gypsy violinist who has not appeared in Boston for over three years, returns from a long Western tour.

"THE WOODSMAN."

At the Castle Square Theatre Monday, John Craig will produce "The Woodsman" for the first time on any stage. It will introduce to the Boston public as a dramatist Robert Stodart, a young newspaper man, and its production will be in line with Mr. Craig's efforts to give a chance to new talent, and to offer to Bostonians new plays which deserve a hearing.

The plot of "The Woodsman" unfolds a clear and clever story. Its scenes are laid in the woods of Northern Maine, where a summer party of city people is having a good time. The hero and heroine are Desera Strong and Helen Blake, the former an expert guide whos ambitions and personality are somewhat above his station. The latter a New York society girl. They fall in love, and as she has fascinated another man named Maniere, a New Yorker also, he seeks to discredit Strong in her eyes. But after four acts of delightful dialogue and exciting action, during one of which Strong and Helen are lost by night on a mountain top, everything is straightened out, and Helen's hand is placed in his by her father, who asks him to accept her with the compliments of the author. The play is redolent of the atmosphere of the woods, and the character of Desera Strong is a strongly original one in manliness and personal strength. He is gentle with animals and gallant with women, and he himself should make the success of the play. In the Castle Square production of "The Woodsman" John Craig will play the title role, with the entire company in his support.

CORONATION PICTURES.

What might have been expected has happened. As soon as the last performances of the Coronation Pictures at Tremont Temple were announced, the interest grew brisker than ever, and as a result this cannot be the last week. The public has requested their continuance, and continue they must. Their fifth month is rapidly approaching, and still there are multitudes that have not seen them. It should be remembered that they are astonishing reproductions by the new color process of the events of the Coronation of King George and Queen Mary, and that they are startlingly realistic and lifelike. They are the very latest demonstration of the remarkable developments in the taking and exhibition of motion pictures.

CASTLE SQUARE SUNDAY CONCERT

Another and even better Sunday Concert comes off at the Castle Square on Sunday evening. Commendation of each successive program is heard on all sides, and especially may the concert be praised for their refinement and wholesomeness. They are the very best Sunday concerts that it is possible to offer. Sunday evening, there will be new motion pictures on the program, and a half dozen or more refined specialists, musicians and others who are artists in their respective lines.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

The Hollis Street Theatre will have for its attraction next week, the merry rollicking farce, "The Seven Sisters," with Charles Cherry and the New York Lyceum Theatre Company, under the direction of Daniel Frohman. Mr. Cherry, is well known in Boston through his numerous pleasant visits with Maxine Elliott's company. In this merry comedy he plays the part of a dashing young lieutenant, the type of manly role with which he has been so popularly identified for many seasons. The play is from the Hungarian of Ferencz Herczeg, and was adapted by Miss Edith Ellis. It had a sensational success in Europe, the length of its run covering a number of years. It is a jolly, domestic farce, full of amusing situations and humorous complications developed in a story that has the warmth, joyousness and liveliness of youth. It deals with the troubles of the widow of a Hungarian officer in moderate circumstances in regard to suitable marriages for her seven daughters. It is the custom of the Hungarian gentry to always keep the youngest daughters in the background until the eldest is disposed of in matrimony. In this case the mother is at her wit's end to keep the younger ones at a suitably youthful age until the oldest is married, and she is reduced to putting them in short skirts and pinafores to accord with the age which she gives to each.

The gallant young officer Count Horkoy and Mici, the fourth sister, combine in a scheme by which the three elder girls shall be married off so that Mici will obtain her "emancipation," and be credited with the dignity of long dresses and hair done up to accord with her real age. It is all very cleverly managed during four acts of hilarious, wholesome fun.

"EVERYWOMAN"

Manager Henry W. Savage has earned the gratitude of all play-goers by his magnificent production of Walter Browne's modern morality play, "Everywoman." It is one of the most interesting and effective dramas ever seen in Boston and has ensconced itself in the affections of all who witness the fine presentation of the play now at the Majestic Theatre. There are a few, no doubt, who resent every attempt to get away from the coventional groove in theatrical representations, and to whom the use of allegory, symbolism and interpretive music is an invitation to scoff and jibe. But in "Everywoman" these elements combine to build an illusion that not only has real value as an entertainment but something more of ethical purpose than the stage usually exhibits.

The allegory of "Everywoman" is potent in its application to modern life since the heroine in her quest of love and happiness follows the path that lead her through familiar scenes and recognizable localities. The symbolized characters, "Wealth," "Time," "Greed," "Vanity," "Truth," and Vice" are all clearly and ingeniously conceived; the story has a progressive dramatic movement and the interest is sustained from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The incidental and choral music, especially composed by George Whitfield Chadwick, is a special feature.

"Everywoman" deserves to remain prosperous in Boston for many weeks, but as the stay of his great play is a limited one the wise playgoer will take time by the forelock and avail himself of one of the earliest opportunities of witnessing a performance that is unique in dramatic annals.

BEFORE FATHER'S EYES

Two Brothers Run Down and Killed by a Motor Truck

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 1.—Harry and John R. Rouff, 13 and 9 years of age, were run down and instantly killed before their father's eyes on the Charles River esplanade by a small auto truck.

The driver of the car, George Chabot, 21, was arrested, charged with manslaughter.

The boys, with their father, John O. Rouff, were on their way home. They were on the roadway dragging a small two-wheeled cart loaded with wood that they had collected, while their father walked on the sidewalk, talking with John A. Clark.

The auto truck suddenly shot out of the darkness and, before either man could jump for the children, had struck them, hurling both some distance.

This is the second fatal accident in which Chabot has been concerned. On the night of Oct. 24, Fred R. Caswell, chief of police of Norwood, N. H., was run down by an automobile operated by Chabot and died as a result of his injuries four days later. Chabot was held blameless.

BRAINTREE AROUSED BY FALSE ALARMS

Three false alarms at Braintree were rung in from boxes 42, 35 and 135 within a few minutes' time Thanksgiving night beginning at 5.20, and caused no end of excitement in all parts of the town, as many of the outlying districts thought a conflagration was raging.

A young man was seen running along Washington street from South to North Braintree, telling people as he passed them that Union and West streets were all ablaze. People ran in the direction of these streets.

Chief of Police Loring accompanied by Officers Gallivan and Wentworth obtained a good description of the fellow and visited his home this evening. No arrest was made tonight, but the police notified the young man's parents that he will be wanted in the District Court at Quincy this morning.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Leavitt of South Central avenue, spent Thanksgiving day in Kittery, Me.

All of the employees of J. F. Sheppard & Sons were remembered, Thanksgiving, with turkeys.

Dr. Harry W. Blaisdell of Faxon avenue, was a Thanksgiving day visitor at his old home in Portsmouth, N. H.

The Red Men of Quincy journeyed to Braintree, Thanksgiving morning, and met the Civic club of Braintree on the gridiron. They had their scalps taken to the tune of 5 to 0.

A more beautiful day than Thursday for Thanksgiving could hardly be found. The air was cool but not too much so and the sun shone brightly all day.

Family gatherings were the rule Thanksgiving day and many were the happy reunions. There were of course, some that were not very happy owing to illness or recent deaths.

JURY OUT TWENTY MINUTES

Cravagreer is Convicted of the Murder of Brigham

West Kingston, R. I., Dec. 1.—After but twenty minutes of deliberation the jury which heard the evidence in the case of Blenin Cravagreer, charged with the murder of Joseph Brigham, returned a verdict of guilty.

Brigham was shot and killed as he lay abed at his home, the shot being fired through the window. Cravagreer denied everything charged against him.

Sentence was deferred to allow counsel for the defense to file exceptions.

MRS. FARRAR COMING HOME WITH BROTHER

Davis Hastens to Aid Wife of King's Deposed Chaplain

London, Dec. 1.—Richard Harding Davis, who arrived by the Cunarder Mauretania at the urgent request of his sister, Mrs. Farrar, wife of Rev. F. P. Farrar, who was recently deposed as the king's chaplain, will take his sister back to New York tomorrow.

Mr. Davis says the first he knew of any trouble between his sister and her husband was in a cable from her saying she was in great trouble and asking that he come to London at once.

"I jumped on the Mauretania thinking she was seriously ill," said Davis, "and it was only after a day or two at sea that I received a wireless from my brother intimating that the nature of the trouble was not illness, but of a far more serious nature. When I arrived here I learned all the circumstances."

MRS. PATTERSON MAY GO ON THE STAGE

Frowns on Vaudeville, but Would Join First Class Company

Denver, Dec. 1.—Freed of the charge of murdering her husband, Mrs. Gertrude G. Patterson spent Thanksgiving day with her parents and sister.

The verdict hung on the trip which Mrs. Patterson took to Europe with Emil Strouss of Chicago, with her husband's knowledge and consent. The jurors accepted her statement that she shot her husband after he had knocked her down.

Mrs. Patterson said she had no plans for the immediate future. She said she would not go into vaudeville, "as that would be cheapening and degrading," but she thought a place in a first class theatrical company might tempt her.

Indianapolis, Dec. 1.—Standing outside the public market Mayor Shank wound up his four days cut price sale of Thanksgiving poultry. Being an auctioneer by profession, the mayor said he could not resist offering a turkey to the highest bidder when business slackened.

"Better lose money this way than any other I know of," commented the mayor. He said he had sold, at prices from 2 to 5 cents under the regular dealers, more than 2500 fowls. His sole purpose, he said, was to force down exorbitant prices, and he had succeeded.

CARDINALS GET THEIR RED HATS

New Princes of Church Take the Ancient Oath

BIG PROCESSION TO VATICAN

Witnessed by Hundreds of Thousands of People In Rome—Pope Sends Special Word to America as He Invests Cardinals From This Country—Comments on Enthusiasm Shown Here Over Their Elevation

Rome, Dec. 1.—Hundreds of thousands of persons lined house tops and streets Thursday to watch the cardinals, clerical nobles, ambassadors and other guests pass in procession to the Vatican, where was held the consistory at which the newly elected cardinals received the red hat. Within the Vatican were more than a thousand Americans, invited to the ceremony.

The cardinal's hat which was bestowed yesterday is broad brimmed, low crowned and similar to the hats used by various monastic orders. There is a difference, however, in the color. The cardinal's hat is red. It is further distinguished by an official insignia.

Before entering the public consistory, the new cardinals took the ancient oath in modified form that is prescribed for such an occasion.

The final ceremony in the creation of the new members of the sacred college took place in the hall of the beatification, when the red hat was conferred on the eighteen new cardinals, who include three American prelates, Mgr. Falconio, formerly apostolic delegate; Mgr. Farley, archbishop of New York, and Mgr. O'Connell, archbishop of Boston.

The pope previously received the new cardinals and accepted their homage. He laid on the head of each of them the red biretta, and, in response to the address by Falconio, who acted as dean, expressed his deepest thanks for the sentiments of devotion expressed. He praised the prelates whom he had chosen to enter the apostolic college, because of their piety, zeal and culture, the signal services they had done to the church and their unlimited devotion to the holy see.

The pontiff gave particular greetings to the cardinals "coming from far America," saying:

"The enthusiasm with which the news of your elevation was received, the demonstration of gratification by all classes of citizens, the acclamations, accompanied by benedictions, affectionate salutations and best wishes on your departure from New York and Boston, and finally your triumphal voyage across the ocean, protected by the papal flag, give me not only hope but absolute assurance that on your return our Lord will multiply the fruits of your apostolate while in that hospitable land which greets all people of the world and provides for their welfare through laws that mean liberty. The Almighty will reign and His glory will shine in that land."

He expressed the hope that the example of Catholics in England and Holland would influence the return of others in those countries to the bosom of the church. He spoke sorrowfully of conditions in France, trusting that divine mercy would hasten a change, and ended by giving the apostolic benediction.

TRAGEDY ENDS CHASE OF WEDDING PARTY

Two Women Killed, and One Receives Fatal Injuries

Boston, Dec. 1.—Two women were killed, another woman fatally injured and two men and two other women seriously injured in an automobile accident in Walnut avenue, Roxbury.

All were guests at a wedding reception which followed the marriage of James R. Gormley, a Boston leather merchant, to Miss Ella Donovan of Roxbury.

The party of seven, in an automobile driven by John J. Gormley, a brother of the groom, was giving chase to the newly wedded pair, who were escaping to the South station in another machine.

The pursuing car is said to have been travelling at a very rapid rate of speed. It was while the driver was endeavoring to send the machine around a difficult turn that the automobile skidded completely around and overturned, burying beneath it one of the occupants and hurling the others to the curbing.

The dead are Miss Julia C. Galvin and Miss Mary Gaffey. Mrs. Catherine Miley, aunt of the groom, received injuries that will prove fatal.

The others injured were Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gormley and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Gaffey. Gormley, the driver of the machine, sustained a broken arm and nose.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The United States has formally offered to China the services of 2500 American troops, now stationed in the Philippines, to aid in keeping open the railway from Pekin to the sea, and for the protection of foreigners in China, if the Chinese council of ministers desires to accept their services.

This is in no way to be considered a force of intervention, but merely the United States' part in carrying out, with the other powers, the provisions of the 1901 protocol for maintaining railway communication from Pekin to the sea.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

The next day Sheldon was left all alone. Joan had gone exploring Pari-Sulay and was not to be expected back until the late afternoon. The loss of the Jessie had hit Berande severely. Not alone was his capital depleted by the amount of her value, but her earnings were no longer to be reckoned on, and it was her earnings that largely paid the running expenses of the plantation.

"Poor old Hughie," he muttered aloud once. "I'm glad you didn't live to see it, old man. What a cropper, what a cropper."

Between squalls the Flibberty Gibbet ran into anchorage, and her skipper, Pete Oleson (brother to the Oleson of the Jessie), ancient, grizzled, wild-eyed, emaciated by fever, dragged his weary frame up the veranda steps and collapsed in a steamer chair. Whiskey and soda kept him going while he made report and turned in his accounts.

"You're rotten with fever," Sheldon said. "Why don't you run down to Sydney for a blow of decent climate?"

The old skipper shook his head.

"I can't. I've been in the islands too long. I'd die. The fever comes out worse down there."

"Kill or cure," Sheldon counselled.

"It's straight kill for me. I tried it three years ago. The cool weather put me on my back before I landed. They carried me ashore and into hospital. I was unconscious one stretch for two weeks. After that the doctors sent me back to the islands—said it was the only thing that would save me. Well, I'm still alive. But I'm too soaked with fever. A month in Australia would finish me."

He declined to sleep ashore, took his orders, and went back on board the cutter. A lurid sunset was blotted out by the heaviest squall of the day, and Sheldon watched the whaleboat arrive in the thick of it. As the spritsail was taken in and the boat headed on to the beach, he was aware of a distinct hurt at sight of Joan at the steering oar, standing erect and swaying her strength to it as she resisted the pressures that tended to throw the craft broadside in the surf. Her Tahitians leaped out and rushed the boat high up the beach, and she led her bizarre following through the gate of the compound.

"Lovely, perfectly lovely—Pari-Sulay," she panted. "I shall buy it. I'll write to the commissioner tonight. And the site for the bungalow—I've selected it already—is wonderful. You must come over some day and advise me. You won't mind my staying here until I can get settled? Wasn't that squall beautiful! And I suppose I'm late for dinner. I'll run and get clean and be with you in a minute."

"Do you know, I'm never going to squabble with you again," he announced, when they were seated.

"Squabble!" was the retort. "It's such a sordid word. It sounds cheap and nasty. I think it's much nicer to quarrel."

"Call it what you please, but we won't do it any more, will we?" He cleared his throat nervously, for her eyes advertised the immediate beginning of hostilities. "I beg your pardon," he hurried on. "I should have spoken for myself. What I mean is that I refuse to quarrel. You have the most horrible way, without uttering a word, of making me play the fool. Why, I began with the kindliest intentions, and here I am now"—

"Making nasty remarks," she completed for him.

"It's the way you have of catching me up," he complained.

"Why I never said a word. I was merely sitting here, being sweetly lured on by promises of peace on earth and all the rest of it, when suddenly you begin to call me names."

"IT'S STRAIGHT KILL FOR ME."

"Hardly that, I am sure."

"Well, you said I was horrible, or that I had a horrible way about me, which is the same thing. I wish my bungalow were up. I'd move tomorrow."

But her twitching lips belied her words, and the next moment the man was more uncomfortable than ever, being made so by her laughter.

"I was only teasing you. Honest Injun. And if you don't laugh I'll suspect you of being in a temper with me. That's right, laugh. But don't"—she added in alarm, "don't, if it hurts you. You look as though you had a toothache. There, there; don't say it. You know you promised not to quarrel, while I have the privilege of going on being as hateful as I please. And to begin with, there's the Flibberty Gibbet. I didn't know she was so large a cutter. But she's in disgraceful condition."

"Her skipper's bad with fever," Sheldon explained. "And he had to drop his mate off to take hold of things at Ugi—that's where I lost Oscar, my trader. And you know what sort of sailors the niggers are."

She nodded her head judicially and he asked for a second helping of tinned beef, not because he was hungry, but because he wanted to watch her slim, firm fingers. They were brown with tan and looked exceedingly boyish. Then, and without effort, the concept came to him. Yes, that was it. He had stumbled upon the clew to her tantalizing personality. The fingers, sunburned and boyish, told the story. He had tried to treat with her as a woman when she was not a woman. She was a mere girl, and a boyish girl at that, with sunburned fingers that delighted in doing what boys' fingers did, with a body and muscles that liked swimming and violent endeavor of all sorts, with a mind that was daring but that dared no farther than boys' adventures and that delighted in rifles and revolvers, Stetson hats and a sexless camaraderie with men.

Somehow, as he pondered and watched her, it seemed as if he sat in church at home listening to the choir boys chanting. She reminded him of those boys, or their voices, rather. The same sexless quality was there. In the body of her she was a woman. In the mind of her she had not grown up. She had not been exposed to ripening influences of that sort. She had had no mother. Von, her father, native servants and rough island life had constituted her training. Horses and rifles had been her toys, camp and trail her nursery. From what she had told him her seminary days had been an exile, devoted to study and to ceaseless longing for the wild riding and swimming of Hawaii. A boy's training and a boy's point of view!

Well, there was only one thing for him to do. He must meet her on her own basis of boyhood and not make the mistake of treating her as a woman. He wondered if he could love the woman she would be when her nature awoke, and he wondered if he could love her just as she was and himself wake her up. After all, whatever it was, she had come to fill quite a large place in his life, as he had discovered that afternoon while scanning the sea between the squalls. Then he remembered the accounts of Berande and the cropper that was coming and scowled.

EVEN RED CROSS IS NOT EXEMPT

Arabs Torture and Mutilate Their Italian Prisoners

MANY VICTIMS OF OUTRAGES

Some Crucified and Others Buried Alive In Desert—Suffer Horrible and Nameless Mutilation—American Correspondent Gives Details of Slaughter Found After Italian Advance—Soldiers Hot For Revenge

Tripoli, Dec. 1.—Bodies of Italians found after the advance to the new position, revealed that many of the men captured by the Arabs had been horribly tortured and then mutilated in the manner common to Mohammedan warfare.

The soldiers, after seeing their dead, could not be restrained and carried the Turkish positions in the face of a gruelling fire. The fury of the advance could not be resisted even by the Arab fanaticism, and further progress into the oasis is being made hourly. The Turkish resistance appears thoroughly broken.

An American correspondent, who was on the firing line during the fierce fighting which marked the advance of the old line, says:

"The Red Cross corps, after clearing the field, report that 1000 Arabs were buried.

"While accompanying them I found the bodies of three Bersaglieri, one crucified against a wall, one drawn and quartered and one decapitated. All had suffered a horrible, nameless mutilation.

"The Red Cross workers were subjected to continual firing. Following with the Red Cross squad, I discovered seventeen bodies frightfully mutilated, the majority of them crucified. An inspection of the bullet wounds showed that the victims were taken prisoners and then murdered. Among the dead was one surgeon and four Red Cross assistants.

"Shortly after sunrise, behind the Grenadier advance, I was with the medical corps when they discovered a house used as a field hospital by the Bersaglieri on Oct. 23. Within were five mutilated bodies. One was identified as that of Surgeon Lieutenant Demurtas, and another as a private stretcher bearer. They were crucified. Their eyelids were sewn to the brows, the eyeballs being threaded by a thick cord passing around the head and knotted behind.

"A pit behind the house contained about twenty dismembered and mutilated bodies. One was identified as a captain of the medical corps. He was still wearing the Red Cross badge.

"All these men either belonged to the medical corps or were wounded while being attended to. It is evident that they were tortured and slain. Three hundred metres to the left of the Arab cemetery four bodies were buried perpendicularly as far as the chest and the hands were amputated. Obviously they had been placed there alive."

The Turks are firing on Sidi Messi, from their position in the desert, which is being shelled by the naval guns. There is much sniping by the Turkish sharpshooters all along the line, but the Italian lines are being constantly pushed forward. There is evidence to show that the Arab tribesmen are deserting the Turkish forces in large numbers.

Savage attacks have been made by the Ottoman forces on Derna and Tobruk, the losses on both sides being about 1500. The Italian forces are inside the range of their naval guns.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN COOKING CAULIFLOWER.

CAULIFLOWER lovers find their favorite vegetables, like cabbages, now abundant. In selecting a cauliflower see that the leaves are firm and green and the head perfectly white. When preparing the vegetable for cooking clean it by soaking in salt water for an hour, every part being covered. Some persons when boiling cauliflower put it in a bag.

Cauliflower Soup.

Cauliflower soup is a dish unknown in most households, yet there is no reason why it should not be popular. Boil the cauliflower in water or in stock to which has been added an onion stuck with four whole cloves, a small red pepper, a sprig of parsley and a tablespoonful of peppercorns.

Skim all the time the cauliflower is boiling. When cooked remove the cauliflower from the pot. Set aside a cupful of the flowerets, which should be carefully broken off the cauliflower, and mash the remainder, forcing it through a coarse sieve. Strain the liquid in which the cauliflower was boiled.

Melt a tablespoonful of butter, stir into it a tablespoonful of flour, then combine this with the soup. Add a pint of hot milk, a little grated nutmeg, salt and pepper to taste, an egg well beaten and the mashed cauliflower. Stir well and set on the fire to heat. Add the unbroken flowers and serve very hot.

Cauliflower and Cream.

Boiled cauliflower can be served with cream or hollandaise sauce. It may be covered with grated cheese and cracker crumbs, with a dash of melted butter, and baked. When cold the cauliflower may be separated into small pieces and served with mayonnaise dressing.

A dainty luncheon dish may be prepared as follows: Take a boiled cauliflower. Break off the flowerets and place them in a cup.

Add to the boiled cauliflower three tablespoonfuls of butter and allow to simmer in a saucepan over the fire for fifteen minutes. Add a half cupful of oyster liquor, half a cupful of cracker crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, half a cupful of cream and a pint of oysters. Add the oysters after the liquid has boiled and remove from the fire as soon as the edges curl. Serve on toast or in crescents of puff paste.

WERE CAUGHT IN SUNDAY NIGHT'S RAID

Four Men In Court Today And Each Fined $25

TWO CASES DISMISSED

Six of the young men found present at the rooms of the Quincy Associates, when they were raided Sunday night, were arraigned in court this morning. The other two did not appear as word did not reach them in time to be on hand this morning. Of the six that appeared the cases against two of them were dismissed. The complaint against the parties was, being present where gaming implements were found.

The other four pleaded guilty and fines of $25 each were imposed. Two signified their intention to pay and the others took an appeal. Later they expressed a desire to retract their appeal.

The four upon whom fines were imposed were Archie McDougal, Edward M. Shaw, Christopher McDermott and Charles McKenzie.

GRANITE CITY CLUB.

In accordance with its time honored custom the Granite City club kept open house the night before Thanksgiving and entertained not only a large number of its own members but a number of visitors as well.

During the first few hours of the evening the regular whist tournament was held in which twelve tables participated. The two lucky men to have the highest scores were R. L. Lovell who secured 82-3 per cent and Warren H. Rideout who secured 69-3 per cent.

Immediately following the whist, refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was passed as the taste of each individual member dictated. It was one grand good time and the hospitality for which the club is noted was seen on every side.

BRIEFS

Tonight at 8.45 the board of the Wollaston M. E. church meets in the vestry.

The Assembly tonight at Music hall promises to be well attended and a brilliant social event as usual.

At a meeting of the W. R. C., Tuesday evening, a turkey dinner was awarded Margaret O'Brien of Brockton.

High school students are looking forward to the annual issue of the Golden Rod. It will be ready for delivery in a few days.

James C. Michael of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly of this city, spent Thanksgiving Day with his mother, Mrs. John Michael of South Quincy.

The public schools closed Wednesday noon for the balance of the week. The only thing that the young people regret is that there is not skating.

The pastor Rev. Wesley Wiggin is planning an especially good service for tonight at the Wollaston M. E. church. Subject for thought is "The Guest Chamber." Special music. Good singing.

The attendants at court this morning, who expected to hear some interesting testimony in the Quincy Associates' case, went away disappointed, for the defendants summoned into court pleaded guilty and there was no hearing.

At the Gertrude A. Boyd Auxiliary whist party held in Protection hall, Wednesday evening, the prize winners were Mrs. John Morrison, Irving Fletcher, Mrs. Catherine Pitts, Mrs. Robert Carr, Mrs. Cora Marman, Herbert Baker, Clarence Fuller, and consolation Mrs. George A. Bolster.

Election is near at hand, yet there does not seem to be much interest. There have been many elections in Quincy and while some of them have been quiet there was never a municipal election quite so much so as the one this year. Something may break however between now and Tuesday morning.

Only a little over three weeks before Christmas. Wise people have already commenced to do their Christmas shopping. The local business houses are making unusual preparations for the holiday and before going to Boston it would be well to see what they have to offer. As a rule one can do better at home than in Boston.

PRETTY WEDDING AT S. BRAINTREE

Miss Glennie Merrill Bride of Melvin J. Kelley

PRETTY DECORATIONS

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday evening when Miss Glennie Danforth Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Merrill of 15 Frederick road, South Braintree was united in marriage to Melvin Joseph Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kelley of Brockton. The ceremony was performed at the Methodist parsonage on Franlin street by Rev. George H. Parkinson. The best man was Gordon F. Jackson of Dorchester and the maid of honor, Miss Esther B. Wilson of Whitman. Miss Wilson was very becomingly gowned in a brown travelling suit and carried violets.

The double ring service was used and little Miss June Arnold of Frederick road made a winsome little ring bearer. The rooms were beautifully decorated for the happy occasion with wedding bells and honeysuckle, making a pretty setting for the nuptial rites. A most impressive feature was the rendition of Mendellsohn's wedding march by Miss Joyce Pollard at the piano and her sister Miss Glennice Pollard, violinist.

The bride looking charming in a travelling dress of brown trimmed with panne velvet and applique. She too carried a bouquet of violets. After the ceremony, there was a short reception and the happy couple were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Merrill.

The groom's present to the bride was a handsome set of furs and to his best man a stick pin. The maid of honor was remembered by the bride with a lovely set of pins. There was a bewildering array of wedding gifts among them being cut glass, silver, furniture etc. After a week spent in seeing the sights of New York City, Mr. and Mrs. Kelley will reside for the present at 15 Frederick road, where they will be at home to their many friends after Dec. 15th 1911.

The happy couple received congratulatory letters from friends in many cities and were accompanied to Boston on the 9.58 P. M. train by a merry party of well wishers. Confetti was much in evidence and it was not hard for even the casual observer to pick out the groom and his blushing bride. They left for New York on the 1 A. M. train Thursday morning for the honeymoon. The best wishes for a long and happy life are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Kelley by their large circle of friends and acquaintances.

THREATENING BLAZE AT ATLANTIC

LOSS ABOUT $500

The alarm from Box 62 at 12.42 this noon was for a lively fire in the double house at 45 Atlantic street, owned by John H. C. Eccles. The fire is thought to have started on the roof from sparks from a passing locomotive and when discovered was burning briskly. In fact a whole room seemed to be one mass of flames. So great a headway had it made that the fire worked down into the house making it a difficult one to handle.

The house is situated close to the railroad track and took fire from sparks some few weeks ago. It is also located next to the bridge over the railroad tracks on Atlantic street, but on the shore side. Just at the present time this bridge is being rebuilt and is not passable for teams. This made it rather bad, for the tracks had to be crossed to reach the box to sound the alarm. The box is located on the corner of Hancock and Atlantic streets.

It so happened today, however, that the fire had made such headway that the driver of the Atlantic combination saw where the fire was when he left the station and was enabled to go direct to it.

The apparatus from Wollaston and from the central station could also see the fire as they drove down Hancock street, so that when they came to the bridge near the Atlantic depot, they drove down Sagamore street and thence to the fire.

The firemen quickly got to work, but the fire had done considerable damage before it was under control Just what the damage will be is hard to tell at this time, but it is thought that it will not be far from $500.

LIFELIKE IN DEATH

Husband Waits In Vain For Restoration of Wife to Life

Webster, Mass., Dec. 1.—Unusual conditions accompanied the death Wednesday of Mrs. Henry H. S. Anderson. It was not until yesterday that the woman officially was declared dead, Medical Examiner Bradford and two physicians who were called in having hesitated to declare the fact, owing to the lifelike appearance of the woman.

The body of Mrs. Anderson was found in the bathroom of her home by her husband, after he had broken in the door. She was prepared to take a bath. There was no mark on the body except a slight abrasion on the right cheek, but the woman had frothed at the mouth.

While the limbs were rigid the flesh was warm and there was life-like color in her cheeks. Her husband waited until last night before arranging for the funeral, in the hope that his wife would come to life again.

It is supposed that the woman died from convulsions, the cause of which is not known.

Dasha, Byron Brown and Joseph McGilvray.

Frappe was served during the entire evening. The young ladies to assist in scoring were Miss Esther Dasha, Miss Stella Brown, Miss Lillian McDonnell, Miss Agnes Reardon and Miss Carmel Brogan.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

By Teri Bus.

The Eagles still keep on winning.

As I had a notion, Fore River pulled through with their tie against Collingwood, at Second Street and Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia on Saturday, although it was by the narrowest possible margin. There was a crowd of about 800 spectators. Intense excitement was manifest throughout the game, which was not to be wondered at, considering what was at stake. The defence of the home team was their best point, and at times they simply played with the fierce attack of the more fancied opponents. As the same time the shipbuilders are to be congratulated on their victory—an event which is not easily achieved at the avenue ground.

They have now reached the 3rd round of the American cup. They are anxious to know who are their next opponents. The draw takes place Saturday night.

The financial end of this trip was a distinct failure. The Eagles tried to make expenses by playing a game at Newark, on their return from Philadelphia. The second "gate" did not help much.

A win and a draw was a good performance. The Scottish Americans were considered fortunate enough to draw with the Eagles, but it was only a "friendly." It showed that the Eagles can not be "licked" by any strong team at the present time.

The tie in the 2nd round of the American cup did not belie expectations in that it was a hard fought battle. With a slight wind behind them, Collingwood were the likelier side the first half hour. Heavier built, they had the pull over the visitors on the hill, the Eagles' play being somewhat shaky at first.

When the Quincy team settled down, and their forwards set agoing it was a very different story. It is a long time since the forwards exhibited such dash and keenness as was displayed in the second half of Saturda'y game. Harrison led the line in fine style, while Rennie and Carruthers delighted everybody with their tricky plays. Moran and McDonald worked very hard.

The shipbuilders outclassed the home lot, being speedier, trickier, and displayed much better team work.

Buchanan's work at back for Collingwood was most note worthy. He played a splendid game.

Hats off to Dixon, the Collingwood goal keeper. He saved his team mates a severe dubbing. Dixon's work has never been excelled in Philadelphia. He caught a dozen hard drives, and never becoming excited, quickly booted the leather away. He was always alert, and his playing alone prevented the Eagles making a runaway of the game.

In the second half Dixon caught three hard line drives in succession from various angles from Carruthers' foot, and once an out and kicked the ball away when a goal seemed sure. It was certainly Carruthesr' great game.

Leggett had a good shot for goal at the opening of the game, but sharples saved in grand style. We had faith in him.

Collingwood was penalized for charging the goal keeper. The kick went for naught. Shortly after Carruthers made a splendid run but was fouled within the penalty line. The referee did not notice it.

The only goal of the game was secured after twenty minutes' play in the second period. Carruthers got well away, and centering, Harrison was on the spot in front of goal, and smartly popped the ball into the net with his head. It was an exceptionally well taken pass.

Too much credit cannot be given Dixon and his back for preserving a clean sheet until now. The Eagles' superiority was even more pronounced in the second half, and how Dixon's goal escaped downfall is a mystery. Shot after shot rained in on him in all directions, but he generally contrived to be in the right spot, while his backs repeatedly charged down shots that looked certain to find the net.

"Jack" McDonald played a sterling game against the Scottish American. He can bear watching.

I have just received my membership card from the Eagles, and I would suggest to all football enthusiasts to secure one. There is sure to be a big demand for those cards. Don't wait until iti s too late. Write now for it to John Quinn, financial secretary. It pays to belong to a crack club.

Councilman Frank Duffy and Edward Hisgen graced the Eagles' club room Wednesday evening. A pleasant half hour was spent in speech and song.

It was rather an uninteresting game which was played on the Eagles' park yesterday, when Worcester was beaten to the tune of 3 goals to 0. Two more points for the Eagles in the New England league.

ORIENT 27; NONPAREILS 0.

In a fast and exciting game at the Ward 3 playground Thursday morning, the Orient A. A. defeated the Nonpariels 27 to 0. The Orients scored three touchdowns in the first period on end runs and forward passes. No scoring was done in the next two periods, but in the final the Orients again got going and scored two more touchdowns and a safety. The heavy backfield of the Nonpareils could make but little headway against the line of the Orients and the play was for the most part in Nonpariel territory. To the successful use of the forward pass and numerous trick plays may be attributed many of the Orient scores.

The features of the game were the playing of the Orient backfield, consisting of Bradley, Sullivan, Cremins and Mattson, the 40 yard run of Ferguson of the Orients and the all-round work of Brownrigg and Barry for the Nonpareils.

McNAMARA BROTHERS GUILTY OF DYNAMITING

James Pleads Guilty To Murder In First Degree In Causing Deaths of 21 Newspaper Employees

Brother Guilty of Wrecking Iron Works

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 2.—James B. McNamara pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree in Judge Walter Bordwell's court. His brother, John J. McNamara, secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, entered a plea of guilty to having dynamited the Llewellyn Iron Works in Los Angeles on Christmas Day, 1910.

James B. McNamara's confession clears up the tragedy of the explosion and fire which, at 1.07 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 1, 1910, wrecked the plant of the Los Angeles Times and caused the death of twenty-one persons. For nineteen of these deaths indictments were returned against the McNamara brothers.

HARRISON GRAY OTIS.

Los Angeles Editor Whose Newspaper Plant Was Blown Up.

Attorney Fredericks will ask for life imprisonment for James B. McNamara, the confessed murderer, and probably a fourteen years' sentence for his brother. The men's lives are considered saved. The great contention that the Los Angeles Times was not dynamited is dead beyond resurrection or argument.

As the two brothers sit together in the county jail, refusing to see any one or to make any statement, an interest second only to the occurrence hangs about the question, "Why did James B. McNamara confess?"

Counselled to Confess

"He confessed because he was guilty, and that's all there is to it," said District Attorney Fredericks.

"He was counselled to confess because that was the best thing he could do, in the opinion of counsel," said

J. B. McNamara was on trial specifically for the murder of Charles M. Haggerty, a machinist, whose body was found nearer than that of any other to the spot where the dynamite was supposed to have been placed.

RESIGNED BUT IS STILL THE CHIEF

Civil Service Takes Head of Police Department Out of Politics

APPOINTMENTS

Chief Frank E. Burrell has resigned his position as a member of the permanent police force and the resignation has been accepted by Mayor Shea.

Chief Burrell when appointed Chief of the department was a member of the ermanent force. At that time the office was not under the civil service rules and the holder was likely to lose his official head with the change of administration, so that he has always been retained as a member of the permanent force, his position as patrolman having been filled by a reserve officer. The recent vote of the city accepting the civil service act relative to the Chief of Police takes the office out of politics and Chief Burrell therefore resigned.

Chief Burrell went in the eligible civil service list in May 1902, although he had done police duty before that time. Jan. 20, 1903, he was appointed a member of the permanent police force by Mayor Bryant. He did regular police duty until Feb. 1905, when he was made chief of the department by Mayor Thompson and he has been reappointed every year since that time. He is an efficient and painstaking officer.

The rsignation of Chief Burrell made a vacancy in the permanent force and this morning Mayor Shea promoted Officer James H. Whelan as

ATLANTIC MAN DIED FRIDAY

James V. Martin of the "Globe" Staff Passes Away After Long Illness

WELL KNOWN AND POPULAR

James V. Martin, well known and popular in Atlantic, an assistant to the golf editor in the sporting department of the Boston Globe, died at his home in Walnut street, Friday night, after a long illness. Mr. Martin who was only 21 years old, was obliged to give up his work last spring and went to West Bridgewater in the hope of regaining his health, but his quest was fruitless and he returned to his home shortly after.

His father James Martin, was a well-known resident of Atlantic and was sexton of the Sacred Heart church and superintendent of its Sunday school for a number of years. A younger brother, Charles died a few weeks ago, while he was yet a school boy, was a caddy at the Wollaston Golf club, where his brightness, modesty and unfailing courtesy won the esteem of all its members.

He entered the service of the Globe about five years ago on the day desk and from that position he was sent to the office of the night city editor, where he endeared himself to all his comrades in the office. He was soon promoted to the sporting department, where he manifested exceptional ability.

He was unusually well informed on golf and played the game well. He was in several Press Club tournaments and always acquitted himself creditably. He is survived by his mother, two sisters, and a brother, Frank, who is a member of the Boston Fire Department.

CURRENT EVENTS LECTURE.

The current events lecture given on Friday afternoon at the Quincy Women's culb by Mrs. May Alden Ward, in her course under the auspices of the Literature committee was devoted wholly to the situation in China. The cry, "China for the Chinese," used to mean to drive out the foreigners, but it now means the overthrow of the Manchu government. All the students being educated in the American colleges are in sympathy with the revolution. Since the war with Japan there have been military schools for the Chinese youth and the Chinese have held higher ranks in the army. China has every element of a republic. The powers are asked to keep their hands off of this affair, as the Chinese must fight it out for themselves. They wish to govern themselves as they have been under the Tartars, who only form 2 per cent. of the population for 250 years, and the time has come for them to throw off the yoke.

MEMORIAL SERVICE OF ELKS, SUNDAY

Members and friends of Quincy lodge of Elks, should not forget the seventh annual memorial service to be held by Quincy lodge Sunday evening at 7.30 in Alpha hall. In accordance with one of the laws of the order, similar services will be held Sunday wherever there is a lodge. The speakers will be Judge Thomas P. Riley and Rev. Richard E. Armstrong. Music during the service will be by the Alpha quartet.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

Rehearsals for the "Golden Legend" concert to be given Tuesday, Jan. 23d are growing more and more interesting as the season advances. In spite of unfavorable weather, the singers keep a good average attendance and Mr. McConathy is working out some fine effects in the beautiful choruses.

In such concerts as the Choral Society is establishing in Quincy, it is not enough that a soloist possesses a fine voice; there must be also that rare gift which only the thorough musician has, of rhythm, temperament, and the sense of relation between one part and another which makes it sure that the singer will respond to the baton of the conductor as the organ responds to every touch of the master player, instantly and harmoniously.

The Golden Legend is a work which requires great musicanliness in the rendering and soloists are being selected with much care by the executive board. The society has already presented to Quincy audiences some of the best singers in New England and fully intends to keep up to its well known standard. Everything promises a splendid performance.

NATURAL HISTORY EXCURSION.

The Natural History committee of the Milton Education Society has announced that its second geological excursion will take place next Saturday, weather permitting. The party will meet at the Quincy railroad station, and leaving there at 2 P. M., will explore the granite and slate out-crops to the westward of that point, obtaining evidence of the invasion of the older Cambrian slate by the granite rocks.

The total walking distance will not greatly exceed one mile; but heavy shoes are desirable, and rubbers may be helpful in giving a better foot-hold upon the smooth ledges. All persons interested are invited, whether members of the Education Society or not. The 1.25 trolley car from East Milton may be taken or the 1.10 from Quincy.

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS HOLD RALLIES

Many Attend Meetings Held on Friday Night In Candidates Interests

SOME GOOD SPEECHES

A largely attended rally in the interest of James E. Wall, candidate for Mayor, and others was held in Stone hall, Ward 2, last evening. Ex-Councilman Michael Walsh presided.

The first speaker was candidate Wall, who outlined his platform and took occasion to refute numerous rumors that were going about. Mr. Wall spoke of conducting the affairs of the city in a businesslike manner and promised to carry out the same sort of non-partisan principles that have been adopted by the present chief executive.

Mr. Wall stated that any man working in the city works would be retained, if he was returning full service for what the city was paying him.

Others who spoke were Councilman Duffy, Histen and Michael Corbett, all three being candidates for the Council from Ward 2, Councilman John D. Smith, and Thomas Griffin candidate for Councilman-at-large, William Kelly the labor leader Charles C. McCue, Edward M. Bryan, and Michael T. Sullivan.

All of the speakers were warmly received, and the condition of the affairs of the city was ably discussed at length.

A circular recently issued by the Republican Committee, came in for a great deal of criticism.

A largely attended rally in the interest of Eugene R. Stone, Republican candidate for Mayor, was held Friday evening at Sandberg's annex on Garfield street. The meeting was a rousing one and great enthusiasm was shown, for the mayoralty candidate, as well as for the whole Republican ticket.

Rousing speeches were made, among the speakers being candidate Stone, who reiterated the statement already made by him, that if elected, he would give the city a business administration and see to it that the tax payers got a dollar's return for every one expended. His experience in the City Council for several years had given him an insight into city affairs such as could not be obtained in any other way. He also assured his hearers that if elected he would go into office unpledged and that in the selection of his department heads fitness would be first considered.

His remarks were received with

FASHIONABLE GATHERING AT ASSEMBLY

Annual Affair on Friday Night One of Most Delightful Ever Held

VARIOUS COMMITTEES

The first dancing party of the smart set better known as the Quincy Assembly, the dance which is looked forward to as the opening of the winter social season, was given under the auspices of the Civic committee of the Quincy Women's club, Friday evening at Music hall. As usual the party was a brilliant one and called together all of the younger set, as well as the younger matrons. This year's event was no exception to the rule, for the party was one of the prettiest of the many held in years past. Some faces that have been familiar at these annual affairs, were missed Friday evening, but their places were taken by new ones so that the affair had its usual brilliancy.

The dance program contained few numbers, but as each received two and more encores, it more than filled out the time between 8 and 11.30. The music was entrancing and the brief intermission between numbers afforded opportunity for the renewing of acquaintances and the usual pleasure of small talk.

Those in the receiving line were: Mrs. Oscar A. Blaisdell, chairman of the Civic committee, Mrs. Williams Ward Whitcher and Mrs. Theophilus King. Mrs. Blaisdell wore a handsome grey voile over grey messaline with carol and silver trimmings. Mrs. Whitcher was gowned in a grey crepe de chine with veiled chiffon and Mrs.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Roosevelt having said for the 7463d time that he is not a candidate, the third term editorials must now be laid aside for another six week.

How sickening this everlasting deluge of silly love story novels becomes! Kisses are all right, but intelligent people are interested in one or two other things on this earth.

All but one of the National Bankers' Association were for the Aldrich currency plan. This damning fact should have been carefully concealed by Mr. Aldrich if he wanted his plan adopted.

Considering the indecent haste with which the trust prosecutions are being pushed along, a defendant would better not show signs of longevity, or a final settlement may be reached in his lifetime.

There was at first much opposition to fortifying Panama, but it seems to be agreed now that a $400,000,000 canal is too valuable property to leave lying around the back yard nights with all these disreputable characters prowling about.

There has come a rumor to us that some Republicans think that the Ledger has favored the Democrats instead of the Republicans this fall, but if those who criticise will look the situation over carefully they will see that this is not so as we have endeavored to be impartial and give each party a square deal. We do not believe we should exploit one party at the expense of the other or visa versa.

If the Republicans hold a rally we send a Republican reporter to report it; if a Democratic rally a Democrat. If the Democrats are more active this fall they have probably had more newspaper space than the Republicans TheyThey certainly have held and are holding a great many rallies and showing considerable life, whereas the Republicans are unusually quiet. It is not for us to stir them up or say things for them that they do not say so for themselves.

We feel fairly sure in our own mind as to who will be Quincy's next Mayor but have not and shall not editorially boom either candidate, leaving that to the candidates themselves and their party, and to the voters to decide on Tuesday.

ADVERTISING IN DECEMBER.

December is the greatest trade month in the year. The Christmas habit of holiday purchases has spread far beyond mere tinsel knick-knacks, and it takes in the widest range of useful articles of household value. People delay purchases for the home all through the fall in order to hand them over Dec. 25 as Xmas presents.

A great deal of winter clothing for the use of both grown-ups and children is bought during that month.

For the liberal advertiser it is the harvest time of the year. He does not have to persuade people that they need to buy. But they are eagerly studying the newspapers to see who gives the impression of having the most complete stock and reasonable prices.

The conservative little store on the side street that trusts to the renown of past tradition, will not need any extra clerks. The public values enterprise above anyother quality, and enterprise was never demonstrated by sitting down in a corner and shutting your mouth. The public also values honesty very highly, but it fails to see why honesty is not more likely to be found with those that guarantee the quality of their goods by investing money liberally to tell the public about them.

THE SHOPPING SEASON.

Shop early, avoid the rush and get away from the nerve racking finish for yourself and the overworked clerk. The shops in Quincy are in readiness and no individual need fear of starting in too early. It is fine to have the ordeal of shopping checked off as something completed. The plan of sending goods by mail or express, with a tag, "Not to be opened until Chrismas," is also entitled to commendation as lifting a load for overworked postman and express driver.

And this idea of buying and giving should be filled with the Yuletide spirit of good will to all. Unfortunately there are groups of human beings in every community, to whom, through misfortunes Christmas tide seems a mockery.

Although these people have struggled honestly—death, sickness and other adversities have put them in straightened circumstances. They do not want charity. What they crave more than anything else is sympathy and a helping hand, so that they may once more be breadwinners. Any notice or assistance tendered in the right spirit during Christmastide would encourage them and bring much happiness to their firesides.

The greatest thing lacking in this great, big busy world is sympathy. If nothing else—the joys of the holiday season should inspire one with a desire to do something for somebody—no matter how small.

Above all, make the little children happy in some way. By gifts for loved ones, but do not forget the unhappy and low-spirited. Action along these lines will work a happy and memorable Yuletide.

THE APPOINTMENTS.

Long and faithful service should always be appreciated and it is worthy of note that His Honor, in his recent appointment, filled the position on the police force with an officer who has given the city such service as should warrant a just reward. It is also a pleasure to report that the other vacancy was filled from the civil service list by the applicant with the highest percentage. Both of these appointments seem to strike the proper chord and are worthy of commendation.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Six thuosand words, it is reported, covers the president's annual message, so it is evident that he has taken the general advice to cut it short. A brief message of that sort will be printed in full by most papers and everybody will find time to read it It would seem that brevity is the soul of other things besides wit.

DECLINE OF THE TURKEY.

It is not always easy for the Consumer to realize the Thanksgiving spirit, when he has just paid down his hard earned cash for Turkey bird at the rate of 35 cents per pound. It hardly seems fair that many workin gmen have to devote nearly half a week's pay to providing what is only the back bone of a Thanksgiving day square meal.

And yet nothing quite takes its place for this holiday. The golden brown and plump rotundity of this magnificent fowl, as it lies upon the platter, is peculiarly symbolic of the abundant fruitions of the harvest season, and the material blessings of our lives.

The wide sweep of the pest called "black head" has reduced the number of turkeys in many sections from 75 to 90 per cent. And yet those who have studied carefully the constitution of this king of all game birds know pretty well how this and other troubles can be avoided.

The turkey, merely a domesticated descendant of the former denizen of the forests, still feels in his heart the call of the wild. Putting him ingloriously in a coop and stuffing him with concentrated foods has about the same effect as if a live boy were kept in a greenhouse and fed on mince pie. Successful turkey growers give their birds a wide range, in woodland if possible. As the young birds however, are very sensitive to cold and wet, they are always carefully rounded up in stormy weather.

The destruction of the wild turkey, which once roamed the woods from New England to Mexico, is an example of the prodigal manner in which we have squandered our national resources. Within the memory of living men you could buy wild turkeys for six cents apiece, and the delicacy of their flesh is incomparable. Loosely enforced game laws, together with the work of foxes, dogs and cats, have reduced their number to a mere remnant. But any farmer can breed wild turkeys in his woodlands, and if he keeps out the natural enemies of the birds, he can have a fine flock.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HIGH RATE IN QUINCY.

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Again reverting to the high prices which are being saddled upon the people of this city, from time to time, allow me to call your attention to the average prices per M feet paid for gas (1909-1910) by takers in the following twenty-eight places in this State where the prices are below those paid here:

Adams,	$1.14
Arlington,	1.29
Attleboro,	1.20
Beverly,	1.17
Blackston,	1.29
Boston,	.80
Brockton,	1.11
Cambridge,	.87
Charlestown,	.90
Chicopee,	1.26
Dedham,	1.04
East Boston,	.92
Fitchburg,	1.14
Haverhill,	1.01
Lawrence,	.90
Lynn,	.77
Malden,	1.60
New Bedford,	.85
Newton,	.97
North Adams,	1.03
Northampton,	1.33
North Attleborough,	1.31
Pittsfield,	1.16
Springfield,	.89
Revere,	1.03
Taunton,	1.04
Williamston,	1.25
Worcester,	.80

And also that the rates charged for electric lights in Quincy are high in comparison with the net prices charged the consumers of the following twenty-two towns and cities, where rates are lower than the Quincy company:

Adams,	$.135
Beverly,	.12
Cambridge,	.12
Charlestown,	.11
Boston,	.11
Fall River,	.108
Fitchburg,	.144
Franklin,	.12
GreatBarrington,	.144
Greenfield,	.135
Hyde Park,	.135

Lynn,	.12
Malden,	.12
New Bedford,	.133
North Adams,	.135
Randolph,	.13
Salem,	.13
Worcester,	.12

None of the above plants are owned by municipalities.

One of the arguments against reducing the price of gas which the company puts forth is the few takers it has per mile of main, being about 49 consumers on a $1.40 rate. Conversely, supposing that the rate was 80 cents (as it is in Milton) then it seems fair to assume that the price of gas being so much below that of coal at $7.50 per ton that 95 per cent of the houses which abut on mains would be connected and the gas used in large quantities for fuel purposes averaging 25,500 feet per year per consumer (the same as Haverhill) and that the consumers per mile of main would be at once increased to 120. One hundred and twenty consumers per mile of main is not an impossibility as the consumers in Attleboro are 121 per mile of main, Cambridge 173, Fall River 175, Haverhill, 124, Lawrence 122, Lowell 123, Lynn 161, Malden 108, New Bedford 152, Pittsfield 104, Plymouth 102, Salem 131 Springfield 120, Revere 105, and Worcester 133.

The company instead of selling an average of 12,984 feet per consumer per year at its $1.40 rate, is unconsciously doing everything within its power to drive away business, for with a rate of 80 cents it would undoubtedly be in the 22,000 feet class with Athol's 22,116 feet, Attleboro 22,153 feet, Cambridge 25,028 feet, Dedham 20,358 feet, Fall River 23,360 feet, Haverhill 25,500 feet, Lawrence 22,192 feet, Lowell 26,964 feet Lynn 26,395 feet, New Bedford 23,414 feet, Newton 25,040 feet, North Attleboro 27,707 feet, Springfield 23,264 feet, Taunton 24,160 feet and Worcester 29,174 feet.

It is possible that the Citizen's Gas Light Company, whose name by the way is but a fiction, as we all know that it is a branch of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. and is buying its gas of the parent corporation at 45 cents per 1000 feet, upon reading these figures may ingeniously argue that these companies which are selling gas for less than $1.40 per 1000 feet are losing money for their stockholders. But before listening to any such argument let us see what the last annual report of the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners has to say upon the profits of these companies, for instance, the Adams Gas Company paid a 12 per cent dividend the Arlington 6, Attleboro 22 Beverly 24, Boston 9, Brockton 5 3-4 Cambridge 12 1-2, Charlestown 10 Dedham 6, East Boston 11, Fitchburg 10, Lawrence 8, Malden 7, New Bedford 6 1-2, Newton 10, North Adams 11, Northampton 12, North Attleborough 10, Pittsfield 7, Springfield 12, Revere 9, Taunton 15, Williamston 10 1-2 and Worcester 12.

And incidentally these large dividends appear to demonstrate the fact that stock in a Massachusetts Corporation selling low price gas comes in the class of triple plated gilt edge securities.

The Quincy company instead of voluntarily giving us a reduction of a few pennies should be compelled by legal means to make a liberal concession so that we would be placed on the same footing with Milton with its 80 cent rate. From every point of view, both from that of the Company's and also that of the development of Quincy's business interests, to hold up a City of 35,000 population with $1.40 gas, is to say the least, a very poor business policy. The City government should exercise every legal means within its power to have the price reduced to 80 cents so that instead of 49 consumers per mile of main there would be 120, and instead of an average consumption of a paltry 13,000 feet it would jump to 25,000 feet. If it is necessary to employ special counsel to argue the case before the Commissioners, it should be done.

Lynn is now demanding of the Gas Commissioners 55 cent gas in place of the 80 cent rate. Why should not Quincy demand 80 cent gas in place of $1.40 and an electric light rate below 15 cents?

It would be good money in every property owner's pocket for our City Council to make a liberal appropriation to retain expert legal talent, who make a specialty of appearing before the Board of Gas Commissioners for the people of the various cities and towns throughout the State who from time to time demand lower rates, and fight to a finish the question of a liberal reduction in this city. The Gas Companies employ the highest priced talent to maintain their side of the case, why should not the City for its demands. A lower rate will not bankrupt the Company. Far from it, the history of the Gas Companies in this State almost invariably shows that low rates mean an enormous increase in business and large dividends for the stockholders. There is no reason to believe that the Quincy company with its 16 miles of mains would be any exception to the universal rule and for it to argue that it cannot afford to make the reduction, is sheer nonsense. I believe that it cannot afford to maintain the high rate of $1.40 per thousand.

This is the law which provides compensation for employees who are injured. The speaker will be ready to receive any suggestions as to improvements in the law. This will be instructive and interesting and as it vitaliy affects anybody employing labor, will be of great interest to all who will attend.

SUNDAY 12 TO 1—SHARP
Bethany Church, City Square
If YOU are a young man, and not associated with any other Quincy church, YOU are most cordially invited to come to our meeting.
A warm welcome—Hearty singing—A helpful hour together.

—High schools of eastern Massachusetts in general, and Greater Boston in particular, continue to manifest the unsportsmanlike temper conspicuous in their baseball and football games of recent years. Four players were ruled out of the game for slugging recently and there were reports of several clashes between squads of student supporters. If school authorities cannot compel obedience to canons of good sportsmanship, teams should be disbanded. As to the purely personal equation, schoolboys who aspire to collegiate distinction should remember that fisticuffs and mayhem are no longer considered clever in intercollegiate contests.—Boston Record.

Q.—If our Lord Jesus is the Bridegroom, and the Church is the Bride, when did the marriage ceremony take place; and when was the Scripture fulfilled which says: "And the Spirit and the Bride say, come. And * * * let him take the water of life freely?" Revelation xxii, 17. (A. E. M.)

Answer.—The marriage ceremony is the act of uniting or binding together the two contracting parties in the bonds of wedlock. According to the Jewish marriage custom the espousal or engagement might sometimes take place a year or more before the marriage ceremony would be performed. Thus the Apostle represents the Church as being espoused to the Lord Jesus, saying, "I have espoused you to one Husband, that I may present you a chaste virgin to Christ." (II Corinthians xi, 2.) Throughout this Christian Era, the Church has been the espoused virgin class and will become the Bride at the erturn of her Lord, for whom she has been 'anxiously waiting and watching. Then the union of Christ, the Bridegroom, and the Church, the Bride, will take place; for "the marriage of the Lamb will have come, and His Wife will have made herself ready." (Revelation xix, 7.) The invitation will then go forth to the world, "Come and partake of the water of life freely."

Manslaughter Charge Against Chabot For Killing Boys

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 2.—George Chabot, who is charged with manslaughter in causing the death of two boys run over by a motor truck which he was driving Wednesday evening, was held in $2500 for a hearing Dec. 12 by Judge Almy in the district court.

The boys, John R. and Harry Roth, 15 and 6 respectively, were drawing a small wagon loaded with kindling wood to their home when the truck approached them from behind and ran them down. Both were killed almost instantly.

Chabot, who says he did not see the boys in the dark, picked them up and drove them in the motor to the Cambridge relief hospital, but they were dead.

The fatality was witnessed by the father of the boys, who was on the sidewalk near them.

GIVEN THREE MONTHS

Two Wives In Court When Ashforth Is Sentenced For Bigamy

Newton, Mass., Dec. 2.—Thomas H. Ashforth of Watertown, who regarded an eight years' separation from his first wife as equivalent to a divorce and consequently married again, was disillusioned by Judge Kennedy in the Newton court and will spend the next three months in the house of correction. Both wives were in court.

Ashforth was charged with bigamy. He admitted that he married his first wife in 1890 and that he left her. About two years ago he married a daughter of George F. Barthelmes of this city.

The first wife was in Newton recently and expressed much interest when some one pointed out her husband walking with "his wife." She interested the police.

HILLES WILL DEVOTE HIS TIME TO POLITICS

President Promotes Forster to Become Executive Clerk

Washington, Dec. 2.—Rudolph Forster, who has been connected with the White House in an executive capacity for more than ten years, was appointed executive clerk to the president at $5000 a year, and Sherman P. Allen of the Washington bureau of the New York Herald was sworn in as his successor as chief clerk. The position Allen assumes at the White House pays $4000 a year.

Through the appointment of Allen and the promotion of Forster, much work will be taken off the hands of the president's secretary, Mr. Hilles. With the routine of the executive offices in other hands, he probably now will devote himself almost exclusively to observation of political conditions and consultation with Republican leaders in the interest of the president.

BRIEFS

Miss Lillian M. Jordan of Bath, Me., is spending the week with friends on Hancock street.

The many friends of our former townsman Marshall P. Wright will be sorry to learn of his serious illness at his home in Hollywood, California.

The political situation for Councilmen in Atlantic is quite harmonious this year in comparison to last year. With C. E. Gill who was a strong candidate last year not standing for the nomination of the Democratic party, and C. E. Carlson of Squantum being in Cuba during the caucus, the Ward Six candidates are fairly sure of election next Tuesday. Friends of Mr. Carlson know that if he had returned from his business trip to Cuba he intended to take out special papers, as he wants Squantum to be represented in the City Council. However the party feeling is that with the present candidates all sections of the ward will be properly represented.

Thomas F. Dwyer of Quincy avenue is at Wellesley, for a few days.

The annual dance of the Pride of Quincy lodge, 443, I. O. B. A., will be held in Music hall Tuesday evening.

Miss Isabelle K. Dunvan of Wakefield has returned to her home after a brief stay with relatives on Independence avenue.

Charles H. Johnson a well known worker in the No-License League for a number of years will be one of the speakers at the No-License meeting at the Washington Street Congregational church Sunday evening.

Francis T. O'Brien of Washington street is in New York city for a few days.

Arvin Page will be the leader at the meeting Sunday night of the Y. P. R. U. of the Wollaston Unitarian church and Walter E. Simmons will speak on "Spirit of Christmas."

A regular meeting of Quincy lodge 261, N. E. O. P., was held Friday evening in Protection hall.

Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher and Dr. Maria Drew are serving on the committee for the Tuberculosis camp of Quincy to distribute red cross stamps in Atlantic. There is a feeling that the people in Ward Six do not take the interest they might in the civic movements of the city. Perhaps this is always so where men earn their living in the large city and look at the suburb as simply a bed room for city toilers.

Music by the Granite City Quarteete will be a feature of the "No License" rally to be held at the First Presbyterian church Sunday night. The meeting starts at 7.45.

The Eagles met in Electa hall Friday evening. The meeting closed with an entertainment and repast.

A rally in the interest of Eugene R. Stone, Republican candidate for Mayor, and others aspiring for municipal offices on the Republican ticket, will be held in Hibernian hall, this evening. Representative-elect Walter E. Piper will preside and the meeting will be addressed by a number of the candidates and representative citizens.

The Wiggin bible class meets Sunday at 12 in the Wollaston M. E. church. All men not attending any other school are invited. The Murray class for young men invites all young men to attend its class at 12. The Royal Daughters hold their regular session at 12. All women are invited, Mrs. Wiggin teacher. The Deaconess will conduct the Epworth League. There will be a praise service. Everyone invited. The pastor will begin the first in the series of "Four Modern Devils" Sunday night. The subject of the first will be "The Red Devil." There will be special music.

TODAY'S COURT.

Joseph McGone was arraigned for ringing false alarms of fire at Braintree. He was placed on probation until March 1, with the understanding that he shall pay the Town of Braintree the sum of $25 to reimburse it for cost of calling out the department.

Augustus F. Bennett was fined $15 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

a regular permanent officer. Officer Whelan was the oldest reserve officer in point of service. He was born in Newburyport, Feb. 18, 1872, and received his early education in a parochial school. Leaving school, he was employed in a bakery for several years, until he came to Quincy and obtained employment as a teamster. He has been a resident of Quincy since 1889.

The promotion of Officer Whelan to the permanent force makes a vacancy in the reserve force and this vacancy has been filled by Mayor Shea by the appointment of Michael F. Canavan. Officer Canavan is a son of the late Michael J. Canavan, one of the first regular patrolmen of the city. He was born in Quincy June 30, 1888, and educated at the Willard and Gridley Bryant schools. He then worked at various occupations, until some years ago, since which time he has been employed by the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co. He took the civil service examination last April and received a high per cent.

These appointments will take effect at roll call tonight.

In connection with these appointments it is interesting to note that Mayor Shea, in the case of the promotion to the permanent force, took the oldest, in point of service, reserve officer and in the appointment to the reserve force the man who stood highest on the civil service list.

RALLIES

rounds of applause and he was assured that while Ward Four was nominally Democratic, he would receive a good vote.

Other speaker were Edward J. Sandberg and Albert N. Murray, Republican candidates for Councilmen-at-large, Frank Shay, Joseph Walker, John Evans, ex-Representative Peter T. Fallon and William H. Teasdale.

Fully 50 attended the enthusiastic house rally which was held in the interest of candidate Dwaney, at 47 Dysart street, Friday evening. The several speakers, including candidates E. R. Stone and Frank Shay spoke of the qualifications of Mr. Devaney to successfully hold the office of Councilman. When candidate Devaney arose to speak he was given great applause. Equal to the occasion, being a good talker, he outlined his platform stating that he was fully aware of the urgent needs of the city and, if elected, would do everything in his power for the passage of bills looking to this city's improvement.

The meeting adjourned at 11.30, those present saying that it was one of the best rallies held in Quincy for a long time.

BRIEFS

The senior chorus and the boys' choir of Memorial church will both sing at the no-license meeting Sunday evening.

One of Quincy's oldest and most beloved pastors, Rev. Edward Norton of Greenleaf street, pastor emeritus of Bethany church is to occupy the pulpit of First church Sunday morning at the 10.30 service.

The Ledger would like to communicate with a lady residing in Quincy Centre who is not busy afternoons and evenings and who has the gift of writing entertainingly, as we wish some one to write up lectures, concerts, social affairs, etc., and do special assignment work. Compensation according to work and ability. experience not necessary.

Junior Auxiliary of St. Chrysostom's church is to give "Mother Goose's Goslings" in the parish rooms Thursday evening at 7.45 o'clock. The success of the play is assured by the number of tickets already sold by the young folks. Miss Amy Lois Rhodes has been doing most efficient work this season as leader of the Auxiliary.

Misses Elizabeth Faxon and Hazel Dewhurst are the flower committee of First church for December and will have charge of the Christmas decorations as well as the usual Sunday pulpit decorations.

Rev. Charles B. Ames, who resigned last year from the assistant pastorship of First church has many friends here who will be interested to learn that he has received a call to become pastor of the First parish in Belfast, Maine, one of the oldest churches in the state.

Stephen Bennett of Newbury avenue, who has been very sick for two weeks is improving."

In consideration of the faithful service rendered John Hancock lodge I. O. O. F., of Wollaston by Past Grand L. W. Frost who is now located in Canton, a score or more brothers visited Blue Hill lodge Monday evening and witnessed the first degree conferred on two candidates. The work was done in a creditable manner and a general good time was enjoyed. At a late hour they started for home, having exchanged good fellowship among all the brothers present.

The Lend-a-Hand class of First church Sunday school is to present the play "Lucia's Lover" in the chapel Friday night also a candy sale. The proceeds are to be used for country week or some other small charity.

Members and friends of the Honor department of the First Presbyterian church are to have a social Friday evening in the lecture room.

At the regular meeting of John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F., of Wollaston on Wednesday evening, the initiatory degree will be conferred. There should be a large attendance of members and visiting brothers.

The largest prayer service in the history of Memorial church was the seven o'clock service Thanksgiving morning. So many attended it was necessary to open the chapel doors and file into the auditorium for the comfort of the large congregation. This was the first early Thanksgiving service ever held in Atlantic, but will most likely be continued.

The number of reservations of tables at the leading restaurants and hotels made by families for Thanksgiving day indicates to the hotel men that the old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner will soon be a thing of the past. Practically every hostelry of large patronage now makes a specialty of Thanksgiving dinners, and the housewife hails it as a gladsome relief from the three-day drudgery which attends the traditional family festival. Incidentally, father doesn't have to carve that turkey.

New England's most famous portrait painter, Frederick Porter Vinton, is being memorialized by a large exhibition of his principal works at the new Museum of Fine Arts in the Fenway. Mr. Vinton, whose untimely death last spring robbed the artistic profession of one of its brightest lights, was a Maine boy, born in Bangor, who won his fame as a painter of portraits of many of the most prominent people in the New England states. The exhibition is attracting large crowds of admirers who find that Mr. Vinton's works are remarkably well represented, not only in portraiture, but in the few landscapes and game pieces which Mr. Vinton executed more as recreation than otherwise. Looking at the large collection of portraits of eminent men of the past thirty years one finds it easy to realize that Mr. Vinton was the portrait painter per excellence of his day.

Westward Ho! Here's a chance for some of the 80,000 superfluous women in Massachusetts! A public spirited man in Orting, Washington, has written to the Mayor of Boston, urging him to encourage unmarried women to betake themselves to the western state, where there are far from enough women to go around, and where there are hundreds of honorable, well-to-do, educated men who would be glad of the opportunity to become acquainted with good, honest, working girls, widows or spinsters, with a view to marriage. These gentlemen, apparently, are not a bit fussy, either. They range from ages 25 to 60, so the marriageable ladies may be of ages approximately. They may be fat or thin, short or tall, dark or light—it makes no difference as long as they are willing to take care of homes of their own. The correspondent even undertakes to receive communications from such women and distribute them among eligible men, any one of whom, he maintains, would be perfectly willing to advance railroad fare if the correspondence proved agreeable.

A Harvard youth who kicked a football from Harvard Square to the North Shore has established an unique record. Not that he accomplished this feat in one fell kick—even the mighty Thorpe from Carlisle could hardly do that. He did, however, boot a round soccer pigskin the distance of 24 miles to Ipswich Centre in eight and one-half hours, thereby winning a wager that he could not cover the route in 24 hours. The young athlete was Daniel Sargent of the Harvard soccer team. He kicked off in Harvard Square at 3 A. M., and kept on kicking for nearly nine hours. A condition of the wager was that he should not use his hands, this leading to a difficult situation when the young man nearly lost the ball in a brook in the Middlesex Fells. To walk the 24 miles in the given time would be no insignificant stunt for a tenderfoot, and to interject the necessary frequent and forceful kicks throughout the trip demands an effort which makes one ache to imagine.

Pantomimic training of a sort publicly exhibited here early in December has very recently enabled Miss Oko Saegusa, trained in Boston, to be engaged in the cast of the Japanese Imperial theatre, Tokio. Pantomimic ability underlies the successes of Lida Wellmier, at the Opera Comique, Paris, of Marie Gjirtsen with the Berlin Opera Company, Jeska Swartz with the Boston Opera Company, Francesca Rotoli, of Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske's company, Henrietta McDaniels of the John Craig stock company, and several other talented dramatic and operatic performers but yesterday registered among the thousands of students thronging America's greatest conservatory and now conspicuously enrolled in professional ranks. They have gone to the basis of the histrionic arts. Pantomime is, in fact the drama's bone structure, its skeleton without which the play or the opera cannot move freely and naturally. Any musical or literary piece that is destined to live can, before production, be reduced to pantomime—can be made to go forward without a word spoken. Visit a moving picture house and observe the expressiveness of practically all the French films—the snap and dash of the acting, every slightest gesture saying something which it would take whole lines of text to convey. Theirs is the essence of good acting. The French are taught more than the speaking of speeches, though they learn that, too. They are also taught pantomime, its traditions, its principles.

In England and the United States prospective musicians, actors and playwrights may or may not acquire this ancient and honorable foundation art—unless they happen to be New England Conservatory alumni or Harvard alumni who have taken advantage of the Conservatory affiliation established some time since. The Japanese young lady's engagement among her own people, the French of the far East, came in consequence of mastery of pantomimic principles as presented by Clayton D. Gilbert, head of the department of dramatic action at the oldest and largest of American conservatories. Her case is typical. The list of Mr. Gilbert's pupils who have lately secured places in leading operatic and dramatic enterprises is a long one. It includes besides the performers just mentioned, Helen Conant, of the Polly of the Circus" company; Margaret Rand, with "Excuse me"; Fred Wallace, of Walker Whiteside Company; Frank Harrington, Lindsay Morrison Stock Company; Clinton Preston, "Third Degree Company"; Alice Brady, "Pinafore"; Harry Chamberlin, director of the comedy section of the Selig moving picture company; George Bridenbaugh, Russell Gilbert, Frances Woodbury and Lillian Herborn, in vaudeville, and many more. Opportunities for studying pantomime unique in this country and in some respects without parallel in France, explain, according to Mr. Gilbert, why managers bid pupils away from him almost before these have been completely trained. They also explain why as interested spectators he has had at his classes this fall delegations from the Irish Players, about to tour the United States in the interest of the Celtic revival.

McNAMARAS GUILTY

Attorney Darrow, chief counsel for the defence. "I will say now that there was no other reason or motive in it. I've studied this case for months. It presented a stone wall."

Darrow's statement was the more interesting because of the charges that the recent arrest of Bert H. Franklin, an investigator employed by the defense, and two others with him, might have precipitated a situation untenable save by a confession by the prisoner.

"Negotiations have been on for weeks," asserted Darrow, and this was corroborated by Fredericks. "We expected at one time that Jim would confess last Monday, but he did not," Darrow added.

Darrow also denied that external pressure from union labor and socialist sources was exerted as General Otis charged last night in a formal statement, or that the municipal election to be held next Tuesday, in which Job Harriman, one of the defense's counsel, is candidate for mayor, carried any weight. It was learned that Harriman was not consulted at all in the deliberations.

A brotherly affection bordering on worship brought about James B. McNamara's confession. A desire to save his brother from the necessity of confessing anything at all held back day by day the word which would end the trial.

"John is not in on this deal," the pale-faced man reiterated with insistence born of one great idea. "I don't care what happens to me."

His state of mind was known to Fredericks, who talked about it steadily with Darrow and Darrow's colleagues, Attorneys Davis, Scott and McNutt. A solution finally was found in the proposal that John J. McNamara plead guilty to the dynamiting of the Llewellyn Iron Works, for which he and Ortie McManigal jointly were indicted.

All of the proceedings relating to the astounding climax were lumped in a few minutes, after the entire day had been taken up in an attempt to secure a jury, which had been going on for weeks.

Two floors above the courtroom a few minutes after adjournment the office of the district attorney was alive with a throng of people—friends of the prosecution, newspaper men and photographers. The district attorney threw wide the doors and they trailed in.

Gas and Dynamite Played Part

Exhibits of all kinds in connection with the case were conspicuous and the very steel beam upon which James B. McNamara was shown to have placed the dynamite bomb which wrecked the Times building was exhibited to visitors. It was related that only a few nights ago a dynamite explosion was conducted by the state on the outskirts of the city in much the same way that the Times building is believed to have been destroyed.

Many a detail which hitherto would have been considered vital was freely talked about, but it lost its importance in view of the confession of guilt in the courtroom.

Gas and dynamite both played their part but dynamite started the trouble and caused the explosion proper. This was Darrow's explanation after his talks with the defendants.

Ortie E. McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, whose admissions are said to have been a big factor in the McNamaras' pleading guilty, will go virtually free if the plans of the state in his behalf do not go wrong.

Many Dynamite Outrages

The history of American crime fails to yield such a series of atrocities as those charged up to the band of which John J. McNamara is the alleged leader, and which culminated with the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building and its awful toll of twenty-one lives.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Do "Dry Cleaning" at Home.

His Wife—"Come out from under there, George! Your clothes will be all covered with grease again and you know it won't come off. We'll walk home."

Anty Drudge—"Let him fix it, Dearie; and don't fear the grease. Fels-Naptha will take out all the grease spots and stains. It's as good for 'dry cleaning' garments as it is for washing clothes."

Where there's a will there's a way.
But, usually, only one way.

Fels-Naptha is the way through which you can free yourself from the drudgery of the old-fashioned washday—if you will.

What is that drudgery?
You know.

Boiling clothes, making fires, hard rubbing.

Fels-Naptha lops it all off, takes it out of your washday program.

Fels-Naptha itself does all the work that you yourself would have to do in the roundabout way, summer or winter.

And it does it in cool or lukewarm water, without hot fire, without nauseous suds or steam in the house, without hard rubbing.

Have you the will to cut loose from the old ways—to free yourself from this drudgery?

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—Their itinerary completed, the members of the Technical Education commission returned from a five weeks' tour of the eastern states.

"We are well pleased with our investigation, especially in Massachusetts," said James Simpson of Toronto, "where they have not only developed a splendid type of schools for industrial training, but are laying plans the better to correlate academic with industrial training.

Even in the United States, however, educationists themselves are experimenting as to the best types of schools. New York spends $70,000 per year in evening lectures on educational and scientific subjects in its schools and upwards of a million have attended during the year."

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Aruŋga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Aruŋga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians. Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

CHAPTER X.

A MESSAGE FROM BOUCHER.

SHELDON became aware that she was speaking.

"I beg pardon," he said. "What's that you were saying?"

"You weren't listening to a word. I knew it," she chided. "I was saying that the condition of the Flibberty Gibbet was disgraceful, and that tomorrow, when you've told the skipper and not hurt his feelings I am going to take my men out and give her an overhauling. We'll scrub her bottom too. Why, there's whiskers on her copper four inches long. I saw it when she rolled. Don't forget. I'm going cruising on the Flibberty some day, even if I have to run away with her."

While at their coffee on the veranda Satan raised a commotion in the compound near the beach gate, and Sheldon finally rescued a mauled and frightened black and dragged him on the porch for interrogation.

The black drew a scrap of notepaper from under his belt and passed it over. Sheldon scanned it hurriedly.

"It's from Boucher," he explained, "the fellow who took Packard's place. Packard was the one I told you about who was killed by his boat's crew. He says that Port Adams crowd is out—fifty of them, in big canoes—and camping on his beach. They've killed half a dozen of his pigs already and seem to be looking for trouble. And he's afraid they may connect with the fifteen runaways from Lunga."

"In which case?" she queried.

"In which case Billy Pape will be compelled to send Boucher's successor. It's Pape's station, you know. I wish I knew what to do. I don't like to leave you here alone."

"Take me along, then."

He smiled and shook his head.

"Then you'd better take my men along," she advised. "They're good shots, and they're not afraid of anything—except Utami, and he's afraid of ghosts."

The big bell was rung, and fifty black boys carried the whaleboat down to the water. The regular boat's crew manned her, and Matauare and three other Tahitians, belted with cartridges and armed with rifles, sat in the stern sheets, where Sheldon stood at the steering oar.

"My, I wish I could go with you," Joan said wistfully as the boat shoved off.

"I'm as good as a man," she urged.

"You really are needed here," he replied. "There's that Lunga crowd; they might reach the coast right here and, with both of us absent, rush the plantation. Goodby. We'll get back in the morning some time. It's only twelve miles."

When Joan started to return to the house she was compelled to pass among the boat carriers, and one of them stepped up to her. In the darkness she could not make him out.

"What name?" she asked sharply. "What name belong you?"

"Me Aroa," he said.

She remembered him as one of the two sick boys she had nursed in the hospital. The other one had died.

"Me take 'm plenty fella medicine too much," Aroa was saying.

"Well, and you all right now," she answered.

"Me want 'm tobacco, plenty fella tobacco; me want 'm calico, me want 'm porpoise teeth; me want 'm one fella belt."

She looked at him humorously, expecting to see a smile, or at least a grin, on his face. The rest of the boys had crowded up at his back in a solid wall. Some one of them giggled, but the remainder regarded her in morose and intent silence.

"Well?" she asked. "What for you want plenty fella things?"

"Me take 'm medicine," quoth Aroa. "You pay me."

"You go along quarters," she said, starting to turn on her heel to enter the gate.

"You pay me," said the boy.

"Aroa, you all the same one big fool. I no pay you. Now you go."

But the black was unmoved. She felt that he was regarding her almost insolently as he repeated:

"I take 'm medicine. You pay me. You pay me now."

Then it was that she lost her temper and cuffed his ears so soundly as to drive him back among his fellows. But they did not break up. Another boy stepped forward.

"Me Gogoomy," he said. "Bawo brother belong me."

Bawo, she remembered, was the sick boy who had died.

"Go on," she commanded.

"Bawo take 'm medicine. Bawo finish. Bawo my brother. You pay me. Father belong me one big fella chief along Port Adams. You pay me."

Joan laughed.

"Gogoomy, you just the same as Aroa, one big fool. My word, who pay me for medicine?"

She dismissed the matter by passing through the gate and closing it. But Gogoomy pressed up against it and said impudently:

"Father belong me one big fella chief. You no bang 'm head belong me. My word, you fright too much."

"Me fright?" she demanded, while anger tingled all through her.

"Too much fright bang 'm head belong me," Gogoomy said proudly.

And then she reached for him across the gate and got him. It was a sweeping, broad handed slap, so heavy that he staggered sideways and nearly fell. He sprang for the gate as if to force it open, while the crowd surged forward against the fence. Joan thought rapidly. Her revolver was hanging on the wall of her grass house. Yet one cry would bring her sailors, and she knew she was safe. So she did not cry for help. Instead, she whistled for Satan, at the same time calling him by name. She knew he was shut up in the living room, but the blacks did not wait to see. They fled with wild yells through the darkness, followed reluctantly by Gogoomy, while she entered the bungalow, laughing at first, but finally vexed to the verge of tears by what had taken place. She had sat up a whole night with the boy who had died, and yet his brother demanded to be paid for his life.

"Ugh! The ungrateful beast!" she muttered, while she debated whether or not she would confess the incident to Sheldon.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Today marks the close of the football season for the present year and a brief resume of its experiences will show that it has been a most sucessful one. The improvements in the game have been noticeably beneficial and as a result of the many changes, it has been found that less accidents have occurred from the indulgence in the game of football than in previous years. The fatalities, such as occured in the adoption of the old style game, now seem to be a thing of the past.

Yet there is still room for further changes and there is no doubt but what these will be brought about when the football committees forom the various quarters convene. Many people are still opposed to the game and claim that it is brutal, but the trend of opinion seems to favor the great gridiron pastime, as has been conclusively proven by thousands who have witnessed football games, even within close range, during the present season.

The various sporting writers will now divert their attention towards picking all star teams, and among other selections that will bear much watching, will be those dealing with the choices of all interscholastic aggregations. It is to be admitted that select a combination, or even two combinations that would meet with the approval of all sporting bloods, would be an almost impossible task, but any one who has had occasion to see the different High school teams in action, could readily determine the individual stars.

Quincy High has made a remarkably fine showing this season and while a number of players on the team have received great praise at the hands of the different sporting writers from time to time, there is one warrier on the team who has shone forth in a conspicuous position in every game, and he is none other than the captain of the team, Herbert Johnson. Every critic who has seen the local boy in action this season has acclaimed him to be the equal, if not the peer, of any player who has held down his respective position on a high school eleven this season. Both on the offensive, as well as the defensive work, his playing has been a most potent factor in enabling the local boys to win their games.

His strength has been recognized in every game and if the different "dopesters" who select the all interscholastic teams, fail to take the captain of Quincy High into consideration, it seems that they will be guilty of a grave mistake. Time and time again he has had pronounced upon him encomiums of a varied nature, and his work will be fittingly commended if he is but given the position to which he is eminently entitled.

"Billie" Harkins, a local boy who is familiarly known, is in Chicago today, in company with the other members of the St. John's "Prep" eleven of Danvers. The "Prep" school boys are playing the Oak Park High eleven this afternoon for the national school championship. The Danvers team is a very formidable aggregation, and those who have seen its members in action claim that they should give the Chicago boys the hardest fought game of the season. The visiting team sustained its first defeat at the hands of the strong Boston College High eleven on the morning of Thanksgiving Day, the score being 3 to 0. Quincy High defeated the Boston boys by the score of 5 to 0, but at that time the members of the old gold and maroon team were without the services of a coach, and besides they were composed of a different contingency than faced the Danvers lads on the holiday.

Coach Jones of the St. John's team states that young Harkins has been a find. He has been playing a wonderful game all season, is fast, strong and a tireless worker and has displayed rare form in every contest.

A number of local fans were disappointed today to be informed that the Quincy A. A. and the U. S. S. Rhode Island teams would not meet in a football contest again this season. The local players were anxious for the chance to try and revert the tables, but the managers of both teams failed to reach an agreement in the matter. Quincy A. A. was exceedingly desirous of playing the game, but the same spirit was not manifested on the other side. Such being the case, the question of supremacy is still in doubt between the local team, the above mentioned and the Cunningham Gym combination.

The Milton team has secured a win over the "jackies"; they in turn have been victorious over the Quincy A. A., and the latter played Cunningham to a standstill on the afternoon of Thanksgiving day. This game was har fought from start to finish and the fact that it proved the mecca of attraction for about 2,000 people is sufficient proof that it was awaited with keen anxiety.

The local boys seemed to have the better of the argument throughout and had fine chances to score on two occasions. Every man played his game, and only the all round work of one Powell, the fair, clean and manly left half back on the opposing eleven, prevented the Quincy A. A. from annexing a victory. It is too bad that a game between either of these three teams could not have been arranged, for it certainly would have proved a great drawing card, and at the same time would have enabled us to determine the champion 160 pound team of the state.

Now for the basket ball.

Franz Marceau, the well known local runner, was awarded his "D" by the athletic committee of Dartmouth college yesterday.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE AT WOLLASTON

Fire Friday Evening In Large Barn Owned By S. F. Barker

WHAT'S WRONG WITH AUTO?

Thealarm from Box 56 at 10 o'clock Friday night called the fire department to a spectacular blaze off Beale street, in a large barn owned by S. F. Barker. The fire started from some unknown cause in the southerly end of the building, but probably among some rubbish and before it was discovered it had gained great headway. Once it broke through the building it sent a sheet of fire high into the air that illuminated the sky for miles and which could be seen from a distance.

Once it broke through and was seen the alarm was sounded. The Wollaston apparatus is located a short distance away and Hose 2, laid a line of hose from the hydrant near the bridge to the fire. This was quickly augmented by other streams and it was not long before the fire was drowned out.

The barn was practically vacant, although A. W. Fay used one part of the barn in which to store his automobile. He was early on the scene and the auto was backed into the street. It was taken out just in time for a few minutes later and it would have been too late to save it. As it was the auto was quite badly scorched. The paint on the car was ruined and the leather seats and hood badly scorched, and it will require the outlay of a considerable sum to put it back in shape.

The barn was an old one and was practically destroyed, for although the frame is standing, the interior is all gone. The loss on the building will not be over $800 although that amount would not replace it with a new structure.

The loss to the automobile will also doubtless be all of $200. The all out sounded in half an hour.

Quincy's much talked about auto chemical was at the fire but was later in arriving than it should have been. The Central station combination was the first piece of apparatus through the Square and this had reached a point beyond Warren avenue, on Newport avenue, before it was overtaken and passed by the auto.

In answering the alarm, Friday noon, the steamer, a heavy piece of apparatus reached a point near car barn on Hancock street before it was overtaken by the auto. The general impression is, that as run today, the auto chemical is of little use.

TO TAKE UP BOXING

Tom Longboat Quits the Cinder Path For the Squared Arena

Toronto, Dec. 2.—"Tom" Longboat, the Indian runner, is through with the game, according to a report in this city. He will not retire from the athletic game, however, as he intends to turn his hand to the squared arena; that is, he will become a boxer.

Longboat will show at a local club next week. He will probably meet some middleweight, as he will weigh 150 pounds when he enters the ring.

DELL'S BEAT KING'S TEAM AT Y. M. C. A.

Some great bowling was in store at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys last evening when the team captained by Dell, came out victorious over King's team by a large score. The greatest sum total for the three strings was made by "Charlie" Ganzel, the old national league baseball star, who attained the 420 mark.

The former leaguer also led the field in the single string class, reaching the 153 mark for a single roll with the bottle pins.

For the winners, Richards was high man, with a mark of 147 for a single string and 387 for the sum total. The first roll off of the teams was close, but after that the winners kept increasing their lead. C. Ganzel being the only one who seemed able to do the effective work for the losers:

Several members of Camp 32 Sons of Veterans journeyed to East Weymouth last evening to witness the inspection ceremonies of James L. Bates Camp 36 of that town. The inspecting officer was Past Commander W. H. Payne of the local camp.

The football game between the Civic club of Braintree and the Red Men of South Quincy was won by the former by the score of 5 to 0. It was a hot contest witnessed by large crowd. The playing of Pratt for the Civic club and Lennon for Quincy were the features.

BASKET BALL TONIGHT.

Michigan, under Capt. McArdle and Peun, led by Capt. Tirrell, will open the series of three games tonight at the Y. M. C. A. Penn has already won one game, while Michigan is trying to get away from the "also Ran" division, so a grand game ought to result.

The second game will be between Dartmouth and Carlisle. Dartmouth with Henry Trask as the bright and shining star, is already counting the game as a "win," but "Al" Thomas, the peerless leader of the Indians says there is absolutely nothing to it but Carlisle. The Indians are noted for "trick" plays, so this game ought to spring some good surprises.

The 3rd game ought to be a hummer from start to finish, for Capt. Childs of Brown is going right after Cornell, led by the popular "Ernie" Rich.

Childs claims that Dartmouth got the jump on his team in their last game, so he intends to set such a fast pace from the outset that the husky Cornell lads will be unable to follow them.

The first game commences at 7.45.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES GET ROUSING RECEPTION AT SATURDAY NIGHT'S RALLY

Stone, Sandberg, Richards, Hobbs, Newcomb Are Enthusiastically Received At Big Meeting In Ward 3

John L. Miller's Fine Tribute To Albert N. Murray

About 200 citizens congregated in Hibernian Hall, Franklin street, Saturday evening to hear the different republican candidates and representative citizens erpress their views and sentiments as regards the municipal campaign situation. The gathering was presided over by representative-elect Walter E. Piper, who outlined the different issues which were at hand and presented a number of introductory remarks accordingly as each speaker proceeded to discourse.

The first speaker of the evening was Councilman Robert Craig, who gave a short history of Eugene R. Stone, republican candidate for mayor, and urged that all present rally to his support. He said that Mr. Stone would make a competent Mayor because of his business experience and his intimacy with the affairs of the city, derived while a member of the fire and finance committees of the city Council. Of the democrate candidate, Mr. Wall, he could say nothing, other than that he thought that the gentleman from Ward one should serve an apprenticeship in the city council before aspiring to mayoralty honors.

He urged the election of the entire republican ticket, and especially the councilmanic candidates who were seeking office with him from Ward Three as for himself he had not much to say, other than that he had tried to do his best all the time. He said that it takes a man a year to learn the "game," in the city council, and asserted that he had recently become conversant with a number of new developments.

He said that he had tried to serve the entire city to satisfaction and felt that his efforts in the interest of Ward Three would merit his return to the city council this coming year. He was accorded great applause.

Arthur W. Newcomb, candidate for school committee-at-large was the next speaker. He advocated the election of the republican candidate from top to bottom. He thanked the voters for the splendid vote they had always given him, and assured that he was deeply grateful for the same.

He then spoke of various matters pertaining to the functions of the school committee, and portrayed the many measures that were adopted in order to mould together true types of manhood and womanhood. He too, was given a fine reception.

Councilman John R. Richards, candidate-at-large, consumed much

"SHOULD OLD AQQUAINTANCE BE FORGOT?"

7th Annual Memorial Service of B. P. O. E. Held Snuday Night

THE SPEAKERS

The seventh annual memorial service of Quincy lodge of Elks, was held Sunday evening at Alpha hall and was the occasion for the gathering of a large number of Elks and ladies. These memorial services are held annually in accordance with the constitution of the order and all over the country similar services were held Sunday.

Promptly at 8 o'clock, the lodge marched into the hall and the lodge of sorrow was opened in regular form by the Exalted Ruler. Music during the service was furnished by the Alpha quartet and the service was very impressive. The roll call of members who had gone before, showed that the lodge had lost sixteen, two of whom had passed away since the last memorial service—Robert M. Gunning and John S Krocker.

The address was by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong of Christ church. In opening his address he expressed his good fortune at having an opportunity to be present, as it meant much to him and he thanked the lodge for the opportunity. It was very much to the credit of the order that they meet to commemorate their honored dead. It is the evidence that the friendships formed here are not easily broken. That one when he goes, is not soon forgotten. That even death itself does not mean the parting. Once a year you bring back the names of those with whom you have been associated. Their memories revived in the highest form in a service of this character. Such a service suggests certain thoughts which are not ordinary, but which lie in the hearts in the background. This service points to man's latter end, to ultimate things. We gather to commemorate those who have reached the end as far as earthly life is concerned. We realize that we must go as they have gone. The end is certain as to fact but uncertain as to time. How many of us who are here today assembled, will pass away during the coming year, no one can know, but it is almost certain that some will. This service has its deep significance. It teaches us the lesson to turn aside from the busy world and consider for a moment whither we are going. The thought is not gloomy,

DEMOCRAT RALLY AROUND CANDIDATES

Make Things Lively At Meeting In West Quincy

MR. WALL SPEAKS

A rally in the interest of James E Wall and the Democratic ticket, was held in Hibernian hall, West Quincy, last Saturday evening and was largely attended. Michael Lyons, Republican candidate for Councilman from Ward Four, presided. The speakers included, besides the Councilmen-at-large candidates and the ward candidates, Joseph McPherson, candidate for School Committee and John J. McDevitt.

Many stirring arguments were presented and many Democrats were criticized for supporting the Republican nominee for Mayor. The candidacy of Mr. Stone was dwelt upon at length and he was scored for failing to answer the questions that had been put to him at the Houghs Neck rally by one of the speakers. One of the orators spoke of the campaign promises that had been rumored and concluded by asking those present to support Mr. Wall, who, if elected, will enter City Hall, unhampered by any promises or pledges.

Mr. Wall himself was given a great reception and spoke at length on his candidacy, concluding by stating that there was nothing in the platform of his opponent that was not contained in the Democratic and the citizen candidate's platform. Refreshments brought the rally to a close.

MANY ENDORSE NO-LICENSE AT BIG MEETINGS

Active League Have Notable Rallies In Various Sections of City

THE SPEAKERS

Largely attended and inspiring meetings in the interest of "No License" were held at various places in the city Sunday. Rousing ones may be noted as follows: Bethany Congregational Church, at 7.30 with address by Daniel A. Mackay of Roxbury. Washington St. Congregational church, First Presbyterian church at 7.45. Charles E. Moody, the speaker. Excellent addresses at the Hal Place Methodist church. Theophilus King addressed the meeting at the Atlantic Memorial Congregational Churches and there was a Union meeting at the Swedish church on Granite street.

The meeting at the Bethany church was most impressive and the size of the ongregation showed with what favorable consideration the fine work of the league is received. Following an opening scriptural reading by the Rev. Dr. Tobey and some good music by the Pilgrim Male Quartet the speaker of the evening Daniel A. Mackay was introduced.

Mr. Mackay is earnest and impressive and took hold of his subject in a manner that forced home his argument and makes one wish that he could at once go to the polls and put his ballot in the shape that such good advice demanded.

Persuasive and of a fine personality, broad shouldered and keen, Mr. Mackay is the kind of fellow that when

STABBED TO DEATH AFTER WILD SCENE IN BOARDING HOUSE ON WATER STREET

One Man Killed Two Others Badly Wounded When Italians Get In Fight Over Small Amount of Money

Disturbance Started Over Payment For Liquor

For the fourth time within a period of two years Quincy has been startled by horrors of a murder. As a result of Sunday's affair, one man was stabbed and shot to death and two others were taken to the City Hospital suffering with stab and bullet wounds, while a fourth man was locked up at the police station as a witness. The affair took place about 2.30 Sunday afternoon in a house at 35 Water street and was the outcome of an argument among some Italians.

The dead man is Guiseppe Rucher aged 24 years, who boarded at the house where the row took place. The injured men are Saverio Espanio, keeper of the boarding house, who it is said did the fatal stabbing and Domenico Corseigliego of 3 Lambert street, East Cambridge.

The former has a bad knife wound on the top of his head and a wound made by a knife over the heart Corseglieg received a bullet wound through the right eye which destroyed his sight. Both men are in a serious condition but it is thought that Espanio will recover.

The bullet, after entering the man's eye, penetrated teh inside of the head and lodged somewhere in the muscles. Dr. N. S. Hunting and Dr. Thomas J. Dion who probed for the bullet, were unable to find it Sunday night, and the man was in too weak a condition to undergo a surgical operation.

There are two versions as to how the row started and what information the police first obtained came through interpreters and then only after great hesitation. At first no one seemed to know how the row started, but when one of the women broke down and began to talk and in a few minutes other tongues started in an excited manner, so that it was most difficult to make head or tail out of the story. Little by little, however, the police got what is believed to be the true facts of the case.

Rucher was a boarder at the Espanio house, as was his brother Matteo, both of whom have been in Quin-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The only business that Congress can do until the lobbyists get the wires working is to have the chaplain lead in prayer.

The government printing office having published 21,967,719 public documents the past year, is probably the greatest supplier of old junk in the country.

In view of the way John D. collected his loans from the Merritt brothers, we have decided not to ask him for the loan of $7.75 with which to buy Christmas presents.

Serious charges were made against the Army in the inspector general's report, but if they had succeeded in beating the Navy at foot ball all would have been overlooked.

While we disapprove of the Sunday colored supplement, we fear still more the demoralization of our children from the Congressional Record which is again turned loose in our homes.

J. P. Morgan is now located in the 31st floor of the Bankers' Trust Co. in New York. As he has very little to do, he will be glad to stop and gossip with any of our citizens who may visit the metropolis.

Of course Banker Morse had no particular reason to fear punishment when he took the money. All the punishment usually inflicted on such an offender is to elect him director of a few more corporations.

Had President Taft mailed his message anonymously to the magazine editors, how many would have declined it with thanks, remarking that it did not seem to fit the illustrations which they had to work off on the public?

The party of governors and friends from the West that are touring the East are enthusiastic back slappers. They should also slap their pockets occasionally to make sure that the contents thereof have not been removed by the light fingered gentry.

It is a matter of surprise to strangers that our people are so luke warm about everything. It does not seem to be one thing as in some communities but about everything in the list. Whether we get improvements or don't get them, good train service or poor, moderate priced utilities or excessive, high or low tax rate, elevated or depressed railroad, license or no-license, it is all the same, but some day there will come a day of reckoning, for it always comes sooner or later, and what now seems to be nobody's business will me everybody's. What is the matter anyway?

That there has been a big tax collection so far this year is a matter of congratulation and the reasons may be many, possibly money is more plenty, but, we are inclined to think much is due to the efficiency of Tax Collector John J. O'Hara. He brought to the office remarkable business ability for one so young and without previous training. He has conducted the business strictly on business lines fearlessly, impartially, and always for the best interests of the city. Every one has received the same treatment, no favoritism being shown. Whether it is the legal mind (for Mr. O'Hara is a lawyer) or just natural business instinct, the city has certainly been the gainer by Mr. O'Hara's acceptance of the office for our tax collections have never been better. $441,711.47 in two months is a record to be proud of.

Why do our people hold back their support from the no-license campaign, something that vitally effects every man, woman and child? Do they want saloons in the city? If so they are taking the means to bring it about. Each year a few earnest men do all the work, dig up the money and conduct a thousand dollar campaign with the few dollars grudgingly given. Now no-license means no more to them or their children than to you and yours and is no more their duty than yours. If you are to shove the work of the campaign on to their shoulders the least you can do is to give financial support and encouraging words. The liquor interests have their eye on Quincy and we are in a position to know this. We are constantly refusing advertisements of every known brand of liquor.

Do not let the no-license vote grow less; work ever for an increased vote. Let our city be a clean and safe one at all times.

Whoever wins out in the mayoraly contest tomorrow is not perhaps to be congratulated for he will have to assume many burdens; an inheritance from past administrations. The tax rate is bound to be larger next year but it will not be the fault of the incoming mayor and there are many other things that he will be blamed for by the unthinking public for which he will be in no way responsible.

If he comes into the office and picks up these burdens and gives the city a good businesslike administration then indeed the city is to be congratulated for the more business methods are brought to bear in conducting the city's affairs the better.

In voting for the Mayor it is also well to have the councilmen in mind and their record. Are they property holders and capable business men who will vote the city's money wisely and as though it were their own? It is the councilmen who spend the money and the Mayor who gets the blame.

NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS.

The creation by Pope Pius X of three more American cardinals is an event that means a great deal to Roman Catholic Americans. Previously there has been but one American cardinal, James Gibbons of Baltimore.

One reason why the college of cardinals has remained so largely Italian was that in the early days it was so difficult to communicate with the members of the college from foreign parts. History records one case where a pope appointed a man who had been dead some little time, the news not having reached Rome. And one English cardinal never learned of his appointment, so many believe although his death took place ten months after the event. The English court kept the news from him, and in those days of slow communication it never reached him in any other manner.

Many American Catholics believe that the Italian churchmen have been so absorbed in the artistic and material development of the city of Rome that they have given far too little thought to the interest of the church at large.

It is the belief of American Catholics that the American church shows a devoutness and loyalty that entitles it to larger influence. On the other hand, it is remarked that the unsatisfactory results of Italian churchmanship are shown by the failure of that church to plant a deeper feeling of loyalty in the hearts of the immigrants who come here from that country.

A Jesuit Father, writing in Church Extesion Magazine, illustrates this point by telling of his experiences in canvassing among a gang of Piedmontese Italians in an American mining camp, to secure funds for a Catholic chapel. None of them would give a cent, and finally they pelted the priest with coal. On applying to some Japanese miners, each of the latter gave him $1.

On the basis of population, it is pointed out that the United States would be entitled to six cardinals. In the old days it might take a year to get a quorum of the college at Rome. But now Rome can reach Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore in thirty minutes any day, and in ten days he could be walking up the steps of the Vatican.

The situation, says a writer in the North American Review, was as if all our cabinet members and senators were chosen from New England, leaving the rest of the country to be satisfied with postmasters and internal revenue collectors. That Pope Pius was influenced by these arguments is apparent, and the four Americans will play a large part at Rome.

THE PICTURE THIEVES.

The stealing of a Fra Angelico masterpiece from a gallery at Florence, Italy, added to the "Mona Lisa" disappearance, suggests that the underworld may be just beginning to realize the enormous commercial value locked up in these few square feet of canvas and pigments.

There are a dozen art galleries in American cities every one of which has a considerable number of pictures whose commercial value must run into the hundreds of thousands. All the gold and silver of the bank of England would not buy the pictures in the Louvre gallery in Paris, even if the French government should sell them, which of course will never happen.

In view of this enormous cash value, it would not be surprising if some high grade criminals were willing to take the risk at the initiative of some wealthy art collector. Of course the chance of detection would be large. But when you consider how slight the protection is as compared with that thrown around the treasuries of one of our bank vaults, the hazards may not be so very different.

Some millionaire art collector who as a college student used to steal street signs and silverware, may have regarded it as an equally good exhibition of facetious wit to set the whole world guessing about "Mona Lisa" and the "Madonna of the Stars."

European sentiment is quite pronounced that some American has been at the bottom of these two jobs. It would certainly be no more culpable than to steal a railroad from its widow and orphan stock holders, as some of our cultured kings of finance have done.

Anyone who has visited the European art galleries must recall how alert the attendants seemed to be, and how closely every visitor appears to be scrutinized for evidences of malice. Such a job could hardly be perpetrated in the day time. In American galleries our impression is that the attendants are less watchful. There is evidently a need for the tightening of museum defences. While the ordinary crook could not tell the difference between a $100,000 Turner and a $1.00 department store print, there are men of a different stamp in the business.

GREAT MEETING OF FORESTERS

One of State's Largest Held In Alpha Hall Sunday

MR. BARRY PRESIDED

One of the greatest meetings of Foresters, ever held in this State, was called to order on Sunday afternoon at Alpha Hall by Chief Ranger Fred Steinbrenner of Court John Adams. About four hundred and fifty members had assembled to welcome Grand Chief Ranger Wm. Mitchell and Staff and also to witness a class initiation of about one hundred members.

After some routine business, the initiatory work was in order. This part of the meeting was presided over by Past Chief Ranger Peter J. Barry and the work was attended to by the degree staff of Court Roger Wolcott.

The performance of the degree work was excellent, the high degree of efficiency and the smoothness with which every detail was attended reflects great credit to the degree team, and created a very favorable impression on those present.

After the initiation, Past Chief Ranger James O'Dowd addressed the meeting, he referred to the cordial relations existing between the Quincy Courts and the Grand executive.

Grand Chief Ranger Mitchell was the next speaker and he made a great impression. He has a magnetic personality and is a fine speaker. He spoke of the growth of Forestry from the institution of Court Perseverance at Leeds, England in 1790 up to the present time when the membership in this contry alone is two hundred and fifty thousand. He referred to the institution of Court Good Speed in Philadelphia in 1832 and of the breaking away from the parent body in Great Britain, by the Foresters of America, principally on accont of the color question. He spoke of the splendid financial condition of the organization.

Grand Trustee John Warner was the next speaker and he stated very forcibly that, in his opinion at least; this district should have better representation on the Grand Executive.

Fin. Sec. Alex W. Russell of Court John Adams was the next speaker. He amde som telling comparisons, showing that it was possible for any member of the Quincy Courts who happen to be sick, to receive one hundred and sixty one dollars in sick benefits in one year. He also referred to the excellent feeling existing between the three Quincy Courts.

Past Chief Ranger Peter J. Barry and his committee deserve great credit for the excellent manner in which every detail relative to the meeting was carried out and the meeting closed by every member being imbued with a fresh inspiration for the advancement of the principles of Forestry.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY---WHY!

Herbert S. Barker is known as one of the live wires of that part of the city known as Atlantic. Although a resident of Quincy, his business is in Boston, where he is connected with the well known firm of Blacker & Shepard, lumber dealers. Mr. Barker was born in Boston, June 21, 1862 and graduated from the public schools of that city with high honors.

He entered the employ of Blacker & Shepard in 1878 and is still with that firm. Desiring a home in the suburbs, he built himself a handsome residence on Hancock street, where he now resides surrounded by a happy family. He was elected a member of the City Council from Ward Six in 1894 and served in the years 1895 and 1896. In 1908 he was elected a member of the school committee for the term of three years.

He has always been a staunch Republican and is at present a member of the Republican Ward Committee. He is also an active member of the Board of Trade and of Quincy lodge of Elks.

SOCIAL DANCE OF QUINCY NATIONAL BAND

A social dance, under the auspices of the Quincy National Band, was held in Electa hall Saturday evening and a most enjoyable time was in order. Dancing was enjoyed till 11.30 o'clock. The floor was in charge of the following committee: Walemar Ekblund, Tamo Djef, Delmar Dask, Alfred Nelson, Helmar Kask, Mrs. W. L. Duonkoski, and Lydia Vademus.

MR. STONE ANGRY ABOUT CIRCULAR

I am advised that an unsigned, anonymous circular, printed on yellow paper, is being circulated among the voters. This circular, besides casting reflections on certain city officials, urges the voters to support me. I wish to disclaim all knowledge or responsibility for that circular. It is unfair, unjust and causes reflection on worthy and upright citizens and officials. I want no voter to be influenced by it. It should be treated with the contempt it deserves and no further notice be taken of it.

cy two months and were employed at the Fore River. In addition to these, there were in the room Corseigliego and Michele Salvanini of Lambert street, East Cambridge. Mrs. Espanio, a young child and five other Italians, who live in different parts of the city.

Matteo Rucher, the brother of the dead man, said that the trouble started about the payment of 30 cents for three bottles of beer and in the excitement that followed, Espanio drew a revolver and started firing. In an instant, there was a general fight in progress, during which Espanio was knocked down. Rising to his feet, he is said to have grabbed an Italian bread knife, about a foot long and chased Rucher into the street and stabbed him.

Another story of the affair is told by Mrs. Espanio, wife of the keeper of the boarding house, who says that the dispute grew out of some beer which was being served, and that during an argument Rucher said that the Espanios were a family of pigs. This the husband resented and he immediately drew a revolver. A general mix-up took place in which everybody in the room took part. Mrs. Espanio with a child in her arms, tried to protect her husband after he had been knocked down to the floor.

After a short, but sharp fight on the floor, Rucher ran into the street and fell dead in the street. As Espanio drew a revolver, Corseigliego, who, was to sail for Italy next week and came to Quincy, Sunday, to say goodbye, tried to act as peacemaker but the next instant he received a bullet wound in the eye.

It was not long before the fact that a row and murder had been committed became known and soon the street was filled with excited people. Word was sent to the police station and the patrol wagon with a squad of officers was dispatched to the scene. The wagon was out on a job when the first call came but before the second wagon could be started the auto patrol came in and was on the scene in a few minutes after the killing. The street at that time was filled with people and there was great excitement owing to the constant jabbering of the Italians, it was with difficulty that a story of what had happened could be learned.

The police have learned that Lester Perry, of 77 Franklin street, was approaching the Espanio house, when he saw a man rush from the house, followed by a second man who carried a long knife, as the men reached the sidewalk the man with the knife plunged it into the first man.

The man who held the knife, was unknown to Perry and after doing the stabbing ran back into the house.

As soon as the auto with the officers arrived on the scene, the two wounded men were taken to the hospital. Medical Examiner Jones who had been notified soon arrived and turned the dead man over to Undertaker Hall. Matteo Rucher were taken to the police station and locked up as a witness.

The knife, with which it is supposed the stabbing was done, was found later under a stairway at a nearby house, but no trace of the revolver was found. No evidence could be found on the walls of the house that a revolver had been used but witnesses said that they had heard five shots.

Michele Salvanini is also being held by the police as a witness. The other Italians who are said to have been present are known and will be in court when wanted.

The two men arrested and held as witnesses were brought into court this morning and arraigned on warrants charging them with assault, with a dangerous weapon on Saverie Espanio. The case was not heard this morning and the two men were held in $5,000 bail each for their appearance Dec. 20.

The men at the City Hospital are reported as doing as well as could be expected and it was said this morning that Espanio, who it is alleged committed the murder, would be able to be out in a few days. While he is at the hospital he is under guard of Constable George McKay.

FINE SURGICAL WORK

Steel Riveted In Man's Body to Replace Shattered Shoulder Blade

Chicago, Dec. 4.—A steel shoulder blade was riveted in the body of Andrew Govich to replace a bone shattered when he fell from a sixty-foot smoke stack to the top of the six-story building of the Mark Manufacturing Company in Evanston.

Govich was saved from death by William Roberts, who reached out over the edge of the roof and swung the man in against the wall as he fell. Roberts was injured in the chest when Govich's body threw him against the wall, but had he not caused Govich to strike the wall the iron worker would have been dashed to death on the pavement seventy feet below.

ELKS' MEMORIAL SERVICE

but it is for us to be ready for the word when it comes. When we come to that moment, when we must part with all that we held dear, there is but one possession given us which goes with us. That is the character which we have developed for ourselves by our living.

We ask, where are they whom we laid at rest? They have returned to the earth from which they sprung. Is that all? I am sure you of this order, who have these splendid principals and are engaged in such good work know that their works do live. The question, if a man die, shall he live again, is a question that has been handed down through the ages, but God in the good book tells us, that because I live, ye shall live again. We should fortify ourselves upon that word in our hopes of seeing our dear friends again.

The eulogy at the service was delivered by Granville P. Rogers of Somerville, in the absence of Judge Thomas P. Riley who had suddenly been called away. Mr. Rogers said that this organization was somewhat misunderstood. He regretted it, but it was because they had little knowledge of the order and its teachings. He then gave a brief history of the order to which he said any white American citizen over 21 years of age of good moral character was eligible

In its early days, it was a social organization, but its founders realized that if it was to live, it must have stronger bonds of brotherhood and they wisely formed what we have today. It is all that its name implies. To protect children tenderly, woman and old age with respect. Enjoying the good things of life and always being of good cheer. It was because of these principals that there were now 1250 lodges in the United States with 360,000 members. Under our banner you will find men from all walks of life, without creed or sect. It is neither a beneficial or insurance order, but it is the general atmosphere of good fellowship that has drawn these 360,000 together. It has built a solid foundation. The strongest man can build, represented by the Bible and that fleetest of all animals the Elks. A member does not promise to give his fortune. He simply subscribes to its teachings and endeavors to live up to its principals toward mankind. An order that will hold men, will lighten the burden of life and will survive the storms through its fraternity. And it is fitting, therefore, that a great American order of this kind should set aside one day to be devoted to departed brothers, so today 360,000 members are doing the same thing that you are doing here, they are giving the same thought to those who have passed to the great beyond.

May God, in all his wisdom, be in the homes of those brothers who have gone beyond and may he bring to them comfort and consolation. To an Elk what the world calls death is simply a transmission to a better land and at that mystic hour, we will recall to memory those who have gone beyond and then turn again to the living that links them with the departed.

At the conclusion of the exercises the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Armstrong and many of those present returned to the club rooms where a lunch was served. The full program of the exercises was as follows:

—There are many people who loudly shout that they never read advertisements. Such people are—well, foolish to say the least, and, in addition, are not quite truthful. The appeal of advertising is subtle and insistent. It impresses people often without their being conscious of it and the very people who claim they never read the advertisements will be found buying advertised articles in preference to the unadvertised, reading advertised books, etc. There's a lesson for the advertiser in all this. It's the constant, persistent, well planned advertising that wins customers and clients like those mentioned above.—Banker Tradesman.

NO-LICENSE RALLIES

he says a thing you know he means it. He outlined the terrors of the rum traffic calling attention to the fact that the elimination of the saloon was for those, whose weakness allowed them to be drawn in and ruined before they had time to redeem themselves.

Many touching incidents that had occurred in his experience in philanthropic work were mentioned and it is to be noted that the outcasts in every case attributed their downfall to demon rum.

Mr. McKay especially desired that a large "No" vote be polled on Tuesday, the work would be easier extended if the majority was substantial.

Another large audience was addressed by Mr. C. H. Johnson, who began his address with a vivid description of the stirring scenes in the lives of the first settlers at the far famed settlement known as "Merrymount." Following with an interesting description ol the visit of Myles Standish to the settlement and his vigorous adjustment of the much discssed temperance question of that early day. This was indeed the first victory of the temperance cause in the old town. Then followed a touching allusion of the life work of the late Henry H. Faxon, followed by a graphic description of the local option laws and the four advantages derived from the same. At this point of the address the sensation of the evening came when Mr. Johnson commenced a discussion of no-license in the city of Quincy at the present day.

The voters present were told in plain words that prevalent idea that the Mayor and officers of the law were alone responsible for its enforcement was erroneous. Laws in every community are enforced in accordance with public sentiment. Reference was then made to the pony-express law and it was boldly asserted by Mr. Johnson that this law in its working in Quincy was a failure. The following figures were given by Mr. Johnson as the record of the seventeen licensed express companies from November 1910 to October 1911. Parcels, 54,945; gallons of beer and ale, 257,139; gallons of spirits, 2,193; gallons of wine 26,660. This approximately represents in money $117,004.15. To this must be added the amount that comes to the city in pockets by trains and electrics from nearby licensed places and what is brought in on teams of wholesale stores in Boston.

Mr. Johnson made reference to the recent raids made by Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue and complimented the officer for his efficient work. He urged the voters to give careful attention to the Councilmen as to their attitude on granting express permits. He sailed into the pony express bill and showed it was a bad thing for the city. His address was an eye opener and made something of a stir.

The union no-license rally in Memorial church, Atlantic filled the auditorium of the church to the doors. The boys' choir were each side of the platform and the senior chorus in the choir gallery. There was singing by the male quartet and choir.

Deacon W. F. Blake spoke on the "Christian temperance ideal." Rev Mr. Door of the M. E. church told of his boyhood exerience in the prohibition state of Maine and also gave figures of a number of cities in California showing that that the no-license cities had the lowest tax rate.

Rev. T. W. Davison pastor of the church spoke briefly of his appreciation of the christian temperance attitude of all the speakers, and said that temperance meant a chance for the boys and girls and the protection of the home.

W. F. Cummings in introducing Theophilus King said Mr. King was one of Quincy's strongest advocates for no-license and that his son was a chip of the old block and carrying the no-license fight throughout the state.

Mr. King told of his many years in working for no-license and of his pioneer work in Quincy for the temperance cause. He was proud that the city had stood so many years in the no-license list, and attributed the low death rate to its temperance ideals. He also gave figures of the cities of Lynn and Worcester under the license law and showed how few arrests were made where they had no-license. Mr. King said that he would never retire from his fight against the saloon.

The No-license Rally that was held last evening in the First Presbyterian church was very largely attended. Three churches were represented and it was a very enthusiastic meeting.

The meeting was opened at 7.45 with singing by the choir, then Mr. Alexander Clark, addressed the people with a few words on the No-license question. Mr. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church was then introduced and spoke very earnestly on the subject.

Mr. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, spoke a few words and tried to impress upon the young people the dangers of liquor and its evils.

Following a selection by the choir the solo being sung by William Warmington of the Granite City Quartette, Mr. Clark introduced Mr. Moody of Natick, as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Moody spoke very interestingly on the subject.

He spoke principally on fives. Five of everything, for instance in License cities they sell five times as much liquor as in No-license cities, and that only every fifth man has a vote and therefore every man should go to the polls and vote No for the sake of the other four who can not and for the sake of women and children which made up four-fifths of most homes. He also tried to impress upon the minds of the people two pictures which showed the sin and vice of one and the other just the opposite.

The choir then rendered another selection. Miss Minnie Miller sang the solo very sweetly the choir joining in the chorus.

Mr. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church pronounced the benediction.

ENTERTAIN McKEE.

George McKee was tendered a reception at the home of Fred Steinbrenner, 241 Water street on Saturday evening, a great many friends and acquaintances having met for the occasion.

Mr. McKee, who is a Quincy boy, and has just completed his second four year term in the navy, has reenlisted for a third term and will report for duty to the U. S. S. Marietta, at Portsmouth, N. H., on December 22.

Mr. McKee had the good fortune to be in the squadron which went around the world under command of Admiral Robbey D. Evans, better known as "Fighting Bob." His descripton of the trip and places visited was very interesting. He also showed a remarkable collection of curios picked up during the voyage

A very pleasant evening was spent in dancing, singing and story-telling, and the guest of honor will have many pleasant memories of his present visit to Quincy. When he leaves he will carry with him the good wishes of his many friends.

BRIEF SESSION OF CONGRESS

Large Attendance at Opening of the Sixty-Second

LITTLETON TAKES THE FLOOR

Replies to Attacks Upon Him by Secretary of Anti-Trust League—Differences With Stanley Likely to Be Patched Up Before There Is Division In Democratic Party Over It—Commerce Court In Danger

Washington, Dec. 4.—At noon today almost 500 senators and representatives assembled in the Capitol at the opening of the first regular session of the Sixty-second congress.

This is the complexion at present of the Sixty-second congress:

Senate—Republicans 49, Democrats 42; one vacancy (Colorado).

House—Democrats 227, Republicans 161, Socialist 1, Independent 1; one vacancy (Seventh Kansas district).

The session today, in accordance with precedent, was brief and largely perfunctory so far as the senate is concerned. In the house, however, the proceedings were enlivened by a speech by Representative Martin W. Littleton of New York on a question of personal privilege.

Mr. Littleton attacked Henry B. Martin, secretary of the so-called Anti-trust League, charging that Martin has deceived the steel trust committee as to his purpose in agitating the investigation and is in league with David Lamar, a bear broker in Wall Street, to depress United States Steel stocks.

Congress will at once plunge into work. Speaker Clark has conferred with many of the other Democratic house leaders, but as yet no definite legislative program has been planned. An early caucus, however, of the house majority will be called.

The effort to abolish the commerce court, which is to be led in the house by Representative Sims of Tennessee, opened today, when Sims introduced a bill to carry out his purpose. The measure provides that all cases now considered by the commerce court shall in the future be dealt with in the federal district courts, and it also provides for an appeal direct to the supreme court.

Democratic members of the house are still unsatisfied with the situation relative to the steel trust inquiry and the differences as to the method of procedure in view of the government's suit against the Steel corporation.

Inasmuch as the differences between Chairman Stanley and Representative Littleton, a Democratic member of the committee, relate to procedure and not to principle, some of the leaders have hopes that the matter will be satisfactorily adjusted before there is any division in the party over the matter on the floor of the house.

Speaker Clark and Mr. Underwood, who have attempted to bring about an adjustment of the situation, think that when all the committee members arrive the committee itself can settle the question of procedure.

It may be that Stanley will submit the question to the house and ask the committee on rules to bring in an amended resolution authorizing the committee to investigate the steel trust's operations and their relation to the Sherman law in spite of the government's suit. Should this be asked, the Democratic majority in the house would undoubtedly support the request.

In his speech in the house today Littleton devoted himself particularly to the attacks made upon him personally, and not to the future of the committee. The latter question is not expected to come up for consideration in the house until later.

FOLLOWING ILLINOIS LAW

Bay State Legislature Will Be Urged to Grant Pensions to Widows

Boston, Dec. 4.—State pensions for widows with young children are to be actively urged in the next legislature.

Believing that widows left with children too young to help in their support should be assisted by a pension from the state, the Congress of Mothers and many other societies in this commonwealth have begun a campaign of education and information along these lines.

A bill will be presented to the legislature, framed as nearly as possible like the law now in force in Illinois, which pensions widows with families.

Q.—In Zephaniah iii, 8, we read, "My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger." How will the Lord "gather He pour out His indignation upon them? (E. H. B.)

Answer.—This is a day of "Internationalism." Nothing is of any real importance unless it is of world-wide or international scope. The nations are all united by treaties, alliances, etc., and formed into a great community of general interests. This condition of affairs is the natural outcome of the enlightenment of our times. Modern inventions and improvements such as the cables, wireless telegraph, telephones, railroads, steamships and the printing press, have made communication between nations a simple and ordinary matter. There are the interantional financial systems, the international trusts, the international Socialist Movement, international Zionism, international (Olympic) sports, international Woman Suffrage, international Peace Conferences, etc., etc., all of which are leading up to the great international "Time of Trouble" foretold for the last day. The Lord's "indignation" poured out upon theassembled kingdoms and nations will result in a world-wide fiery time of destruction of all the unsatisfactory conditions of the present evil order of things; and then will follow the establishment of an international or Universal Government in the earth, called "The Kingdom of God." This will be the great international "desire of all nations."—Haggai ii, 7.

Q.—How shall we understand the Apostle Peter's words where he says quoting from the prophecy of Joel—'And it shall come to pass in the last days saith God, I will pour out of My spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on My servants and on My handmaidens I will pour out in those days of My spirit; and they shall prophesy?" (Acts ii, 17, 18.) Are we to understand that there will be two Pentecostal out-pourings of the Holy Spirit? (W. J. E.)

Answer.—Glancing about over the world today, and noting the events of the past we see that at no time thus far, has the Lord's spirit been poured out upon all flesh." But we do see that, beginning with the day of Pentecost, the Spirit has been poured out upon the Lord's servants and hand-maidens. And this was just as the Apostle stated to his hearers on the day of Pentecost, that it would be "in those days" that this would occur. As the result of the outpouring of the Spirit upon the Lord's people throughout the Christian Era, they have been able to prophesy (teach or expound) concerning the Kingdom of God and the Divine purposes. But "afterwards" (Joel ii, 28), after those days of the outpouring of the spirit upon the Church, and when the last member of the Anointed Class has been glorified, then the Lord will pour out His spirit upon "all flesh." The result of this second outpouring of the Holy Spirit will be the blessing and enlightening of all the peoples of the earth, until all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest, for the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters now cover the great deep!—Habakkuk ii, 14.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS

Quincy People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,

For Quincy kidney sufferers.

Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Quincy people who have been cured to stay cured.

Mrs. G. McDonald, 276 Water street, Quincy, Mass., says: "When I used Doan's Kidney Pills in 1908 the results were so satisfactory that I publicly recommended the remedy. That statement still holds good. I felt all out of sorts for at least six months, and was at a loss to know what ailed me. I had but little energy to attend to my housework and my back was painful and weak. An acquaintance hear me complain and suggested that probably my kidneys were disordered, and advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, getting them at Cox's Drug Store, and they soon fixed me up in good shape, making me feel like a different person.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29. Realizing the importance of the forth-coming message of President Taft, which will be his last before the next Presidential election, the Trade and Transportation Bureau has made inquiries which enable it to speak with certainty.

When the message is made public Tuesday the people will be impressed as never before with the sincerity of the chief executive and his conscientious purpose to enforce the laws framed by their representatives regardless of the effect upon a second term. The President is more concerned with his solemn sense of duty than with any personal aggrandizement dependent upon a continuance in office. If he fails to re-election he will not be unhappy, but he would be if he failed to have the approval of his conscience in the performance of his duty.

His message will clearly outline his attitude toward "big business."

He is satisfied that "big business" can square itself with existing laws if so disposed, and as long as he is President his efforts will be exerted in that direction, even if the limit of his endeavors extend no further than a year and four months. During that period he believes that he can reach a majority, if not all, of the corporations now having monopolistic powers. In construing his message it should be borne in mind that the President regrets as sincerely as anyone can any disturbance of business conditions incidental to the enforcement of the laws. He feels that on further reflection the public will also place this construction upon his acts.

It can be stated with assurance that there will be no repeal of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

The President does not expect any railway legislation of importance at this session. He believes the railroads are honestly trying to live up to the regulative laws. He is gratified at the manner in which the express companies are accepting regulation and at their pacific attitude toward the parcels post.

The Commerce Court will remain. He holds that this court was created for the purpose of expediting railroad litigation, a function which it is performing. If abolished the cases brought before it would necessarily go back to the U. S. Circuit Courts and the Circuit Courts of Appeals which could not be prevented under the constitution. Thus the final determination of these cases would be indefinitely prolonged. It would take a two-thirds vote in both the Senate and House to abolish the court, which support the President thinks no such bill could command.

In reviewing the anti-trust litigation, and particularly the recent Supreme Court decisions in the Oil and Tobacco cases, and the dissolution of these combinations, the President will take the stand that the efficiency of the law has been demonstrated and its effects have been wholesome and beneficial. On this question the president differs from Col. Roosevelt While he believes that the American people owe to his predecessor a debt that can never be fully paid for demonstrating that the people are greater than any business combination and in awakening them to a sense of their responsibilities and power, he is not prepared to accept Col. Roosevelt's conclusions as to constructive legislation. He maintains that when business is properly segregated, as in the case of the Tobacco Trust, providing absolute autonomy for each of the new concerns in their officers and directors, the stockholders themselves will see that there is competition. They must compete to live. It is not intended to enforce competition by law, but to make competition possible, and the individuals interested will take care of the rest.

The President has absolute confidence in the ability and disposition of the courts to effectually deal with contingencies and that oneor two examples would be sufficient to deter all other prospective law-breakers. For these, as well as other reasons the President feels that the trust magnates affected by the decisions are proceeding in good faith in the application of the court's orders.

DEBATE ABOUT CITY LIBRARY

Galahad Brotherhood Talks About Hours of Opening

ALL WANT LONGER SERVICE

That the Quincy Public Library should be kept open till 9 P. M. during the week and on Sunday afternoons, was discussed by Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church Sunday. Roy Prout and N. M. Spencer for the affirmative, and William Walker the negative. Every member took a lively part in the general discussion which proved largely in favor of the question.

The affirmative claimed that the Library was not a luxury but a vital necessity to the old and young of the city. That it failed to convey the knowledge contained within its walls by closing its doors to the public at the early hour of 8 P. M. The fact that working people, whose education depends largely upon this institution, after leaving school, do not find time to enjoy its privileges because the hour of closing came to early was quite evident. These people should have better opportunities. It was a great disadvantage to the people who want to receive its benefits and cannot on account of living some distance from the center of the city. It seemed unreasonable for a city with the population of Quincy that it must support a building that cannot be used to better advantage for the working class. That it should be open Sunday afternoons is imperative. Why? Because there are volumes containing information that at times is very important to the readers. These are books that cannot be taken away from the building, and Sunday afternoon is the only time available to many.

The negative said: That the opening of the Library on Sunday afternoons would serve to attract people who would abuse its privileges. That the expense incurred in opening Sunday afternoons and evenings until 9 o'clock could be placed to better advantage in supplying the residents of outlying sections with branch libraries. That the total expense, namely clerical and janitor service, light, heating and miscellaneous items, totaling between $175 and $250 yearly would in five or six years install and maintain a branch an entire year. That it is already creating a feeling of discrimination cannot be denied, with only one branhc in West Quincy and none in Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston and Quincy Point. There exists a doubt whether the people would take advantage of the privilege if granted and prove the expense a good investment.

Only necessary employment should be performed on Sunday, the clerical force should use the day for rest and recuperation. Citizens in outlying sections of the city in paying taxes, which contribute to the support of the Library, are taxed additionally in having to pay car fare to and from their homes.

Only fourteen per cent of the population are using the library at the present time. The city considers the Public Library a luxury is evident when the Mayor and the City Council reduced the appropriation asked for by the trustees (whose aim was to supply the demand) two thousand dollars. If the people of Quincy want the Library kept open until 9 P. M. and Sunday afternoons then they must convince the City Council that the time is ripe forthem to use its privilege. It is the need of money that keeps the Library closed at an early hour through the week and on Sundays.

Morning, noon and night, plain or toasted, PRATT'S BREAD is delicious.

Gifts For the Home

All kinds of match scratchers have been made by the trade in artistic colorings and materials, but none of them seems to fill the place of the homemade "Scratch My Back."

The scratcher illustrated is built from an oblong of corrugated paper about five and a half inches long and three and a half deep. A postcard forms the front of the useful convenience, and the back is of sandpaper, with the wording in gold, "Scratch Here."

The edges are passe-partouted together, and a narrow ribbon makes the hanger. Black headed matches are fitted into the corrugated holes top and bottom of the scratcher.

Crape Table Covers.

A chocolate brown in Japanese crape from the upholsterer's is used for hemmed table covers, stenciled in most effective colors. These covers make stunning gifts.

On this soft brown a light putty color is used with a brick red, and the pattern is one of the simplest of the running stencil design.

These table covers are made of a square measured by the width of the crape, thirty inches, or else they represent two widths or even three, overcast together by hand with silk to match the crape and with stitches so fine as to be unnoticed. The hems also are not conspicuous, an eighth of an inch being one of the favorite ideas in hem measurement.

Blue crape has been most effectively used, gray blue with a decoration of dull purple and sage green suggesting the colors of the iris.

White of a creamy tone is stenciled with pale yellow and brilliant orange in conventional design.

Four squares of yellow crape are joined with narrow gold lace insertion to form a large table cover, each corner of the finished piece being decorated in long Japanese stitches with gold thread in a wandering leaf design. The soft shades and the crape quality suggest almost endless possibilities for decorations.

Gifts For Housekeepers.

The woman who keeps house is not hard to give to. Something for the house always appeals to her. The embroidered pillowcase pictured will add handsomely to her linen closet. It is of fine linen. Above the deep hemstitched hem is an embroidered pattern done in satin stitch with mercerized white cotton. In the circle is worked the initial. Then there are many novelties for the kitchen, too, which she is sure to like.

An alarm clock is rarely given, and if a handsome variety is given it makes a nice gift. Choose a face with large figures. Cooks find these clocks convenient to set at the hour when a cake or roast must be taken from the oven.

Have you seen the new spice cases of nickel and glass? They are made of nickel rods one above the other, forming frames to hold glass bottles with nickel screw tops. The name of the spice is blown in the glass of each bottle. These come in various sizes, but a convenient one holds six bottles, three in a row, and gives room for nutmeg, ginger, allspice, cinnamon, cloves, mustard. The frames screw to the wall or inside a cupboard door.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN MUTTON IS GOOD.

MUTTON is at its best in the fall, so it should have a prominent place on the bill of fare for fall and early winter. Many persons object to mutton because of its strong flavor, but if the fat is carefully cut off it will be deprived of this.

When you happen to be roasting mutton, if you place it upon a rack in the pan instead of allowing it to cook in the fat it will not be so strong. The outer skin should also be removed.

A leg of mutton is roasted or boiled; chops are broiled; the neck may be steamed, braised or boiled. The loin supplies cutlets or roast and the saddle is roasted. The neck may be used for stewing or making broth.

Rolled Loin.

Rolled loin of mutton is a doubly useful dish, as it may be served cold for the luncheon table. The butcher should be asked to take the bones out of the meat. Then shape the mutton into a neat roll. It may be stuffed if you choose with a plain bread stuffing.

Secure the roll with wooden skewers or sew up. Dredge with pepper, salt and flour. Place in the pan and roast, basting with bacon or salt pork drippings and water.

Mutton chops cooked in a casserole are delicious. The chops must be first sauted in butter until they are a little brown. Then the casserole is arranged with a layer of onion, carrot and turnip cut in small slices and sauted until light brown.

The mutton chop is now placed on this with water or stock to almost cover the vegetables. The chop is laid on top of the vegetables, the dish covered tightly and allowed to cook until well done.

Mutton Scallops.

Mutton scallops may be added to the bill of fare. Take half a pound of cold mutton, one ounce of butter, half an ounce of flour, half a pint of gravy, sauce or stock, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of chopped onion, salt, pepper and nutmeg to taste.

Well butter some scallop shells or ramikins; chop the meat fine, melt half the butter in a small pan, stir in the flour, then add the stock or gravy. Stir this over the fire until it boils; season it carefully and add enough of it to the meat to moisten it well. Now stir in the chopped parsley and onion. Place the mixture in the buttered shells, shake a good layer of browned crumbs over the top of each. Put the shells on a baking tin in the oven till the mixture is hot through, then serve.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and conquers 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and is insulted. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

"And so it was all settled easily enough," Sheldon was saying. He was on the veranda, drinking coffee. The whaleboat was being carried into its shed. "Boucher was a bit timid at first to carry off the situation with a strong hand, but he did very well once we got started. We made a play at holding a court, and Telepasse, the old scoundrel, accepted the findings. He's a Port Adams chief, a filthy beggar. We fined him ten times the value of the pigs and made him move on with his mob. Oh, they're a sweet lot, I must say, at least sixty of them, in five big canoes, and out for trouble. They've got a dozen Sniders that ought to be confiscated."

"Why didn't you?" Joan asked.

"And have a row on my hands with the commissioner? He's terribly touchy about his black wards, as he calls them. Well, we started them along their way, though they went in on the beach to kai-kai several miles back. They ought to pass here some time today."

Two hours later the canoes arrived. No one saw them come. The house boys were busy in the kitchen at their own breakfast. The plantation hands were similarly occupied in their quarters. Satan lay sound asleep on his back under the billard table, in his sleep brushing at the flies that pestered him. Joan was rummaging in the storeroom, and Sheldon was taking his siesta in a hammock on the veranda. He awoke gently. In some occult, subtle way a warning that all was not well had penetrated his sleep and roused him. Without moving he glanced down and saw the ground beneath covered with armed savages. They were the same ones he had parted with that morning, though he noted an accession in numbers. There were men he had not seen before.

He slipped from the hammock and with deliberate slowness sauntered to the railing, where he yawned sleepily and looked down on them. It came to him curiously that it was the destiny ever to stand on this high place looking down on unending hordes of black trouble that required control, bullying and cajolery. But while he glanced carelessly over them he was keenly taking stock. The new men were all armed with modern rifles. Ah, he had thought so. There were fifteen of them, undoubtedly the Lunga runaways. In addition a dozen old Sniders were in the hands of the original crowd. These were the very same men who had killed his trader, Oscar, at Ugi.

"What name you walk about this place?" he demanded.

At the same time he stole a glance seaward to where the Flibberty Gibbet reflected herself in the glassy calm of the sea. Not a soul was visible under her awnings, and he saw the whaleboat was missing from alongside. The Tahitians had evidently gone shooting fish up the Balesuna. He was all alone in his high place above this trouble, while his world slumbered peacefully under the breathless tropic noon.

Nobody replied, and he repeated his demand, more of mastery in his voice this time and a hint of growing anger. The blacks moved uneasily, like a herd of cattle, at the sound of his voice, but not one spoke. Directly beneath him he caught sight of the muzzle of a rifle barely projecting between two black bodies, that was slowly elevating toward him. It was held at the hip by a man in the second row.

"What name you?" Sheldon suddenly shouted, pointing directly at the man who held the gun.

Sheldon still held the whip hand, and he intended to keep it.

"Clear out, all you fella boys!" he ordered. "Clear out and walk along salt water. Savvee!"

"Me talk," spoke up a fat and filthy savage, whose hairy chest was caked with the unwashed dirt of years.

"Oh, is that you, Telepasse?" the white man queried genially. "You tell 'm boys clear out, and you stop and talk along me."

"Him good fella boy," was the reply. "Him stop along."

"Well, what do you want?" Sheldon asked, striving to hide under assumed carelessness the weakness of concession.

"That fella boy belong along me." The old chief pointed out Gogoomy, whom Sheldon recognized.

"White Mary belong you too much no good," Telepasse went on. "Bang 'm head belong Gogoomy. Gogoomy, all the same chief. Bime by me finish, Gogoomy big fella chief. White Mary bang 'm head. No good. You pay me plenty tobacco, plenty powder, plenty calico."

"You old scoundrel," was Sheldon's comment. An hour before he had been chuckling over Joan's recital of the episode, and here, an hour later, was Telepasse himself come to collect damages.

"Gogoomy," Sheldon ordered, "what name you walk about here? You get along quarters plenty quick."

"Me stop," was the defiant answer.

"White Mary belong you bang 'm head," old Telepasse began again. "My word, plenty big fella trouble you no pay."

"You talk along boys," Sheldon said, with increasing irritation. "You tell 'm get to h— along beach. Then I talk with you."

Sheldon felt a slight vibration of the veranda and knew that Joan had come out and was standing by his side. But he did not dare glance at her. There were too many rifles down below there, and rifles had a way of going off from the hip.

Again the veranda vibrated with her moving weight, and he knew that Joan had gone into the house. A minute later she was back beside him. He had never seen her smoke, and it struck him as peculiar that she should be smoking now. Then he guessed the reason. With a quick glance he noted the hand at her side and in it the familiar paper wrapped dynamite. He noted also the end of fuse, split properly, into which had been inserted the head of a wax match.

"Telepasse, you old reprobate, tell 'm boys clear out along beach. My word, I no gammon along you."

"Me no gammon," said the chief. "Me want 'm pay white Mary bang 'm head belong Gogoomy."

"I'll come down there and bang 'm head belong you," Sheldon replied, leaning toward the railing as if about to leap over.

An angry murmur arose, and the blacks surged restlessly. The muzzles of many guns were rising from the hips. Joan was pressing the lighted end of the cigarette to the fuse. A Snider went off with the roar of a bomb gun, and Sheldon heard a pane of window glass crash behind him. At the same moment Joan flung the dynamite, the fuse hissing and spluttering, into the thick of the blacks. They scattered back in too great haste to do any more shooting. Satan, aroused by the one shot, was snarling and panting to be let out. Joan heard and ran to let him out, and thereat the tragedy was averted and the comedy began.

"WHAT NAME YOU WALK ABOUT THIS PLACE?"

Rifles and spears were dropped or flung aside in a wild scramble for the protection of the cocoanut palms. Satan multiplied himself. Never had he been free to tear and rend such a quantity of black flesh before, and he bit and snapped and rushed the flying legs till the last pair were above his head.

"I fancy you need a lesson or two in inserting fuses," Sheldon remarked dryly.

Joan's eyes were scornful.

"There was no detonator on it," she said. "Besides, the detonator is yet unmanufactured that will explode that charge. It's only a bottle of chlorodyne."

REPUBLICAN RALLY

time with a discourse on issues of a varied nature. He spoke of different matters that had come before the council, and dwelt at length upon the sidewalk development and the condition of various streets throughout the city, including Houghs Neck, at the same time paying his respects to the present administration.

Confining his remarks to candidate Stone, he said that he believed the republican candidate to be qualified from every standpoint. He condemned the "non-partisan" administrative ideas as farcical and advocated the election of the entire republican ticket

He said that the citizens had the right to exact certain demands on the incoming mayor, and one of these was his attitude towards the dock development.

He spoke of the equalization of taxation problem, and went at length into a discussion on the water system, descrying the waste and stating that proper meter systems should be universally and uniformally established. He laid special stress on the election of all republican office seekers.

Raph W. Hobbs started in by thanking the voters for the fine support he was requited and recorded his gratitude for the same. He condemned the so-called "non-partisan" tactics and asked that those present vote the straight republican ticket. He felt sure that all the republicans on the ticket would be elected.

He commended the business ability of Mr. Stone and also his political career, and said that Mr. Stone was the choice over Mr. Wall in the latter respect. He said that the democrats were out against him strongly, but entertained no fear concerning his own personal election.

He took up the candidates individually and spoke of each one's qualification, concluding by urging a large vote and the election of the republican on the ticket, in order to have a thorough republican administration.

Albert N. Murray was next introduced. He said that he favored an increase in the tax rate, and asserted that such would be received in the proper spirit, in order to meet the current expenses. He spoke on the development of the water front and among other things favored a decrease in the price of gas. He felt sure of the election of Mr. Stone.

In closing he urged the election of the republican ward candidates for the council, and all the other republicans.

Councilman Edward J. Sandberg came in at this period and was immediately called upon. He said that he had been accused of being a narrow republican by a well known official, and concluded that he felt proud of it. He advocated the election of Eugene R Stone for mayor and outlined the qualities and capabilities of the latter.

John L. Miller was given a rousing reception when called upon. Mr. Miller pledged himself to no man but dispelled the rumor that he was supporting the democratic candidate, because, he added, "Mr. Wall never asked me for my suport."

Mr Miller spoke of Ward 3 as the banner ward of city, being a sort of cosmopolitan district. He considered himself free and happy because he claimed that the job of the incoming mayor will be an unpleasant one.

Mr. Miller then went on to explain the condition of the city, and adduced numerous instances where great benefit should be forth coming. He spoke of the water front development and criticized the railroad facilities.

He condemned the water meter system and said that a uniform rate of charge should be established. He advocated various changes in the city administration, and concluded by telling those present to vote for whomsoever they desired, but to include among them Albert N. Murray, candidate for councilman-at- large, a man who he could recommend as being competent and well able to successfully fill the position of City Councilman.

Representative Louis F. R. Langelier, as president of the republican city committee urged the election of the entire republican ticket. He said that the democats were concentrating their attention upon one man and added that if the man was elected it would terminate in his being made president of council. He asked that a large vote be recorded Tuesday, and laid special stress on the necessity of getting all voters to go to the polls.

Frank Shay, of Wollaston, who has successfully launched forth as a campaign manager this year, kept the audience in a happy mode with his jocosing style and concluded by advocating the election of the entire republican ticket.

Eugene R Stone was enthusiastically received as he proceeded to close the meeting. He outlined his platform, which has already appeared in the Ledger on two or three different occasions, explaining every plank in detail and stating conditions of a varied nature.

He said that he felt cofident of victory but advocated a large vote. He said he would try to keep the tax rate down, and deplored the condition of the roads. He spoke of the trolley freight department and of the water front development, and promised, if elected, to put the water department on a paying basis.

He also favored an increase in the salary of chairman of the Board of Health and favored the appointment to the position of a man who could devote more time to the duties.

He went into a lengthy discussion of various problems and urged the election of the entire republican ticket concluding by promising a straightforward, honest, business-like, republican administration. He was warmly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks, and a most interesting rally had drawn to a close.

OLD LANDMARKS.

The good old colonial days when our Puritan fathers wore black stocks and solemn faces, when they discoursed of angels and lived much as men, are recalled in pleasing form in "Landmarks in the Old Bay State" by William Russell Comer of Wellesley, Mass.

Pictures of 130 Colonial houses, historic places, tablets, monuments, etc., add great interest to the volume, as some of the buildings have already been torn down. There is a history and interesting story about each picture and many of the anecdotes related are here told for the first time.

DOANE—RODGERS.

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burgin on Presidents hill was the scene of an unusually pretty wedding Saturday evening, the contracting parties being Mrs. Burgin's sister Miss Mary Lucille Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Rodgers of 28 Edwards street and Lewis Berry Doane of New London, Conn., son of Mrs. Lewis Doane of Harwich. The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock by Rev. Charles B. Ames former assistant pastor of First church, the bride being given in marriage by her father. There were no attending bridesmaids or best man during the simple but solemn ceremony. Walter Rogers played the wedding march. Cut flowers and potted plants decorated the rooms.

Following the ceremony a reception was held from eight until ten o'clock the young people being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Rodgers, Mrs. Doane, Miss Lillian Doane, sister of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. Burgin. The ushers were Ralph B. Rodgers of Marshfield Hills, Wendall H. Luce of Boston, Frank Horton of Dorchester and Herbert Gill of Boston.

The bride was most charming in a in a gown of white satin and chiffon, with tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley. She wore a sunburst of pearls a gift from the groom and the ushers were also recipients of gifts of gold scarf pins set with amethysts and pearls.

Mr. and Mr. Doane have gone to Washington and on their return are to reside in New London, Connecticut.

COUNCILMAN BAILEY STAMPS RUMOR A FAKE

A story was circulated Saturday that Councilman Charles W. Bailey, who is a Republican candidate for reelection from Ward Five, was working for the election of Councilman John D. Smith, one of the Democratic candidates for Councilman-at-large.

In regard to this story, Councilman Bailey desires the Ledger to emphatically state that he is not working for Councilman Smith, or any other Democrat on Tuesday. On the contrary he is working for the election of the five Republican candidates and will do all he can to further their election.

WILL INVESTIGATE

Louis F. R. Langelier, Chairman of the Republican City Committee, when interviewed this noon in relation to the anonymous circular that was sent through the mails this mornig, said—"It would seem to be unnecessary for me to disclaim any knowledge or responsibility on behalf of the City Committee or Mr. Stone for this rattle brained anonymous circular.

The evident result of such an unwise and unjust tirade against the office holding citizens of our community, is apparent and I can not concieve how anyone interested in Mr. Stone's success could have sent it out.

The writer is amendable to the election laws and I shall bring the matter before the Executive Committee at tis next meeting for action with a view of placing responsibility."

FORTY YEARS IN THE NAVY

Admiral Wilde Dies After Long and Honorable Service

END COMES UNEXPECTEDLY

Headed Body of Marines Into Pekin, the First Ever Landing In China, and Participated In Movements of Allied Forces During Boxer Uprising—Made Improvements In Lighthouse Service

North Easton, Mass., Dec. 4.—Death came suddenly at his home here to Rear Admiral George F. F. Wilde, U. S. N., retired, whose record of forty years' service in the navy contains many notable achievements afloat and ashore.

The old sea-fighter had been troubled with heart disease for several years, but the shock which caused the end came without warning to his physician or members of his household. He was in his 67th year.

Rear Admiral Wilde had read with interest recently the progress of the revolution in China, he having landed a body of United States marines—the first marines ever landed in China—during the Boxer uprising in 1898. The then Captain Wilde headed this body into Pekin, where they maintained guard over the American legation for five or six months. Wilde also participated in numerous movements of the allied forces during the uprising.

His graduation from the United States Naval Academy in 1864 marked the beginning of an interesting career. Within twenty years he had risen to the rank of commander, and in 1865 was on the flagship Susquehanna, when she went to Havana for the Confederate ram, Stonewall Jackson. Wilde commanded the Dolphin on her cruise around the world, which was finished in 1885, and which was the first time a steel vessel of the United States navy had circumnavigated the globe.

As secretary of the lighthouse board, which position he occupied for four years until called into active service again by the exigencies of the Spanish war, Wilde introduced gas buoys on the Great Lakes; established an electric light vessel on the dangerous Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, and introduced the installation and operation of telephones connecting light vessels with the shore.

After commanding the ram Katahdin, in operations in Cuban waters for six months in the spring and summer of 1898, Wilde was ordered to assume command of the Boston, and it was in this capacity that he landed marines in China. Subsequently, he captured and occupied the city of Iloilo, and captured the city of Vigan, rescuing 160 Spanish officers and their families in the latter place, for which he received the thanks of the Spanish government.

Rear Admiral Wilde was captain successively at the Portsmouth, N. H., Boston and League Island navy yards, until 1904, when he received his promotion as rear admiral and became commandant of the navy yard at Boston. He held this office from May 1, 1904, until Feb. 20, 1905, when he was retired.

In 1868 he was married to Emogene B. Howard, who died a few months ago. A brother and a sister survive him.

RESUMES HIS SEAT

Gallinger Will Continue to Serve New Hampshire In Senate

Washington, Dec. 4.—Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire told his senatorial friends that he had reconsidered his recent decision to resign and would proceed with his duties. Next to Senator Cullom he has served longer than any member of the senate.

Last July, following the death of his son, Dr. Ralph E. Gallinger, in an automobile accident, Senator Gallinger left Washington and did not return during the remainder of the extra session. At that time he was reported to have said that he might never take his seat again.

DRAGNET OUT FOR BIG GAME

Prosecution After Others Implicated In Times Tragedy

BRIBERY PROBE TO CONTINUE

District Attorney Says There Are Men Connected With Dynamite Case Whose Names Have Never Been Published—Life Sentence Coming to James McNamara and Fourteen Years For Brother—Darrow Declares That Motive For Pleading Guilty Was to Save Life of Prisoners—Labor Leaders Unsparing In Their Condemnation and Object to Lightening Penalty

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 4.—Time goes very rapidly occasionally and the quick passage of the hands on the clock is typical of the recent developments in the McNamara cases. The two principals are about to be disposed of. Long confinement in prison has been arranged for.

There are other men, men at liberty, whose future just now is of even greater concern than was the fate of John J. McNamara and his brother Jim. An investigation of bribery or attempted bribery of a juror sworn to try the McNamara case threatens consequences at once so serious that they can be little more than alluded to.

Indictments are promised as a result of the grand jury inquiry which is to follow the lower court hearing of the complaint against Bert H. Franklin, chief detective for the defense, who is charged with having paid George N. Lockwood, a talesman, $500, and having given C. E. White, a go-between, $3500 with instructions to deliver to Lockwood upon the return of a verdict of acquittal or a disagreement by a jury of which Lockwood should be a member.

That the bribery charges will be prosecuted regardless of termination of the cases against James B. and John J. McNamara is the insistent attitude of District Attorney Fredericks.

Big Men Implicated

"I don't care what they may say about the McNamaras," said Fredericks, "the bribery investigation will go on. We believe that we will implicate some big men in it before we get through. I don't say that the men implicated will be close to the McNamara brothers, but they will be so near that people will understand how tight a net the state had woven about the two men who pleaded guilty.

"Before we get through with this inquiry we will show that the $4000 which was taken from White and Lockwood came from New York. We will prove that it was brought to Los Angeles by a man who was interested in the acquittal of James B. McNamara. He was not one of the counsel for the prisoner nor do I know that he was in their confidence, but he was very anxious to make sure that Jim McNamara should not be convicted.

"We will endeavor to convict the men we suspect of tampering with the McNamara jury and I assure you that we have a very strong case against them. We will pursue every man who was implicated with James McNamara in the explosion of the Times building, and there are several whose names have never been published. The prosecution of the dynamiters of the Times has hardly begun."

Considered Welfare of Prisoners

All known angles in the unexpected termination of the McNamara murder case was summed up by Clarence S. Darrow, chief counsel for the defense, in the following statement:

"No motive of any sort entered into the disposition of the McNamara cases except the welfare of the men accused of murder.

"Believing as I did that the action taken would save the lives of the accused men, I had no more right to refuse it than a doctor would have to forbear an operation on a patient to save his life.

"A committee of Los Angeles people, beginnning work Nov. 20, made it possible to accomplish the result. Their suggestions were brought to me first by Mr. Steffens on that day, and every day thereafter as matters proceeded until the final determination.

"I expected the final action every day after this action commenced, and it was taken the first minute that an understanding was reached.

"It was impossible to delay action beyond the time an understanding was reached, on account of the imminent danger we were in for two weeks of having the matter become public property, and thus making the end difficult to achieve."

To Be Sentenced Tomorrow

James B. McNamara will be sentenced by Judge Bordwell tomorrow to imprisonment for life, for the crime of murder. His elder brother, John J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, will be committed to the state penitentiary for a period of from twelve to twenty years, probably fourteen years, for an attempt, through Ortie E. McManigal, to blow up the plant of the Llewellyn Iron Works by a dynamite bomb on Dec. 25, 1910.

Both men are resigned to this disposition of their respective cases. Both men will confess as soon as they are sentenced, when James B. will tell Bordwell that on Oct. 1, 1910, he planted a bomb beneath the Times building with intent to damage the building, but that he had no idea any life would be sacrificed.

Mr. Fredericks said: "Jim McNamara cannot hope for a lesser sentence than life." He implied that the prisoner was lucky to escape the gallows.

Mr. Darrow, less particular in his choice of words, said: "Jim is fortunate to have a chance to live, even in jail. He does not realize what a narrow squeak he had."

Betrayed Labor Men's Confidence

Indianapolis, Dec. 4.—Hanging is not too severe for the confessed crimes of John J. McNamara and his brother, J. B. McNamara, according to views bitterly expressed here by organized labor leaders.

The report that John J. McNamara is to escape with a sentence of fourteen years does not set well with the men who inaugurated the movement to obtain a big fund to defend him.

Frank Duffy, secretary-treasurer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and secretary of the executive committee of labor leaders that was organized here by President Gompers to have charge of the defense fund, had this to say:

"These men by their own confessions took human life and just as in any other case the penalty exacted should be a life for a life. I have talked with many labor leaders and they expressed themselves just as I am expressing myself here."

W. J. Spires, secretary of James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union, said: "Hanging is none too good for the anarchist and I am satisfied that the McNamaras are to be given lighter penalties. That should not be. They should be made to pay the full penalty for their crimes. I am satisfied that John J. McNamara was not alone in the deals. I say let the investigation go on."

J. W. Dougherty, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bookbinders, said: "The McNamaras should be hanged."

The movement to gather an enormous defense fund for the McNamaras originated here among a score of officers of the National and International labor unions who were close friends of J. J. McNamara. Around the various union labor headquarters today their cry was: "Hang the McNamaras." The statement of Duffy that John J. McNamara betrayed the confidence of the labor leaders was approved by all of them.

"Go as High as They Like"

New York, Dec. 4.—"I am not a hound; I do not seek human life in punishment for any crime."

This was the angry exclamation by Samuel Gompers on his return from Troy when shown a dispatch from Spokane saying that the Central Labor Council of that city is planning a country-wide movement to obtain the maximum punishment for the Los Angeles dynamiters.

"I do not believe in capital punishment under any circumstances," he continued. "I do not believe that the state has a right to take human life. This is a very unwise movement. I am against it."

Mr. Gompers was also shown the dispatches saying that the federal investigation into dynamiting cases would proceed despite the fact that the McNamaras had pleaded guilty; and he was asked if he thought there was any possibility of officials of the American Federation of Labor being involved.

"Let them go ahead! Let them go as high as they like! he exclaimed. "If there are other men above or below in this case the federal investigation ought to disclose them. Let the federal investigation go on."

Burns Says Gompers Knew

Indianapolis, Dec. 4.—"Mr. Gompers knew all the time that the McNamaras were guilty," was the statement by W. J. Burns, the detective. Burns conferred here Sunday with United States District Attorney Miller and John Kirby, Jr., of Dayton, O., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, at the home of David M. Parry, a former president of that organization.

"When Mr. Gompers says he was surprised and that the McNamaras deceived him in declaring their innocence, he tells what is not true," said Burns. "Mr. Gompers knew the McNamaras were guilty, and has known it all along. He knew it at the time he and the heads of the international unions conferred in Indianapolis on the question of raising funds for the defense of the prisoners. Some of the other union men knew of their guilt, too.

"Clarence Darrow told the labor men at that meeting in Indianapolis that he did not believe I framed up this case."

The consultation Sunday, it was admitted, pertained to the federal grand jury's investigation of the dynamiting, but nothing else could be learned about it.

BASKET BALL.

It was East vs. West on Saturday night, when Penn lined up against Michigan and once more the former demonstrated its superiority over the Westerners. When Capt. McArdle led his team on to the floor after a half-hour black-board session it was with a determination to lower the colors of Frank Tirrells' five. Each man had been coached for his special position and his opponent's weakness had been pointed out. The result of this extra work was easily apparent from the beginning of the game for Michigan led right through the first half which ended 8 to 6.

In the second-half, however, the strength of the Penn team began to tell and toward the end of the game, three goals were caged in rapid succession by Tirrell and Summers and the game ended with the score of 18-12 in favor of Penn. For Michigan, Capt. McArdle and Lavery layed best, while Capt. Tirrell, R. Corthell and Summers excelled for the winners.

Second Game.

Dartmouth, led by Henry Trask had another easy time with Carlisle winning by the score of 29 to 15. During the first half it was just a case of who could score the most goals for Dartmouth and Trask succeeded in finding the basket 6 times, with young Jim Jenkins a close second with 4. The half ended 22 to 7 and it seemed just a question how large the final score would be.

However, Capt. Al. Thomas must have used some secret "dope" on his man, for during the last half of the game it was all Carlisle and Dartmouth was played off its feet. If W. Cranshaw and Thomas took more time to their tills at the basket their scores would undoubtedly be much better but they both showed the lack of practice. Trask led in goal shooting, having the fine total of 8 to his credit. "Jim" Jenkins, the younger brother of last year's Y. M. C. A. star center, played a fine game at R. Forward and demonstrated that with a little more experience he will even make a better player than his brother. "Pin" Johnson, the captain of the High school football team was resplendent in a red and white striped jersey. "Pin" showed that he was not only a star in football but that he was there with the goods also on the basket ball floor. His progress in the game will be keenly watched by his many friends and all predict that Trask, Dartmouth team has a walk-away with the pennant.

Third Game.

The final game of the evening was the best and most exciting. The score see-sawed back and forth all through the first half, altho Brown got a good start on Cornell by getting two goals within the first three minutes of play. Billy Childs, played all around Capt. Rich who seemed unable to keep track of his opponent. Rich however, came back strong during the latter part of the half and evened up matters by caging two beauty baskets from the center of the floor.

A slight shift was made in the second half when Shirley lined up against Rich, for a time the change seemed to be successful, but again the captain of the Cornell team showed his "class" by getting 4 baskets to his opponents one. Childs had caged 2 in the last half and with the assistance of "Bennie" Gonterman who got a clean shot from the side of the floor Brown was still one point to the good with only a minute to play. Raleigh here showed his worth to Cornell by getting away from his guard, and cheered on by his chum, George Barry, who was in the gallery rooting, he scored a dandy basket and the game was over 21 to 20.

Estey plainly showed that he was off form for he missed several very easy goals. There were several young ladies in the balcony however who might have disturbed his shooting eye.

FORE RIVER LEAGUE.

The standing of the Fore River bowling league, issued today, shows the members of the M Department gallery team in first place by a wide margin. The remainder of the teams are very closely connected and a great struggle bids fair to ensue before the final honors are definitely decided. The games have all met with great success this season and great enthusiasm has been aroused among the members of the different teams.

The high team score is held by the leading team, such being established at the 1327 mark. The highest total for three strings has been made by Smith of the Timekeepers, who has attained the 300 mark. The games are played at the Granite street alleys and a large crowd of rooters is always in evidence.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 26 No. 280 QUINCY, MASS., TUESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 5, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

LIGHT VOTE IS BEING POLLED IN ALL SECTIONS

Reports From Various Wards Show It Much Lighter Than Last Year

A finer day for the municiptl election could not be desired than that of today. In fact the weather is ideal. The air is cool, but there is a lack of wind and the conditions are such that a large vote should be polled. There seems to be a general lack of interest however, and a small vote is looked for. The election of Mr. Stone for Mayor is generally conceded and for that reason the usual reserve vote will not come out. Lack of interest, sent many to Boston this morning, without stopping to vote. This lack of interest is confined to every ward of the city, with perhaps the exception of Ward Four. There is quite a spirited local contest on in that ward for school committee and the vote there is expected to be large.

The total vote of the city last year for Mayor was 4750 but this year it is expected that the vote will fall short of that.

WARD ONE.

In Ward One, the centre ward, the election officers reported the voting as light. Houghs Neck, is as usual, voting strong and it is predicted Wall will get a good vote in that ward as he resides there. Last year this ward cast 986 votes, but is expected to fall short of that figure this year. At 10 o'clock precinct one had voted 263 votes as against 260 for the same hour last year, while in precinct two the vote at 10 o'clock was 225 as against 287 for the same period last year, showing that the ward is running behind.

The Democrats are making a hustle for McGrath for Councilman and they will endeavor to land him, although the Republicans claim that the three Republican candidates are almost sure to win.

Candidate Wall was about the polls this morning and said that he felt very sanguine over the outcome.

WARD TWO

In precinct one of this ward, at eleven o'clock, 130 votes had been polled, and while this is not as large a vote as at the same hour on previous elections, still it is expected that a record breaking vote will be cast at noon time and that the usual number of voters will go to the ballot booths.

The great fight seems to be centered on the aspirants for councilmen from the ward, and in this way it is estimated that a large mayorality vote will be polled.

There are a number of factions in the ward and each one of them is advocating the election of a different slate. The democratic workers are rallying to the support of the entire democratic ticket, and the democratic ward council candidates, Messrs Duffy, Histen and Corbett. Another faction is endeavoring to place Duffy and Histen in the next council, in conjunction with Coucilman Studley, thereby using great efforts to bring about the election of Duffy, Devaney and Studley, the last two being republicans. Of Carruthers, the other republican candidate, but little is being said.

The councilmanic fight, according to those who have been in many a political battle, is asserted to be one of the warmest that has ever taken place in the second ward. Two prominent citizens, one an official and the other connected with the water department, have been using every effort to bring about the defeat of candidate Corbett.

In precinct two of this Ward practically the same situation prevailed, although candidate Corbett himself confined his attention to this end of the ward. Shortly before noon the votes cats became considerablys increased, although up to ten o'clock 267 ballots had been cast. There seems to be a great anxiety on all sides to get out the vote and there is no doubt but what the results will be watched with still greater intensity. It has been alleged that the worst political tactics ever employed in the Ward have been put into execution during the past week and those who have the interests of certain candidates at heart claim that the movement will be shown when the votes are counted.

WARD THREE

In the first precinct of this ward, shortly before noon, 299 votes had been cast, and a large number was expected at the noon hour from the various working men. There is no struggle of importance, although it is claimed that a number are out against the re-election of Councilman Craig. Candidate Warner on the democratic side, seems to loom forth very strongly and it is being conceeded by a number that he will be elected; the other two democrats will poll a splendid vote, but it is doubtful if they will obtain enough to win.

In precinct two, at noon time, 242 votes had been cast and it was expected that considerable more would be rolled up before one o'clock. Great rivalry exists among the republicans and the democatic candidates for council from the ward and in this way, it is expected that the vote for Mayor will attain the unusually large average. There is a rumor about, in both precincts that a majority of those who voted for Mr. Miller, will swing in line for Mr. Wall, democratic candidate for Mayor, and in this way, the supporters of Mr. Wall look to see him carry the ward by a small plurality The ticket seems to be considerably split and from the different factions that are about, it is difficult to predict just what the outcome will be.

WARD FOUR.

In Ward Four the great struggle is for school committee. The candidates are Dr. John T. Reynolds and Joseph McPherson. The doctor was defeated at the caucus for the Democratic nomination and a large number of Democrats are out to defeat him because of the stand he has taken in the matter, in not abiding by the result of the caucus. The principal advocate of the election of Dr. Reynolds is Councilman candidate Maloney, while ex-Councilman McDevitt and a number of well known Democrats including Councilmen Forde and Boyd are supporting McPherson.

At eleven o'clock in Precinct One, 219 votes had been cast, while in Precinct Two 225 votes had been registered. The Republicans in the Ward are all supporting Reynolds, and it has been alleged that William H. Teasdale is one of his foremost advocates on this side.

The Democratic leaders claim that McPherson will win by 150 votes, while Reynolds' supporters contend that their candidate will win by a fine plurality.

A large vote is expected before the closing of the polls and it has been conceded that Candidate Wall will emerge from the Ward with a majority of 475 votes. The Councilmen-at-large slate is considerably split, as a result of the School Committee fight, and it is alleged that two Democrats on the tickets will come out of the contest with a big vote.

The School Committee fight is one of the most exciting that ever took place in the history of the Ward.

WARD FIVE.

Ward Five is running behind its vote at the municipal election of last year. It is not surprising, however, as there seems to be but little interest in the outcome and then there are no local contests, as the Democrats have made no nominations from the Ward. Then again, it is a cold day and the temperature in the polling places is low. The only heat that the room gets is that which escapes through the door of the room where the furnace is located. The fire in this furnace is not over and above brisk, forthere is but a few shovels fulls of coal left in the coal bins.

There is a bone of contention between the Chief of Fire Department and the Commissioner of Public Works as to which department should furnish the coal to heat the polling place and that is probably the reason why the coal bins are running short.

Eleven crosses are all that is necessary to vote the full ticket in this Ward and the result will be known early.

As stated above, the vote is behind what it was last December. At 11 o'clock at that election Precinct One had cast about 359 votes and Precinct

MINSTREL SHOW IN ODD FELLOWS HALL WOLLASTON

The grand minstrel show of the Dorothy Q Lodge of Odd Ladies took place in Odd Fellows hall, Wollaston, Monday evening before a large and enthusiastic audience.

The opening overture was given by an orchestra composed of Walter Stewart, Myron Stebbins, Geo. Critchley James Kennedy, Clifton Sass, and E. Thornton Walter.

To the strains of "My old Kentucky home" the curtain rose upon as brave a group of minstrel men and maidens as ever sang an opening chorus. "Oceana roll" was effectively sung by Miss Ruth Cahill with the chorus by the entire company.

Between the various musical offerings a rapid fire of jokes, gags and local hits was passed between the interlocutor Miss Clara E. Bennett and the end men, Mrs. Mary Jones, Miss Stella Cummings, James Cahill, Fred Wright, Harry Campbell and John Rodgers.

"Dandy Darkey" was given by James Cahill and "Silver threads among the gold" was sweetly sung by Miss Irma Douglas.

"Ma Honey Man," by Miss Ruth Cahill and "Its a long way back to dear old mother's knee" also delighted the audience.

A walking duet "Come along ma Mandy" by Miss Cahill and Mr. Wright took popular fancy while John Rugle's song "I like to hear the music with ma meals" was loudly applauded.

"Vale of my Dreams" and the closing chorus of Alexander's Rag Time Band by Miss Douglass and entire company completed the first part.

Composing the chorus were: Mrs. James Cahill, Miss Eva Parkhurst, Mrs. F. Douglass, Mrs. Henry Pletsch, Mrs. Ellis MacTear, Mrs. Elmer Gray, Miss Emma Ross, Mrs. William Purdy, Miss Mabel Longhead, Mrs. William Ferguson, Miss Beulah Collett, Miss Ramah Baker and Miss Riah Purdy.

Opening the olio was an inspiring discourse on "Women's suffrage by Mrs. Mary Jones that kept those present in roars of laughter.

"They'll do the same thing over" a song and dance by the Misses Baker, Purdy and Collett was well received. The "Sailor's Hornpipe" danced by Miss Ramah Baker was also well done.

A piano solo by Miss Beulah Collett and fancy dancing by Miss Mabel Longhead concluded the performance.

Much credit for the success of the entertainment is due the committee of arrangements consisting of Miss Clara Bennett, Mrs. Mary Jones and Miss Stella Cummings.

MISS WALTER BRIDE OF FRED C. OXNER

At a pretty home wedding Thanksgiving evening, Miss Faustena Bel Walter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Walter of Brook street became the bride of Fred Carlson Oxner of Brook street.

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church.

The wedding march was played by Miss Ruth Cahill, Miss Viola Haley of Cambridge acting as maid of honor. The best man was E. Thornton Walter, brother of the bride.

The bride was charming in a costume of white silk with veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and narcissus. The maid of honor was becomingly gowned in white.

A reception attended by the immediate relatives of the pair followed the ceremony. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Oxner are making their home with the parents of the bride through the winter.

Mr. Oxner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Oxner of Fayette street. Both young people are well known in Wollaston where they have resided for many years and the ceremony of Thursday followed a long friendship.

CLAIMS HE WAS ASSAULTED.

George S. Kelley, of this city, for five years an employe of the Charlestown Navy yard, and a former member of the United States cavalry, claims that he was induced by three sailors of the U. S. battleship Des Moines to take a pleasure trip Sunday afternoon, and furthermore alleges that he was set upon by the three sailors and deprived of the ownership of his gold watch and ten dollars. The affair is alleged to have taken place on Water street, Boston, underneath the Charlestown bridge, late in the evening.

Kelley was kicked in the face and head and part of his clothing torn from his body, his pockets at the same time being turned inside out. His wounds were attended to by a physician and he afterwards reported the matter to the police authoriteis.

Three sailors, who had been with Kelley were arrested ealy Monday moning, but on Kelley's admission that they were not guilty, all three were released.

MR. STONE AT RALLIES.

Three largely attended rallies were held Monday evening in the interest of Candidate Stone for Mayor and Mr. Stone was a speaker at all of them. Two of these rallies were in Ward Two, his home ward, and the other was in Ward One which was held by the Scandinavian Republican club. This was a rousing rally and they gave Candidate Stone a great reception.

MR. WALL AT RALLY.

A rally in the interest of James E. Wall, mayoralty candidate, was held in the rooms of the Fore River Football club, Monday evening. Thomas Griffin presided and there were many interesting speeches.

The speakers included candidate Wall, candidates for Councilman-at-large, candidates for council from the Ward, John J. McDevitt, William H. Flynn and William Kelly.

FUNERAL OF JAS. V. MARTIN

The funeral of James V. Martin, of the Globe staff, was held Monday morning from his late home 11 Walnut street, Atlantic, followed by a high mass of requiem at the church of the Sacred Heart. Rev. John P. Cuff was the celebrant and the Gregorian chant was sung by the choir under the direction of Miss Louise Costell, organist. Miss Clara Duggan sang the "Pie Jesu" and Miss Catherine Dolan sang the "De Profundis." The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery the bearers being Edward Clifford, James Fay, Henry M. Cranahan, T. J. Keohane, Louis Barry and P. J. Duggan.

The services were largely attended those present including a delegation from the Globe editorial rooms headed by William Alcott, night City Editor. The flowers were many and beautiful and included a closed book of white roses, white and pink carnations from the editorial room and reportorial staff of the Globe, a standing cross from the Atlantic base ball club, and a standing wreath from the operators of the Maine telephone exchange.

NOVEMBER WEATHER.

L. A. Well, the observer at Blue Hill, summarizes the month there as follows: The weather of November was characterized by marked and sudden changes in temperature, the month averaging somewhat cooler than usual,, and by frequent rains. The mean temperature of 38.4 degrees was 0.9 degree below the normal, as compared with 37.3 degrees in November, 1910, and 43.2 degrees in 1909. The highest temperature reached 64 degrees on the 12th, and the lowest was 17 degrees on the 17th.

On 17 days the temperature fell below freezing. Rain fell on 13 days and the total amount of 5.71 inches was 1.78 inches more than normal and the most for November since 1907. There were light snows on five days and the first measureable snow of the season occurred on the 14th, which is the average date. The mean relative humidity wa somewhat higher than usual and there was about the average amount of cloudiness. The total sunshine of 153 hours was 20 hours more than fhe normal amount.

There was an excess of wind throughout the month, the mean hourly velocity of 21.3 miles being 1.0 mile per hour above the average and the highest for November since 1906. The maximum velocity was 61 miles per hour from the south on the 12th. The prevailing wind direction was west. A thunderstorm occurred on the evening of the 12th.

Miss Amelia Forbes, daughter of Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes of Milton, left Boston Monday for Northern Newfoundland to serve as a nurse in Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's hospital in St. Anthonys. She became interested in the work through Dr. Grenfell and it is her purpose to remain six months.

INTERESTING TALK ABOUT PANAMA CANAL

Before Men's Club of St. Chrysostom's Church

Before the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's Parish Monday evening W. W. Lewis, assistant engineer of the Boston Transit Commission gave an interesting talk entitled "A trip to the Panama Canal."

The ladies were invited to the meeting and a large number took the opportunity of hearing an interesting lecture.

After a description of the country around the Isthmus the speaker told of his trip down last March and of his stop at the Island of Jamaica. The country was realistically described and amusing incidents of the trip related.

Mr. Lewis took up the Canal, section by section, and described most thoroughly the great engineering feats being accomplished there.

The greatest obstacle lies at the Calebre cut where over one hundred million cubic yards of solid rock will have to have been removed before, the canal will be a possibility.

The work is being done with remarkable efficiency. Where at first it cost a dollar a cubic yard for removal it has been reduced to forty cents.

The highest hill to be excavated is 535 feet above the sea level. At the Pacafic terminus where the stone is dumped the material is being used to construct a four mile breakwater for the protection of the canal.

Since taking possession on June 4, 1904, the United States has accomplished wonders regarding sanitation in city of Panama, which previous to our occupation was the filthiest and dirtiest city in the world.

In seven short years, it has been transformed from a city, whose streets were a mixture of garbage and mud, to one of attractive granolithic sidewalks and Macaram streets.

The speaker went into the history of the canal under Spanish control and told of the later dismal failure of the French in which over 250 million dollars of the poor people's money was sunk.

In conclusion, the speaker paid a tribute to the United States executives and others connected with the work, all of whom, he said, were deserving of the greatest support and praise of the American people for carrying on a task of so great difficulty, with so much efficiency and success.

Refreshments were served and a large number of questions were asked the speaker. Mr. Lewis augmented his lecture with maps and photographs which added greatly to the interest of the evening.

☞Ledger extra tonight. Full election returns.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Congress is again in session, but our country has gotten so it can stand almost anything.

Forty-seven men have already been killed this year by hunters. The mortality among the deer is also considerable.

No one killed or injured at the Vanderbilt cup race. Motor racing can never be conducted on these Sunday school picnic principles.

It looks as if the Italians would conquer the scattered tribes of Tripoli at about the time that the last prowling gangs of book agents are exterminated.

In view of the inattentive way in which presidential messages are received, one would think Mr. Taft would be tempted to give up writing a 6,000 word piece, and instead march down in front of Champ Clark's desk and simply remark "Get busy."

WOMEN VOTERS.

There have been substantial gains this year in the registration of women for city elections, especially in Lowell, Lynn, Woburn and Malden. Quincy also has increased its registration, as was stated by the Daily Ledger a few days ago. The Sunday Globe published a table of the gains made throughout the state and also opinions which it had secured from representative women in the various places where gains were made. Some of the ladies interviewed gave credit to the Suffragist movement and some attributed the growth to other causes. Following is the report from Quincy, as it appeared in the Globe:

"There has been an increase of 16 in the number of women registered to vote for School Committee at the city election on Tuesday. The number registered is 59, said to be the largest number of women ever registered in this city.

Mrs. John D. Mackay, of the Quincy Women's Club and wife of a School Board member, said tonight; "The increase in women's registration is due, in my opinion, not to any political purpose by those who registered, but to a quickened interest in general questions concerning the public good and wholly aside from the agitation in favor of 'votes for women.'

"Most of the women of Quincy are content with such work as they can do in their clubs. The increased registration probably means that some of them are taking the logical next step, which is to vote.

"I think that most of our women will continue to confine their work in politics to shaping legislation indirectly, through their committees on legislation pertaining to child labor, shorter hours for women, education and other humane movements."

MR. MEARS IMPROVING.

William H. Mears, who has been at the Framingham hospital as the result of a multiple of injuries received at the time of the head-on collision at Whitney's hill, on the Milford railway has progressed so favorably that he will soon be taken from the hospital to his home. Mr. Mears expects to leave the institution on Dec. 7 and the trip will be made by automobile. Mrs. Mears has been a constant attendant upon her husband at the hospital.

CARD OF THANKS.

The undersigned desires to express her heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends, to the members of the street railway employees union and the fraternal organizations for their many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy during the illness and death of her husband Thomas J. Joyce. While his death is mourned it is comforting to know the high regard in which he was held by his fellow associates.

Mrs. Thomas J. Joyce.

IMPORTANT MATTERS UNDER CONSIDERATION

At Meeting of City Council Monday Evening

EVERY MEMBER PRESENT

Several important matters came up before the City Council at its meeting Monday evening. These included several reports from the Finance Committee as well as from the Committee on Streets. The latter committee sent several matters over to next year's Council. There was some little debate on several of the orders, but few fireworks. Every member of the Council was present at some time during the evening.

JURORS.

A venire was received for the drawing of six travers jurors for the December sitting of the Superior court. The Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Bailey drew the following according to law:

John McTiernan, Albert C. Farnum, James W. Kelley, John J. Fallon, Thomas F. Drake and Joseph P. Clark.

CITY CLERK.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the City Clerk asking for an additional appropriation of $330 state and military aid. Referred to Finance Committee.

CITY SQUARE.

A communication was received from the Mayor recommending that City Square between Saville and Granite streets be paved with granite blocks on a concrete base, the cost of which would be approximately $32,000. Referred to Committee on Streets.

TEELE POND.

A communication was received from the Mayor, with inclosure, from the City Engineer relative to the abating of the nuisance of Teele pond as requested in an order offered by Councilman Sodergren. The estimate for abating the nuisance si $3,800. Laid on table.

SCHOOL HALL.

A communication was received from the School Committee giving its approval of the plans of Hurd & Gore for finishing the hall in the Quincy school building at Atlantic. Referred to the joint Committee on Finance and Public Buildings.

TRANSFR.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner of Public Works, asking for a transfer of $1,200 from the appropriation for permanent sidewalks of 1910 to the appropriation for Miscellaneous highways for 1911. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Gardner offered an order transferring the same. Referred to Finance Committee.

SCHOOL LOT WANTED.

Councilman Craig presented a petition signed by 516 residents of South Quincy asking for the purchase of a lot of land, bounded by Bradford, Endicott and Madison streets for a school lot for the new Adams building. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

LIGHTS.

A petition for lights on Ritchie road was referred to the Executive.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred. One of James F. Burke for an auctioneers' license was laid on the table until later, when Councilman Bailey offered an order granting the license which was adopted.

LEGACIES.

The Committee on Streets recommended that the following matters be referred to the next City Council.

Communication from Mayor relative to retaining wall on River road, inclosing plan for widening Washington street and inclosing estimate for paving City Square.

Petitions for the acceptance of Davis street, Vernon street, new street from Furnace Brook Parkway and street lights on Hancock street.

Orders for crosswalks on Independence avenue, Whitwell street, Brooks avenue, Centre street, Washington street, Brooks avenue, Sagamore street, Coddington street; taking land on Baxter avenue for playground; culvert over Sachem brook and granolithic sidewalk Marion street. Report accepted.

The same committee reported ought not to pass on the order for a granolithic sidewalk on West Elm avenue. Report accepted.

NELSON STREET.

The same committee reported an order for $2,000 for accepting and laying out a new street from Arthur street to Copeland street. Read and referred to Committee on Finance. Order recommended.

WATER LEAKAGE.

The Committee on Finance and Water Supply reported an order for $1,500 to be expended by the Commissioner of Public Works in investigating water leakage. Ordered to a second reading.

REGISTRARS' SALARY

The joint committee on Finance and Ordinances reported ought to pass on the order increasing the salary of the Registrars of voters from $150 to $250 per year. Order passed.

SEALERS' SALARY.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order amending the salary of the Sealer of Weights and Measures making the salary $1,000 a year. Order passed Councilmen Campbell and Nowland voting no.

SCHOOL FURNISHINGS.

The Finance Committee reported recommending that theorder for $6,450 for school furnishings for the Wollaston school, be amended, so as to provide that the bonds shall become due on Dec. 1, instead of Feb. 1. Report accepted. Amendment accepted. Ordered to a second reading.

POLICE DAYS OFF.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on the order accepting Chapter 210 which provides for one day off in fifteen for the regular policemen. Order passed.

WATER METERS.

The joint Committee on Finance and Water Supply reported an amendment to the order appropriating $20,000 for water meters. The amendment changes the date of the bonds from April to December and the money to be borrowed under the acts of 1911. Ordered to a second reading.

MORE FIREMEN.

The Finance Committee reported an amendment to the order for additional firemen, making the number three, instead of five men, the order to take effect immediately.

Councilman Cherrington moved that the order be amended so that it should take effect Jan. 2, 1912. It was too late this year to think about appointing new men and the city could get along for a few days more.

Councilman Smith wanted to know why Jan. 2, and not Jan. 1, was taken, but did not get much satisfaction.

Councilman Richards favored the amendment. There were not funds enough available to pay for the men this year, unless some other order was smothered.

Councilman Smith thought the last speaker was making a stab in the dark. Had he waited for the other order, providing funds, he would not have made that remark. The question is shall the fire department be increased. Whether they are appointed this year or next is of minor importance.

Councilman Craig favored the amendment. The Fire Committee had reported an order earlier in the year which the Finance Committee had turned down. He did not think any money would be available until January and we can get along until then.

Councilman Sodergren did not think the fire risk for the remainder of the year would be any greater. He did not see any necessity to railroad the order through now.

Councilman Cherrington asked the Auditor where the money would come from to pay the men, if the order passed as reported.

City Auditor Fairbanks replied that he had no funds, and that it would be up to the Mayor to find some.

Councilman Leslie could see no great necessity to hurry matters.

Councilman Branch favored the amendment. The first of the year the pay can be provided for in the budget.

The amendment was then adopted by a vote of 14 yes and 7 no the vote being taken by roll call. The vote was as follows:

Yes—Bailey, Branch, Campbell, Cherrington, Craig, Jenkins, Leslie, Nowland, Parlee, Richards, Ross, Sodergren, Sandberg, Studley—14.

No—Bolster, Boyd, Duffy, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Smith—7.

On a rising vote of 15 yes and 6 no the rules were suspended.

Councilman Smith moved to amend by making the date, the order went into effect, Jan. 1 instead of Jan 2. Motion ruled out of order. The order was then passed to be ordained.

PUBLIC HEARING.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on petition of the street railway for a relocation of tracks on East Squantum street. Supt. Conway explained that the relocation desired was to adjust to the street as rebuilt. After the hearing, the order was laid on the table until later, when Councilman Gardner offered an order granting the location, which was referred to the Committee on Streets.

BRIDGE WANTED.

Councilman Sodergren offered a resolve, asking the Mayor to have the City Engineer prepare a plan for an overhead bridge, over the tracks near the Norfolk Downs depot.

The general impression was, that it was too late this year for such an order and the resolution was rejected.

On motion of Councilman Smith, it was voted when the Council adjourn, it be until next Monday evening.

Councilman Richards offered an order refunding Margaret Flanagan $19 taxes of 1911 which had been paid and later abated. Referred to Finance Committee.

Councilman Bolster offered an order transferring $330 from interest of temporary loans to the appropriation for state and military aid. Referred to Finance Committee.

Councilman Gardner offered an order for a light on Eustis street. Referred to Executive.

SALARY INCREASE.

Councilman Bolster offered an order amending the salary ordinance relative to the Board of Health. The amendment provided that the chairman should be paid $500 per year and the other two members $200 a year. Referred to Joint Committee on Finance and Ordinances.

On motion of Councilman Cherrington, the order increasing thesalary of the Mayor, was recalled from the Ordinance Committee and referred to the joint Committee on Finance and Ordinances.

SCHOOL TRANSFERS.

Councilman Branch offered an order making transfers in the school appropriation. Referred to Finance Committee.

CEMETERY WATER.

The order transferring $402 from sale of school lot to a special appropriation for extending the water service at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, took its second reading and after some little debate was rejected 15 voting no and 3 yes.

STEAM ROLLER.

The order appropriating $2,500 for a new steam roller was passed.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL LOT.

The order appropriating $1,500 for draining and grading the Wollaston school lot was passed.

LAND FOR CRUSHER.

The order appropriating $2,600 for the purchase of land at South Quincy, for the portable stone crusher, took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

There was quite a little discussion over theorder and it was ended by a motion of Councilman Leslie to lay on the table which was voted.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

"There was a fire on the hearth burning" were the words from Jeremiah which Rev. Carl G. Horst took as the text for Sunday's sermon at the Wollaston Unitarian church "The four Cornerstones upon which our National Prosperity Rest" said Rev. Mr. Horst, "Are the home, the school, the church, and the day of rest." If the home is kept pure and the young life guarded and strengthened our future as a nation is secure against evil, and the urgent duty of parents today is so to train up the young as to give them high ideals and strength to live up to them. As a fitting close to the sermon "Home, Sweet Home" was rendered.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Sunday was a great day at the Baptist church in Wollaston. In the morning Mrs. William Hall, missionary in Africa spoke to an audience that filled the church, on her work in a benighted land. Mrs. Hall is a remarkable woman and her address was full of inspiration and power. She also spoke to the Sunday school where there were 316 present. The Walther class had a good showing of fifty-three men. E. V. Estes musical director of the men's department is a man full of enthusiasm and is proving a good leader.

At 3.30 the chapel was well filled with Juniors and their friends to listen to Mrs. Hall again. Mrs. Hall's address was well calculated to make all present feel glad that they were born in this land of opportunity and plenty rather than in Africa. An offering was taken for missions. In the evening the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached a helpful sermon on "The man who doubted." Taking for his subject, the Apostle Thomas, who not only refused to believe what the other Apostles told him about Christ's resurrection but who put himself in the way of finding out the exact truth. It was a sermon intended to help any who were struggling with unbelief and by the many expressions heard after the sermon it was judged that many had received help.

Tuesday beginning at 10 an all day sewing meeting will be held in the chapel. A barrel is to be packed for the Boston Baptist Bethel, cast off clothing is solicited and should be sent to the chapel early Tuesday morning or before. Tuesday afternoon at 3 the Social and Benevolent society will meet in the chapel. In the evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Perry will give an illustrated lecture on "A Trip to the Pacific Coast," and all the members of the church and congregation and their friends are invited.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel. Subject: "His Broadness." This subject will continue our meditation on the "Life and Character of Jesus."

CHAPTER XI.

MR. MORGAN AND MR. RAFF.

She put her fingers into her mouth, and Sheldon winced as he saw her blow, like a boy, a sharp, imperious whistle, the call she always used for her sailors and that always made him wince.

"They're gone up the Balesuna, shooting fish," he explained. "But there comes Oleson with his boat's crew. He's an old warhorse when he gets started. See him banging the boys. They don't pull fast enough for him."

"And now what's to be done?" she asked. "You've treed your game, but you can't keep it treed."

"No, but I can teach them a lesson." Sheldon walked over to the big bell. "It is all right," he replied to her gesture of protest. "My boys are practically all bushmen, while these chaps are salt water men, and there's no love lost between them. You watch the fun."

He rang a general call, and by the time the 200 laborers trooped into the compound Satan was once more penned in the living room, complaining to high heaven at his abominable treatment. The plantation hands were dancing war dances around the base of every tree and filling the air with abuse and vituperation of their hereditary enemies. The skipper of the Flibberty Gibbet arrived in the thick of it, in the first throes of oncoming fever, staggering as he walked and shivering so severely that he could scarcely hold the rifle he carried. His face was ghastly blue, his teeth clicked and chattered, and the violent sunshine through which he walked could not warm him.

"I'll s-s-it down and k-k-keep a guard on 'em," he chattered. "D-d-dash it all, I always g-get f-fever when there's any excitement. W-w-wh-what are you going to do?"

"Gather up the guns first of all."

Under Sheldon's direction the house boys and gang bosses collected the scattered arms and piled them in a heap on the veranda. The modern rifles, stolen from Lunga, Sheldon set aside, the Sniders he smashed into fragments, the pile of spears, clubs and tomahawks he presented to Joan.

Down on the beach he built a bonfire out of the contents of the canoes, his blacks smashing, breaking and looting everything they laid hands on. The canoes themselves, splintered and broken, filled with sand and coral bowlders, were towed out to ten fathoms of water and sunk.

"Ten fathoms will be deep enough for them to work in," Sheldon said as they walked back to the compound.

Here a saturnalia had broken loose. The war songs and dances were more unrestrained, and from abuse the plantation blacks had turned to pelting their helpless foes with pieces of wood, handfuls of pebbles and chunks of coral rock. And the seventy-five lusty cannibals clung stoically to their tree perches, enduring the rain of missiles and snarling down promises of vengeance.

"There'll be wars for forty years on Malaita on account of this," Sheldon laughed. "But I fancy old Telepasse will never again attempt to rush a plantation.

"Eh, you old scoundrel," he added, turning to the old chief, who sat gibbering in impotent rage at the foot of the steps. "Now head belong you bang 'm too. Come on, Miss Lackland, bang 'm just once. It will be the crowning indignity."

"Ugh, he's too dirty. I'd rather give him a bath. Here you, Adamu Adam, give this devil a wash. Soap and water! Fill that washtub. Ornfiri, run and fetch 'm scrub brush."

The Tahitians, back from their fishing and grinning at the bedlam of the compound, entered into the joke.

"Tambo! Tambo!" shrieked the cannibals from the trees, appalled at so awful a desecration, as they saw their chief tumbled into the tub and the sacred dirt rubbed and soused from his body.

Joan, who had gone into the bungalow, tossed down a strip of white calico, in which old Telepasse was promptly wrapped, and he stood forth, resplendent and purified, withal he still spat and strangled from the soapsuds with which Noa Noah had gargled his throat.

The house boys were directed to fetch handcuffs, and, one by one, the Lunga runaways were hauled down out of their trees and made fast. Sheldon ironed them in pairs and ran a steel chain through the links of the irons. Gogoomy was given a lecture for his mutinous conduct and locked up for the afternoon. Then Sheldon rewarded the plantation hands with an afternoon's holiday, and when they had withdrawn from the compound permitted the Port Adams men to descend from the trees. And all afternoon he and Joan loafed in the cool of the veranda and watched them diving down and emptying their sunken canoes of the sand and rocks. It was twilight when they embarked and paddled away with a few broken paddles. A breeze had sprung up, and the Flibberty Gibbet had already sailed for Lunga to return the runaways.

CITY ELECTION

Two 230 votes. At the same hour this year the box in Precinct One was 332 and that in Precinct Two 198.

Last year the ward gave Hobbs a plurality of 206. This year with the light vote it is expected that Stone will receive a plurality of at least 300 if not more.

WARD SIX.

The Atlantic ward has really no local contest this year for the Democrats have no candidatees for Council and it is a foregone conclusion that the three Republican nominees for Ward Councilmen will win hands down. The ward will also go strongly for the Republican candidates for Councilman at Large especially for Mr. Hobbs who resides in this ward. This ward always gave him a handsome vote and it will do so this year. Mr. Hobbs is the logical candidate for the presidency of the new council and his neighbors will see to it that he gets a rousing vote.

The vote of the ward today however is running behind that of a year ago. Last year Mr. Hobbs was the Republican candidate for Mayor and for this reason the ward polled a large vote. This year, as stated above, there is practically no local contest and the vote is expected to be considerable behind that of last year if anything can be told by the morning vote which was small.

FIGHT TO AVOID DEATH CHAIR

There Will Be No Let-Up by Counsel For Richeson

LAYING PLANS FOR DEFENSE

Two Virginia Lawyers Meet With Boston Men Engaged to Defend Clergyman Accused of Poisoning Miss Linnell—Prosecution Depends Wholly Upon Circumstantial Evidence—Recalls Tucker Case

Boston, Dec. 5.—The real fight, along clear, definite lines, for the life of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, accused of the murder of Avis Linnell, began when his four lawyers conferred as to how the defense would be conducted.

The attorneys were John L. Lee and Beverly R. Harrison of Virginia and William A. Morse and Philip R. Dunbar of Boston. The conference was in a hotel where Lee and Harrison are stopping.

The fact that Lee and Harrison have come to Boston and have opened quarters in a hotel where they will prepare the case, with the assistance of their brother attorneys of Boston, has demonstrated that there is to be no let-up in the fight for Richeson—that there will be no compromise.

This insures the beginning, six weeks hence, of one of the most absorbing murder cases that New England has ever seen—a murder case in which a clergyman who stood high in his congregation—a young man of brilliant attainments, will face the death chair on the charge that he deliberately poisoned one girl that he might marry another and richer one.

That which will add to the interest of the trial is the fact that the evidence will be circumstantial. No one saw Richeson give poison to Avis Linnell and the choir singer victim left no word of accusation against the clergyman.

This situation means that the district attorney must depend upon circumstantial evidence in his prosecution. The case will recall strongly that of the murder of Mabel Page by Charles L. Tucker, although that tragedy, which absorbed New England for several years, lacked the religious element that enters into the Richeson case.

The case against Tucker was circumstantial, also, but the prosecution had one article that connected Tucker with the Page home on the day the young woman was murdered—the Canadian stick pin. That pin was identified as Mabel Page's. It was found in Tucker's possession.

When it was found at the Young Women's Christian association that Avis Linnell was the victim of poison, a search was made for something that would show from where the poison came. Nothing was found. So important was this missing link that the body of the girl was disinterred and another examination made. Nothing was found, so far as is known, that would connect Richeson with the poison.

In this gap the defense finds their hope of freeing Richeson. On the other hand it will be shown that Richeson bought cyanide of potassium, that he experimented with it at his home in Cambridge; that he talked over a telephone with Avis Linnell and said something about meeting her on Saturday; (the day she was poisoned) and that he had a powerful motive in getting her out of the way.

FIRES AT FLEEING BOATMEN

Exciting Chase Results In Capture on Towne River

QUANTITY OF LEAD FOUND

Abraham Ginsberg, a junk dealer of Sumner street, and John Brown employed in Baker's yacht basin, were arrested Saturday night by Chief of Police Burrell and a squad of officers after an exciting chase in rowboats in the darkness of the harbor, during which a number of shots were fired by the police.

Manager Reuben Baker of the yacht basin, at Quincy Point, notified the police Saturday, that he had been missing lead ballast. Saturday night about 11 o'clock Chief Frank Burrell and Patrolmen Cahill, Whalen and Thorne went to the Basin and Chief Burrell and Officer Whalen began a tour of it.

Thorne and Cahill remained on the wharf and a short time later caught sight of the rowboat creeping out from the shadows between two yachts.

The police believe that Brown had entered into a transaction with Ginsberg to sell him lead and that the lead was collected during the day and secured by the two men at night.

A search of the banks of Town river Sunday morning by Chief Burrell brought to light a pile of lead ballast weighing about 1200 pounds, near the old Federhen wharf. The ballast belonged to the yacht Bohemian which is owned by Judge Charles M. Bruce of Malden.

NAMES WILL NOT BECOME PUBLIC

Until Apprehension of "Men Higher Up" Is Assured

SIFTING THE DYNAMITE CASE

McNamaras Not Likely to Furnish Much Information, as They Decline to "Squeal on the Boys"—One Sworn Juror Confesses to Having Received Money, With Promise of More If He Voted as Bidden

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 5.—Interest in the McNamara case centres in the disclosures which may come from various sources with regard to the men "higher up" who may have been concerned in the one hundred dynamiting outrages perpetrated within the last half dozen years in the name of organized labor.

These disclosures may come through any one of three sources. First of all is the investigation of the alleged bribery of jurors on behalf of the defendants in the Los Angeles case, to which a new chapter has been added by the statement of District Attorney Fredericks that a sum of $400 was actually paid into the hand of one of the sworn jurors to influence him to vote for acquittal, or at least for a disagreement. The preliminary hearing of the alleged bribegiver, Bert H. Franklin, occurred yesterday, and the case was put over for a week.

Next there are the confessions of the two self-convicted McNamara brothers, which are expected today, following their sentences.

Third, the disclosures may come as a result of the federal inquiry now centred at Indianapolis.

It is hardly likely, however, that in any of these three proceedings the authorities will allow such prominent names as may be involved to become public until steps have been taken to insure the immediate apprehension of the guilty men.

Meanwhile a union movement has been put under way to utilize such moneys as remain from the $190,000 defense fund raised by the labor organizations for the benefit of the families of the twenty-one victims of The Times explosion.

An interesting feature connected with the McNamara confession comes with the Socialist disclaimer of trade union methods, which are termed inseparable from violence, and the plea that Socialists divorce themselves from the trade union movement.

Expectations of complete confessions that would reveal the names of men higher up in the dynamite plots of the McNamara brothers were upset when J. J. McNamara said:

"We will take our medicine, but won't squeal on the boys."

The brothers have given no details which would show that they had design on buildings other than The Times and the Llewellyn Iron Works to which they confessed dynamiting. Neither man has confessed other than to plead guilty. In statements made to prison guards they have declared that they would refuse to make confessions involving other labor men.

Three new names have been dragged into the jury bribery scandal that marked the sudden close of the trial. Robert Bain, sworn juror in the case; his wife, and an agent of the McNamara defense, have played a part in the transactions, according to a confession made by Bain.

District Attorney Fredericks said that Bert H. Franklin, a detective employed by the McNamara defense and now under arrest on a charge of attempting to bribe with $4000 H. Lockwood, a venireman, actually paid to Bain $400, and promised $3000 more at the end of the trial if he would vote for acquittal or cause a disagreement of the jury.

Fredericks said $12,000 was to have been used to bribe jurors.

Ryan Not Ready to Talk

Indianapolis, Dec. 5.—Many inquirers for President Ryan at the offices of the Iron Workers' union had been unable to obtain information as to where he could be found. To clear away the seeming mystery, Leo M. Rappaport, attorney for the association, made this statement:

"Mr. Ryan was completely taken off his feet and unnerved by the revelation by the secretary-treasurer of the association. He wishes not to be questioned in any way about the situation until he has collected himself. Soon he will call a meeting of the executive board. Until that time he probably will make no public statement."

VOTE BUYING REPORT IN HANDS OF POLICE

Will Be Delivered In Person to Bay State Governor

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 5.—State Police Officers Flynn and Daley, who have been working on the matter of vote buying in this city, went to the office of John T. Swift, brother of Attorney General Swift, in Fall River, and secured the much wanted but elusive typewritten report of the secret inquest conducted into the vote buying in this city in 1909.

At the conclusion of the inquest in May, 1909, a duplicate of the typewritten report of the testimony was sent to the then district attorney, now attorney general, and this is the copy now in the possession of the state police.

It takes up six volumes. Flynn says the evidence will not be touched until it is delivered in person to Governor Foss.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The basket ball season has already received a good start at the High school, and from the various players now practising, it looks as if Quincy High will be represented by a formidable and efficient quintet.

The method to be employed in selecting the school team seems to be a good one. The players will be apportioned as class teams; members of the senior clas will try for the senior team, and so on respectively to the freshman class. A series of elimination contests will then be played, and the stars determined from the four class teams.

Coach Arthur Staff, who met with great success with the football team, will also instruct the basket ball players, and he firmly believes that he will be able to round out a fast aggregation.

None of last year's winning combination remains at the school, but from the neucleus on hand, the record of 1910-11 gives every promise of being surpassed.

A number of the football warriors will try for positions, including "Pete" Chapman, Herbert Johnson, "Sam" Prout, Larkin, White, Blackmur, Finlay and Young.

Quincy A. A. basket ball squad will be called out for the first practice of the season, tonight, in St. Mary's hall. The prospects for a fast team are exceptionally bright and there is every reason to believe the games in St. Mary's hall will be appreciated by the local sporting bloods.

Two teams will be formed and Cunningham gym, will be the scene of the first contest on Thursday evening. Great rivalry exists between these two factions and a record breaking crowd should tax the West Quincy hall on the initial appearance.

Many of the football players will try out for the team, and with Hermon, Prout, Bill Manning, and the Chapman brothers, all members of last year's Quincy High team, in line for berths, it looks as if a most successful season is in store.

Members of Successful Party Make Things Hum At Rousing Meeting In Union Hall

It was a rousing jollification gathering that the Republicans had in Union hall on Tuesday evening. It did not need the services of a brass band to create enthusiasm, for every one of the party work was charged to the limit. It was early after 7 o'clock when the successful candidates and ward committees began to arrive and soon the Mayor-elect came in and there was a series of hand shakes, the air being full of congratulations. Shortly after, Representative Langelier, chairman of the City Committee called the meeting to order and in opening the jollification read the returns from the Ledger Extra, the result being received with round upon round of applause. He then said that victory brings grave responsibility,for with such an overwhelming Republican council, the Republican party will be held strictly responsible for the affairs of the city and it behooves all members to act wisely in matters pertaining to the welfare of our good city. He felt that the Mayor elect would guide wisely and he believed that our Republican councilmen would work in harmony with him. The Republican party of Quincy have an immense opportunity to disapprove the theory of non partisanship recently in municipal affairs, as well as in state and national affairs.

MAYOR STONE.

Mayor elect Stone was then introduced and it was some minutes before the applause had died down sufficiently for him to be heard. He thanked the word committees for their loyalty in the recent campaign, as well as to the Republican party in general for the unanimous support they had given him, as shown by the vote. He reiterated the promise which he made at the rallies, held before the election, to give the city a business administration in every possible way. To look carefully into the development of Quincy's superb water front. He also said that he had made no promises and went into office unhampered. In the selection of his officials he would select men who he considered best qualified for the positions.

Frank Shay of Wollaston, also spoke briefly interspersing his remarks with one of the stories of which he seems to have an inexhaustable fund.

Councilman Richards urged the new councilmen to work in harmony during the next year for the best interests of the city. He told them that when they entered the City Council, ward lines should be eliminated and that all temporary loans outstanding. He hoped that the Mayor would receive the hearty support of all.

Councilman Elect Hobbs said that the weather was a little warmer tonight than a year ago. It had been a long time since he had a chance to smile and he hoped we would have the opportunity to smile a year hence. He had been informed that the uncollectable taxes were not sufficient to pay temporary loans outstanding.

Heh oped that the Mayor would receive the hearty support of all.

MEETING OF PARENTS' AND TEACHERS' ASS'N.

A meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Cranch school was held in the school hall Monday evening, with president Geo. E. Pfaffmann in the chair. The report of the secretary, Mrs. Albert M. Parker, having been read and accepted, the president announced that the musical part of the program was in order.

This was arranged by Mr. Redfield Allen, chairman of the music committee, and was exquisitely rendered by Miss Eva Kellogg, violinist of Brookline, ably accompanied by Miss Olive Allen of Presidents Hill. Both the aforementioned are students at the New England Conservatory of Music and some beautiful selections were enjoyed.

The musical portion consisted of the following numbers: 1—Meditation from Thais,—by Massenet, 2—Souvenir de Sorrento by Papini, 3—Le Cyne ("The Swan") by Saint Saens.

The speaker of the evening was Horace W. Rice, principal of the Woodward Institute, who gave a very able and instructive discourse on "Vocational training for girls in the public schools."

Going back to the days of his own boyhood, when the father trained the son in his own craft, and the mother taught the daughter the duties of the household, Mr. Rice brought forward the needs of our youths as regards vocational training, up to the present day. He said in part: "It is now the most pressing problem of our schools to give vocational training—that sort of training which helps one to earn one's living—this being done by the establishing of trade, industrial and part time schools. In this way the boys and girls will be best fitted for their life work, the talent and disposition of each pupil being taken into consideration when his or her special vocational course is laid out.

This will do away with the many "misfits" in the labor world. Boys and girls will develop knowldege before going out into it. Dirth of skilled labor should be overcome in this way.

In these schools of vocational training the courses are, first, household science and art, which includes elementary nursing, cooking for invalids, household sanitation and personal hygiene, second—sewing, dressmaking and millinery, third—typewriting and office work, and fourth—will come printing, proof reading and book binding."

A luncheon for fifteen given to the teaching staff of the Woodward, prepared by girls of the class in household economics, and a Thanksgiving dinner for the same, were given as examples by Mr. Rice, of what this course is doing for girls and for the homes of our city. In the event of division, there will come the small high school, fitting for college, the vocational, larger, and having an all day session and teaching various vocations. This, vocational work, he contended, and many of us realize, should bring in the girls' schools.

We all agree that the manual training for boys in the grammar schools, is a success, therefore, all thinking men must soon be in favor of the establishment of vocational training in grade schools. The expense will be well warranted.

This subject, being so prominently before the public at the present time, the audience felt greatly indebted to Mr. Rice for his clear presentation of the situation. After more music, the meeting adjourned to enjoy a social hour at the hands of Miss Marie Fegan, teacher of grade three and her committee of parents.

Young people of the school rendered music during this time assisted by Andrew Dean and Albert Parker of the alumni. The decorations, consisting of branches of pine, interspersed with red berries, were typical of the season.

MAYOR-ELECT STONE.

EUGENE R. STONE MAYOR-ELECT OF QUINCY

A Hustler From the Word "Go" And Sure to "Make Good"

Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone is almost too well known to need any extended introduction. He is a hustler from the word "go" and anything he takes hold of is sure to be successful

Born in Boston in 1871, he received his education in the public schools of that city. In 1890 he accepted a position in the building department of a well known New York house with whom he remained until 1898 at which time he was its superintendent, resigning to accept a position with the Magee Furnace company with whom he remained many years. Leaving the employ of this firm Mr. Stone embarked in the heating and ventilating business under the lrm name of Stone

"LANDSLIDE" CARRIES CANDIDATE STONE AND WHOLE REPUBLICAN TICKET INTO OFFICE BY TREMENDOUS MAJORITY

Mayor-elect Goes Into Office With Greatest Majority Ever Given For That Office

Administration Will Be Supported In City Council By Twenty Republican Members

A majority of 2,024, the largest majority ever given a Mayoralty candidate in the history of the city, was what the Republicans handed out to their candidate for Mayor, Eugene R. Stone at the municipal election on Tuesday. Up to yesterday ex-Mayor Thompson held the palm for having received the largest majority, which was at the election of December 1905, when he defeated George H. Wilson the Democratic candidate by a majority of 1,644.

The general belief was that Mr. Stone would get a big majority, but even his most sanguine friends did not place the figure anywhere near that which he received. It only goes to show what his chief henchman, Frank Shay, calls gum shoe work will do.

Mr. Stone carried five wards and one precinct of Ward Four the Democratic stronghold, and it is worthy of note that this ward, which usually goes Democratic by an overwhelming majority, only gave its party candidate a majority of 41 votes.

This was not the only surprise of the day, for Ward Two, which for several years has been counted as being in the Democratic column, this year came back to its first love and elected three Republican Councilmen which means that the next City Council will be composed of 20 Republicans and three Democrats, the latter coming from Ward Four. Had there been Republican candidates for the Council in that ward, the Democratic representation in the Council might have been nil.

Considering the fact that almost everybody conceded the fact that Stone would be elected, there was a

THIRD ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT

Congregational Club of Wollaston Continued Success of Former Years

With the opening night of its third annual entertainment Tuesday evening the Congregational club of Wollaston continued its successes of previous years.

The "show" this year took the form of up to date vaudeville concluding with the uproarious original burlesque entitled "Old home day in Plunket."

For the opening number as "The two Rosmoskys," Charles L. Seavey and B. H. Bain kept all highly amused in a Hebrew dialect sketch.

The act opened with an eccentric song by Mr. Seavey entitled, "I'm the most unlucky man." After a dialogue running through the various twists of the Hebrew tongue the sketch concluded with the duet "Please play some ragtime," Miss Helen Seavey presided at the piano.

Karl Reece, an out-of-town young man and his trick dog furnished a great amount of amusement and interest. The dog although a trifle nervous from his journey went through a long list of tricks with almost human intelligence.

The club quartet, appearing in costumes of the farm with broad brimmed straw hats, received applause. Their selections included "Heidelberg" and a humorous number "Oh Boy! Oh Bee." Composing the four were Samuel Bates, Irving L. Shaw, W. A. Mann and Louis B. Weston.

Hecker and Locke, A. H. and R. B. respectively, in their sketch "The stranded minstrels" were as forlorn a pair of darkeys as ever hit the railroad ties.

Their entrance upon the stage to the plaintive notes of a funeral dirge was especially pathetic. Many local knocks raised a laugh during their appearance.

"Old home day in Plunket" the final number was taken part in by many club members. The curtain rose upon the village square where the inhabitants were raising a song to the dear old town.

A speech of welcome by Hiram Greene, president of the village opened the festivities. Next came the Invincible quartet consisting of Messrs. Hutchins, Hogue, Tenney and Curran.

Their selections included "He loved her but she moved away" and "Linger longer Lucy." Although no undesirable tokens were received from the audience it must be admitted that the participants were not always in tune and that at times the words also came hard.

V. B. Rich, a promoter tried to sell those present shares in the Wollaston coal mine while Billy the village cut up made things lively for the old folks.

"The old oaken bucket" touchingly rendered by Reuben Oldchuck was followed by a moderate discourse by Frank Lee Slow.

The Plunket Horn Band consisting of Messrs Blake, Godfrey and Bachelder and directed in a most frenzied manner by Amos T. Leavitt was one of the hits of the evening.

Miss Aneglina Appleby, the town poetess was charming in her original recitations and her makeup and bearing would have done justice to one of the old Cadet shows.

The proposal of Hiram Greene to Miss Jennie Smith and their subsequent discovery by the villagers led by the town cut up brought the evening to a close.

The burlesque was most refreshing in its originality and the club is to be congratulated on its success. The cast included:

Hiram Greene, President of the Village, Willard E. Keyes
Joshua Jones, a successful city merchant, George B. Aman
W. B. Rich, a promoter, C. A. Randall
Reuben Oldchuck, the oldest inhabitant, Fred L. Eastman
Billy, the Village Cut up, Charles Johnson
Si Hopp, leader of the Plunket quartet, Charles P. Hutchins
Bertie Blow, an unfortunate musician, W. Clinton Bachelder
Ira Bobberkin, director of the band, Amos T. Leavitt
Frank Lee Slow, who prefers Plunket, E. S. Tenney
Miss Aneglina Appleby, Town poetess, T. E. Perley
Miss Jennie Smith, unmarried but not by choice, W. B. Rodd

CHANGES IN CITY COUNCIL

As has been stated eleswhere, the City Council of 1912 will be composed as the vote stands today, of 20 Republicans and three Democrats. Of this number, 10 of the City Council of 1911 are returned. Of the 11 new members 9 will enter the City Council for the first time, and two, Ralph W. Hobbs and James H. Cunningham, have seen service in other years.

As for the Presidency, the only candidate, so far known, is Ralph W. Hobbs, Councilman-at-large who has already served as President and it is almost a foregone conclusion that he will again be put in the chair on inauguration day without oppostion.

The new Council will be sworn in on the first Monday in January, at 12 o'clock noon, which this year falls on Jan. 1.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

WHY FOUR-PAGE LEDGER.

Our readers must have been surprised Tuesday to receive a four-page instead of the usual six page Ledger but accidents will happen. While running off the second edition late Monday afternoon a cog wheel, just a little cog wheel, broke and the big Duplex press had to come to a standstill. No one was to blame, couldn't even locate the office devil or cat so got busy getting a press machinist whose verdict was ten days to make new parts. However we hope to get back again to the six-pages before the week is out as new parts are on their way from the makers of the press at Battle Creek, Mich., and in the meantime we ask the indulgence of our readers and advertisers.

The emergency press is slow but we were able to get out the regular edition Tuesday afternoon and a big election extra in the evening and through the week will issue big editions each day giving all the local news.

Another revolution is scheduled for Mexico. The revolutionists wish to fight for freedom from the freedom for which they last fought.

Mr. Carneigie's list of 21 great men failed to include John Franklin Baker whose home run won the world's series for the Philadelphia team.

Do Quincy people realize that they are gradually losing all their conveniences, yes we might say public necessities? How many know that if an emergency arises they cannot send a telegram unless they have a telephone or go a mile or two to the office on Merrymount road? Why should not a place like Quincy be entitled to a central telegraph office?

Not being able to telegraph from the Quincy depot is a hardship. Unless your message is one that can be safely transmitted by telephone the trip must be made to Merrymount road. Is it convenient or fair treatment?

We have been told it is a matter of economy for the telegraph company but we should think it would be a good way to drive business away.

One by one things are slipping away never to come back. Does any one care?

Quincy has considerable low land that might come under the proposed bill for reclaiming wet land in Massachusetts.

In preparation for presentation to the Legislature is a bill calling for an appropriation of $50,000 to be expended in reclaiming wet lands in the state that they may be used for agricultural purposes. It is indorsed by real estate men and officials of the state board of agriculture.

The bill requires the reclamation to be done under the direction of the state board of health, the lands then to be turned over to the board of agriculture to be cultivated under its direction for two years. This board may then at its discretion sell the lands to the highest bidder.

It is proposed to allow the original owner of the wet land an opportunity first to purchase the reclaimed land at a price not less than the cost of purchasing the wet land plus the cost of reclaiming it.

It is said by some of the friends of this bill that there are at least 100,000 acres of wet land in the state which are practically valueless onw and which may be reclaimed and economically developed. One third of this area is said to lie within 20 miles of the State House.

THE ELECTION.

A landslide marked the election Tuesday and Candidate Stone and his colleagues on the Republican ticket were swept into office by a tremendous majority. Such a vote should be extremely gratifying to the Mayor-elect and show with what great esteem and favor he is held by the voters of the city. The honor carries with it, however, tremendous responsibilities and it is seldom a man enters public office with a greater opportunity to "make good." Great and important improvements are contemplated which with the adjustment of the financial situation is such as to appall the average thinker. Mr. Stone and his supporters are all men of rare business attainments. Each and every one is successful in every day affairs and we venture to say that under their able jurisdiction the city will prosper and fall heir to the many things which have been promised during the campaign just closed.

We join with the voters in sincere congratulations, wishing for all who have been so honored a realization of their hopes for the city's welfare.

DANCERS WERE EVENLY MATCHED

The members of the Adams A. A. held their third annual prize dance in Alpha hall Tuesday evening. A concert was given from eight o'clock until nine, while the affair itself terminated with dancing at midnight.

The prize dance took place at ten o'clock, with four couples participating. All the couples were evenly matched and after two trials the prize consisting of a five dollar gold piece, was awarded to James Smallett and lady.

The judges were James Kirkland, Arthur Murray, and Leonard Norman.

The floor was in charge of Herbert A. Dickie, assisted by the following aids: David Brownrigg, William Small, Charles Abate, George Hanson, Daniel Flanagan, William Kelley and Duncan McClellan.

good vote cast, the total vote of the city being 4,477 as against 4,741 at the municipal election in 1910. It can safely be said that but for the several interesting and exciting local contests, the vote would have been even smaller than it was.

One of the most interesting contests was that in Ward Four for school committee from the Ward, between McPherson the Democratic candidate and Reynolds the Republican candidate. Both gentlemen have a host of friends in the ward and they hustled. The result was that the regular Democratic candidate won out by 17 votes.

There was also a factional fight in Ward Two, with the result that the three Democratic candidates were defeated. The vote, however, between Councilman Duffy and Mr. Carruthers is so close that a recount will probably be asked.

There was but little excitement at City Hall over the receiving of the returns. The first returns of the head of the ticket began to arrive by telephone soon after the polls closed and by 5 o'clock the unofficial returns had all been received. Just about that time Mayor-elect Stone came into the City Clerk's office with a box of cigars under his arm, and after being congratulated by all present on his victory, was about to depart when Mayor Shea came from his office to extend his congratulations, saying, "Gene your troubles are just commencing."

The first official returns received came as usual from the second precinct of Ward Five, which arrived at 5.30 and 23 minutes later the first precinct from Ward One came in. From then on, the official returns came in quite promptly, so that by 6.20 everything was in with the exception of the first precinct of Ward Three. This came in at 7.20 and half an hour later the hall was practically deserted, save for a few sidewalk politicians who were trying to figure out how it was.

MR. SHAY OF WOLLASTON.

Our hats off to an old "war horse," Politicians like artists are born, not made and we congratulate ourselves upon knowing a good one when we see him. Much of the credit of Tuesday's great Republican victory was due to Mr. Shay and the stamp of the pastmaster was upon the winning tactics.

HISTORY RED CROSS SEALS.

Red Cross Christmas seals date back in their origin to "charity stamps" first used for the soldiers' relief funds in Boston in 1862, during the Civil War. After the war, this method of raising money was discontinued in this country for a generation, although it found vogue in Portugal, Switzerland, Austria, France, Spain, Denmark, Norway, Russia, Sweden and other European countries. There are now several hundred different types of charity stamps used in all parts of the world, as many as 40 being used in Austria for children's hospitals alone.

Stamps or seals were first used to get money for the anti-tuberculosis crusade in Norway and Sweden in 1904. After being used in these countries for three years, as a direct result for the interest of Jacob Riis in this movement, the Delaware Anti-Tuberculosis association, headed by Miss Emily P. Bissell, and the Red Cross society of Delaware combined in issuing a tuberculosis stamp. So successful was this campaign that nearly $3,000 was realized and the next year, in 1908, the American Red Cross was induced to issue a national Red Cross tuberculosis stamp. From this sale $135,000 was realized, that amount being almost doubled in 1909. Last year, for the first time, the sale was organized on a comprehensive basis, taking in all parts of the United States, and $310,000 worth were sold in 1911, the slogan for the campaign is, "A million for tuberculosis from Red Cross seals."

Anty Drudge Tells How to Prevent Laundry Mistakes.

Jones—"Heavens, Jemina! Look what came back from the laundry! Three pairs of women's stockings and five petticoats. Why I've got some woman's laundry instead of my own."

Anty Drudge—"I'll tell you how to avoid mistakes like that. Get Fels-Naptha soap and have your things washed the easy way at home. They'll be cleaner and fresher and wear twice as long and then you won't get them mixed with other people's clothes."

You owe it to yourself and your folks to use Fels-Naptha.

You owe it to yourself to cut down the time of washing clothes one-half, to save yourself its drudgery, to make it easier and more pleasant all around.

You owe it to your folks to quit making washday a day of cold meals, steamy and smelly house and general bad temper.

Fels-Naptha does it, summer or winter—washes all the clothes in cool or lukewarm water, without boiling, in little time, with no hard rubbing, and makes them cleaner, whiter and sweeter than any other way.

Follow directions on the red and green wrapper.

JOLLIFICATION

Councilman Sandberg thanked the gentlemen for the honor they had done him by their votes. He had done his duty to the best of his ability. He had not voted against as many bills as he would have liked or as he thought he ought to have done, but there were but three with him, so it would have been useless. It is our duty to do what we can for our candidate, that his administration may be a successful one. But we have got to be careful.

Councilman-elect Murray thanked his many friends for the handsome vote which they had given him. It was a great victory and he certainly felt eleated, but in our happiness we should be charitable. He hoped the City Council would "make good" next year.

Councilman Studley said that last year he broke the ring in Ward Two, and this year we have won two more men. He was proud of the good work of his two running mates. During his first year in the council he had tried to support every progressive matter and he pledged himself to support progressive measures in the future.

Alexander Clark said that Ward Three had been looked upon as a sore spot after the caucus, but th result of today's election shows no hard feeling. The ward committee had no fear of the outcome of the vote and it was rounded up good and strong for Stone. He had been a member of the Council during one of these non-partisan administrations and he had never seen politics played as it was then played. If the council will only work for the whole city, instead of their own ward, it woud be less expensive.

W. H. Teasdale said that when the Ward Four vote was announced, there was some surprise. He had told Mr. Stone that the ward would give him 300 votes. You in other wards do not realize what we have to contend with in this ward, but every Republican candidate has found that the Republicans of the ward have stood by him.

Arthur Roan of Wollaston said that the main object in his ward was to get out the vote and the returns showed that the committee had done so. He was feeling happy over the result.

Herbert S. Barker, a sketch of whom appeared in Monday's Ledger, "Who is Who column," said he wanted to thank the Ledger for the story, but he did not like the picture, as some one told him it looked like one of the McNamaras. He had been honored by being elected to the council and to the school committee, and he was now janitor of the Ward Six Republican headquarters, with no money to buy oil for the lamps. He was proud to be present, however, and take part in this jollification.

Representative Thomas was glad to know that the City of Quincy had again come back into the Republican column at it muncipal election. He felt that the Republicans were well qualified to give the city a good administration, if not better than we have been having. He knew Mr. Stone to be honest and fearless and there was no doubt but what he would make good.

Representative-elect Piper said that it was very gratifying to be in power once again and he hoped that the members of the council would do all they could to uphold the Mayor.

A. L. Whitman said we had a right to rejoice, but while rejoicing let us not forget those fellows that have fallen by the way side. No doubt but what we had elected the best business man in the city.

Peter T. Fallon was introduced as a recent convert. Mr. Fallon entered the hall while Mr. Barker was speaking and had been given a rousing reception. When introduced, he said that for 34 or 35 years he had endorsed the Democratic party, but he now found that the leadership had gone.

He had stood by Democrats, but it had then come to non-partisanship which had wiped out the Democrats. He felt pleased to be affiliated with the Republicans, and he hoped that the non-partisan party would never exist again.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall said we had elected a man with a republican principle. A business man and one who would carry out the ideals he felt just and that he would stand up for the position he thought right. He will remedy what in the past has been detrimental and bring about an improvement. He had seen our small city, with every opportunity for growth, become almost a bankrupt. He had seen the charter violated to the limit and the executive encroaching upon the legislative powers. He wanted to see the City Council have the money expended a they directed.

Arthur W. Newcomb who was reedlected as school committee at large, was the last speaker. He aid that it was pleasant that the city had gone Republican, and he hoped that the party would so conduct the affairs that it would be retained in power for many years.

With three cheers loud and long for the new Mayor, the jollification came to an end, after which the gentlemen present crowded about Mr. Stone to again shake hands with him.

MAYOR-ELECT STONE MAKES MANY CALLS

Mayor elect Stone made a round of social affairs Tueday after the election. Firt he called at the Elks club where he was warmly welcomedand then he paid a short visit to the Granite City club being a member of both organizations. From there he visited at Music hall, the annual ball of Brith Abraham. Here he also received a warm welcome and was prevailed upon to lead the grand march, whi h opened the ball with a Winthrop lady. He was urged to remain and enjoy the festivities of the evening but he said that while he would have enjoyed remainging that it was his busy night. He was given a royal send off as he left the hall.

The social duties of Quincy's Mayor are many and if he tries to keep pace with them all he will lead a strenuous life.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THOMAS F. CARRIGAN

The sudden death yesterday morning, of Thomas F. Carrigan, 53, of 112 South Walnut street, was received with much regret in local circles by all who were intimately acquainted with him. Mr. Carrigan had been a resident of this city for 15 years and was a laster by trade, being employed at the Williams and Kneeland Shoe Company. About a month ago his wife died.

He was the president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, local No 143. He is survived by four sons and a daughter. Funeral services will take place tomorrow morning in St. John's church.

AUSPICIOUS OPENING OF FAIR AT CHRIST CHURCH

Parish House Alive With Merry Throng Both Afternoon And Evening

Many Unique Features Interest Visitors

A two days' fair, under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of Christ church was successfully opened, Wednesday afternoon, in the parish house and will continue through this afternoon and evening. The object of the fair is to raise funds for the paying of the balance due on the renovating of the church. All over that amount to be used by the Guild for parochial needs. Judging from the attendance the opening day, and the sales made at the several booths, the ladies will have no difficulty in raising the desired amount.

The interior of the parish house looked unusually pretty, with its gaily decorated booths, each of which contained a large line of articles of a useful and fancy nature, many of which will make ideal Christmas gifts. The general color scheme of the decorations was green and red, appropriate to the holiday season.

There were several special features which included a post office, where any one with the price could obtain letters. Then there was the Chinese laundry with a dozen members of the junior auxiliary dressed as Chinese girls. When business got a little dull at the laundry, the misses would gather in front and sing a song in pigeon English which served to immediately attract a number to the booth. Then there was an Italian fruit stand, Japanese rolling table, Quincy dodger and Japanese tea room with its prettily gowned Japanese girls in attendance. It is hardly necessary to say that the two in charge of the Italian fruit stand were costumed characteristic of sunny Italy.

Up stairs there was an amusement hall in charge of the Galahad brotherhood and constant peals of laughter floating down the stairway was enough to keep the room full of curious people to see what others were laughing at.

There was no entertainment the opening day, but this afternoon a pleasing children's entertainment had been arranged.

As noted above the fair was given under the auspices of the Woman's Guild with Mrs. Hazen E. Ricker, president and general chairman.

INSPECTOR GOODHUE WAS "KEEN"

Recognized Man Arrested In Milton As One Wanted Here

MAN'S SCHEME NEW ONE

The detective instinct of acting Inspector Goodhue, stood him in well this morning, when he recognized in a man arrested at Milton one for whom he was looking for larceny in Quincy. The man, who gave his name as John Ryan of 8 Allston street, Boston, was arrested in Milton Wednesday for the larceny of a new pair of shoes from a stable. When the fellow stood up to plead to the complaint Inspector Goodhue thought that he recognized him, as a man wanted for the larceny of a coachman's coat from the stable of James H. Stetson, on School street, several weeks ago. After the fellow had been sentenced to three months in jail, Inspector Goodhue took him into the back room and questioned him about the coat.

At first he denied that he had taken the coat, but frequent questioning soon brought tears into the fellow's eyes and he admitted that he was the man who took the coat, which he said he had sold for a dollar, in a Boston costumer's shop.

Ryan's scheme was a new one. Usually he wears glasses, but when approaching a house he removes these and places them in his pocket. He then inquires for the coachman, saying that he has a preparation for cleaning hats. He takes good care however, before inquiring for the coachman, to learn that he is absent. He then starts to wait and while waiting, helps himself to anything that is handy and makes his escape before the coachman return. When the theft is discovered, it is reported that the man did not wear glasses, so that when the police are looking for him, a man with glasses is passed by. In the case of his visit to Mr. Stetson, he did the same trick and made off with a valuable rubber coat.

Another ingenious trick of Ryan was to dispose of his stolen goods to a costumer. If sold to a pawnbroker, the purchase would have to be reported to the police, but when sold to a costumer, no report is made and for that reason, missing articles are hard to trace.

Wednesday, in Milton, he helped himself to a pair of new shoes in a stable, but the theft was quickly discovered and reported to the police. Officer Fallon started out in the auto after him. He soon saw a man going through a field tying up a pair of shoes and he immediately arrested him.

Mrs. Stetson did not care to come to court to prosecute the fellow and as he has been sentenced to three months in jail, the Quincy case will be dropped. An effort will be made however to recover the coat.

MAYOR-ELECT STONE PRESIDES

At Well Attended Meeting of the Board of Trade

COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED

The last meeting for the present year of the Board of Trade, was held in the rooms of the association, Wednesday evening, and was attended by a large number. Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone, persident of the body, was in the chair, and various matters of importance came up for consideration.

After the secretary's report had been read and accepted, communications of a varied nature were read. One that occupied the attention of the members for a considerable length of time, came from the Metropolitan Plan Commission, so called, a commission recently appointed by the governor to consider certain matters affecting the interests alike of both state and city, and calling for a bill to be framed along those lines and presented to the legislature.

President Stone stated that he had appeared recently before the commission on invitation, and in company with Henry L. Kincaide, made a research, in order to ascertain the object and powers of such a commission. He presented a number of instances, where the powers of the state and city would seem to overlap, and cited the case of a street improvement, where the development of a boulevard, or some other metropolitan property, was to be equally affected.

In the matter even of the fire department, it was also to be determined just where certain stations would be best located, and just what divisions would respond to fires in differ-

REPORT MAY BE EXPECTED

Rumor Today Says Commission Has Decided About Grades

MAY CLOSE SAVILLE STREET

There was a rumor about City Square this morning that the special commission on the separation of the grade at the Water and Saville street crossings had made its report, and had reported a scheme to close up Saville street, where it crosses the railroad tracks, and build a subway beneath the tracks for foot passenger. The rumor further aid that the grade of the tracks between the Quincy and Quincy Adams stations were not to be materially changed, but that at Water street, the street would go beneath the tracks.

Mayor Shea, when seen this morning said that he had not been notified of any report of the special commission and he supposed that if a report had been made that it would naturally come to him first. His Honor did say, however, that he expected the report at an early date, as he had been given to understand by ex-Governor Bates, the chairman of the special commission, that the matter would be settled before the Mayor went out of office.

Mayor Shea has been very anxious to get this matter cleaned up and he has tried to hurry the commission as much as posible, buthad not met with much success in that line up to the present time.

As ex-Governor Bates has given him his word that the matter would be settled this month, he expects to get the commission's report any day.

Quincy will be glad when this matter is definitely settled. That the railroad will begin active work on the separation of the grades as soon as the report is made and acepted is evident by the work now in progress between Atlantic and Neponset.

BLAME LAID ON COLD STORAGE

Wilson Says the Cost of Living is Double Priced

HE ASKS WHO GETS GRAFT

For Every Dollar Consumer Pays For Food the Farmer Gets Less Than Fifty Cents—Suspects Speculation by Men Who Keep Commodities In Storage—Extracts From Report of Secretary of Agriculture

Washington, Dec. 7.—"The consumer pays a dollar for food; the farmer gets less than 50 cents of it. Who gets the rest?"

That is a question which Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture asks in his annual report. The secretary does not attempt to answer it. He does explain in some detail the results of an investigation his department has just concluded into the effects of cold storage on the wholesomeness and cost of food.

His investigation leads him to recommend publicity for the amount of food in cold storage, just as the department now gives publicity to the condition of crops from month to month.

Instead of food remaining in storage for longer than a year or two years, as a rule, the secretary declares that his investigation showed that "receipts into cold storage are entirely or very nearly exhausted by the deliveries out of cold storage within ten months."

Cold storage, the secretary reports, has raised the cost of living by increasing the annual price level for butter and eggs.

The secretary says that an examination of the record of prices gives a "suspicion" that there has been much speculation in some years by the men who keep commodities in cold storage.

"At a time when there were plenty of eggs in storage," the secretary says, "the wholesale price of eggs soared to 43 cents in Boston in November and December and to 45½ cents in New York for nearby state eggs. There was an apparent mistake of the storage men in overestimating the consumption of the public at exorbitant prices, because so large was the unsold quantity at the beginning of the next egg year, in the spring of 1911, that the wholesale price of eggs fell in April to 18½ cents in Boston and New York, and the storage men dumped on the foreign market the greatest quantity of eggs ever exported from this country in a year.

"The potato crop of 282,000,000 bushels is about 90 percent of the average production, but the farm price has increased to such an extent that the total value of the crop is the highest of record and amounts to $213,000,000."

The department announces that the corn crop is moving northward by seed selection.

The American systems of renting land are declared to be faulty and result in soil robbing. It is suggested that domestic animals be kept on farms, even if the land owner must furnish them, and that there be a rotation of crops.

After years of experimentation, the department says that Egyptian cotton can be grown in southern California and bulbs in the state of Washington.

The finest dates from the Sahara desert succeed in the southern states.

Poultry products for the past year are estimated to have been worth $750,000,000.

The foresters of the forestry bureau are learning by experiments how to reforest 30,000 acres in a year. The secretary says that ten times this much must be planted annually to cover all the bare tracts in a generation.

"We are sending explorers to the ends of the earth for new plants—and getting them," says Wilson.

The secretary warns the irrigation farmers that they must conserve their soil; that irrigation will bring maximum crops while the land is new and full of plant food. But where the crops are sold year by year, irrigation of itself will not assure good results.

Rockefeller and Gates "Invited" Before Steel Investigators

The committee is willing to give Rockefeller and Gates opportunity to answer charges of the Merritt brothers that the "Oil King" juggled the Merritts out of property worth many million dollars.

WHEN IN DOUBT—

A Pretty Pincushion Is a Very Useful Christmas Present.

When in doubt make a pincushion is excellent advice for the Christmas gift giver. Pincushions are always useful. They wear out or lose their freshness so that a great many of them may be used in even a year. Moreover, unlike more elaborate pieces of fancy work, they are not beyond the skill of the meanest needlewoman.

Just at present round shapes are in demand, so if you are selecting a design you cannot do better than copy the one photographed here. The center consists of a circular piece of linen worked in satin stitch with a spray of flowers and foliage. Double frills of valenciennes lace and a narrow beading through which a ribbon is run and knotted at the top serve to finish the outside.

Still Time to Make It.

If you are still trying to think of a gift that you can make for some one—and it will have to be something—at this late day, that is soon put together, perhaps you can get a valuable suggestion from the recent vogue for pretty things of tapestry or silk brocade.

Boxes and picture frames simply fashioned of brocaded silk or poplin, in old blue, old rose, gold or soft green, are finished with narrow gold braid or gimp.

These are dainty and distinctive and hark back to the French empire period.

To further ornament them an old medallion print may be cut and pasted to the material, being framed with the braid.

A picture frame of this sort would be especially easy to make and for either a man or a woman would be an acceptable gift.

A Gift Easily Made.

Women who like to make dainty things for their friends may be interested in the little gifts that one woman is making with those small books of stamps which are issued by the government and which are so useful to carry either when traveling or in damp weather.

A small case is made just a trifle larger than the stamp book. This is stiffened with cardboard, and the inside is finished with an extra pocket-like piece to allow new books to be put in as the old ones are used. The material used is flowered ribbon, but the same idea could be worked out in tan or blue embroidered linen.

Homemade Christmas Cards.

Why not make Christmas cards for your friend's Christmas gift?

Take a sheet of any pretty writing paper and draw a square the size of a small visiting card at the head, painting a dainty view inside, or, if desired, paste one in. Then below print carefully Christmas greetings and your friend's name and address, delicately coloring the capital letters.

It is nice to make the envelope match.

There are any number of different designs for these, conventional and otherwise, and the water color work may be quite simple.

BOUDOIR COMFORT.

Just the Offering For Tired Business Girls.

Comfort for tired feet is suggested by the dainty bedroom slippers or mules photographed here. Just why the name "mules" should be applied to this form of footwear it is hard to tell, because it is something of a misnomer for such artistic creations.

Those pictured here have the soles covered with ottoman silk and the uppers made of Dresden silk shirred over elastic cords. The lamb's wool soles sold in the shops should be used as the foundations for the mules. They may be covered with several thicknesses of muslin and within with ottoman silk.

If the padded effect is not cared for the silk may be put on directly over the soles.

Some Gifts For Her

If you have a friend who travels much oversea make her a stateroom bag like the one illustrated and she'll be charmed with the present.

It may be fashioned from any stout material, such as cretonne, denim or the like, and is merely a width of the fabric neatly bound with tape and fitted with rings for hanging. Over this surface are placed pockets of the cretonne. The large pockets are for veils, handkerchiefs and other articles of the sort. The small pocket is for hairpins, and a handy pincushion is ready for stray pins.

Ribbon Corset Bags.

The new ribbon corset bags make most acceptable presents for the woman who is fond of the dainty little conveniences of this sort. They are easily made and more cheaply than when purchased at the stores. The flowered ribbons with the solid satin borders are the most popular for the bags. It takes four strips of the ribbon, featherstitched together or put together with the crocheted rings, leaving a turnover at the top, where the ribbons are cut in points and finished with sunflower bows. The hangers are of the narrow ribbons, with a big sunflower in the center to conceal the nail upon which the bag is hung. They hold two pairs of corsets and keep them free from dust. The sunflower rosettes are the sachets. Garter bags to match are also among the new fads and are made like a large envelope, with a wide flap that fastens with a button and loop. They are hung with ribbon, finished with the rosettes, as the bags are.

A Helpful Gift.

Very smart to wear with the Irish lace turnover collars are the new buckle pins covered with Irish crochet lace. Any one who crochets can easily make a pin like the one illustrated. Such a gift will please the girl who is very fastidious about her neck dressing.

Some other helpful though humble gifts are going to appear on Christmas morning, the work of a mother of several business girls. She is making over stocks for her daughters, who have so much need of these articles. She has saved pieces of their shirt waists and their summer skirts and has in some cases embroidered them in simple designs or is making them up simply tailored. When neatly laundered they will afford a sense of luxury to the girls which few gifts could lend.

A Handy Gift.

An inexpensive gift for the woman who sews or embroiders is a book made of stiff cardboard backs, 4 by 10 inches, and covered with heavy silk or an art linen in dull colors.

Embroider across the upper face the word "Silk." Run this in a diagonal direction and put a little spray of flowers around it.

On the back cover work the recipient's monogram or her three initials in a corded outline.

Inside the covers are a dozen manila envelopes, arranged with the flap to the outer edge of the book, that are destined to hold as many colors of silk. The make and number of the silk are to be marked on the outside of the envelopes. Three holes are cut through the covers and also in the envelopes. Ribbon is run through these holes and tied at the back in small bows.

The book is fastened together with a cord or ribbon to match.

Pretty Workbag.

A pretty workbag is made just like a pocketbook and is of denim or lined silk. Within are compartments in which are the usual things found in such a bag. The ends are gusseted so that the articles are easy to get at, and, moreover, the capacity of the bag is thus increased.

The local campaign for the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals began Saturday in Boston. Forty subagents have been appointed throughout the state by the Boston Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis to have charge of the work in Massachusetts, the proceeds in each city going to the local work of tuberculosis prevention. The seals sell at one cent each. The co-operation which is being given by agencies all over Massachusetts is shown in a statement made by Seymour H. Stone, secretary of the Boston Association. Ninety-three Boston merchants and philanthropic organizations have agreed to sell the seals from now until Christmas and to return 100 per cent. to be used in the work of tuberculosis prevention.

Outside of Boston, the co-operation has been equally good. Seventy-one moving picture theatres will use colored slides of the seals, and the Boston Elevated Railroad has donated the use of the dash boards of its cars for Red Cross posters. Through the permission of the federal authorities we have been allowed to place the seals on sale in post office corridors with the consent of the local postmasters. Altogether the Massachusetts campaign promises to pass the high mark of a year ago when 1,116,680 seals were sold for which $11,166.80 was realized.

Every purchaser of a Red Cross Christmas seal may feel that he is lending a hand in the general work for the prevention of tuberculosis. The enormous proportions of the tuberculosis problem in Massachsuetts may be judged from the records of the Boston Consumptives' Hospital Dispensary which show about 6,500 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis existing in this city alone. If the disease is as common throughout the state, Massachusetts alone would have 35,000 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis. As a matter of fact Boston is too large a city to be taken as an index for the state, but basing conclusions on the ratio of deaths and cases, this state today has at least 25,000 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis."

SMALLPOX IS RAGING

Auburn Schools Will Close and All Pupils Be Vaccinated

Auburn, Me., Dec. 7.—On account of the smallpox epidemic raging in this city the public schools will not be reopened after the usual over Sunday holiday, and probably not before January.

This action was taken at the meeting of the Auburn school board last evening on recommendation of the board of health. Vaccination of all the pupils will be commenced today.

The cases now number over forty. According to the board of health, the several cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria recently discovered are more feared than the more numerous cases of smallpox.

DEATH CHAIR FOR FIVE

Murderers Sentenced Within a Month After Crime Is Committed

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 7.—The five men who descended on an isolated farmhouse near Croton lake, Nov. 9, and murdered Mrs. Mary Hall, the young wife of a superintendent of work on the New York aqueduct, were sentenced to death in the electric chair during the week of Jan. 15.

Within two days after the crime the five bandits were arrested and their trials began Nov. 27. In most of the cases the jury was out barely fifteen minutes.

GOES OVER TO FEDERAL JURY

Investigation of Dynamite Cases Is to Begin Today

BACKED BY THE PRESIDENT

Facts Were Laid Before Taft During Recent Visit to Pacific Coast—Immense Amount of Information Gathered by Detective Burns Becomes Available—McNamara Brothers and McManigal to Go Before Grand Jury

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 7.—President Taft, it has become known, is back of the federal investigation of the dynamiting cases brought so prominently before the public through the trial of the McNamara brothers.

When the president was in this city on his recent "swing around the circle," the case was laid before him. He was informed that the federal laws had been violated through a misuse of the mail, and by carrying dynamite on cars, thus jeopardizing the lives of passengers.

The federal grand jury convenes here today and it will take up the dynamiting cases where District Attorney Fredericks left off with the confessions and sentencing of the two McNamaras. The district attorney is through with the McNamaras, but it is expected that they will be called before the grand jury and an effort will made to induce them to tell the names of the men who backed them in their work of destruction.

District Attorney Fredericks has the bribery matter on his hands still, and he also wants to deal with a man named Schmidt and another named Caplan, who are believed to be in Europe and who were mixed up in the dynamiting of The Times building.

The immense ammount of information gathered by the distict attorney and the mayor of this city through the Burns detective agency will be turned over to the United States district attorney for use in the case of the federal government.

Detective William J. Burns is hard at work on the dynamiting cases for the government. A dispatch from Philadelphia says that he has begun an investigation there of the ramifications of the mation-wide dynamite plot.

It is now definitely known that Los Angeles and not Indianapolis will be the centre of the investigation at least for the present, and that startling developments may be expected within the next few weeks.

Among the reasons necessitating the investigation here, in the opinion of federal authorities, are:

The presence of Ortie McManigal, who, by his own assertion, was a participant in many dynamiting plots.

The presence of James B. McNamara, and his brother, John J. McNamara, pending their departure for San Quentin penitentiary, where they are sentenced to life and fifteen years' imprisonment respectively.

The amazing quantity and completeness of evidence gathered against the McNamaras which led their chief of counsel to seek eagerly for terms upon which his client might plead guilty.

McManigal's reminiscences, as already given out by him, include the transportation of dynamite from state to state and conspiracy to blow up various buildings in the country. He says he did many jobs of this sort, and enumerates them. What the McNamaras will tell if they appear is not so well known.

CALLS GOMPERS A MENACE

Burns Says Organized Labor Was Betrayed by Its Leader

Philadelphia, Dec. 7.—"Gompers is a fake and a menace to the country. I cannot say whether Gompers will be arrested or not, but if he is they should throw the key away. Gompers has throughout his whole career misrepresented organized labor, which taken as a whole is not in favor of violence. Labor was not deceived or betrayed by the McNamaras, but by Samuel Gompers.

"What I think of Gompers is not fit to print. He is a cur and he is just beginning to get some of his own medicine."

This vitriolic criticism of Samuel Gompers marked the visit to Philadelphia of William J. Burns, the detective who brought the McNamaras to justice in Los Angeles.

Burns is here to clear up five Philadelphia dynamiting cases and to arrest men who sent for Ortie McManigal to come to Philadelphia and dynamite a bridge.

Gompers Is Watched

Indianapolis, Dec. 7.—That the federal government has been watching closely the movements of Samuel Gompers was made known here last night by United States Attorney Miller.

Fur Importer Fined $5000

New York, Dec. 7.—Judge Holt imposed a fine of $5000 on Charles Weinschenker, who pleaded guilty to the undervaluation of imported furs. His firm recently made settlement of $38,000 to the government in civil cases.

WILL NOT REOPEN CASE

President Has Little Sympathy For Dismissed West Point Cadets

Washington, Dec. 7.—In spite of the efforts of five United States senators, President Taft declined to reconsider the cases of five cadets recently dismissed from West Point for drinking. The president said that when a cadet had been dismissed, it was not in the power of the executive to reopen the case.

He declared he would veto any legislation aimed to put them back in the military academy, as he held it to be subversive of discipline. Senators Swanson and Martin of Virginia, Bacon of Georgia and Fletcher and Bryan of Florida made the plea for the cadets.

TRUST MESSAGE NOT WHAT WAS EXPECTED

Interpretation of Oil Decision Is Subject to Criticism

Washington, Dec. 7.—On all sides is heard the criticism that Mr. Taft's interpretation of the oil decision in his message fails to interpret. It is also pointed out that the line between large combinations organized for legitimate purposes, doing business honestly but necessarily restraining trade, and those of an opposite character is not clearly drawn.

Some members of the Massachusetts delegation have drawn attention to the sentence which recommends supplemental legislation that "would describe and denounce methods of competition that are unfair," and argue that it is a concession to the demands of the La Follette bill introduced into the senate last August.

That bill defined and described what constitutes unreasonable restraint of trade and as it was understood that the administration was opposed to it, the president's suggestion is considered all the more remarkable.

PARDON FOR WIFE SLAYER

Released After Serving Thirteen Years of Life Sentence

Boston, Dec. 7.—Samuel R. Maxwell of Lowell, who has served thirteen years of a life sentence for the murder of his wife, was pardoned by the governor and council.

The papers in the case show that the murdered woman was of bad moral repute, and that her misbehavior brought about her untimely death. Maxwell pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The pardon was granted on the grounds of "good behavior and sufficient punishment."

On the eve of the trial in the federal courts at Buffalo of claims made by the Wrights that Curtiss has been guilty of infringing upon their principles, the patent office has allowed Curtiss patents upon the balancing mechanism which is being contested.

BRUIN'S BANQUET.

It Was Long Drawn Out and Only Whetted His Appetite.

THE FINISH WAS EXCITING.

After the Pork Course Gave Out a Dessert of Cold Lead Ended the Feast, and the Unwilling Host Vowed Never Again to Fool With a Bear.

A teamster in the employ of one of the big lumberies in the west had a laughable yet trying adventure with a bear while on his way from the woods with a load of bark. As he emerged from the woods with his team he stopped to give the mules a breathing spell and to eat his dinner, which he carried in a tin bucket. He had scarcely opened his bucket and begun to eat when a bear came out of the woods on one side of the road, only two or three rods in the rear of the wagon. Bruin sauntered along, paying no attention to the team, but the teamster, desirous of seeing what the bear would do, threw a bit of salt pork in his way. The bear stopped, smelled at the pork and gulped it down greedily.

Then the animal, noting the source of the morsel, came toward the wagon and rose on his haunches as if to say that another bit of pork would prove acceptable.

The teamster laughed and tossed out a second piece, which bruin devoured, and then he posed again. But the teamster wanted the rest of his dinner himself and paid no attention to the shaggy intruder. The beggar, seeing that the teamster was no longer aware of his presence, snorted sharply two or three times and walked back and forth across the road as if reconnoitering the situation. Presently he growled, but the teamster, thinking that the beast would go away if he got nothing further, continued his meal.

The bear ventured near and finally climbed up the load of bark at the hind end of the wagon. The man was unpleasantly surprised at this movement of bruin's, as he was wholly unarmed.

Accordingly he threw a bit of pork into the road, at the same time yelling to the bear to direct its attention to the meat. The bear dropped down and went and picked it up, but as soon as it was swallowed and there was no more forthcoming he made another charge upon the wagon.

The teamster started the mules onward, but knew that he could not hope to escape with his heavy load of bark. An idea struck him. He would coax the bear on by feeding the lunch to him until they should come to a friend's house a mile or two along the road. Then he would get a gun and shoot the old fellow.

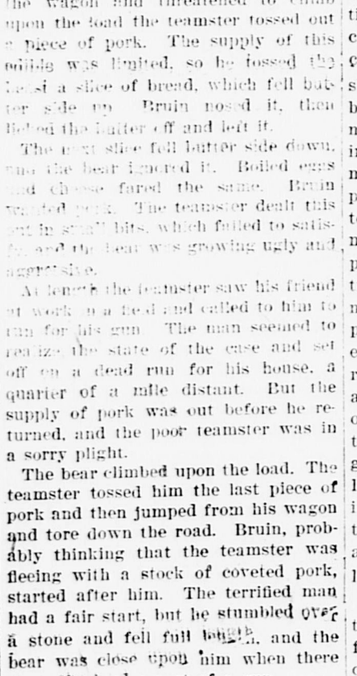
The teamster sat on the bark, facing backward, his big dinner bucket at hand. When the bear came up with the wagon and threatened to climb upon the load the teamster tossed out a piece of pork. The supply of this edible was limited, so he tossed the bear a slice of bread, which fell butter side up. Bruin nosed it, then licked the butter off and left it.

The next slice fell butter side down, and the bear ignored it. Boiled eggs and cheese fared the same. Bruin wanted pork. The teamster dealt this out in small bits, which failed to satisfy, and the bear was growing ugly and aggressive.

At length the teamster saw his friend at work in a field and called to him to run for his gun. The man seemed to realize the state of the case and set off on a dead run for his house, a quarter of a mile distant. But the supply of pork was out before he returned, and the poor teamster was in a sorry plight.

The bear climbed upon the load. The teamster tossed him the last piece of pork and then jumped from his wagon and tore down the road. Bruin, probably thinking that the teamster was fleeing with a stock of coveted pork, started after him. The terrified man had a fair start, but he stumbled over a stone and fell full length, and the bear was close upon him when there came the loud report of a gun.

The friend had come at last. The teamster rose and looked round. There lay his late pursuer in the road, dead. The teamster declared that never again would he fool with a bear.—Harper's Weekly.



METROPOLITAN PLAN COMMISSION.

The Metropolitan Plan Commission has been appointed to report as to the feasibility of a plan for the metropolitan district, and to draft legislation, if it seems fit, that shall be applicable to the making of such a plan. This commission goes out of existence Jan. 1.

By correspondence, conference and study, the Commission has arrived at certain general conclusions upon which it will appreciate your criticism and advice.

They are as follows:

1. There should be a central authority planning the development of the whole district.

2. The local autonomy of the various municipalities should not be infringed upon.

3. The state and the district should contribute together with the local municipality towards the cost of improvements of metropolitan character, and, furthermore, the state should loan its credit for such works against repayment through annual assessments upon the cities and towns of the district.

The thirty-eight cities and towns comprising the Metropolitan Parks District are specified as the Metroplitan District in the resolve creating the present commission.

There is need of great radial highways to handle the business of Boston. We need circumferential thoroughfares to make the traffic ways between the cities and towns of the district as efficient for business purposes as the boulevard system is for pleasure vehicles. Some official body which will advise as to the reservation of public squares, small parks and playgrounds and as to the general street treatment in every city and town of the district, is probably needed. As it is now, the local authorities to a large extent are compelled to obtain advice in these matters from a hired expert.

In the district there are certain blighted areas which might be rehabilitated by opening up new streets running through to more favored localities, or by many other means which would suggest themselves to a body which should give this thing careful study.

It would seem, therefore, that some central authority—call it, perhaps, a Metropolitan Planning Board—should be permanently constituted, that this board should first make a survey of the metropolitan district, together with a study of the population, of the commerce and industry of each locality, and the existing and future possibilities within the district. With this as a basis, and after consultation with the officials of the various communities interested, a series of comprehensive general plans which should embody the means and possibilities of development might be made. The study of commerce and industry and the recognition of the magnificent equipment of the metropolitan district with its libraries, technical schools and art museums might well lay the foundations of the plans which would bring to this district the manufacture of those commodities whose chief value is in applied art and applied science, and the export of which to this country is enriching Germany and France. Such a study might suggest plans for coordinating and extending transportation facilities, the location of playgrounds, reservation of lands for public buildings, the unification of building laws, the prevention of congestion, the reduction of fire hazards, and better methods of financing public improvements.

Such a board might be empowered to examine and report upon all plans for improvements of metropolitan character contemplated by any existing public authority. The proposed board might have the power to put before any local government the question of the execution of any metropolitan improvement that might lie within its borders. Unless such a local government should vote to undertake the improvement, nothing would be done and no money would be spent. If the local government votes in favor of such an improvement, it would be executed not by the proposed board but by the local government itself according to the plans of the board. To facilitate construction, it is proposed that the state shall finance the work, that the city or town in which the improvement may lie shall pay only 65 per cent. of the total cost, the remaining cities and towns paying 25 per cent. This 25 per cent. should be payable according to an apportionment by a special tribunal appointed by the Supreme Court, and the apportionment should be on the basis of the benefits, if any, to each city and town affected by the improvement, taking into account also its population and valuation. Finally, the state, which receives so large a proportion of its revenue from the metropolitan district, and is deeply interested in its growth and the increase of its taxable property, should pay a small proportion of the cost of metropolitan improvements, say 10 per cent. The above proportions would hold only for what the board might designate as ordinary metropolitan improvements. In some cases it might not be just for the locality in which the improvement is situated to pay as much as 65 per cent., in which case the tribunal appointed by the Supreme Court would have the power to diminish this 65 per cent. to such extent as in its judgment would be fair and just.

It has also been suggested that the Commission should consider any matter important to the development of the metropolitan district, which might be proposed by any of the communities, investigate it, report and publish its findings with recommendations to the legislature.

The Commission has been advised that a board of five members, three, including the chairman, appointed by the Governor, as representing the district, and two by the Mayor of Boston, might fairly represent the proportional benefits as between the suburban municipalities and the central city.

The theory of these suggestions is to enable the cities and towns of the district to make certain much needed improvements earlier and more easily than they now can.

Nothing has been finally settled in regard to a proposed bill, but the Commission is making every effort to present a measure which shall be to the best advantage of the cities and towns of the district.

Criticism of these proposals and alternative suggestions which might be incorporated in legislation, are absolutely essential if the proposed measure is to be of real value.

TWELVE TALESMEN PASSED

Speedy Work at Opening of Trial of Chicago Beef Packers

Chicago, Dec. 7.—After eight years' deviation in the way of grand juries and special pleas, the cases of ten Chicago meat packers, indicted for alleged violation of the criminal provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law, have reached trial.

Indications are that the early stages of the trial at least will be rapid, for the government's examination of the first panel of jurymen was brief.

The twelve talesmen who were passed by the government were locked up last night, and the rest of the venire was ordered to appear in court today. None will be questioned by the defense until at least four have been finally accepted by the government.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

OPEN FOR HONEYMOONERS.

The million honeymooners and tourists who visit Niagara Falls next season will find a spectacle second in interest only to the world-famed cataract itself. One of the big American power companies, which is transforming water power into electricity in this city, has decided to throw its power house open to the public free of charge.

The suggestion originated with the joint commission appointed by the people of Niagara Falls to assure the country that the scenic grandeur of the Falls has not been impaired, and will not be impaired, by the conversion of part of excess water into electricity. The quantity that can be used is limited by international treaty and by law to such a small fraction of the total flow that the difference in volume, at the crest of the Falls, is not visible to the eye or to the camera. The Canadian and New York State governments have cooperated with the power companies in beautifying the grounds near the Falls and in designing buildings that look more like public libraries or museums than power houses.

Already the power company has begun to make provisions for guests by building a visitors' gallery from which sightseers will be able to see, without being exposed to dangers from wires and whirling machinery, the wonders of harnessing a cataract.

Guides will be on hand to explain the working of whirring turbines and generators—how the force created by falling water is transformed into electric power that is sent 160 miles, into New York State, Canada and Ohio, through thin wires, to turn the wheels of factories, to run trolley cars, and to light homes and offices and miles of city streets.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Chicago packers are making strenuous efforts to keep from being canned.

Things have reached the point in China where probably the Manchus are going around explaining that they've always been progressives at heart.

A Michigan man is on trial charged with buying a bank without any money. We can't see where it was anybody's business if the bank owner wanted to sell that way.

Gov. Hoke Smith of Ga., has signed his own credentials for the Senate has brought himself to Washington, and will have the pleasure of listening to himself make a speech.

"Charlie" will be a name with which to conjure in Ward Five during the coming political year. All three of the Councilmen-elect from the Ward begin their names in this fashion: Charles W. Bailey, Charles L. Gilliatt, Charles E. Barker.

Next year is presidential year, and the country will demand progress from whoever is elected but, any candidate who promises an indiscriminate assault on business and industry will receive a deserved "frost" from the voters. The business world is now suffering from a lack of rest and tranquility. It needs a little peace.

If you happened to be near the corner of Hancock and Granite streets, Wednesday afternoon, you had the opportunity of seeing a mighty pretty maneuver of a part of the city's fire department. The auto chemical made a beautiful turn at high speed, followed by the steamer and hook and ladder, their steeds handled with dexterity. It was an inspiring sight and is surely worthy of mention.

VOTING AT WOLLASTON.

Voting facilities at Wollaston are apparently not what they should be and a letter published today in our news columns seems to be the consensus of opinion in that locality. Campaign managers and others who are desirous of polling a large vote onelection day, can not expect to do so if accommodations are such that a person is compelled to vote in barn like structures under distressing conditions.

We learn that the voters generally, are up in arms over the affair and think it would be advisable to have the affair adjusted before another election rolls around.

Portable voting booths are inexpensive, can be easily handled and seem to fill the bill wherever used. It would seem they are just about what's needed at Wollaston.

THE ONLY FARMER IN SENATE.

Some of us were not a little surprised the other day to learn, through a resolution of the National Grange, that Obadiah Gardner of Maine is the only practical farmer in the United States Senate.

Here is a problem for the attention of our sociologists. There is a sprinkling of farmers in the lower branch of most state legislatures, but they are largely weeded out of the State Senates. They are scarce indeed as governors and congressmen.

And yet when Cincinnatus was made consul of ancient Rome—later dictator, he was found ploughing on his farm. And George Washington, one of the greatest constructive politicians of all ages, farmed the estate of Mount Vernon.

There is no class of people that is better informed, or that has a keener wit to see the shams of life. Why do we exclude the man with the hoe from our legislative halls?

The hasty thinker may say it is because the farmer wears a hat that has grown rusty under the suns of the cornfield, or trousers that show the stain of good honest dirt.

That theory we hold to be incorrect. Nine politicians out of ten need to have their wives brush their coats mornings, horny hands have always been qualifications for office, and nothing is more fatal to a candidate than appearing in a "dress suit" and plug hat.

The trouble with the farmer is that he is too contrary minded to make up to the shabby class of unsuccessfuls who do the dirtier work of politics, and too stubborn to do the bidding of the oily boss who in some dusky ante chamber does the real legislating, while his obedient servants exemplify the work under the stately pillars of the House. Instead of seeing that the heeler got the fat clerkship for which he had demonstrated his fitness by grindnig out properly tagged nominations, he would be much more likely to tell him that applicants for charity should apply to the authorities supplying pauper relief.

All which goes to show that the requirements of statesmanship have changed since the days of Cincinnatus, or even George Washington.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL OF MR. CARRIGAN

The funeral of Thomas F. Carrigan, for many years a widely known and highly respected resident of this city, took place this morning from his late home, 112 South Walnut street. A high mass of requiem, which was attended by a large number of relatives and friends was celebrated at nine o'clock, with Rev. John J. Casey officiating.

The musical portion of the requiem mass was the gregorian chant, furnished under the direction of John Mahan, organist. The "De Profundis" was rendered by Mrs. Mary Burns King, while Miss Angela McCarthy sang the "Pie Jesu," and Dennis Sweeney, the "Libera."

The deceased was popular in local circles, and was especially known in the labor ranks, being president of local 143 of the Boot and Shoemakers' Union. The late Mr. Carrigan was a long time employee of the Willilams and Kneeland Shoe Company.

A little more than a month ago, Mr. Carrigan's wife passed away, and his sudden death caused great bereavement to the members of the family, and others to whom he had endeared himself. He is survived by four sons and a daughter, two of whom, Mark E. and Robert P. are well known and favorably known in local circles.

Interment was at the family lot in St. Ann's Cemetery in Avon. Edwin D. Barrett was in charge of the funeral services.

BOARD OF TRADE

ent sections. The powers of the commission in other words would be called into effect, wherever state improvement in the same section was concerned.

The majority of the members present seemed at a loss to understand the direct interest of the movement, and a number feared that it was a step to a Greater Boston annexation, but Mr. Stone dispelled this opinion by stating that he was informed by the commission that such was not the case.

Councilmen Edward J. Sandberg and Charles W. Ericson, also ex-Mayor John O. Hall and William H. Teasdale, asked several questions concerning the plan and gave their views on certain phases of it.

It was finally voted to have the secretary of the Board of Trade communicate with the commission in an endeavor to have one of its members appear before the members and explaint the matter in Detail.

A communication was received from Elmer L. Curtis, accepting the invitation of the association to address the members on "Civil Service." A communication was read from the Citizens' Gas Light Company, asking that the Board, in its petition to the city council, request the type of incandescent lights that are to be seen in front of the company's office on Granite street. The council petition calls for lights in the vicinity of Woolworth's store.

Communications dealing with the 1915 World's exposition and the tariff on lemons were placed on the table. The reports of the different standing committees were presented and approved.

John J. Gallagher and Phillip Sullivan were admitted to membership and an invitation to join was sent by the secretary to James E. Wall. Refreshments were served and a general heart to heart talk was in order after the meeting, with the mayor-elect coming in for a shower of congratulations Cigars were distributed in abundance and the remainder of the evening was most enjoyably spent.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wollaston, Mass. Dec. 6, 1911.
Editor Ledger:

IS IT RIGHT

To ask the voters of Ward 5 to assemble on Election Day in a place that cannot be heated?

IS IT SANITARY

To require those who wish to cast their ballots in this ward to go to a place that is absolutely filthy; where pans have been placed around the floor to catch the drippings from the horses in the stable above and where citizen's good clothes have been soiled by the filthy droppings?

IS IT HONEST

To ask the Ward officers and police of two precincts to remain from 12 to 15 hours in a filthy hole under a stable where there is no ventilation, no provision for adequate heating and where it is always damp and disagreeable?

Quincy is poor but not yet a pauper.—She needs nearly everything but she has not yet joined the bread line. At the polls in Ward 5 when His Honor Mayor Shea was first elected he stated "Charlie, if I am Mayor you will never again vote in such a ——— place as this. He frankly afterwards admitted that he could not remedy the conditions but that "it was up to the Council."

Twenty-five years ago I was hissed by an entire Town meeting for the statement that "the citizens of Quincy are individually bright but collectively stupid." Notwithstanding the natural hisses at the time the fact is as true today as it was then.

Wake up City Council. Give Ward 5 a square deal.

More than twenty-five per cent of the polls of Ward 5 are not registered. From 25 to 35 per cent of the registered voters of this ward stay away from the polls.

A better place should be selected or the voters should be provided with rain coats or umbrellas. For many years I was Warden. I am not guessing, I know.

Charles R. Sherman.

SPEAKS ABOUT TRIP TO COAST

Interesting Lecture At Monthly Social of Wollaston Church

BY MRS. J. P. PERRY

At the monthly social of the Wollaston Baptist church Wednesday evening Mrs. J. P. Perry gave an interesting illustrated lecture on her trip to the Pacific coast.

Starting at the South Station the speaker took her audience through New York and Washington to the sunny South where views of Spellman Seminary near Atlanta and the French and American quarters of New Orleans were given.

Tropical fruits, the markets, cotton fields and sugar cane were shown and after a trip across the Texas plains those present arrived at Los Angeles. Here the natural scenery and foliage were described as well as the oil well and ostrich and alligator farms.

Descriptions of other Pacific coast cities were given including San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, after which the journey home was made through Salt Lake city, Denver, Chicago and Buffalo.

The social was held by the Ladies' Social and Benevolent society and following the lecture refreshments were served by a committee consisting of:

Miss Charlotte Scarborough, Miss Etta Holmes, Mrs. E. L. Durgin, Mrs. George Critchley, Mrs. I. C. Dresser, Mrs. J. Arthur Jewell, Mrs. Henry Grass, Mrs. Boone, Mrs. W. R. Dimmock, Mrs. Coolidge, Mrs. Louis S. Cleaves, Mrs. Rideout, Miss Annie B. McCarty, Miss Lulu Kingsley, Miss May Critchley, Revere Dresser and Alden Hatfield.

OFFICERS ELECTED

For Coming Year By Quincy Lodge Order of Moose

"HOWDY PAPS" PROSPEROUS

The members of Quincy lodge, No. 413 Loyal Order of Moose, held forth in large numbers in Greenleaf hall, their new quarters, Wednesday evening. The meeting was called for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

The following officers were elected: Dictator, Albert J. Williams; Prelate, Charles E. White; Treasurer, John E. Brown; Sargeant-at-arms, Chester Wright; Inner Guard, Richard W. Smith; outer Guard Louis Stone and Trustees, Nelson Ackerson, Charles L. Bean and David L. Driscoll. There were no choices for vice-dictator and secretary, because of the fact that none of the contestants for these respective positions received a majority vote. The election for these positions will take place at the next meeting.

Drs. John H. Ash and John T. Reynolds were chosen the physicians for the local order. With this election, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg assumes the title of senior past grand dictator and Leon C. Claflin becomes the junior past grand dictator.

Forty applicants were admitted at the meeting, and among others who were admitted to membership was Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone.

The first anniversary social and dance takes place this evening and besides the Mayor-elect, the occasion will be graced by the presence of many prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity.

Refreshments brought the election meeting to a close and an orchestra of three pieces entertained the members. It is expected that Apha hall will be taxed to its utmost this evening.

PROGRESSIVE HOUSE TO HOUSE WHIST PARTY

A progressive house to house whist and bridge party was held by the members of the Wollaston Unitarian Church Helpers Wednesday evening. The play started at the home of Mrs. William E. Rowe of Winthrop avenue and progressed through several neighboring homes.

The hostesses were: Mrs. Wm. E. Rowe, Mrs. Henry McLean, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. White, Mrs. E. J. Cummings, Mrs. Marcus Chase and Mrs. Arthur B. Hillman.

Following the whist the players again gathered at the home of Mrs. Rowe where refreshments were served and piano solos by Mrs. E. Tyler Brigham were enjoyed.

The committee in charge included: Mrs. Charles E. Barker, Mrs. G. Ernest Carr, Mrs. Axel Nelson, Mrs. Paul E. Brodbeck, Mrs. Richard D. Jacobs and Mrs. Ralph W. Oldham.

VETERINARY SURGEON.

Dr. J. H. Gardner, Jr., has opened an office for the practice of his profession at 21 South Central avenue, Wollaston. Dr. Gardner's experience has been extended and incldues three years' service with the United States government.

ATTENDANCE GOOD AT WEEKLY WHIST

There was the usual good attendance at the weekly whist tournament, under the auspices of the Granite City club, Wednesday evening. Twenty-five hands were played by the ten tables, after which refreshments were served. The top scores were secured by Wellington W. Mitchell and James H. Lalley. Mr. Mitchell had 75 per cent and Mr. Lalley 69.7 per cent.

Says a Boston exchange:— It is becoming more apparent daily that hockey is going to play a far more important part this winter, weather permitting, than ever before in the school ranks. The latest school to become interested, according to report, is Quincy High. While the school is hardly likely to attempt any games with other schools, unless possibly late in the season, there are to be interclass contests. The Quincy High School is fortunate in having a fair-sized pond within a few rods of the school building and there is no reason why, in time, it should not turn out teams capable of coping with the other high schools of the Greater Boston District.

Q. If man was not made in the image of God, as regards bodily form, how do you explain Exodus xxxiii, 18-23, also the appearance of angels in human form and the statement that Christ ascended into heaven in this form and shall appear in like manner at His second coming?—Acts i, 11. (J. A. W.)

Answer.—Noting the expressions contained in Exodus xxxiii, 18-23, the "face," the "hand," and "the back parts" of the Lord, we understand these to be terms used, not in the actual sense, but merely so stated that our minds might grasp the main thoughts of the narrative describing the events that occurred. How else could those events have been described? Just as it is impossible for any human being to create a blade of grass or a pebble, so it is impossible for the human mind to conceive of or to create a mental image or conception of something that is not based upon things already seen and known. If we attempt to picture to ourselves the appearance of a spirit being we imagine something with wings, and arms and face, etc. Try to picture a being that is without something that we have already seen and the mind becomes a blank. The Bible cannot rightly be understood without recognizing these facts. The angels, as spirit beings, are naturally invisible to mortal sight and it is only as they assume the human form that they become visible to man. Note the following Scriptures in confirmation of this:—Psalm xxxiv, 7; Hebrews i, 14; II Kings vi, 15-17; Genesis xviii, 1, 2. Spirit beings in their actual state are exceedingly glorious.—Daniel x, 6, 10, 15, 17; Acts xxvi, 13-15. The statement in Acts i, 11, refers to the manner of our Lord's ascension into heaven rather than to His appearance. As He ascended in a quiet, unostentatious manner, known only to those who were His immediate followers, so He would come again.—"as a thief in the night."

WILLARD SCHOOL.

A spelling league has been formed consisting of two teams from the eighth grades and two teams from the seventh grades. These teams are composed in each case of the twenty pupils who received the highest rank in spelling for the preceding week, the pupil leading each class acting as captain. Three hundred selected words form the basis for the drill. The first contest will take place Friday of this week, when grade eight, one, will meet grade seven, one, and grade eight, two will compete with grade seven, two.

The contests promise to stimulate the classes to their highest efforts. Such contests are more effective than the spelling bee, or the spell-down. They require all pupils taking part to write all the words given, and in addition al words which have actually been misspelled. After this is done, the papers are collected and the words spelled orally. The papers are than marked and the teachers report as follows:

1. Number of pupils enrolled.
2. Number taking part in contest.
3. The total number of words misspelled in the oral contest.
4. The total number of words misspelled in the written contest.
5. The total number of errors in both.
6. The average number of errors per pupil taking part.
7. The number of pupils making no errors.

The team making the fewest errors wins.

And Auto Chemical Speeds To Fire In Record Time

BLAZE QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED

The alarm from Box 24 at 3.48 Wednesday afternoon, called the department to a slight fire on the roof of a house off Farrell street, occupied by Mr. Swanson. The fire started from sparks from a near-by rubbish fire, alighting on the roof. When the alarm sounded, there was quite a crowd that gathered on the corner of Hancock and Granite street to see the fire apparatus pass, and it proved to be quite a spectacular show. First came the auto chemical with Jimmie Dillon at the wheel and Chief Williams riding on behind. The auto came down Hancock street at great speed, its siren whistle sounding loudly. There was no let up in speed as it rounded the corner into Granite street and the auto took the steep hill on Whitwell street on what is known as high speed gear, at thirty miles an hour. It is hardly necessary to say that the auto arrived on the scene and had a chemical stream on the roof before the other apparatus arrived. This only shows what the machine can do. The loss will not exceed a few shingles, less than $2.

HINGHAM BRIDGE TRUSTEES HOLD MEETING

A meeting of the trustees of the Hingham bridge was held in the office of Mayor Shea Tuesday afternoon, and some routine business transacted. The trustees find themselves in a peculiar position in regard to the rebuilding of the Hingham bridge, commonly known as the Weymouth Back River bridge. This is the bridge which the War Department ordered the trustees to rebuild with a fifty foot draw.

The work should have been done sometime ago, but an extension of time was obtained. Then Congress was applied to for an appropriation, and the bill passed both houses but became pigeon-holed somewhere and has never since come to light.

The next step was to apply to the state legislature and at the last session an appropriation of $100,000 was asked. Some of the wise legislators thought this too much and the amount was cut to $80,000 to be expended by a special commission to consist of the Harbor and Land Commissioners and the trustees.

The Harbor and Land Commissioners had a plan made, on which an estimate was obtained. This estimate was that the cost would be $105,000. As the commission had but $80,000, it was decided as useless to go ahead with the work an dthat the only thing to do, was to go to the next legislature for an additional appropriation of $25,000.

In the meantime, the work is being held up. Now comes the rub. The War Department does not recognize the Harbor and Land Commissioners in the matter but the bridge trustees and it has been frequently communicating with them regarding the matter. Recent letters have been somewhat of a threatening nature. That is, they say that if the draw is not completed by a certain time, the trustees will be liable to a fine of $5,000 a month for every month that it is delayed.

That is the situation today and the trustees are in doubt just what to do. Rather than be subject to a fine of $5,000 a month, they would prefer to go to the bridge and cut away a part of the present structure. That is enough to make a fifty foot draw and then let the think rest until the legislature makes an additional appropriation.

Should they do this, it means that the bridge will be impassable for several months, so that taking all in all the situation is a peculiar one.

A woman jury in California refused to obey the Judge's instructions. They had evidently been more accustomed to giving than receiving instructions.

BATES TEAM WINS.

By exhibiting great form in the second and third strings, the team captained by Bates was enabled to emerge with a close victory from Dell's five, in the bowling match of the Makaria league, rolled off last evening at the Granite street alleys. Bates himself is largely responsible for the win, for on his third string, he attained the 109 mark for a single string, thereby taking the lead in this respect.

Dell and Bates were tied for the highest sum total, each having 293 to his credit for the three strings. Jones and Burns also played well.

The summary:

DELL'S.
Dell	104	94	95	293
Burns	98	85	89	272
Richards	65	74	83	222
Skevakis	63	78	96	237
Total	330	331	363	1014
BATES'
Ruch	72	73	95	240
Bates	91	93	109	293
Wilson	80	80	79	239
Jones	77	88	89	255
Total	320	335	372	1027

Highest single string made by Bates 109. Highest total made by Dell and Bates 293.

IT MUST BE TRUE

Quincy Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Quincy, but scores of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Cox's Drug Store. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred per cent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On August 9, 1911 Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

FATE BRINGS YUAN REVENGE

Premier Once Dismissed In Disgrace by Prince Chun

THE LATTER NOW ABDICATES

Driving From Throne of Father of Emperor, Who Acted as Regent, Means Breaking Up of Manchu Dynasty—Many Demands of Rebels May Be Granted—Summary of Events Which Have Disturbed China

London, Dec. 7.—The whirligig of time brings about its compensations, not to say its revenge. A few years ago Prince Chun, upon becoming regent of China during the minority of his son, dismissed in disgrace Yuan Shi Kai, by whose treachery his brother, Emperor Kwang-Su, was swept aside and virtually imprisoned by the old empress dowager.

Yesterday Prince Chun was forced to abdicate and was driven into virtual exile, and Yuan is supreme in China, or, rather, is nominally in power. Prince Chun's place as guardian of the throne is taken jointly by Shih Hsu, a Manchu prince, and former president of the national assembly, and Hsu Shih Chang, vice president of the privy council. Both the new guardians of the throne were formerly grand councillors.

The administration remains for the present in the hands of Premier Yuan Shi Kai, while the empress dowager and the emperor continue to hold audiences and carry out ceremonial functions.

With the abdication of Chun the actual break-up of the Manchu dynasty begins. Whatever the capabilities of the Chinese to self-government, whether it will mean chaos or peace, the fact remains that the abdication of Prince Chun marks the actual passing of the old order in China.

The present movement in China is of long growth, though its manifestations to the western world are of comparative recent date.

One of the "incidents" of this reform movement and one which added impetus, had its origin in the promise of the old empress dowager, made just before her death in 1908, to grant constitutional reform. Nothing was done to carry out this promise until May 8 of this year, when an imperial edict abolished the existing grand council and consented to the election of a constitutional cabinet. A privy council was created the same day, and a cabinet was formed on May 9.

Prince Ching, who was the first premier, after a short time in office, felt himself unable to cope with the revolutionary movement against Manchu rule and resigned at the end of October. In the meantime, however, the revolutionists declared their intention of proclaiming a republic and planned to elect Sun Yet Sen as president.

In order to prevent an extension of the movement the throne, on Oct. 30, acceded to the repeated demand of the assembly for a complete constitutional government. Yuan Shi Kai became premier on Nov. 15 and formed a cabinet, which he has since found difficulty in keeping together. The success of the revolutionaries at Nanking and other places caused him to pursue a vacillating policy, sometimes leaning toward the throne and sometimes toward the revolutionaries.

It is assumed in some quarters that he will now attempt to attain the regency, and in that position will grant many of the demands made by the rebels.

CRASH AT DEVIL'S BEND

Three Trains Collide, Killing Six Men and Twenty Valuable Horses

Pittsburg, Dec. 7.—Six men were killed and five injured in a triple wreck of two freights and a fast express train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Devil's Bend, twenty-five miles east of here.

One freight became stalled and a second crashed into it. Before warning could be given the express train, carrying nothing but express business, and on which twenty valuable horses were being transported, smashed into the freight wreckage.

It is estimated that the total value of the horses killed was between $50,000 and $60,000.

NO MILEAGE MONEY LEFT

Congressmen Make a Discovery Which Disappoints Them

Washington, Dec. 7.—Scores of congressmen who applied to the sergeant-at-arms of the house for their mileage were turned away empty handed and when they appealed to the appropriations committee for information they were informed that they could not "eat their cake and save it, too."

All the appropriation for mileage, which averages about $140,000 for a session, was exhausted at the summer special session of congress. A deficiency bill now will have to be passed before any mileage is obtainable.

HOUSEHOLD LETTER.

Suggestions For Up-to-date Gifts For Brides.

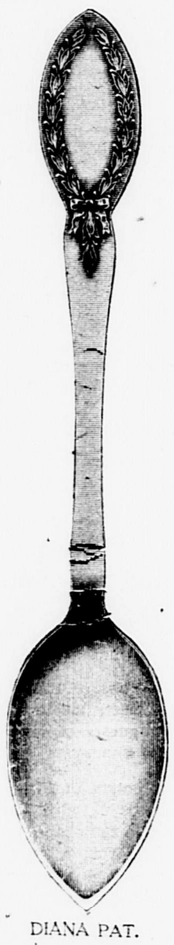
At this season so many demands are made upon ones resources for wedding gifts and others, that it takes careful thought and planning to send something pretty and acceptable, without risking the harrowing duplications that so often spoil a present.

THE WEDDING CHEST

The modern girl takes as much pride in her well stocked wedding chest as in her personal outfit, and it is becoming increasingly the custom to give even the little school girl matching sets of spoons and other pieces that will add to the furnishing of her bridal chest some day. There is a quaint old timey flavor about this custom that harks back to older lands, where a girl's dowry is provided from the time of her birth. The whole world of womankind is alike in the pride felt in substantial and handsome belongings for the home.

EMBROIDERED LINENS.

Embroidered linens for table and household use are always prized for this outfit and cross stitch patterns are as much in vogue for towels here as they have always been abroad. For doilies, centres an carving cloths, Madeira open work is most popular but one sees a good deal of heavier solid designs while the amount of handsome lace used with such pieces is limited only by the length of the purse strings.



DIANA PAT.
Orange Spoon

"THE DIANA PATTERN."

Among the new designs in silver nothing is daintier than the wreath pattern shown in the illustration. This is called "Diana" after the Greek Goddess of Hunting, and is made up with a soft gray finish, so perfectly imitating the style and appearance of the most expensive sterling ware that it deceives even a jeweler, nor does the mark "Alvin Patent" show that the ware is plate, since the same concern makes sterling pieces as well as fine plate.

THE WRAPPING OF GIFTS.

Half the effect of a gift is lost if it is not properly wrapped and tied. Silverware placed in a satin lined case appears especially creditale to the giver and attractive to the recipient. There are no end of pretty separate pieces to be had in matching pattern, so that any desired amount may be invested. If only intimate friends and relatives would consult together before selecting their gifts, girls would receive matching pieces instead of a hodgepodge of patterns, also exasperating duplicates would be avoided. Where silver is to be stored it should be perfectly clean and dry, and enclosed in bags of canton flannel, then it needs only a brisk rubbing to be ready for use at short notice.

BLUE AND WHITE.

Blue and white designs are standard favorites, and the old "Union" pattern can scarcely be improved upon. India ware with its quaint pagodas and bridges in the same color is another popular choice. White with a touch of gold is always elegant if the china and gilt are of first quality. Cheap gift is an abomination and wears off quickly.

Crystal and Colonial glass is rather more favored than cut glass this season.

HUSBAND IS FORGIVING

Mooshian Will Stick to His Wife, Who Is Charged With Murder

Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 7.—Justification is to be the defense of Mrs. Emma Mooshian, who shot and killed Simon Chiligerian in the big factory of Hilliard & Tabor in full view of the 200 operatives in the stitching room. Mrs. Mooshian, calm and with dry eyes, was arraigned in the district court, but the case was continued for a week.

The accused woman charged that her victim caused the ruin of her life and home, estrangement from her husband, and abandoned her.

Last July, Mrs. Mooshian ran away from her husband and went to New York with Chiligerian. Learning of her trouble, her husband returned to her and engaged counsel to defend his wife. He declares that he will stick by her and fight for her.

The woman is now confined in the county jail in Lawrence, having been denied bail.

TO FORCE HOME RULE

Asquith Says He Will Use All Means For Passage by Parliament

London, Dec. 7.—Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons that the government would use all the constitutional means at its disposal to pass a home rule bill for Ireland during the lifetime of the present parliament.

He declared this in reply to a question from William O'Brien, member for Cork city, who expressed concern at a recent report that Asquith was trying to get the house of lords to throw out the home rule bill when it reaches the upper house.

The premier, by this announcement, means that he undertakes to force the home rule bill through three consecutive sessions if necessary, thus making it become effective in spite of the opposition of the peers.

WILL NOT RUN AGAIN FOR VICE PRESIDENT

Sherman and the President Disagree on Tariff Question

Washington, Dec. 7.—Vice President Sherman does not expect and does not want to be a candidate for re-election with President Taft. This fact is becoming known among Sherman's intimates in Washington and is the most interesting gossip of the inner circles.

Mr. Sherman's decision is attributed to his unwillingness to run on a low tariff platform, and it is taken for granted that the president will insist on one. Sherman always has been a high priest of standpatters and since his election to the vice presidency has not disguised his dislike for the low tariff movement in his party.

It is felt that the differences between the president and the vice president on the tariff are irreconcilable and that Sherman's Washington career will terminate March 4, 1913.

"SLAVERY" IN BEET FIELDS

Back-Breaking Work by People Recruited From City Slums

Washington, Dec. 7.—James Bodkin of Meade, Col., told the co-called "sugar trust" investigating committee of the house that city derelicts, recruited from the slums, were kept practically in a state of bondage in the sugar beet fields of Colorado.

Bodkin described a system of contract labor in the Colorado fields and recounted the hardships which he charged were inflicted on working people recruited by the Great Western Sugar company. He said that a man, his wife and several children, ranging from 8 years upward, would put in from ten to sixteen hours a day at "back-breaking work" which an American would scorn to do.

FIVE-MASTER ABANDONED

Crew of Nathaniel T. Palmer Taken Care of by Steamer

Baltimore, Dec. 7.—Captain Haskell and crew of eleven men of the shipwrecked five-masted schooner Nathaniel T. Palmer were brought here by the steamer Lord Ormonde. The schooner was abandoned several days ago, about 100 miles east of Bermuda.

Anxiety for the safety of the Palmer had been expressed. She sailed from Portland, Me., on Nov. 16, for Norfolk, to load coal, and three days later was spoken southwest of Nantucket lightship. The Palmer was owned at Portland.

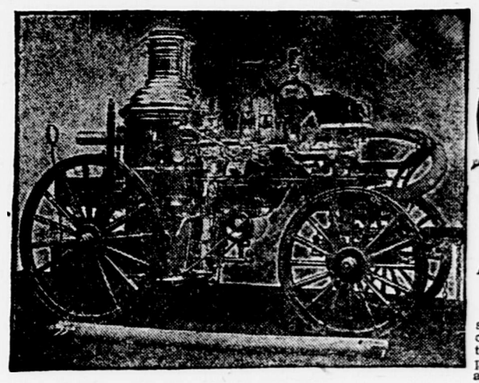
A Fire Fighter's Astounding Story
OF THE UNPARALLELED MERITS OF "BLOODINE"



ENGINE WHICH MR. CLAZIER RUNS.

HARRY A. GLAZIER

A Prominent Fireman of Malden, Mass., writes:

Mar. 28th, 1904.

Last winter I had a severe cold and it settled on my Kidneys, causing the most excruciating pain almost every time I attempted to move; I had tried evreything imaginable to get relief, with no success, until I was advised to try "Bloodine," which to my great surprise, gave me relief almost from the first dose, and before I had taken one bottle I was completely cured. "Bloodine" is a wonderful, vitalizing tonic. If the blood is impure, complexion bad, appetite lost, strength gone, and the whole system is upset by an accumulation of humors, it is time to try "Bloodine" today.

Signs of Danger.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, thinks desperately ill, overawes and controls 20 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee lands with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore and find she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Goliath and other natives. Armed savages arrive and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Sheldon was back in the plantation, superintending the building of a bridge when the schooner Malakula ran in close and dropped anchor. Joan watched the taking in of sail and the swing ing out of the boat with a sailor's interest, and herself met the two men who came ashore.

They seemed awkward and constrained in her presence, and she caught first one and then the other looking at her with secret curiosity. She felt that they were weighing her, appraising her, and for the first time the anomalous position she occupied on Berande sank sharply home to her. On the other hand, they puzzled her.

The elder one, Morgan, was a huge man, bronzed and mustached, with a deep bass voice and an almost gutteral speech, and the other, Raff, was slight and effeminate, with nervous hands and watery washed out gray eyes.

She watched Sheldon closely when he arrived and divined that he was not particularly delighted to see them. But see them he must, and so pressing was the need that he led the two men into the stuffy office. Later in the afternoon she asked Lalaperu where they had gone.

"My word," quoth Lalaperu, "plenty walk about, plenty look 'm. Look 'm tree; look 'm ground belong tree; look 'm all fella bridge; look 'm copra house; look 'm grass land; look 'm river; look 'm whaleboat—my word, plenty big fella look 'm too much."

"What fella man them two fella?" she queried.

"Big fella marster along white man," was the extent of his description.

But Joan decided that they were men of importance in the Solomons and that their examination of the plantation and of its accounts was of sinister significance.

At dinner no word was dropped that gave a hint of their errand. The conversation was on general topics, but Joan could not help noticing the troubled, absent expression that occasionally came into Sheldon's eyes. After coffee she left them, and at midnight, from across the compound, she could hear the low murmur of their voices and see glowing the fiery ends of their cigars. Up early herself, she found they had already departed on another tramp over the plantation.

"What you think?" she asked Viaburi.

"Sheldon marster he go along finish short time little bit," was the answer.

"What do you think?" she asked Orn tiri.

"Sheldon marster big fella walk about along Sydney. Yes, me think so. He finish along Berande."

"What name?" she asked lightly when Sheldon sat down to dinner.

He looked at her and smiled, but it was a very wan and wistful smile.

"My word," she went on. "One big fella talk. Sun he go down—talk-talk; sun he come up—talk-talk; all the time talk-talk. What name that fella talk talk?"

"Oh, nothing much." He shrugged his shoulders. "They were trying to buy Berande, that was all."

"Don't let us fence about it," she urged. "Let it be straight talk between us. You're in trouble. I'm not a fool. Tell me. Besides, I may be able to help, to—to suggest something."

In the pause that followed he seemed to debate, not so much whether he would tell her, as how to begin to tell her.

"I'm American, you see," she persisted, "and our American heritage is a large parcel of business sense. I don't like it myself, but I know I've got it—at least more than you have. Let us talk it over and find a way out. How much do you owe?"

"A thousand pounds and a few trifles over—small bills, you know. Then, too, thirty of the boys finish their time next week and their balances will average £10 each. But what is the need of bothering your head with it? Really, you know"—

"What is Berande worth—right now?"

"Whatever Morgan and Raff are willing to pay for it." A glance at her hurt expression decided him. "Hughie and I have sunk £8,000 in it and our time. It is a good property and worth more than that. But it has three years to run before its returns begin to come in. That is why Hughie and I engaged in trading and recruiting. The Jessie and our stations came very near to paying the running expenses of Berande."

"And Morgan and Raff offered you what?"

"A thousand pounds clear after paying all bills."

"The thieves!" she cried. "How much do you need to carry on Berande for three years?" Joan hurried on.

"Two hundred boys at £6 a year means £3,600—that's the main item."

"My, how cheap labor does mount up! Thirty-six hundred pounds, $18,000, just for a lot of cannibals! Yet the place is good security. You could go down to Sydney and raise the money."

He shook his head.

"You can't get them to look at plantations down there. They've been taken in too often. But I do hate to give the place up—more for Hughie's sake, I swear, than my own. He was bound up in it. We were running slowly behind, but with the Jessie we hoped to muddle through in some fashion."

"You were muddlers, the pair of you, without doubt. But you needn't sell to Morgan and Raff. I shall go down to Sydney on the next steamer, and I'll come back in a secondhand schooner. I should be able to buy one for $5,000 or $6,000"—

He held up his hand in protest, but she waived it aside.

"I may manage to freight a cargo back as well. At any rate, the schooner will take over the Jessie's business. I'm going to become a partner in Berande to the extent of my bag of sovereigns—I've got over fifteen hundred of them, you know. We'll draw up an agreement right now—that is, with your permission, and I know you won't refuse it."

He looked at her with good natured amusement.

"You know I sailed here all the way from Tahiti in order to become a planter," she insisted. "You know what my plans were. Now I've changed them, that's all. I'd rather be a part owner of Berande and get my returns in three years, than break ground on Pari-Sulay and wait seven years."

"And this—er—this schooner"— Sheldon changed his mind and stopped.

"Yes, go on."

"You won't be angry?" he queried.

"No, no; this is business. Go on."

"You—er—you would run her yourself? Be the captain, in short, and go recruiting on Malaita?"

"Certainly. We would save the cost of a skipper. Under an agreement you would be credited with a manager's salary and I with a captain's. It's quite simple. Besides, if you won't let me be your partner I shall buy Pari-Sulay, get a much smaller vessel and run her myself. So what is the difference?"

"The difference? Why, all the difference in the world. In the case of Pari-Sulay you would be on an independent venture. You could turn cannibal for all I could interfere in the matter. But on Berande you would be my partner, and then I would be responsible. And of course I couldn't permit you, as my partner, to be skipper of a recruiter. I tell you, the thing is what I would not permit any sister or wife of mine"—

"But I'm not going to be your wife, thank goodness—only your partner."

"Besides, it's all ridiculous," he held on steadily. "Think of the situation. A man and a woman, both young, partners on an isolated plantation. Why, the only practical way out would be that I'd have to marry you"—

"Mine was a business proposition, not a marriage proposal," she interrupted, coldly angry. "I wonder if somewhere in this world there is one man who could accept me for a comrade."

"But you are a woman just the same," he began, "and there are certain conventions, certain decencies"—

She sprang up and stamped her foot. "Do you know what I'd like to say?" she demanded.

"Yes," he smiled. "You'd like to say, 'D— petticoats!'"

THE CORAL CRANBERRY.

THE ruby cranberry is in its heyday now. Containing as it does a good proportion of acid, it is one of the most wholesome fruits now available. Cranberry sauce to serve with poultry or game, cranberry pies or tarts and cranberry jelly are as good for the stomach as they are agreeable to the palate.

Stewed cranberries may be served as a side dish. One way of stewing them is as follows: Wash a quart of cranberries, place them in a granite stewpan and add two cupfuls of granulated sugar and two gills of water. Cook them ten minutes after they begin to boil.

Have the cover on the saucepan, but avoid stirring. The berries should be skimmed while cooking to remove the skum. They may be served as they are or strained when taken off the fire. The cranberries can be run into individual molds or into one large mold. Serve with sprigs of mint.

Cranberry Jelly.

For cranberry jelly take a quart of cranberries, a half pint of water and a pound of sugar. After washing boil the cranberries for ten minutes. Mash and strain through a flannel bag. Put the juice back in the kettle or porcelain saucepan and stir in the sugar. Let it boil for about fifteen minutes. Then try it to see if it will jell. If done, turn out to cool.

To make a good cranberry pie place uncooked cranberries in a pie dish lined with pie paste. Add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, a half cupful of molasses and after putting on an upper crust let it bake in a brisk oven for about half an hour.

Candied Berries.

The little folks adore candied cranberries. Here is a recipe for them. Take a quart of berries and lay them in a pan that will hold them evenly on the bottom. Cover with ten cupfuls of sugar and water enough to come to about one-third the height of the berries and bake slowly until the berries are tender. They must retain their shapes.

Pile very neatly upon a glass dish. They should look like candied cherries, with a small amount of thick sirup and should be a scarlet color. These are nice to serve with poultry.

TREATY WITH RUSSIA MAY BE ABROGATED

Much Nervousness at Washington Concerning the Matter

Washington, Dec. 7.—"The chairman and the committee on foreign affairs will support President Taft and Secretary Knox in any effort they may make for the protection of Americans in foreign countries, like Shuster in Persia and Jews in Russia," said Representative Sulzer of New York, chairman of the committee, after an interview with President Taft at the White House.

Mr. Sulzer's committee will begin hearings upon the Sulzer bill to abrogate the commercial treaty with Russia next Monday, and these will be addressed by a number of distinguished men of all parties.

The administration and conservative members of congress are decidedly nervous over the Russian question. It is being freely stated in the corridors of the Capitol that votes enough can be obtained from both sides to abrogate the treaty. The congressional hearings are expected to develop tales of Russian persecution and brutality toward the Jews that will excite the national anger, and once that is aroused serious consequences may follow.

ANDREWS' PROMOTION

Congressmen Protest Against the Supplanting of Nicholson

Washington, Dec. 7.—Secretary of the Navy Meyers' selection of his aid, Commander Andrews, to be chief of the bureau of navigation, vice Rear Admiral Nicholson, was made the subject of a vigorous protest to President Taft by a voluntary committee consisting of Representatives Weeks of Massachusetts, Dalzell of Pennsylvania and Foss of Illinois, former chairman of the committee on naval affairs.

It was represented to the president that this important position always had been filled by the ablest officers of the highest rank and that to select a commander "who never had commanded a ship" for the post would have a serious effect in the navy.

The promotion of Andrews was made possible only by transferring Nicholson to the command of the Asiatic fleet, where he would displace Rear Admiral Mardock, who is ordered home.

Aviator and Passenger Killed

London, Dec. 7.—Hubert Oxley, an aviator, was killed instantly at Ley, while his passenger, Robert Weiss, sustained such injuries that he died shortly afterwards. The aeroplane was smashed.

GRAND MARCH WAS LED BY MAYOR-ELECT

First Annual Social And Dance of Order of Moose

COMMITTEES IN CHARGE

Alpha Hall was taxed to its utmost, Thursday evening, the occasion being the first anniversary social and dance of Quincy Lodge, 413, Loyal Order of Moose. Besides the members and friends of the local order, delegations from other lodges were present in large numbers.

A concert program was given from 8 until 9 o'clock, during which solos were rendered by well known talent, including Mrs. Robert M. Grant, and Mrs. Ruby J. Morey.

The welcoming address, scheduled to be given by the orator of the order Dr. John H. Ash, was delivered by Councilman Edward J. Sandberg.

Hon. David B. Shaw, one of the foremost members of the Moose, was prevented from delivering a short oration, by illness.

The grand march, which took place shortly after nine o'clock, was led by Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone and Mrs. Edward J. Sandberg, followed by Oscar S. Sandberg and Mrs. Eugene R. Stone, and about 150 couples. The Mayor elect was recently admitted to membership in the local order and a great ovation was accorded to him by the many present.

The music for the event was furnished by Prof. Taddee's eight piece orchestra, and the affair itself was pronounced a great success by the 500 or more who were in attendance. Dancing was enjoyed until midnight and refreshments were served in Union Hall from 10 o'clock until the close of the event.

The dance indicated a year's existence for the local order, and it showed that great strides have been made for the Quincy lodge now numbers nearly 500 members.

The floor marshal was junior past grand dictator Leon C. Claflin. Oscar S. Sandberg was the floor director, and he was assisted by the following aids:

Capt. E. C. Killin, Walter Weixler, Alfred C. Bean, Henry Johnson, Chester McQuinn, John Crotty, D. A. LaPierre, Chester Wright, M. Stewart.

The committee in charge comprised: Oscar S. Sandberg, chairman; Leon C. Claflin, Edward Willin, William Martin, Chester Wright, Charles White, Walter Weixler, Albert J. Williams, Wm. Rogers, Wm. J. Nott, Alfred C. Bean.

ECHO OF SUNDAY'S MURDER

Ever since the murder on Water street, Sunday afternoon, the police have been somewhat puzzled to know what became of the bullets that were fired in the house. It was known for certain that at least five shots were fired during the row. One of the shots fired went through the eye of one of the party, but a search Monday failed to locate any of the rest of them.

Wednesday, Lieut. McKay with an interpreter, visited the house and made another thorough search and this time Lieut. McKay was successful in locating at least another of the stray bullets. In searching the house it was found that one of the bullets had passed through the photograph of a child and had then imbedded itself in the frame back of the picture. This bullet was removed, and was found to be a 32 calibre. The direction of another bullet was found, for on one of the tables was a table cover on which was a mark, showing that the bullet had torn a small hole in it by a glancing blow.

The photograph and cover were taken away by the police, and will probably be used later when the hearing is held. Later in the day, Lieut. McKay had an interview with the injured men at the City Hospital. Both of these men are doing well and unless some new complication sets in they will soon be able to be out, although one will be minus an eye.

From what the police have learned from the victims, the row started over the payment for some beer, payment being demanded of the murdered man. He did not show any great haste about paying and then the brother spoke up and said that it would be all right, that if his brother did not pay, he would. Then a wordy war was started, during which some uncomplimentary language was used, which ended in a pistol and knife fight and as a result, one man was killed and two others taken to the hospital.

SEC. BROMLEY'S TALK ON "BOYS"

Before Parents and Teachers At Wollaston School

MUSICAL PROGRAM

At the monthly meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Massachusetts Fields school Thursday evening Secretary A. F. Bromley of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. delivered a pertinent address on "Boys."

Referring to the physician who made the statement that boys were simply little animals the speaker said that, when we stop to think, what the doctor said is pretty nearly correct.

At first we thought that the young knew how to play instinctively. Some make the mistake of letting him out doors and go at it. And we sometimes see him go at it.

What is the ideal boy, Secretary Bromley asked. Have any of you seen him? It is not easy and in fact rather difficult to picture what that ideal boy is.

He must first be a boy who minds. You must not have to drive him into minding. When you ask him to get a hod of coal he gets it. Some have seen the boy who minds.

The ideal boy when old enough will stay at home nights. The speaker said that Quincy was fortunate in having a curfew law. In other cities the young children might be seen thronging the moving picture shows until late at night.

The speaker told of the boys that go wrong and said that in organizations of the sort there assembled is the best place to find the solution of the problem.

One of the most important questions regarding the boy is—Where does he spend his time? He is pretty sure to do two things at home. These are eat and sleep.

Secretary Bromley mentioned the home as one of the most important features in the boy problem. What can we do to change conditions? What is the trouble with the homes? Is each home ideal? Does he like to stay there more than anywhere else?

The man who made companions of his boys was touched on. The father can generally get closer to his son and the mother to her daughter than anyone else, said the speaker.

The father is the one to show the boy. The father is the ideal teacher for the boy in his moral life. The influence of the home is always stamped upon the boy. Haven't we got to bring the home to the ideal. Hasn't it more influence than the school, church, association and other factors?

Parents should consider their responsibility to the pupil as related to the school. The whole question is a case of the four forces—the home, the school, the church, the association—getting together and doing the job. The question is—Do we do it?

Miss Emma Perkins supervisor of music in the public schools was present and pleased all with her vocal and instrumental contributions.

The matter of a school reflectoscope was brought up as was the matter of a playground for Wollaston Park. It was voted to appoint a committee to confer with the city council regarding the matter of the playground.

CHRISTMAS SALE AT WOLLASTON

By Ladies' Aid Society of Methodist Church

GIFT FROM MRS. TAFT

A very successful Christmas sale, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the Wollaston Methodist church, was inaugurated Thursday. The usual custom has been to hold these sales in the church, but this year a new departure was taken, and the sale was held in the store, at the corner of Beale street and Newport avenue, and it proved to be a successful innovation.

The interior of the store was prettily decorated, the Christmas colors, green and red prevailing, and looked very attractive. Arranged about the store were booths for the sale of useful and fancy articles, suitable for Christmas gifts, as well as a booth where home made confections were on sale.

One of the attractions of the sale was a framed picture of the home of Mrs. Taft, wife of the President. This picture was the gift of Mrs. Taft and has attached, her autograph card. This picture will remain on exhibition until Saturday night, when it will become the property of the highest bidder. As many have expressed a desire to possess the picture, it is expected that there will be some lively bidding to secure it.

Another attraction, Saturday afternoon and evening, will be the sale of Christmas foods. In fact it might be called a food sale, for others than those strictly of a Christmas nature, will be on sale.

The articles displayed at the several counters are unusually beautiful and the efforts of the ladies will undoubtedly be crowned with success.

The sale, as stated, is given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, of which Mrs. George Crother is the president, while the sale itself, is in charge of an efficient committee with Mrs. E. H. Ewertz as its chairman.

Those in charge of the sale the opening day were: Mrs. George Taylor, Miss Eurle, Miss Merrill, Mrs. E. O. Robinson, Mrs. Fred Morgan, Madame Morgan, Mrs. F. G. Bennett, Mrs. F. N. Belcher, Mrs. Newell Lane, Mrs. Charles Carter, Mrs. Henry Dimmock, Mrs. W. A. Lupton, Mrs. Carrie Given, Mrs. J. A. Shedwick and Mrs. F. A. Sutermeister.

Another corps of ladies will be in charge this afternoon and evening.

Vice-President—John J. Byron.

—I have no objection to the size and beauty and power of the motor car. I am interested, however, in size and conscience of the men who handle it, and what I object to is that some of these corporation men are taking joy rides in their corporations.—Woodrow Wilson.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION

Committee Has An Important Meeting Thursday Night

PLANS NEARLY READY

A meeting of the committee on industrial education for boys, was held Thursday evening. All members of the committee were present with the exception of Mr. Russell. Mr. Murray agent of the State Board of Education and Mr. Henry superintendet of the S. H. Couch Co., were also present.

Statistics were presented showing that under present conditions there are about 2500 boys in the grades of whom 66 per cent will go to the High school, 15 per cent will graduate from the High school and 4 or 5 per cent will go to college.

Also, about 50 per cent of the boys lose one or more years in the grades and about 13 per cent lose time in the High school. That this retardation is caused most commonly by physical defects, lack of natural mental capacity and lack of adaptation of the school course to the needs of many.

It was also shown that there are about 400 boys in the city, at ages from 14 to 18 years, inclusive. Of this number, about 100 of the 14 years old are already at work; 155 of the 15 year, 250 of the 16 year, 280 of the 17 year and 310 of the 18 years. There are also from 40 to 50 at each age who are neither in school or at work, while the balance are in school.

Consideration of young people, in the indutries of the city, shows that there are 152 apprentices 18 years old or over in the granite business, representing ten nationalties. Only 28 of these are of English speaking nationalties. There are also about 75

NO SQUEALING BY M'NAMARAS

Brothers Trying to Balk the Federal Investigation

NEITHER ONE WILL TESTIFY

Government Cannot Indict For Individual Dynamiting, but Men Who Brought Them About Are Liable Under Conspiracy Charge—Alleged Illegal Use of Mails In Plotting Crime—McManigal Testifies

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 8.—John J. McNamara, confessed dynamiter, told Jailer Gallagher that under no circumstances would he give the federal grand jury any information. Following that announcement, Under Sheriff Bain sought Oscar Lawler, special government investigator, to tell him of the prisoner's statement. It is understood that James B. McNamara also will refuse to give testimony to the federal grand jury.

The grand jury of the United States for southern California convened here to take up evidence that a giant conspiracy existed throughout the United States through which dynamiting damage running into millions of dollars has been done to buildings under construction and already completed; that dynamite has been transported unlawfully from one state to another and perhaps that improper use has been made of the mails.

While the government cannot indict or try, it is said, for individual dynamitings, the men who brought them about are liable under the conspiracy charge and for the transportation of the explosive unlawfully. A similar investigation is being conducted in Indianapolis.

The reason for another grand jury is said to be a vast amount of evidence accumulated on the coast by detectives working under District Attorney Fredericks of Los Angeles county for the purpose of convicting the McNamaras.

Postoffice inspectors may take charge of the probing of the dynamiters' ring by the federal government, according to information received here. The reason for this is the fact, it is said, that the postal laws made possible the preparation of a stronger case than those governing interstate commerce.

The use of the mails in plotting crime, which is a violation of the postal laws, will lay the foundation for the proceedings planned. It is probable, therefore, that several hundred postoffice inspectors will take up the investigation initiated by scores of federal secret service agents.

The McNamaras have been advised by counsel as to their rights and the attorneys intimated that the probe of the government would gain nothing from them at this stage beyond facts already known.

Special Prosecutor Lawler and his assistants, it is believed, are looking toward Ortie McManigal as the main source of information upon which possible indictments may be found.

McManigal, the dynamiter who made the first confession in the McNamara conspiracy, was the first witness called before the grand jury.

Details of what McManigal knows of the alleged conspiracy were given to the grand jury. That his story implicates other men in the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers became known from various sources.

McManigal alleges that 54 persons other than John J. McNamara, the secretary and treasurer, paid him for the twenty "jobs" of dynamiting which he says he carried out after 1907.

DEATH OF DR. CHAMBRE

Prominent Episcopal Clergyman Is Found Dead In Bed

Lowell, Mass., Dec. 8.—Rev. Dr. A. St. John Chambre, rector of St. Anne's Episcopal church, was found dead in bed after a brief illness. Angina pectoris was the immediate cause of death.

Dr. Chambre was one of the most prominent Episcopal clergymen of New England. He was born in England 71 years ago, and came to this country as a young man. He served as chaplain of a New Jersey regiment during the Civil war and at the close of hostilities accepted positions in Boston and Fall River, coming to Lowell in 1884.

WOMEN TO WIELD BRUSHES

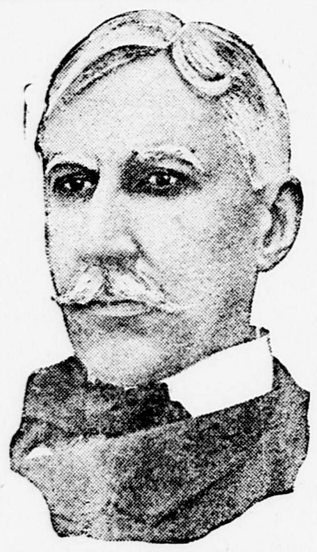
Baptist Church's New Horsesheds Will Be Painted by Them

East Longmeadow, Mass., Dec. 8.—Since the new horsesheds were constructed for the Baptist society, the women of the church have been casting about for a method to further improve the appearance of the structure.

Considerable surprise was expressed when it was announced that the tallest woman in the society and the shortest, armed with paint brushes, will paint the sheds today. One of the members of the society has furnished the paint, but the women will put it on.

W. E. D. STOKES

Sudden Illness of Man Shot by Two Show Girls



STRICKEN FROM RECORD

Court Says Cross-Examination of Stokes Is Incomplete

New York, Dec. 8.—The incomplete cross-examination of W. E. D. Stokes in the trial of Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, the show girls who are charged with attempting to kill him, was ordered stricken from the records by Justice Marcus. The justice ordered that the trial proceed and indicated that Stokes would be cross-examined later.

Stokes' condition, his physician says, is still precarious, although there has been a slight improvement.

Counsel for the young women opposed the continuance of the trial without the cross-examination of Stokes, but the court overruled their objections.

BREAKS AWAY FROM THE MOTHER CHURCH

Scientist Church Will Not Follow the Eddy Doctrine

East Orange, N. J., Dec. 8.—The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of East Orange, has declared its independence of the mother church, being the second, it is said here, to secede since the church was established by Mrs. Eddy. A declaration of independence was written and signed and forwarded to the Boston church.

Important departures from the rules of the mother church are to be inaugurated. Medical treatment for children is one and the rejection of the "Science of Health and Key to the Scriptures" of Mrs. Eddy as "guide."

The East Orange church will henceforth read into its rules that "the Bible shall be our only guide." While the textbook is thus deprived of its sacred character, it will be used in the reading, as before, alternately with the Bible.

PROCTOR IS SHUT OUT

Cannot Participate In Divorce Suit In Kansas City Court

Kansas City, Dec. 8.—Divorce reformers were shocked when W. W. Wright, the divorce proctor recently appointed by circuit court judges to investigate the merits of uncontested divorce cases, was barred from participating in a suit.

The plaintiff's attorney raised the objection that the proctor was in no way connected with the case, and that he had no right to interfere. Judge Guthrie sustained the point.

Since the proctor assumed his duties last month, few legal separations have been granted.

DEAD FOR THIS SESSION

Committee Rejects the Payne Permanent Tariff Board Bill

Washington, Dec. 8.—The Payne bill to create a permanent tariff board was brought up in the house committee on ways and means by Republican members, but the committee indefinitely postponed action through unanimous vote of the Democrats.

This probably shuts of consideration of the measure at this session.

Postal Strike Threatened

London, Dec. 8.—A national postal strike, which threatens to tie up Great Britain's postoffice service at the height of the Christmas season, is threatened. The employes demand better working conditions and higher pay.

Troops Kill Twenty Moros

Manila, Dec. 8.—Running fights continue between the troops, scouts and constabulary and the Moros in the vicinity of Jolo, the chief town of the archipelago of Sulu. Twenty hostile Moros have been killed.

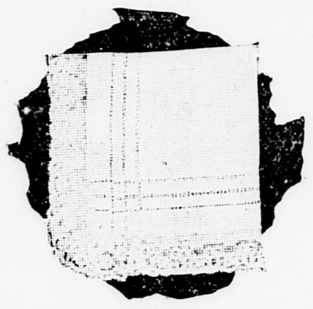
Five Dead In Apartment House Fire

Philadelphia, Dec. 8.—Five persons were burned to death or suffocated in a fire which destroyed the Marie apartment house.

Very Useful Presents

One girl who believes in giving Christmas presents that can be used is making for several of her girl friends this year the daintiest possible flannel skirts.

Petticoats are supposedly out of favor, but the sensible girl knows better than to discard flannels. She insists, however, that they take up as little room as may be.



HANDMADE HANDKERCHIEF.

The skirts being made fill that need. They are of fine white flannel as wide as can be bought and are cut from a circular pattern, so as to fit snugly around the hips. The tops and bottoms are bound with inch wide wash ribbon in a delicate color, and the placket and back seam are catstitched in a color to match.

To avoid extra bulk the skirt fastens with a button and buttonhole rather than with ribbon ties.

One skirt, for the best friend, has a line or two of small embroidered dots done in pink mercerized cotton just above the pink satin binding at the bottom.

Another useful gift is handkerchiefs, of which one can never have too great a supply. The one illustrated is of fine handkerchief linen finished with a narrow hem, above which at intervals are two rows of hemstitching, between which are rows of featherstitching. The handkerchief has an edge of pretty princess lace.

Novel Coat Hanger.

Now don't say that you are sick and tired of the sight of coat and skirt hangers. Probably you have seen and made a number of them, but have you ever turned out a coat hanger like the one pictured? It is covered, to be sure, with the regulation flowered ribbon gathered along the edges of the frame, and the loop from which the useful contrivance hangs is wound with narrow ribbon. But just make a note of the four dainty little sachet bags that are attached to the loop with bunches of baby ribbon, and if the effect is not novel and pleasing then look up another trifle for your Christmas offering.

PERFUMED COAT HANGER.

Shirt Waist Basket For Gift.

The new shirt waist baskets make a delightful present for maid or matron. They have taken the place of fabric covered boxes. The baskets have two trays placed one above the other, but so carefully fitted that the weight of the upper one does not in the least injure the freshness of whatever is placed in the lower one.

The first tray is designed for the best blouses, those that are most expensive to do up. This tray is first covered with a heavy white linen, then with a sheet of lavender scented cotton batting and finally with dotted swiss or embroidered muslin. Attached to the inner side of the tray are half a dozen little sheets or leaves of linen, one of which is laid over each freshly laundered blouse as it is placed in the basket.

The lower tray, which is several inches deeper than the upper one, is for the tailored waists and the different sort of outing skirts, and while it is sachet lined its covering is of lawn and the sheets are of the same substantial material.

Fillet Lace Covers.

Every woman is proud to own one or more soft cushion covers made from fine handkerchief linen and squares of fillet lace.

Nothing gives more distinction to a tea room couch than the addition of one of these cushions. Spreads for the bed can also be made of these lovely materials, which, if bought, would be quite beyond the average woman's pocketbook.

The fillet squares can be bought for little price. They show classic designs woven in solid, and often several different designs are used in the making of a bedspread. The work is done somewhat on the order of old fashioned patchwork, only it is much easier.

Strips of linen are sewed between the squares. The work is done on the machine if you are a busy woman, but if there is time to spare do it by hand, rolling the edges.

DOLL DRESSING HINTS.

Make the Clothes So They Will Come Off—The New Doll Muff.

It's doll dressing time, and every woman with a small toddler in her own family or time enough to look after some of those in other families is hard at it.

In making dresses for dolls it is the wise woman who knows that the usual order of the fitness of things should be reversed and that for the poor child the doll should have a silk dress, while for the doll of the well to do child the dress may be of pretty organdie, mull or dotted swiss trimmed with narrow velvet ribbon.

A doll in a silk dress is the tenement child's dream of bliss. To her it is the unattainable and the glorious; consequently rummage the scrap bag of silk pieces when dressing her a doll or use a discarded sash ribbon.

The child to whom silk is no rarity is better pleased with the daintiness of the organdie doll.

Such details as a sash with long loops and ends, bows on the shoulders and a jaunty one in the hair count for much in general effectiveness, and doll hats may be bought at many shops if one has not the ingenuity to make one of a bit of fancy braid and velvet, which is easily done.

A child's delight is to have a muff and boa resembling fur for the doll, and these may be made of elderdown flannel with dashes of ink in imitation of ermine.

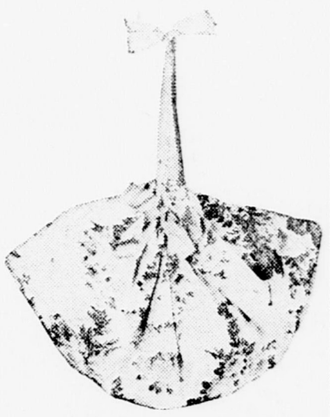
Remember above all things that nobody sews the clothes on to stay nowadays. If you do not make the dolly's outfit so that it will "button and unbutton" alas for the gratitude that you will receive. Then, too, no dresser of dolls in her senses would brave the scorn of the present day Maud or Mildred by presenting her with a doll that lacked "really truly" shoes and stockings of good style.

The little tot herself will be perfectly "crazy" about one of the new doll muffs. This affair is to be had in regulation size for a child from three to eight years old and is made of white fur. It differs from the usual muff because of the doll attachment. Dolly's arms and hands show at the top of the hand warmer, and her legs and feet, clothed in fur, dangle down at the bottom. Very cute is the rabbit pocketbook for the small girl's use when she goes shopping.

A LAST MINUTE GIFT.

An Easily Made Bag of Dainty Cretonne.

Nothing could be easier to make than the bag illustrated, and for this reason it is a splendid last minute gift. All you have to do is to double in half about a yard of figured cretonne and where the turn is made in the material overcast the edges together for half the length of the cretonne. In the center of the two sides of the cretonne gather the material to a piece of tape four inches deep, attach bows of some prettily colored ribbon, and when the hangers are sewed on the gift is completed.



AN EASILY MADE BAG.

Gift For Motorist.

Your friend who owns an automobile will appreciate a gift of one of the new tourist's luncheon or picnic outfits. These contain a half dozen small white enamel plates, knives, forks and spoons, collapsible drinking cups, paper napkins and various articles for use on a day's outing.

These outfits are inclosed in leather or straw cases. Individual collapsible drinking cups are always acceptable to those who motor.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MADAME SIMONE.

Monday, Madame Simone, the celebrated French actress, begins the second and last week of her engagement at Plymouth theatre, Boston. Owing to the prearranged dates of her brief tour of America the management has been unsuccessful in their effort to prolong her stay, therefore, if you have not yet witnessed this remarkable woman, whose versatility in the new school of French acting, has captivated her American audiences, you should not miss this last opportunity. Madame Simone will present as her farewell bill, an English version of Henri Bernstein's 3-act play "The Thief." Madame Simone will appear as Marie Louise, a role written especially for her and which she originally played when the play was first produced in 1906 at the theatre du Gymnase in Paris. On her opening appearance in Boston in which she appeared in "The Whirlwind," Madame Simone scored a tremendous success, adding another jewel to her wreath of fame. She easily won the unanimous praise of Boston's critics by her astonishing display of emotions. For the benefit of those who anticipate seeing Madame Simone, let it be understood that she appears in English in all her plays. While this is her first visit to America it is not the first time that she appeared in English. She appeared in London with great success several years ago. Don't miss the dramatic treat of the season.

"THE SEVEN SISTERS."

"The Seven Sisiters," with Charles Cherry and Daniel Frohman's New York Lyceum Theatre Company, has made the biggest kind of a hit at the Hollis Street Theatre where it has been drawing capacity houses. It is a jolly comedy, full of bubbling fun, which is happily blended with the ardent romance of youth. It is a most seasonable offering its sparkling brightness and joyousness being in delightful keeping with the holiday season. The story itself, which concerns the marrying off of the seven daughters of the widow of a Hungarian officer in accordance with the Hungarian custom of rotation in accordance with their years, conveys the humor of the play at the outset, and it is developed with such a variety of amusing complications and farcical situations that the audience is kept in merriest humor from the rise of the curtain until the very end. In the gay land of Hungary it is the custom to marry off the girls of a family in turn, the eldest first and so on, the younger ones being kept in short dresses until their turn comes. In this family there are seven—the fourth one is in a convent from which she is expelled for some escapade. She returns home and is immediately relegated to the age of fourteen and short dresses. The escapade however, had a man in it, and he follows the girl and sets about marrying off the sisters that he may marry her. The play is beautifully staged. The foreign atmosphere being shown with picturesque effect. Matinees are given on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

"ARE YOU A MASON?"

"Are You a Mason?" is a play that is always welcome at the Castle Square. Mr. Craig will give it for the third time since his taking over the management of the house, and on Monday will bring back Donald Meek as a permanent member of the company. The hero of "Are You a Mason?" is a gay young fellow, out for a lark, and when his wife suggests that he become a Mason he agrees. The comic plot here begins with numerous complications, and from act to act there is a constant series of comic scenes and funny incidents. Clean and wholesome throughout, "Are You a Mason?" affords a jolly entertainment. As a vehicle for a couple of hour's hearty enjoyment it leaves nothing to be desired. It has kept the theatre-goers of two continents fairly rollicking with laughter, for it has been seen in Europe as well as in America. It is the sort of play that can be seen again and again with ever increasing enjoyment, and it promises to be the greatest of successes on the Castle Square stage. Its cast will include Mr. Craig's entire company, and its run will be for only one week. For the first part of the week of Dec. 18th the Castle Square Theatre will be closed preparatory to the production of "The Wizard of Oz" on Friday evening, December 22nd.

BABY MINE.

Boston's laughing festival will start immediately after the holidays with the world's greatest laugh producer "Baby Mine," Margaret Mayo's hilarious comedy. This is said to be positively the funniest play ever written. "Baby Mine," one of Wm. A. Brady's attractions, is literally girdling the earth, is breaking all records in London, where it is now in its second year at the Vaudevile Theatre.

In brief, the story of "Baby Mine" tells of how a young husband leaves his equally young wife because she has lunched at a public restaurant with an old friend of his. True, she does not tell him the name of the man, and egally true she is an unconscionable little prevaricator, but the lunch has been an entirely harmless, accidental affair, and that it should lead to a separation would be absurd if the story was serious instead of comic. However, it does so, and the young wife, now thoroughly repentant, seeks the aid of the wife of the friend with whom she lunched. They put their heads together and what happens after that may be left for the play to reveal. Enough that it is not only brightly written but much comic invention is displayed and taste shown, and the whole thing is a very merry, fresh, healthy and unobjectionable entertainment.

B. F. KEITH'S.

One of the most unique events of the Boston theatrical season is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in a genuine Old Time Variety Show, exactly as presented in the theatres of the early eighties before Mr. B. F. Keith, by building beautiful theatres and establishing a high standard of the entertainments presented in them, had transformed "variety" into "vaudeville." The Old Timers' Week held at B. F. Keith's last summer proved one of the most popular features of the summer season, and so many patrons were disappointed in the demand for seats that arrangements were made to bring back the Old Timers as soon as arrangements would permit. The Old Time Variety Show is remarkable for many things. The largest company is that of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thorne, who have four players in their sketch, "An Uptown Flat." All the other acts are are either single or double teams. Among the artistes who will appear are Mrs. Annie Yeamans, the grand old woman of the American stage, who will give the song and dance that she performed with Harrigan and Hart in 1884; Maggie Cline, the Irish Queen, who will sing "Throw Him Down, McCluskey," with all her old time vim; Lottie Gilson, the Little Magnet; Ward and Curran in "The Terrible Judge;" Gus Williams, author of over one hundred songs; Fox & Ward the world's record minstel team who have been together continuously since 1868, and Allen and Clarke, the musical artistes.

SUNDAY CONCERTS.

The Castle Square Sunday evening concerts are steadily gaining in favor, which proves that the public likes the best of entertainments, and a clean and wholesome program. There will be given 5000 feet of motion pictures at the coming Sunday concert, including several novel subjects not hitherto seen in Boston, and in addition several clever artists will add to the pleasures of the evening. Seats are on sale at the Castle Square box office throughout the entire week, and on Sunday evening beginning at six o'clock. The overture starts promptly at eight, and the program continues two hours and a half.

CORONATION PICTURES.

The public would not allow the Coronation Pilctures to be discontinued, and therefore they will remain at Tremont Temple till further notice. They are now in their fifth month and this remarkable record in itself bears emphatic testimony to their worth and their popularity. The special children's performances at ten o'clock Saturday mornings are notably attractive, and the Coronation views are given in combiation with lectures on South America by Charles W. Furiong for two performances the latter part of the week.

MESSIAH CONCERT.

The Handel and Haydn Society has announced its concerts for 1911-1912. The Messiah Sunday Dec. 17, and Monday Dec. 18. Arnimius Feb. 11, Saint Paul Easter Sunday, April 7. There are several gentlemen and ladies in Braintree who are members of this society, which was organized nearly one hundred years ago, who will sing in the choruses and there are many here who look forward with pleasure to these concerts.

In accordance with custom Handel's Messiah will be sung by the Handel and Haydn Society during the Christmas season. The grand old work still holds its place in public favor. It is interesting to our modern lovers of oratorio to read that at the first performance of the work in Dublin, April 13, 1742 "The town was wild with excitement. Critics, poets, fine ladies and men of fashion tore rhetoric to tatters in their admiration; and, supreme compliment of all to Handel, the cynical bachelor, the ladies consented to leave their hoops at home for the second performance that a couple of hundred or so extra listeners might be accommodated." The performances will be the one hundred-twenty-fourth and one hundred-twenty-fifth of this work by the society.

The sale of single tickets for the Messiah concerts, $1.00, $1.50, and $2.00, will open Monday, December 11, at 8.30 A. M., at Symphony hall. Telephone Back Bay 1492.

They Bumped.

A true happening which has been made the subject of a cartoon occurred at a fashionable golf club near London. A young man interested in golf solely for the sake of the social atmosphere one day decided to play a round. So he sauntered leisurely down to the caddy house, where he met a certain peppery lord. Not knowing the gentleman and barely looking at him, the somewhat foppish youth asked, "Are you the caddy master here?" Without an instant's hesitation Lord —— replied, "No, I am not, but I happen to know that he is not in need of any caddies this afternoon." It was some time before either recovered.—Boston Transcript.

Tongue Could Tell.

"Last night, George, you told me you loved me more than tongue could tell, and, oh, George, that wasn't true!"

"Why, darling, what do you mean?"

"I mean that it wasn't more than my little brother's tongue could tell. He heard it all!"

Ill patterns are sure to be followed more than good rules.—Locke.

WELCOMED WITH 101-GUN SALUTE

King George and Queen Mary Reach Durbar Camp

GENERAL HOLIDAY IN INDIA

Natives Form Striking Background to Gorgeous Procession Which Proceeds Along Route Four Miles In Length—Rajahs Rub Elbows With Half Naked People Who Gather to Welcome Their Emperor

Delhi, India, Dec. 8.—The roar of an imperial salute of 101 guns welcomed the king-emperor and queen-empress on their arrival here from Bombay. The railway station in the Selingarh bastion of the fort had been the mecca for everybody in the city and the coronation camp.

The route to the camp was lined alternately by British and Indian regiments. In providing guards of honor and escorts, native troops were also given an equal share with British soldiers.

The king-emperor and queen-empress were received on the elaborately decorated platform by the viceroy and vicerine, the governors and heads of provinces, the commander-in-chief and a number of high military and civil officials.

After a series of presentations their majesties proceeded to a pavilion within a wall of the fort, where 150 ruling chiefs were introduced. This brilliant ceremony, with the gorgeous display of jewels and richly colored garments, occupied considerable time. Meanwhile the provincial legislators had gathered on the ridge by the durbar camp to greet the royal party. Then began the great procession to the camp, four miles away.

Throughout India a holiday had been decreed and great numbers of natives had gathered to get a glimpse of their emperor and empress. They formed a striking background to the gorgeously uniformed procession.

As their majesties approached the command to present arms was passed along the line of troops. European spectators took off their hats and the natives bent deep toward the ground.

Their majesties entered the city through the king's gate, now opened for the first time since 1857, when the king of Delhi went to public worship. All along the route the impression seemed to be profound, and the reception was a cordial one. On arrival at the camp the troops defiled past the royal carriage, receptions followed and the king-emperor was presented with a brief address of welcome, to which he replied in a few words.

Their majesties and the vice-regal party then repaired to their camp. The vast camp stretches along the great trunk road in long symmetrical rows of white tents almost blinding in the vertical Indian sun.

Crowds of picturesque humanity, from the rajah in his silks to the half naked walah, gathered to welcome their emperor, and they formed a perfect picture. Mingling with them were bejeweled Indian princes, army and administrative officers, native and British private soldiers, and large numbers of foreign tourists. The ancient bullock cart, the smartest modern carriage, the powerful motorcar, the richly caparisoned elephant and the blooded horse added variety.

The emperor's tent does not differ greatly in appearance from the others. Internally, however, it is palatial. Great canvas halls stand nearby for receptions and banquets.

About a quarter of a million persons have taken up their quarters in the canvas city, which is broken up by green lawns, polo grounds, fountains and avenues of trees.

THE CASE OF SANDFORD

No Defense by Holy Ghoster Should He Be Brought to Trial

Portland, Me., Dec. 8.—It is announced that if the federal grand jury finds an indictment against Frank W. Sandford, the head of the Holy Ghost and Us society at Shiloh, his trial will begin immediately.

It is understood that Sandford will make no defense, and that the state's witnesses will not be cross-examined, so that the trial, if there is one, will be very brief.

Sandford has been charged with manslaughter in connection with the deaths aboard the Holy Ghost yacht Coronet of half a dozen persons who had suffered from scurvy.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Italian Held For Stabbing Fellow Lodger to Death

Palmer, Mass., Dec. 8.—A quarrel in a Water street lodging house resulted in the death of George Cattsmitt, a German, and in the district court a plea of not guilty of murder was entered by Paul Carrendi, an Italian, who was held without bail for a continued hearing. It is alleged that Carrendi stabbed Cattsmitt to death.

Lorenzo Denno, the proprietor of the lodging house, notified Policeman Crimmins that there was a fight in progress at his lodging house, and when the policeman arrived on the scene he found Cattsmitt's body, covered with stab wounds, lying on the floor, and in an adjoining room Carrendi was washing blood from his hands. Carrendi was pointed out by others in the house as Cattsmitt's slayer and was taken into custody without any resistance.

HURRYING BEEF TRIAL

Tentative Jury Has Already Been Secured to Try the Case

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Attorneys for the government late yesterday tendered a tentative jury of twelve men to counsel for the indicted packers in the United States district court, after less than ten hours of actual court sessions. Today counsel for the packers will begin cross-examination of the tentative jurors, seven of whom are farmers.

When court adjourned Attorney Sheean of special council for the government had questioned forty-two veniremen. Twenty were excused for various reasons and ten were peremptorily challenged. The government still has the right of twenty additional peremptory challenges, while the packers have thirty.

EMBEZZLEMENT OF $7000 IS CHARGED

Bondsman's Widow Has Former Town Treasurer Arrested

Boothbay Harbor, Me., Dec. 8.—Fred C. Blake, treasurer of this town from 1906 to 1909, has been arrested, charged with embezzlement of town funds to the amount of $7000. Upon being arraigned before a trial justice Blake pleaded not guilty, and his case was continued until Dec. 20 for further hearing.

The action against Blake was originally instituted by Mrs. M. D. Sawyer, widow of one of his bondsmen, two years ago, when the town treasurer retired from office. An apparent shortage existed in the treasurer's accounts at that time and was made good by his bondsmen. The discovery by Mrs. Sawyer that her husband was among those who had contributed to make the shortage good was what caused her, it is understood, to bring criminal action against the former treasurer.

Besides being town treasurer Blake has also been treasurer of the Boothbay Harbor Water company.

DOUBLE NEGATIVE IN WILL

Good Ground For Upsetting Instrument If Literally Construed

Allentown, Pa., Dec. 8.—A contest is foreshadowed in the probating of the will of Thomas Remaly of North Whithall, who cuts off his five children by his first wife and gives his $20,000 estate to the second wife and six children.

Referring to his offspring by his first wife, Mamaly wrote a clause as follows:

"These children shall not receive no part or share of my estate whatsoever."

Attorneys say that the two negatives, if literally construed, are good grounds for a contest and may upset the will.

BULLFIGHTS IN PORTUGAL.

The Battles Are Bloodless and the Contestants Rarely Hurt.

The distressingly cruel treatment of animals so common in the Latin countries is almost entirely absent among the Portuguese, and for this reason their great national sport the bullfight, is really an enjoyable spectacle to an American, writes Mrs. C. R. Miller in Leslie's Weekly.

In the Portuguese version the bull is never killed. The horrible goring of horses—a feature of the Spanish fight—does not occur, for if a horse was injured in a Portuguese performance the rider would be hissed from the ring and very likely mobbed afterward. The men taking part are rarely hurt, although the skill displayed is much greater than that shown in the Castilian style of the sport.

Occasionally they have a burlesque Spanish bullfight in Lisbon with the cruelty eliminated. The horses ridden by the picador are armored and cannot be gored, and when the bull is to be killed the matador strikes him at the particular spot on the back of his neck, which in Spain means almost instant death to the animal. Instead of killing the bull, however, the Portuguese matador's sword doubles up after the fashion of the ones used by the sword swallowers in our sideshows, and a red mark appears where it has touched the animal's skin, thus showing the audience that the matador has been successful. The horses and bull then run out of the ring uninjured.

Keeping on the Safe Side.

"Here," she said when they met after the judge had granted the decree for which she had prayed, "is the engagement ring you gave me. You may wish to use it again some time. Perhaps you would like my wedding ring also. It, too, may come in handy in the future."

"No; keep them," he replied. "I am afraid to accept them."

"Afraid! Why should you be afraid?"

"If I took them back I should not have to buy rings for the next lady, and the courts may find us guilty of combining in unreasonable restraint of trade."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Proper Place.

"I understand that the leading lady and the prima donna had a violent quarrel."

"Yes."

"How did they settle it?"

"Oh, they went to their dressing rooms and made up."—Woman's Home Companion.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

In view of the temper of Congress, several car loads of timber for gavels, should be at once shipped to Washington care Speaker Champ Clark.

A trunk with valuable state papers has been stolen from ex-Ambassador Hill. This saves us the bother of reading them verbatim when Dr. Hill writes his book.

There aresome workingmen who will feel in future that a $190,000 fund would look much better in shoes and stockings for their children than in defending dynamiters.

John Barrett wants the Panama canal free to all nations. Uncle Sam may be a Santa Claus, but we doubt if he tries to make such expensive Christmas presents to the entire planet.

A column has been set aside each Saturday in the Ledger for Y. M. C. A. notes. With the kind assistance of Secretary Bromley and Boys' Work Director Blanchard, we feel sure of giving something newsy and interesting. First instalment tomorrow.

It used to be regarded good politics for Congress to pursue a do-nothing policy. There is a growing feeling that the congressmen were sent to Washington to do something other than furnish speeches to fill the Congressional Record.

Admiral Bowles, of the Fire River Shipbuilding Company, has received many well deserved compliments from the press upon his appointment to the Dock Commission. The following from a Boston paper is a sample:—

The appointment of Admiral Bowles as a member of the Dock Commission has met with widespread favor. He is really the only expert on the board from an engineering standpoint. His services in public and private life are an augury of what the public may expect from him i his new position.

ARMY WEAKNESSES.

The annual report of the inspector general of the army, with particularly sharp criticism of many army methods, is a lively reminder that a great efficient fighting machine is not built up merely by giving our officers the finest theoretical training in the world.

When department commanders have to spend the bulk ofthe r time seeing that the stenographers get this and that report filed in the c rrect pigeonhole, instead of getting out with the men and teaching them how to cover dusty roads and rocky slopes so as to head off an enemy, t results are not what the tax pay r is putting down the money for.

One department commander complains that every man in his rank has to be accounted for n teen times before the record of his existence finally gets properly filed. No doubt he becomes very skilful at weaving an exquisitely complicated pattern of red tape.

As one officer puts it, "Our army posts are a series of government parks which it takes the men half their time to care for, and they are distributed around to please the politicians."

The fact that certain army posts were needed in the war of 1812 and in the old Indian days, is no proof that they are needed in these times when the Canadians are doing nothing worse than printing sassy cartoons about President Taft, and the Indians restrict their hostile acts to the game of foot ball.

Of course running a lawn mower to prepare the grass for the weekly concert by the regimental band may help develop a soldier's wind and endurance. But when it is said that the money spent at Fort Russell, Wyoming, would make a hotel like the Waldorf-Astoria and give every officer and man a room and a bath, the results seem slightly expensive for the investment. Down at Fort Sam Houston there are bachelors that have quarters of 11 rooms each to rattle around in.

The army is so scattered around among these stations on the "hitching post" system, that the officers and men do not get experience of what it is to handle the forces when assembled in a large unit. You can't feed and clothe 5,000 men and keep them from treading on each other, merely by reading about it out of a text book.

HONEST LABOR.

A new problem is presented to the honest labor union man by the situation revealed by the McNamara confessions. It goes without saying that the mass of union labor men do not sanction dynamite as an argument for higher wages.

Heretofore the problem of controlling the lawless elements connected with union labor has been mostly that of controlling the more ignorant end of the unions. In the anthracite coal strike for instance, the principal difficulty was encountered from alien new-comers from East Europe.

Men from lands where bomb throwing is regarded almost as a patriotic virtue could hardly understand why under Uncle Sam's flag they might not heave a few rocks at the hated scab. The McNamaras and the likes of them are no such raw pupils in the school of our citizenship. They know the rules of the schoolhouse and the reasons back of the rules.

Heretofore it has been a question of how the leaders of labor unionism shall control the rank and file. When men like the McNamaras acquire positions of leadership, it is a question as to how the rank and file shall control the leaders.

It all comes out of our American love for mere smartness. The corporation magnate hurls big adjectives at the evils of bribery in after dinner speeches. But when a persuasive lobbyist is peculiarly successful in getting franchises by hostile legislators, he does not stop to inquire too carefully as to how the large expense fund was incurred.

The politician makes campaign speeches full of sweetness and light. But the fact that the fund for bringing sick and infirm voters to the polls seems surprisingly big rarely sets himto investigating.

So when the business agent of a labor union becomes peculiarly effective in bringing the predatory capitalist to terms, the workingman who is getting the better wages does not always stop to analyze the kind of threats that were used in the game.

The bribe giving capitalist, the grafting politician, and the law breaking labor unionist, are all destined for the same doom at the court of American opinion. It is up to the labor union, not merely to pass rotund resolutions denouncing violence, but to spend some money now and then on detective work to hunt down the criminal traitors, whose presence in their own ranks is the worst foe they have to encounter. Knowing the essential honesty of the American workingman, we have faith to believe that the McNamara affair will make him see it.

THE SORROW OF CHRISTMAS.

"It's Christmas time, friend! What will you do about it?" asks L. D. Stearns in Suburban Life for December. "Mothers! Aunties! You who love to see your babies bend, crooning softly, over their family of dolls with that grave little smile of dawning motherhood flitting tenderly over their faces, just within a stone's throw are babies who have no dolls, and the mother heart beats in their bosoms just as it does in that of your own sheltered darlings; but their faces are grave and sharp, and old; and little drawn, white lines show about their mouths; and their eyes are not like the eyes of your children. The other day, a baby opened its eyes for the first time on this cold earth; it was one of our coldest days; but in the home was no stove, no bit of warmth, no food—almost no clothes! On another street, in the midst of plenty, a woman, with two small babies toddling about, the father out hunting for work, cries—with red lids: 'We've not a dollar in the house, and nothing to eat!' Oh, mothers—oh, adoring aunties—life isn't made up of just prayers and sitting reverently in church, keeping one day in the week holy! There's a tryst to keep with life that is spelled in many, many ways, if you'd make it complete."

TEN MORE VOTES FOR STONE.

In tabulating the official returns from Precinct Two, of Ward One, the City Clerk discovered an error of ten votes in the favor of Eugene R. Stone. The returns as made by the election officers, gave him 476 votes in this precinct, when it should have been 486. The error was due in carrying over the vote from the tally sheet to the book.

This therefore, makes Stone's majority 2034, instead of 2024 as announced.

DRAMATIC CLUB WAS A FEATURE

No. Weymouth Organization Delights Large Audience

AT CHURCH FAIR

There was another large attendance Thursday evening, at the fair held in the Universalist vestry, under the auspices of the Dorcas society. It was the closing night and the evening, after the entertainment, was given up to the disposal of the articles remaining unsold on the several tables. Many ofthese went at bargain prices. The entertainment of the evening was given by the dramatic club of North Weymouth, which presented a three act play entitled, "The Sisterhood of Bridget." It is hardly necessary to say that the several characters in the drama were impersonated true to life, as the work of this club is too well known to receive any comment. They sustained their usual reputation. The cast of characters was as follows:

Edward Mason, a wealthy stock broker — Mr. William French
Lord Curton, in search of a wife with money — Mr. Edgar Stiles
Ward Leighton, lieutenant of the 176th regiment — Mr. Frank Smith
Mike McShane, driver of a milk cart, — Mr. Stanley Torrey
Timothy Rouke, house painter, — Mr. Henry Stiles
Jimmy Macrae, page at Mr. Mason's, — Mr. Benjamin Litchfield
William, butler at Mr. Mason's, — Mr. John Taylor
Mrs. Mason, socialist and aesthetic, — Miss Rita Page
Eleanor Mason, her daughter, — Miss Ruth Thayer
Bridget, the cook — Mrs. John Taylor
Josie Riley, housemaid, — Miss Doris Torrey
Emma Hone, housemaid, — Miss Lillian Fisher
Mary Macrae, Jimmy's sister — Mrs. George Ames

FOR NAVAL ACADEMY.

Richard Z. Crane, of Quincy, and four other young men in Representative Curley's district have asked to be allowed to take the Civil Service examination for appointment to the Naval Academy.

Other applications are expected by Mr. Curley before Dec. 14, when the list will close. The examination will be held before the Civil Service commissioner at Boston, Dec. 20. A principal and three alternates will be selected.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

From the various meetings of the Parents and Teachers Associations of the city's schools, come many favorable comments regarding the value of vocational training with the hope that the school committee will give the matter early consideration in order that it may have a prominent place in the school's curriculum.

Reports from the Woodward school show what can be done along the lines of such training and limited work in Manual training is another example, What is needed, however, is concentrated effort, with a course that would fill the requirements of the many individual cases. The superintendent of schools is heartily in favor of the work and conversant with details that would make an important and appreciated addition in educational work

RECOUNT ASKED.

A petition was filed with the City Clerk this morning, asking for a recount of the votes cast at the election Tuesday in Ward Two, for councilmen from the ward. The paper was filed by one of the defeated candidates.

At the election, Councilman Frank J. Duffy was defeated by Joseph Carruthers by five votes, and it was generally conceded with such a close vote that a recount would be asked for. The recount will probably be held by the Registrars of Voters Saturday evening.

TODAY'S COURT.

Michael Daly, was sent to the state farm for drunkenness at Weymouth. He was also arraigned for larceny of $50 from Stephen Bicknell at Weymouth. This case was placed on file. After taking the money, Daly visited the big city, where he had a glorious time and managed to spend all but $23 of the money.

FAIR WAS A SUCCESS IN EVERY WAY

The fair under the auspices of the Women's guild of Christ church, came to a successful end Thursday evening. The attendance on both days of the fair was very large and a good sum will be realized by the ladies from the sale. The object of the fair was to raise a sum sufficient to liquidate the balance of the debt caused by renovating the church. This and more was cleared by the sale.

Thursday was children's day, and there was a very large attendance of young people. A special entertainment for their benefit was given. The closing evening was given to the disposal of the articles at the various booths that remained unsold.

BRIEFS

Some of the young people of First Church Sunday school are to give a play tonight in tahe chapel for the benefit of a vacation week or other small charity.

Crowds of women have filled the store of W. G. Shaw, taking advantage of the unprecedented sale that is now going on. Some rare bargains in the furniture line are offered.

Dr. Fred E. Jones has moved from his residence on Hancock street near Revere road, to the Tisdale house at the corner of Hancock street and Whitney road recently purchased by him.

Galen Vinton Bowditch the veteran news messenger for the Boston Globe is exhibiting pictures taken on his 75th birthday. It would be hard to convince a stranger that he had really passed that many milestones. Age deals kindly with him.

A club smoker and refreshments will be the attraction Monday evening at the club house of the Town River Yacht club. All members and their friends are cordially invited. The active spirit shown by this organization on previous occasions proves that it will be a very enjoyable evening.

Q.—How may we account for the peculiar power which some men possess over animals, as manifested particularly by trainers of wild animals? Is there anything in the Bible that would reasonably account for this wonderful faculty? (H. F. R.)

Answer.—The extraordinary powers exercised by some in the control and subjugation of wild animals, is doubtless due to the fact that these possess in some degree, mental endowments originally conferred upon mankind by the Creator. The first man was created in the image and likeness of God, and given dominion over the fowls of the air, the fish of the sea, and over every living thing that moved on the earth. Man was the absolute monarch, and controlled the animal kingdom as such. As God is able to control all His creatures by His will, so man was able to direct and control the animal creation by the sheer force or power of his will. When man, because of disobedience, fell from the state of perfection enjoyed in the Garden of Eden, he began to lose those powers which he formerly exercised, until now, after six thousand years of mental, moral, and physical decline, he is no longer able to dominate the animal creation by his will power, except in rare instances. The promise is that during "the Times of Restitution" God will give back to the race that which was lost by Adam's disobedience and recovered for them by Christ.—Acts iii, 19-21.

boys from 14 to 18 years old, working as tool boys for granite firms.

It was shown that the employing capacity of the machine shops and mechanical industries was about 300 boys between the ages of 14 and 18 years. In other words, summing up these statistics, it appears that of the annual output of the schools, 5 per cent go to college; 2 1-2 percent are non employable for various reasons and Quincy has industrial openings in mechanical lines for 25 per cent.

It was arranged to have the next meeting on Thursday evening, Dec. 21, if possible, and it is expected that one or two manufacturers from the city of Fitchburg, where a very successful indutrial, half time school is already in operation, will be present to explain the workings of the school.

It is expected that at that meeting other employers of labor and representative citizens, who are interested in the industrial progress of the city will be present.

The Quincy committee has now reached a point where it will endeavor to formulate tangible plans for the city to consider.

ALL ON WATER WAGON

Zeeland's Passengers Gave Ship's Bartender Thorough Rest

New York, Dec. 8.—The Red Star steamer Zeeland, rolling into port after a rough eleven-day trip from Dover, flew the white ribbon. Not a drink of intoxicating fluids was sold from start to finish of the voyage.

The gray-haired barman said it was a record. "What are we coming to?" he mourned. "Is everybody climbing upon the water wagon?"

"When a man doesn't take a drink in eleven days there must be something radically wrong," said the steward.

Oil Men's Sentence Delayed

Buffalo, Dec. 8.—Judge Hazel in the United States circuit court deferred sentence until Dec. 22 in the case of the Standard Oil company of New York. It was found guilty of accepting rebates on shipments of oil.

HIS UNIQUE ANTIQUES.

They Were Sold One by One, Yet the Set Remained Intact.

An old curiosity dealer of Paris recently found a new snare for the eternally guileless amateur. He put in his window five dolls dressed in vaguely medieval clothes. Collector No. 1 came in and asked to buy one of them. The dealer could not divide the lots, as they were a valuable set, representing the five senses. After long persuasion the amateur at last carried one off at a very long price.

Collector No. 2 followed. Could he have one of the dolls? "Out of the question, sir; a most valuable set, representing the four seasons." After more long persuasion and at a still longer price one of the dolls was sold. When amateur No. 3 called the three dolls were the three graces, a most valuable set, which could not be divided. By offering an enormous sum he carried off one of them.

Amateur No. 4 called and wanted to buy one of the two dolls. What was monsieur actually proposing? The two dolls were Adam and Eve, sculptured and dressed by some forgotten mediæval artist. The pair could not possibly be parted. The collector eventually carried off Adam for a gigantic sum. Amateur No. 5 called and asked: "How much for that curio? Evidently an odd one of a set."

"An odd one of a set!" screamed the dealer. "It is a unique piece. Does not monsieur perceive that it represents Agnes Sorel, the favorite of Charles VII.?" And the amateur secured the unique piece for a fabulous amount.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

ANOTHER ONE-TOPIC MESSAGE

Our Foreign Relations Discussed by President Taft

MEXICAN POLICY MADE PLAIN

Neutral Attitude During Recent Rebellion, During Which the Mobilization of Troops Had Good Effect—Not Concerned In Near East Troubles—Exchanges With Russia In Regard to American Jews

Washington, Dec. 8.—In the second one-topic message he has sent to congress during the three days of the present session President Taft reviewed the relations of the United States with foreign governments during the past year.

In this message the president gives the first official explanation of the hurried movement of 20,000 troops to Mexico nine months ago; urges the United States senate to ratify the general arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, and the conventions with Nicaragua and Honduras, and suggests legislation that he declares will strengthen this nation's world trade and position among the other powers.

On two subjects included under "foreign relations" the president speaks only in brief fashion. He informs congress of the negotiations begun by Ambassador Guild at St. Petersburg in regard to the question of passports in Russia for American Jews, and explains that after the Christmas holidays he expects to send a special message on this subject. Reference to the passport question was added after the other parts of the message had been written. He believes that the government of Russia is addressing itself seriously to the treaty and that sufficient progress has been made to warrant the continuance of these conferences in the hope that there may be soon removed any justification of the complaint of treaty violation now prevalent in this country.

Aside from his review of the world's history for the past year in which the United States particularly figured, the president recommends to congress the following legislation:

The enactment of a law for the fulfilment of obligations assumed by the United States in connection with the settlement of the fur seal controversy; the passage of a law to forbid the carriage of opium and other "habit-forming drugs" in interstate commerce; the formation of a central organization in the nature of a national chamber of commerce that would keep all such organizations in touch with commercial developments abroad, and the enactment into law of executive regulations providing for advancement in the diplomatic and consular service upon a merit basis, instead of through political preferment.

Suggestion also is made by the president that the present tariff act should be amended so that its maximum and minimum features, designed to prevent undue discriminations against American commerce, could be graduated to meet varying degrees of discrimination such as have been encountered since the present law was passed.

Outlining the idea of a central "chamber of commerce," Mr. Taft suggests that such an organization might be managed by a committee composed of a small number of those now actively engaged in carrying on the work of some of the large associations of this kind, with members ex-officio from the state and commerce and labor departments.

In leading up to this suggestion Mr. Taft showed that in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, the value of American exports increased $300,000,000 over the previous year, but indicated that further increase was possible.

The president's explanation of the sudden dispatch of one-quarter of the army to the Mexican border agreed with the unofficial reasons for that military movement given last spring, but he showed in a confidential letter to General Wood, chief of staff of the army, that he deemed it to be his duty as commander-in-chief to place troops in sufficient number where, if congress should direct that they enter Mexico to save American lives and property, an effective movement might be promptly made. The outcome of the movement, Mr. Taft declares, was entirely satisfactory.

The recent attempt to undermine the Madero government in Mexico, so far as it was engineered in the United States, he says, met with the same policy the government pursued in regard to the revolutionists who overthrew the government of President Diaz—the "so-called neutrality statutes" were enforced against all.

In regard to China, now in the throes of revolution, Mr. Taft has little to say, except to explain the loans placed in that country by American and other foreign capitalists. In the present war between Italy and Turkey the president points out that the United States "has no direct political interest."

NEW YORK WINTER FASHIONS.

Narrow Skirts—Striking Color Contrasts—Elaborate Trimmings For Galore.

It needs only a touch of sharp weather to bring out all the luxury of velvet and fur in every variety of make from dainty small cravats and reveres, to all enveloping garments cosy and warm but supple as satin and as clinging in effect.

COMBINATIONS ENDLESS.

Combinations of odd color, and differing materials are so much the rule that a garment self trimmed is noticeable. A dash of contrast cleverly used, lends distinction to many a suit or coat that would otherwise be flat and lacking in style. Linings are more apt to differ than to match the outer material and endless plays are made on the idea of the coat that may be worn with either side out.

EVENING COATS.

A magnificent long wrap, fit for an Empress, was shown recently at C. C. Shayne's. The pure white fur was used for the garment, and worked up into a bordered effect at the foot, the lines emphasized here by a graceful draped fringe made of the ermine tails. The lining of soft heavy white satin, trimmed with narrow pleated quillings and the fastening at the left side made with an elaborate ornament of white passementerie. Another long coat shown was of smoke colored embossed velvet lined with moleskin, worked up so that it gave a blocked effect. The collar and cuffs were of costly fox in matching tone, the garment being reversible. So elegant was the effect with either the mole or velvet outside that it was difficult to decide which one preferred.

FOR DAY WEAR.

For more general wear there were coats of caracul, broad-tail or the dyed muskrat that is so exactly like seal in texture and color that only an expert can tell the difference. This is sold under various names, and in many varying qualities but the high class furriers now prefer to use the exact names of the pelts they handle. Even skunk has dropped its masquerade as "Alaska Sable" and under its own name holds a high place in fashionable favor.

A NOVEL COMBINATION.

A novel combination new this season is fitch trimmed with skunk, made up most attractively in sets of stoles and muffs that are set off with soft floppy bows of black messaline satin. Broadtail and ermine make a most distinguished contrast. The long scarf stole of the black fur with ends of ermine and trimmings of narrow ball fringe. The muff of the same furs has Vandyke points that are very new and smart. Muffs are all very large, very flat, and so flexible that they can be crumpled up in any direction.

Stiffness of any sort is a thing of the past in making up furs, and weight has disappeared with the stiffening. Many of the new muffs have pockets on the outside.

INEXPENSIVE PRICES.

Sets for young girls and for wear with tailored suits are of Civet cat, Lynx, Raccoon, Muskrat and American Fox. These all wear well and lend a very fashionable air to the plainest get up, or go well with more elaborate clothes.

CORONATION BAGS.

The huge bags of elegant materials that were carried by peeresses at King George's coronation to hold all the various fixings that might be needed during the long hours in Westminster Abbey, have set the style for elaborate bags this year. All sorts of brocades and upholstery materials, embellished with beads, gold or silver galoons and embroideries are used for these huge pockets, and one sees them quite as much on the street as at the theatre where they seem more in keeping with the surroundings. Bags to match the hat, muff or stole are what all the girls desire and these made up with velvet and fur are most coveted bits of elegance. Leather bags are said to be growing smaller, but one sees huge flat ones still on every side in the shops and with the shoppers.

VELVET AND RATINE.

Velvet and ratine are two favorite materials for winter suits. Both were on the carpet last year but are increasingly worn at present. Combinations of velvet with woolen materials are most modish, and the cloth dress with a velvet coat is reckoned very smart, especially if the coat is one of the models cut off at the waist line in front and prolonged in long coat tails at the back. The soft woolen surface of the ratine makes very stylish trimmings for suits and coats of serge, velvet, corduroy or other materials. White is the favorite tone for these, but one sees any amount of yellow, tans, soft warm reds, greens and the various purple tones used in this way.

A LACK OF DEFENDERS

Coast Defense Fortifications Useless Without More Men

Washington, Dec. 8.—With a splendid and enormously expensive system of coast defense fortifications almost completed, there are not enough soldiers by 37,352 to provide for even one manning detail, according to General Weaver, chief of the coast artillery, in his annual report.

General Weaver declares that until the necessary trained troops are provided for this purpose the vast expenditures for coast defense already made will be worse than wasted, since the people will have been lulled into a false sense of security. Therefore he wants to increase the regular artillery by 675 officers and 14,584 men and the coast artillery militia by 902 officers and 21,204 men.

LUNN OPPOSED TO WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Socialist Mayor Also Pays His Respects to Gompers

Boston, Dec. 8.—Rev. G. R. Lunn, Socialist mayor-elect of Schenectady, N. Y., made sweeping criticisms of both Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor, the president's message and the Russian treaty, in a speech at Ford hall last night. He also surprised the Socialists present, in view of the woman suffrage plank in their platform, when he said:

"The women defeated Socialism in Los Angeles, and if you want to hold Socialism in check in Massachusetts you had better give women the vote."

Mr. Lunn said the American Federation of Labor has always depended on the strike and the lockout, whereas Socialism believes in no force other than the ballot.

"The Socialists have always opposed Samuel Gompers," he said. "If I were in Gompers' position I am very sure I would have known whether the McNamaras were innocent or guilty. If he hadn't enough brains for that, he certainly hasn't enough to head a labor organization. What organized labor wants next is to weed out such as he. He has met his Waterloo."

GIRL SOLD FOR $2100

Police and Magistrate Said to Have Witnessed Transaction

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Elmer J. Green, sheriff of Lake county, Thomas Tyrell, assistant chief of police, and Walter A. Taylor, police magistrate of Waukegan, Ills., were named as witnesses of a transaction whereby George Thompson, a gypsy, sold his daughter, Mary, to Peter Bimble, another gypsy, for $2100.

The sale of the girl came to light when Bimble appealed to the Chicago police for assistance. He said the girl's father was trying to induce the wife to leave him. Bimble, who is 25 years old, said he married the girl according to gypsy rites after paying the father $1500 and allowing the family $600 for wedding expenses.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, being desperately ill, overawes and conquers the head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians. Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from drowning.

The native laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Arunga saves his life. Sheldon fines him for making her shoot.

Joan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore and contemplates buying. Financial troubles threaten Sheldon.

Sheldon falls in love with Joan. Left alone with Joan, Joan has trouble with Goand other natives. Armed savages and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite explosion and satan drives them into the sea. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Hall have Sheldon in their power.

CHAPTER XII.

THE LOGIC OF YOUTH.

She nodded her head ruefully.

"That's what I wanted to say, but it sounds different on your lips. It sounds as though you meant it yourself and that you meant it because of me. Well, I am going to bed. Let me be your partner and you'll see me rattle the dry bones of the Solomons. Confess, I've rattled yours already."

"I should say so," he answered. "Really, you know, you have. I never received such a dressing down in my life. If any one had ever told me that I'd be a party even to the present situation— Yes, I confess you have rattled my dry bones pretty considerably."

"But that is nothing to the rattling they are going to get," she assured him as he rose and took her hand. "Good night. And do, do give me a rational decision in the morning."

"I wish I knew whether you are merely headstrong or whether you really intend to be a Solomon planter," Sheldon said in the morning at breakfast.

"I wish you were more adaptable," Joan retorted. "You have more preconceived notions than any man I ever met. Why in the name of common sense, in the name of—fair play, can't you get it into your head that I am different from the women you have known and treat me accordingly? You surely ought to know I am different. I sailed my own schooner here—skipped, if you please. I came here to make my living. You know that; I've told you often enough. It was dad's and I'm carrying it out, just as you are trying to carry out your brother's plan. Dad started to sail and search till he could find the proper islands for planting. He died, and I sailed and sailed until I arrived here." She shrugged her shoulders. "My schooner is at the bottom of the sea. I can't sail any farther; therefore I remain here. And a planter I shall certainly be. Do you want me for a partner?"

"But do you realize that I would be looked upon as the most foolish jackanapes in the south seas if I took a young girl like you in with me here on Berande?" he asked.

"No, decidedly not. But there you are again, worrying about what idiots and the generally evil minded will think of you. I should have thought you had learned self reliance on Berande, instead of needing to lean upon the moral support of every whisky guzzling, worthless south sea vagabond."

He smiled and said:

"Yes, that is the worst of it. You are unanswerable. Yours is the logic of youth, and no man can answer that. The facts of life have no place in the logic of youth. Youth must try to live according to its logic. The facts always smash youth's logic, and they usually smash youth's heart, too. It's like juvenile friendships and—and all such things; they are all right in theory, but they won't work in practice.

"Suppose we do become partners on Berande," he said, "either I'll fall in love with you or you with me. Propinquity is dangerous, you know. In fact, it is propinquity that usually gives the facer to the logic of youth."

"If you think I came to the Solomons to get married," she began wrathfully. "Well, there are better men in Hawaii, that's all. Really, you know, the way you harp on that one string would lead an unprejudiced listener to conclude that you are prurient minded"—

She stopped, appalled. His face had gone red and white with such abruptness as to startle her. He was patently very angry. She sipped the last of her coffee, and arose, saying:

"I'll wait until you are in a better temper before taking up the discussion again. That is what's the matter with you. You get angry too easily. Will you come swimming? The tide is just right."

"If she were a man, I'd bundle her off the plantation, root and crop, whaleboat, Tahitian sailors, sovereigns, and all," he said to himself after she had left the room.

But that was the trouble. She was not a man, and where would she go, and what would happen to her?

He got to his feet, lighted a cigarette, and her Stetson hat, hanging on the wall over her revolver belt, caught his eye. That was the devil of it, too. He did not want her to go. After all, she had not grown up yet. Never again would he lose his temper with her. She was a child; he must remember that. He sighed heavily. But why in reasonableness had such a child been incorporated in such a woman's form?

Her trilling laughter smote upon his reverie and he stepped to the screen door, through which he could see her running down the path to the beach. At her heels ran two of her sailors, Papehara and Mahameme, in scarlet lava-lavas, with naked sheath knives gleaming in their belts. It was an other sample of her wilfulness. Despite entreaties and commands, and warnings of the dangers from sharks, she persisted in swimming at any and all times, and by special preference, it seemed to him, immediately after eating.

He watched her take the water, diving cleanly like a boy, from the end of the little pier, and he watched her strike out, with single overhand stroke, her henchmen swimming a dozen feet away on either side. He did not have much faith in their ability to beat off a hungry man eater, though he did believe implicitly that their lives would go bravely before hers in case of an attack.

Straight out they swam, their heads growing smaller and smaller. There was a slight restless heave to the sea, and soon the three heads were disappearing behind it with greater frequency. He strained his eyes to keep them in sight, and finally fetched the telescope on to the veranda. A squall was making over from the direction of Florida; but then she and her men laughed at squalls and the white, choppy sea at such times.

The squall blackened the sky, beat the ocean white where he had last seen the three heads, and then blotted out sea and sky and everything with its deluge of rain. It passed on, and Berande emerged in the bright sunshine as the three swimmers emerged from the sea. Sheldon slipped inside with the telescope and through the screen door watched her run up the path, shaking down her hair as she ran, to the fresh water shower under the house.

On the veranda that afternoon he broached the proposition of a chaperon as delicately as he could, explaining the necessity at Berande for such a body, a housekeeper to run the boys and the storeroom and perform divers other useful functions. When he had finished he waited anxiously for what Joan would say.

"Then you don't like the way I've been managing the house?" was her first objection. And next, brushing his attempted explanations aside: "One of two things would happen. Either I should cancel our partnership agreement and go away, leaving you to get another chaperon to chaperon your chaperon, or else I'd take the old hen out in the whaleboat and drown her. Do you imagine for one moment that I sailed my schooner down here to this raw edge of the earth in order to put myself under a chaperon?"

"But, really—er—you know—a chaperon is a necessary evil," he objected.

"We've got along nicely so far without one. Did I have one on the Miele? And yet I was the only woman on board. There are only three things I am afraid of—bumblebees, scarlet fever and chaperon. Ugh, the clucking, evil minded monsters, finding wrong in everything, seeing sin in the most innocent actions and suggesting sin—yes, causing sin by their diseased imaginings!"

"Phew!" Sheldon leaned back from the table in mock fear.

"As if anything good were worth while when it has to be guarded and put in leg irons and handcuffs in order to keep it good. Your desire for a chaperon as much as implies that I am that sort of a creature. I prefer to be good because it is good to be good rather than because I can't be bad because some Argus eyed old frump won't let me have a chance to be bad."

"But it—it is not that," he put in. "It is what others will think."

"Let them think, the nasty minded wretches! It is because men like you are afraid of the nasty minded that you allow their opinions to rule you."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOW TO SERVE RABBITS.

THIS being the season when "Br'er Rabbit" contributes his plumpness to make the bill of fare attractive, a few recipes for cooking this toothsome animal will not be unappreciated.

Broiling is quite a favorite way of preparing game. Rabbits should be broiled forty minutes. For roasting about thirty minutes is necessary. Roast game is generally served with jelly and garnished with slices of lemon, watercress, parsley or potato chips.

In selecting a rabbit see that the body is firm, without odor. The flesh should look reddish. Old rabbits have stiff ears with rough edges and rough worn paws. Select a young rabbit in preference to an old one. Tame rabbits are seldom palatable.

Roast Rabbit.

To roast a rabbit proceed as follows. Clean the animal thoroughly. Put into a dripping pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper and spread with butter. Add a small onion and carrot sliced with water enough to cover the bottom of the pan.

Put this into a quick oven, basting often and adding more water if necessary. When done strain the gravy, and when the rabbit is served pour the gravy over it. Serve with cranberry sauce.

Stewed rabbit is a less rich dish than roasted rabbit. For stewing skin and clean the rabbit thoroughly, cut into pieces and prepare a stewpan by putting into it a quarter of a pound of butter. Let the butter melt and then place in it the pieces of rabbit. Turn them nicely until they are browned.

Take out of the pan and pour in a pint of boiling water, add a tablespoonful of flour which has previously been stirred to a paste in cold water, a little onion juice, a tablespoonful of salt, add the meat and let the rabbit stew until tender.

Rabbit Pie.

Rabbit pie is a dish that is a favorite in English households. The rabbit must be stewed and seasoned well. A deep baking dish is lined with puff paste or biscuit crust, and the rabbit is then placed in the dish covered with an upper crust and baked just like an ordinary chicken pie.

In fact, the cooking of rabbit is very similar to that of fowls, for it is fricasseed, stewed, larded or baked like chicken.

For a dressing put one cupful of sour cream into a basin. Stir in gradually half a cupful of melted butter, the juice of a lemon carefully drop by drop and the whisked whites of two eggs.

Fruit salad with mayonnaise or French dressing may always be served with game.

STRATTON WILL CONTEST

Two Women Appear In Court as Wives of the Late General

New York, Dec. 8.—Two women, both of whom said they were widows of General Horatio M. Stratton, once commander-in-chief of the United Boys' Brigade of America, appeared in court when Stratton's will was offered for probate.

"Mrs. Marie L. Stratton," who said she married the general in 1883, is contesting the will, which leaves all his property to "Mrs. Lelia H. Stratton," who says she became his wife in 1900.

The contestant said that Stratton lived with her at Paulsboro, N. J., and that the first she knew of his alleged dual life was May 16 last, when he died and she was notified to come to Brooklyn. There, she says, she found that he had been living with the woman to whom he left his estate.

IMPORTANT MATTERS AT SCHOOL MEETING

A regular meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Adams school was held in the school hall, Thursday evening, and was attended by over two hundred. The president, Alfred O. Diack was in the chair and after the records of the previous meeting had been read, a musical program was in order, which was furnished by the Misses Fallon and Barry, graduates of the school in a manner that was greatly appreciated by those present.

The speaker of evening, Dr. D. B. Reardon, was next introduced by the presiding officer and his discourse on "Medical Inspection" was interesting and highly instructive and enabled the parents and others present to derive much useful knowledge concerning the physical qualities of the child. The doctor spoke in a clear, easy manner and his every argument was thoroughly weighed by the many who were in attendance. He dwelt at length on the different phases of inspection and brought home the necessity of stringent care with regard to the development of the child.

The excellent address will appear in full in Saturday's Ledger.

Dr. Reardon was warmly applauded and was tendered a vote of thanks at the conclusion of his remarks.

After the doctor's speech, the report of the building committee was presented and was received with much favorable comment. It was stated that a petition for the Madison avenue site had been presented to the City Council, containing 516 names. Councilman John R. Richards, a member of the finance committee, the committee to which this petition has been referred, asserted that he felt sure the petition would go through, and added that the request of the petition would without a doubt, be granted.

An executive committee was appointed, whose duty it shall be to keep in touch with the progress of the petition, and to report, when necessary, concerning the petition itself. This committee is to do the active workin bringing about the selection of the Medison avenue lot, the place upon which the new Adams school will be erected.

The matter of ash accumalation near the school building, caused much discussion. It was stated that after a lapse of seven years, the ashes in the rear of the school building were removed about a year ago. At that time 18 ash cans were purchased by the school committee, in an endeavor to have the ashes collected regularly. This expenditure involved a sum of about four dollars for each can. Since the purchase of the cans, the ashes have not been collected and failure to do so has greatly aroused the parents and teachers, who feel that the ashes are a drawback to the school children while indulging in recreation.

It was said that the matter was brought before the local Board of Health, but that this body claimed that the Highway department exercised jurisdiction in the matter. This latter body was conferred with, but it was declared by its members that the Board of Health was the body of authority in the collection of ashes. In this way, no satisfaction could be derived and no definite action could be reached.

A committee of five was appointed to bring the matter before the Mayor, with a view to having the same privileges in this respect requited to the Adams school, as were forthcoming in the Wollaston district.

Principal Townsend was introduced and extended a cordial invitation to all parents, teachers, pupils and friends of the school, to be present at the reception to be tendered Miss Eliza Sheahan in the school hall next Thursday, in honor of her completion of a 46 years' teaching career. Miss Sheahan is about to retire and a fitting reception will add greatly to the occasion.

A committee, composed of former pupils of Miss Sheahan, was appointed to draw up resolutions of esteem for the veteran teacher and this petition will be presented and read at the next meeting of the association.

Two solos given by Miss Dagda Nelson, assisted by Professor Wrigley terminated the exercises, while the serving of refreshments by the hospitality commitee, under the charge of Miss Jennie Griffin, teacher of he fifth grade, assisted by five parents, brought a most successful gathering to a close.

MILTON HIGH SPORTS.

Principal Charles L. Curtis of the Milton High school is endeavoring to introduce three forms of sport which have hitherto been unknown to Milton High school athletes. These are ice baseball, indoor baseball and fencing.

Mr. Curtis thinks if these sports were adopted by the Greater Boston schools they would remain as ideal sports, for in every school there are numerous members, who, on account of parental objections or other reasons, fail to make the respective teams, and have no way of earning the insignia of the school, but would willingly volunteer their services in order to establish these new forms of recreation and incidentally win the coveted letter.

It is Mr. Curtis's plan to form inter-class teams at the Milton High school and compete during the winter months in addition to the already major sports of hockey and basketball.

OPENING GAME.

The basket ball season for the Quincy A. A., will open this evening in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy. There will be two games, between the first and second teams of the local association and those of the Cunningham Gymnasium association. Both teams are evenly matched and as great rivalry exists between them, some fine playing should be in order.

The local teams will be comprised of former high school stars and members of the football team and as fifteen cents will admit one to the hall, a large crowd should be in attendance.

New canals having been reported on the planet Mars, they seem to make the dirt fly up there even faster than Col. Goethals can.

BASKETBALL.

The basket ball season of Quincy A. A., was ushered in under most favorable conditions in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, last evening before a large attendance. The local boys had the strong Cunningham "gym" players for the attractions, and the games between both first and second teams were of the high class variety.

The game between the second teams was the most exciting and was lost by the local players mainly on fouls, Reid of the visitors, securing the winning goal for the Milton team in the last 15 seconds of play. The second team is a very formidable quintet and bids fair to round out into one of the best combinations in the Greater Boston A. A. A. U. league. In the senior game, the Quincy players outclassed the visitors, winning by the score of 31 to 15.

O'Rourke, the plucky right forward of the Quincy team, was easily the star of the contest, securing no less than sixteen points for his team mates, a number in itself that was enough to annex a victory. Shields played well for Cunningham Gym.

INDICT ESPANO FOR MURDER

Held For Killing Guiseppe Rucher Last Sunday

OTHER CASES

The Grand Jury for the December term of the Norfolk Superior Criminal Court found two indictments for murder and two for assault with intent to kill, at its session in Dedham Friday.

The two murder indictments are against Peter Cassette of Weymouth and Saverio Espano of Quincy. Cassette is charged with the murder of Nicholas Cassette at Weymouth, Dec. 1, 1911. Espano is charged with the murder of Guiseppe Rucher at Quincy by stabbing with a knife. The two counts each in connection with the same charge.

No bill was returned against Peter Gill of Baltimore who was held on the charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Arthur W. Holcomb at Holbrook, by striking him with an automobile.

The assault with intent to murder indictments are against Vicenzo Ghiardi of Braintree and Domenico Mellanozzo of Quincy. The first is charged with an assault upon Joseph Sestch at Braintree and the second with such an assault upon Frank Mariano at Quincy.

KNIFE AND RAZOR WILL BE EXAMINED

The knife and razor, which are said to have figured in the murderous affray on Water street last Sunday, were taken to the Harvard medical school Friday by Lieut. McKay to have Dr. Wood examine the stains upon them to determine whether or not they are blood stains. These implements figure in the trial of Espano, the alleged murder who was indicted by the Norfolk grand jury this week. The question is not much question but what the stains were human blood, but it is a matter to have it actually determined.

TRAWLERS WERE SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED TODAY

Two more steam trawlers, of the class of the Spray and Ripple, were successfully lahnched at the Fore River yards at 1 o'clock today. There was no function of any kind over the launching, and no fair hand spilled any wealthy water over the vessels bows. All that was done was to saw away the soul pieces and let the vessels slide into the river. The two new fishermen will be known by the names of Swell and Surf, the Swell being the first to be sent overboard. As stated above these boats are practically the same as Spray and Ripple, tre only material difference being that they are just three feet longer overall than the others of the class. The overall length being 128 feet.

These two boats were constructed in a remarkable short space of time, for it was just five weeks ago that their keels were laid, and early in the new year they will be on the fishing grounds.

Little Mary Recites for Anty Drudge.

Anty Drudge—"Now say it again, Dearie. It's every word true."

Little Mary—"See my nice, new party frock,
So clean and fresh and bright.
Anty washed it with Fels-Naptha;
That's why it is so white."

Just a few of the thousands of unsolicited testimonials regarding Fels-Naptha soap:

So Much Less Work.

"Through Mrs. Dr. Robinson, I learned first of your naptha soap and must admit I tried it without much hope of success, but I was surprised at the result. The following week I tried it on a large washing and was delighted beyond measure. I will use no other as long as I can get Fels-Naptha. I tell every lady about it that I come in contact with, for I feel it is a duty I owe every working sister. I laughingly told a gentleman that a man did not love his wife if he did not provide her with Fels-Naptha soap. My family says I am half crazy about it, but I have so much less work, so much more time for other things and so much less fatigued when my washing is done that I feel I cannot speak too highly of Fels-Naptha soap or speak of it too often. All my neighbors will endorse every word I have written and I could write pages."

MRS. J. B. MAGINNIS,
San Antonio, Texas.

Clothes Whiter Than Ever Before.

"I have been using Fels-Naptha soap for almost six months and consider it the only soap for dining room, kitchen and laundry. My silver and glass never looked so bright and beautiful as it does since using Fels-Naptha soap, and the clothes, table linen, etc., are whiter than ever before."

KATHARINE HARMAN,
Owing Mills, Md.

Fels-Naptha Don't Injure the Clothes.

"On account of the illness of my washwoman, I had a chance to give Fels-Naptha soap a thorough test and I wish to say that I am more than pleased. It don't injure the clothes in the least. It just makes the dirt let go and leaves them clean and white as snow. Several highly advertised and labor-saving soaps have come under my notice, but none seems to fill the bill like Fels-Naptha. My husband just asked me if I was trying to make a name for myself as a washwoman. I said no, but with Fels-Naptha soap I can be independent of a washwoman if I wish."

MRS. G. N. STROUD, Louisville, Ky.

Fels-Naptha Soap Did It.

"There are so many worthless soaps (especially of the laundry variety) on the market now that I feel it is a duty to you, and it certainly is a pleasure to tell you how highly we appreciate Fels-Naptha. I have used the soap since first introduced to us by one of your agents, nearly five years ago, and feel safe in saying that it is superior to any upon the market to-day. When we have an unusually large washing and comment upon how nicely I have accomplished the task, my husband invariably says Fels-Naptha did it."

EMILY APPLE, Johnstown, Pa.

Boon to Housekeepers.

"Never before in my experience as a housekeeper have I felt called upon to write my thanks to any of the numerous firms who have 'Aids to Housekeepers' on the market, but since I first used Fels-Naptha soap I have been filled with gratitude to the person who gave to housekeepers this great labor-saving soap. I have sung its praises until my friends think it is really quite a joke, because for everything my answer is 'Use Fels-Naptha soap.' I want to thank you for the great comfort and pleasure its use has brought to me and I say sincerely that you have introduced an article which will be a boon to the housekeeper."

MRS. EMMETT, Dayton, Ohio.

Every Spot Came Off.

"I never before wrote a testimonial for anything, but my sense of what is due you prompts me to send you this unsolicited statement of the worth of your splendid soap—Fels-Naptha. During the winter our stovepipe sprung apart at one of the joints (in the hallway) and the snow melted and run into the soot forming a sort of creosote water, I suppose—which spattered out on the floor and washboards. It was a most unpleasant mar on an otherwise clean floor. We had supposed we should have to hire a painter to scrape the floor and washboards and then re-varnish and paint, as we had tried soaps in vain and other things too,—to remove the unsightly, black-spattered stain. Imagine my surprise and delight when my girl applied Fels-Naptha soap. Every spot came off and the wood was as clean as new. I appreciate the value of such a household friend, and gladly commend it to all housekeepers who want a good thing."

MRS. M. D. MCKEE,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

Only Soap He Could Use.

"Crossing the continent last summer, I noticed a newsboy on a train in Arizona in the wash room with the private soap box. I asked him if ordinary soap was not good enough for him and he replied that crossing through alkali country Fels-Naptha was the only kind that could be used without cracking the hands or face and he advised me to never travel without it. My wife uses Fels-Naptha soap for washing and other domestic purposes and told me last evening that it was the most satisfactory soap she had ever used."

VICTOR KAUFFMANN,
Washington, D. C.

Fels-Naptha comes in a red and green wrapper.

MAINE BLOWN UP FROM OUTSIDE

Gist of Short Statement Issued by Navy Department

NAVAL BOARD FILES REPORT

Confirms Finding of Those Who Investigated Disaster Shortly After Explosion Occurred—Mine the Probable Instrument of Destruction, as "Low Form of Explosive" Was Used—Full Report May Be Kept Secret

Washington, Dec. 9.—The United States battleship Maine, which sank beneath the waters of Havana harbor in February, 1898, as the result of an explosion, was blown up from the outside.

This was announced by the naval board which has been examining the wreck. The finding confirms the report of the original investigators who made a superficial examination of the wreck shortly after the disaster.

The statement given out by the navy department is brief. Secretary Meyer does not believe it necessary to issue any explanation of the board's conclusions, beyond the flat statement that an exterior explosion was responsible for the loss of the warship and the lives of many men. The statement follows:

"The injuries to the bottom of the Maine were caused by the explosion of a charge of a low form of explosive exterior to the ship between frames 28 and 31, strake B, port side. This resulted in igniting and exploding the contents of the six-inch reserve magazine, A-14-M, said contents including a large quantity of black powder. The more or less complete explosion of the contents of the remaining forward magazine followed. The magazine explosions resulted in the destruction of the vessel."

Secretary Meyer announced that there might be a further statement on the report by the board after it had been considered by the president. One member of the board was of the opinion that the report would never be published in full, but would be kept in the confidential archives of the navy department.

The declaration that a "low form of explosive" was used in the outside explosion, indicates a belief that a mine and not a dirigible torpedo was the instrument of destruction.

This only deepens the mystery of the destruction of the Maine. A mine charged with sufficient gunpowder to blow in the bottom of the ship must have weighed several hundred pounds. To plant such a mine and lay the connections for its discharge would have required the services of a number of men.

Retirement of Spanish War Heroes

Washington, Dec. 9.—Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright, aide for operations in the navy department, who was executive officer of the battleship Maine when she was blown up in Havana harbor and who later won fame in the Spanish-American war, will retire from active service Dec. 17 on account of age. He will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Vreeland as aide for operations.

Rear Admiral Raymond P. Rodgers, president of the naval war college, Newport, R. I., another Spanish war hero, will retire on account of age Dec. 20 and will be succeeded by Captain Rodgers.

Both Wainwright and Rodgers are extra numbers in their grades, having been advanced for conspicuous conduct in battle, and their retirement will not result in the advancement of officers of lower grades.

Woman Says Huge Secret Society Still Practices Polygamy

Boston, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Louis E. Brittain of Boston, who is closely related to the heads of the Mormon church and who was a Mormon missionary until two years ago, when she became converted to Christianity, talked of Mormonism in Utah and in Boston before an audience of women here. She said:

"Mormonism is just a huge secret society, and one thing that you Gentiles do not seem to realize is that Mormonism without polygamy ceases to be Mormonism. Polygamy still is taught. As to its practice since the so-called manifesto of 1892, I cannot commit myself."

WILL CONTEST STARTS

Eccentric Bachelor Left Large Estate to "Ten Prettiest Girls"

Canton, O., Dec. 9.—The ten prettiest girls in the Stark county courthouse are likely to lose $10,000 each if the suit started by Letitia Rudy to break the will of the late Samuel Rudy is successful.

Rudy was an eccentric bachelor of 86 years. He frequented the courthouse and ten of the most beautiful girls employed there were often complimented by him upon their stunning looks. He died recently and when his will was read it was found that he had left $10,000 to the ten prettiest girls 'because he liked them."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hub's "Moral Insurgent" Tells What is Needed to Secure Justice—"Shop Early" Should Have Been Advertised in September—Shower of Cabbages is Anti Suffrage Argument at Faneuil Hall Market—Former President Eliot's Grandson to Appear in Equal Suffrage Play—Christmas Mystery Play is Copley Society's Seasonal Novelty.

Tart but true is a statement regarding current philanthropies throughout the country which Rev. Dr. A. A. Berle made at the opening of his popular Sunday evening meetings in Tremont Theatre: "What the moral insurgents of today want is not benevolence but justice. What they long for is not a superior breed of men to wash them with bath houses, feed them with soupes, but the freedom of action and inikitchens, amuse them with playgrounds, moralize them with churchtiative which will enable them to bathe at home, dine at home, amuse themselves in their own way at their own expense and to become good by inward assent to righteousness not by 'movements' designed to reach the 'masses'."

The Bostonian who attempts to make his or her way through the shopping district these days is tempted to advise the street railway company and the mercantile associations which have been recently publishing placards and promptings to "Shop Early" to begin their next year's campaign in September instead of the latter part of November. The bright holly embellished cards suspended on the fronts of the street cars have evidently had an energizing effect on the public but it would have saved several years of the average citizen's life if the impetus had been applied a month earlier. Already the cars are jammed with parcel laden humanity and the stores still disgorge an endless crowd of gift seekers. The Christmas face immortalized by Jennie Allen is paramount, though occasionally there appears the care free countenance and bland smile of the shopper who has shopped early and got the best of the bargains both in nerve wear and merchandise.

The always original Copley Society, composed largely of New England artists, is proving itself more versatile than ever this season in the entertainments prepared for the enjoyment and enlightenment of its members, friends and the public. The Society contrary to the understanding of a few misinformed citizens, does not confine itself to exhibitions of famous paintings and other art objects, but gives considerable attention to encouragement of literary, musical, dramatic and other arts of a classical standard. But recently Mme. Cerutti, under the auspices of the Society, presented her charming classic dances based on the ancient Greek, Assyrian and Egyptian dances. Now follow the three performances of a Christmas Mystery Play entitled "Eager Heart" to be staged under the rules of the Incorporated Company of Eager Heart, London, with music from Corelli or from Bach's Christmas Oratorio, Pastoral Symphony, Chorales and old Manx Carol, mediaeval costuming—and a list of committees of which the personel looks like a quotation from "Who's Who in Bostos." In the near future there will be an Assyrian Festival in which the various members of the Society taking part will be robed in costumes such as those worn in ancient Nineveh and Babylon. The society members are finding their hands full in preparing for the various activities of the season, while the response which their efforts have elicited from their friends and acquaintances has given them much pleasure.

"I wish I could take every woman of you where I've been twice—to Holloway jail. I'd make you understand then what the English militant suffrage movement means, and what your forefathers felt when they emptied those chests of tea in the harbor. We mean to get the vote in England next year, or know the reason why," said Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst in her speech at Tremont Temple December 5. If every woman of New England doesn't know about the progress of the woman's movement throughout the world the fault won't lie with the various equal suffrage associations of the section which have never been so active as now. Bay State solons soon to meet on Beacon Hill will have to face the demands of a committee headed by Miss Mary Gay for a full and explicit declaration of their attitude toward the political equality of the sexes. Last year a professional merry Andrew was empowered to laugh the woman's case out of court; this year it is unlikely that such cheap tactics will succeed. Meantime, in the aid of the cause there has been arranged for Dec. 12, at the fashionable Chilton Club a grand operatic concert with Constantino and Jeska Schwartz as the principal singers. Each of these distinguished artists is an enthusiastic suffragist as are others of the Boston Opera Company. There is also in preparation, to be given in January at the Plymouth Theatre, a performance of Clyde Fitch's "Her Great Match." Prominent among the actors in this play will be Samuel A. Eliot, Jr., grandson of former President Eliot, and secretary of the Harvad organization that is promoting woman suffrage. So far, therefore, as Boston is concerned, the community seems fairly to seethe with suffragism. Yet stubborn opposition of a certain kind remains. This opposition found characteristic expression when to advertise the Pankhurst Meeting two young ladies of the Massachusetts Suffage Association, without in any way violating the proprieties, drove Lucy Stone's historic buggy past Foneuil Hall and Quincy Market. They were applauded by some of the marketmen; yet from another element were promptly met with a certain kind of anti-suffrage argument, which is notably crude and primitive and which in thelong run reacts against those who employ it. Briefly the young ladies were pelted with cabbages.

TRIANGLE FACTORY FIRE

Witness Tells of Death Trap Which Caused Awful Holocaust

New York, Dec. 9.—More evidence to show that the awful death list in the Asch building fire was due to rag piles and locked doors was obtained by the prosecution in the trial of Max Blanck and Isaac Harris, proprietors of the Triangle Waist company, on the charge of manslaughter.

There were placed under the cutting tables in the firm's lofts on the eighth floor, according to a former employe, where piles of rags were kept, and at the time of the fire, he said, the rags had not been taken away for about two or three weeks. It was under one of these tables, he testified, that he saw the fire start, and this testimony another witness corroborated.

Samuel Bernstein, employed on the ninth floor, testified that on hearing the cry of fire he ran to the Washington place door and tried violently to open it, but could not do so, and there was no key in the lock.

Mary Pucelli and Joseph Brennan testified they, too, tried the Washington place door and could not open it.

MANCHU DYNASTY DOOMED

Situation at Chinese Capital Considered Very Precarious

London, Dec. 9.—Brushing aside the conflicting statements from Pekin and elsewhere in China as to what Yuan Shi Kai is to do, and predictions as to the outcome of the Wuchang and Shanghai conferences of the revolutionists, one fact stands out plain—that nothing can save the Manchu dynasty.

A big foreign loan at this time might give Yuan funds with which to fight and bribe the rebels, but this would only postpone matters. Foreign intervention in favor of maintaining the status quo might prevail for a while, but it seems inevitable that the usurpers must depart.

The situation in Pekin is precarious. In event of a rising of the Manchu soldiery or an attack by the rebels on the capital, there is no place in China that could furnish a refuge for the royal family outside of the foreign legation compound.

GROSS NEGLECT OF STEERAGE CHARGED

British Ship Fined $7960 Because of Numerous Deaths

Washington, Dec. 9.—Penalties aggregating $7960 were imposed by Acting Secretary Cable of the department of commerce and labor on the British steamer Oteric, charged with what officials say is the worst case of neglect of steerage passengers ever brought before the department under the passengr act of 1882.

Among the Oteric's 1242 passengers there were in the eight weeks of her voyage fifty-eight deaths, fifty-seven being children.

The births numbered fourteen. The department charges that the sexes were not properly segregated during the greater part of the voyage, that the ventilation of the ship was inadequate and greatly increased the mortality rate, that the hospital was ill-ventilated and without proper equipment, and that the sanitary conditions of the vessel generally were almost "beyond belief."

Acting Secretary Cable, after giving ample opportunity for the ship's agents to make a defense, directed that the full penalties be imposed.

INVESTIGATION PROMISED

Consolidation of Steamship Companies Leads to a Protest

Washington, Dec. 9.—Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston secured the promise of President Taft for an investigation of the reported consolidation of the Eastern Steamship, Metropolitan Steamship and Maine Steamship companies into a single corporation.

According to Fitzgerald, the consolidation would give shareholders in the Eastern Steamship company $3,000,000 in bonds and $3,000,000 in stock in the new corporation for their present $3,000,000 in stock in the Eastern company.

This the mayor characterized as "stock manipulation." The president intends to direct Attorney General Wickersham to make an investigation of the merger. Protests against it already have been lodged with the Boston chamber of commerce.

GOMPERS TO BE CALLED UPON

Will Be Asked For Light Upon McNamara Defense Fund

IMPORTANT ARRESTS SOON

Evident Determination to Get After "Men Higher Up"—Ryan's Name Not Among Those Who Dencunced McNamara Brothers—Seizure of Books of Salt Lake City Union Considered of Great Importance

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 9.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will be called before the federal grand jury sitting at Indianapolis to explain in detail where the $190,000 McNamara defense fund was expended.

This information came from Indianapolis, following an interview given by United States District Attorney Miller, who has repeatedly declared that Gompers had guilty knowledge of the nation-wide dynamite conspiracy.

In this connection there comes a most significant statement from Samuel L. Browne, chief investigator for the government here:

"The next arrest in this case will be 'higher up,' a man well known in the labor world, and it will take place soon."

It was said that in all probability no indictments will be returned for a week and perhaps for even a longer time. Information gathered here indicated that the scope of the Los Angeles investigation has not been entirely determined by the department of justice at Washington. In view of the similar investigation in progress at Indianapolis it is possible that the one here will be used to "clean up" the Pacific coast angles of the affair, leaving the wider range for the east.

Reports are current in Washington that the labor leaders have reached the parting of the ways and that James Duncan, first vice president of the federation, is preparing to lead a fight to overthrow Gompers.

Members of the district attorney's office are discussing the fact that F. M. Ryan, president of the Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, did not sign the statement of the committee of the American Federation of Labor made in Washington denouncing the McNamara brothers. It is but one of a number of instances where the district attorney's office has manifested an especial interest in Ryan. As head of the organization of which John J. McNamara was secretary and treasurer, it is said, too, it is not unlikely that he will be subpoenaed to appear as a witness before the federal grand jury.

Ryan's sudden departure from Washington led to the report that the other members of the committee did not desire his signature.

With Ortie McManigal revealing the facts of the dynamite outrages to a federal jury in Los Angeles, where the McNamaras are awaiting their incarceration in San Quentin prison for blowing up The Times and the Llewellyn Iron Works; while Detective Burns is hunting evidence of explosions in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Springfield, a new development came from Salt Lake City.

Deputy marshals there have seized the books of the Iron Workers' union, just as they did in Indianapolis. J. S. Munsey, business agent of the union, has been summonsed before the grand jury at Los Angeles. He is said to have given Jim McNamara a refuge at his home after The Times tragedy.

The books seized at Salt Lake City are wanted, it is said on high authority, to trace to their ultimate disposition large sums of money sent by the secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' union (J. J. McNamara) to the local union, ostensibly for "organization in the west." Although the books will be submitted first to the Los Angeles grand jury, copies will be sent to Indianapolis for comparison with the books of the International union which are under scrutiny of the federal grand jury there.

Well Stocked Shops In New York Relieved of $50,000 Worth of Liquor

New York, Dec. 9.—Armed with warrants issued by the supreme court, forty members of State Excise Commissioner Farley's force raided thirty wine and liquor stores and seized $50,000 worth of liquor. This liquor will be destroyed. Farley led the raiders.

Most of the raided places had just stocked up for the Christmas trade. Police accompanied the raiders.

In nearly all cases the dealers were charged with violating both federal and state laws.

LITERARY AFTERNOON.

At the home of Mrs. Thomas Fenno, Hancock street, Wollaston, club women met Wednesday afternoon for the fourth lesson in Modern Literature given by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney under the auspices of the Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club of which Mrs. John O. Short is chairman.

Mrs. Gurney first spoke of the Irish players recently in Boston and commented on their play "The play boy of the Western world" of the great work of the Gaelic League, the important revival ofthe Gaelic language and literature of Irish folk lore, fairy tales, legends, tales and songs.

She spoke briefly of Oliver Goldsmith, Burke, Ferguson, Swift, Sheridan, O'Connell, William Carleton, Banim Brothers, Miss Edgeworth, Charles Lever, Yeats, J. M. Synge and of Lady Gregory and of the difference in the Old the Middle and especially the New representing the many phases ofthe Celtic writers. The last of the 19th century Sir Samuel Ferguson rescued from oblivion and with great success, the old Irish folk tales of considerable length and old legends with all their grace, beauty and charm—and rich knowldege of folk lore and she explained how the old Irish rhythm purely Celtic differed from the English rhythm.

Her explanation of her pet theory—that every race and individual had its part to do in the development of mankind and that each had its opportunity at some time led up to the recent development ofthe Celtic literature. The new era of civilization is spiritual dealing with the inner things of life and the Celt is orur leading exponents ofthese qualities.

Lady Gregory has some 300 plays which she has written and collected. Mrs. Gurney read that wonderfully marvellous tradegy "The Riders by the Sea" by J. M. Synge and the exeedingly humorous comedy sketch "The pot of broth" by Wm. B. Yeats, and recited Darby, the blast from "Tom Burke of Ours" by Charles Lever.

Mrs. Gurney made her characters very real, her enunciation bringing out the best points. The last two were enjoyably funny. In closing the time allowed for a very brief sketch of the "Play boy of the Western World" which was appreciated, Mrs. Gurney telling it finely in her own words. Mrs. Clarence Burgin of 95 Goffe street is to open her home for the next lesson on January 3. Subject, Bernard Shaw.

SAYS SHE FEARED STOKES

Miss Graham Heard That Millionaire Killed Al Adams

New York, Dec. 9.—Lillian Graham sprung the greatest sensation that has arisen in the case of the shooting show girls, when she testified late yesterday afternoon that she shot Millionaire W. E. D. Stokes because "the fact flashed through my mind about his having murdered Al Adams, and I knew he would murder me."

In previous testimony, Miss Graham was asked if Mrs. Stella Singleton, her sister, had talked to her about Stokes.

"Yes," the witness swore, "she told me he was a very, very dangerous man. She said she had heard Stokes killed Al Adams and was seen coming down the stairs at the Ansonia hotel near Adams' room shortly after the body of Adams was found."

Al Adams, the policy king, died at the Ansonia Oct. 1, 1907. It was given out at the time that it was a case of suicide.

Those in the drill were: Mary Anderson, Josephine Kessler, Lillie Lund, Barbara McTear, Ethel Poch and Gertrude Poch and they were drilled by Miss Nettie A. Parlee.

ADAMS CHAPTER D. R.

The Adams Chapter, D. R., meeting held at the home of Mrs. Antoinette I. Paige, 17 Davis street, Wollaston Park Monday afternoon was a very pleasant affair. The entertainment consisted of solos by Miss Hunt of Weymouth with Mrs. McDowell at the piano and a paper on "Historic Cambridge" read by Mrs. Payson of Roxbury.

An elaborate lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Mary L. Hinkley. Most of the members stayed for an evening of whist which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Republican party has got to get rid of the ManChu dynasty before it can stand any show at the next elections.

We are authorized to deny the report that the eight governors will be warned by the hotel men of gay New York not to blow out the gas.

The newspapers of the day after Thanksgiving reported "Atrocities by the Turks." In our country the turks were the victim of many atrocities.

A new Greek play has been discovered, and the college men will probably have to hunt up a fruit stand before they can find anyone to read it.

Foot ball is a lot safer this year, only 11 deaths. Would there have been 40,000 admissions for the Harvard-Yale game if they had given these figures out before that event?

Roosevelt is charged with having made a deal with Wall street, but there will not be much complaint if he worked off the two spots on them and gave them no high trumps.

If you see a man scratching his head and studying a dusty old arithmetic text book, he is probably trying to figure out what his 983,383d part of a share of Standard Oil is worth.

When the reporters are listening the Congressmen will speak respectfully of the Tariff board, but for purposes of practical politics they will place a higher value on the garden seeds.

Now if all the prisoners would kindly plead guilty like the McNamara brothers and save all this bother, some of us would be willing to perform our duty as citizens by serving on juries.

Secretary Meyer says there are 12 battle ships that should be retired soon. But if they are sent to the junk heap too soon, how will the politicians get all the navy jobs that they need to distribute.

It takes an 11 car train to accommodate the nine Western governors who are touring the Eastern states. They must be bringing almost as much baggage along as it takes for the college girl to get by the winter term.

As Carnegie only included one author, Shakespeare, in his list of 21 great men, what excuse has he to offer for giving 5,000 libraries to circulate Rex Beach and George Barr McCutcheon among a long suffering people?

The report that President Taft is having a derby hat built is one of many signs going to show that the "plug hat" is gradually being relegated to Indian doctors, circus salesmen, and the more infantile sprouts of the Smart Set.

A dispatch from Portland, Me., says that "Maine and Vermont quarry men are anxiously awaiting a decision of the secretary of the treasury whether to use Maine or Vermont granite for the proposed million dollar postoffice building at the captial. The contract will be worth $600,000."

What's the matter with some of our own concerns coming in for a share of the plum, or is this another case where shipping facilities handicap local men. The sooner we improve conditions, it seems the better.

Probably the Quincy Historical Society has no idea of changing history or misleading the public, but never-the-less it is seldom that the birthplaces of the President Adamses get into print correctly since the Society has called their headquarters "The John Adams Cottage." That is what it is, but previous to this the two old houses were known as the birthplace of John Adams and birthplace of John Quincy Adams or the John Adams and John Quincy Adams house.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution occupy the John Adams house and the Quincy Historical Society the John Quincy Adams house. As the Historical Society calls its house "the John Adams Cottage" it has led to the confusion not only of Quincy people but to the stranger within our gates as it makes two John Adams houses.

An interesting book recently came to our desk from W. R. Comer of Wellesley, entitled "Landmarks in the Old Bay State," but Quincy's old landmarks, the two Adams houses are mixed and the pictures of the houses wrongly labeled, the author being unconsciously led into an error to his disadvantage and to the misleading of his readers.

It is a small matter and one that cannot perhaps be obviated. The Historical Society might change its sign to read "The John Adams Cottage, birthplace of John Quincy Adams" or have two signs for the guidance of the passersby.

CONGRESS AND NEWSPAPERS.

To a foreigner, one of the things that seems strange in our political habits, is the comparatively slight attention given by our people to the proceedings of our Congress.

Those of us who read the English newspapers are impressed by the columns and columns given to verbatim reports of Parliament. Over there a political reporter must be a good short hand man, and the papers often take several columns of a good speech.

Here our newspapers boil down even the better Congressional speeches, to half a dozen sentences. And yet there is a complaint that the day of oratory is gone by. Why should a Congressman allow the fire of patriotism to express itself in burning oratory, when his colleagues are out talking about postmasterships in the cloak rooms and the newspaper reporters trying to find out who will get the nomination for president?

It has always been our belief that the press associations tend to misjudge the temper of the people in this respect.

In Congress we have warring against each other the interests of conflicting classes and sections, and to the newspaper reporter who knows how to select dramatic material from a mass of verbiage, it is a human interest story that beats most of our theater plays.

PARCELS POST VS. RETAILER.

The coming fight in Congress over the parcels post proposition was forecasted a few days ago by John A. Green, secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers. From observation of English conditions, he told the Senate committee on the post office that few small merchants could survive the competition of the big city stores.

No one wants to see the small retailer wiped off the map. But has the small retailer stopped to look at the benefits the parcels post would bring him?

Take the case of a village grocer covering an outlying territory within a radius of half a dozen miles or more. He probably now has to support two or three order and delivery teams. And all the time he is competing with the metropolitan mail order stores, who cover the same country by catalogue and the express company.

The grocer can never compete with the mail order house on catalogues. But with the parcels post he could get his wares delivered by the rural mail carrier. He could canvass for his orders by telephone and the local newspaper, he could sell his delivery teams, and keep his clerks working in the store at a far less expense. Think it over, Mr. Merchant, before you get too blue about what the parcels post will do to you.

TO BUY HOLIDAY GOODS.

Before our citizens send large amounts away from home to metropolitan department stores and mail order houses, why not look around the home stores and see what the home merchant has done for you?

Our home merchants have not stood still the past few years. They put in larger stocks of holiday and winter goods than ever before. They study the market carefully, buy of responsible wholesale houses, and get goods that are both stylish and substantial, good for permanent wear.

The excuse is sometimes made that the metropolitan store has a larger assortment of goods. But this larger assortment is commonly of use to but few buyers. The great department store, for the sake of its reputation for completeness, has to carry a large amount of very costly goods to meet the whims of very wealthy people. If you want a parlor rug costing from $10 to $100, it is of but little use to you that the metropolitan store has a full line of $1,000 Orientals.

Furthermore, the carrying of these great assortments is an expense that all has to come out of the consumer. It means sacrifice sales when goods become out of date, and the original price has to be high enough to pay for all these losses.

The supreme advantage of buying at home is that you can do the shopping at your leisure, and always see the goods personally. The purchase made by mail is a reckless plunge into a grab-bag of unknown contents. Even when on an excursion to the great city you see the goods personally, your time is usually so limited that you don't have the opportunity for consideration afforded by the leisurely visit to the home store. The results are apt to be correspondingly disappointing.

The bigger the metropolitan emporium, the more machine like is the attention you get. The clerk or proprietor at home usually is in a position to give you some useful information about the thing you are buying. The metropolitan store employs a vast force of clerks, many of them of slight intelligence, who can give you no light about the thing you are buying, other than to tell you whether it is the vogue of the moment or not. Intelligent purchases are not made in that manner.

WOMAN WINS SUIT FOR ALIENATION

Spinster Must Pay $1000 to Wife of Civil War Veteran

Brockton, Mass., Dec. 9.—Mrs. James K. Greer of this city was awarded a verdict of $1000 by a jury in the Plymouth superior court sitting here, in her suit for $5000 against Miss Delia Henderson for alienation of her husband's affections. Miss Henderson is a well-to-do real estate owner in Brockton.

Greer is 63 years old, a veteran of the Civil war, and has been married thirty-nine years. Miss Henderson is 47 years old. She testified that her relations with Greer were confined to hiring him to do work for her and to nursing him on one occasion when he became ill at her home.

LADY COOK IS SUED

Charged With Having Broken Contract With Newspaper Writer

New York, Dec. 9.—Lady Cook—Tennessee Cadilla—is defendant in a suit for $10,000 for alleged breach of contract, tried in the supreme court here.

The complainant, H. C. Silver, a New York newspaper writer, charges that he contracted with Lady Cook to write her biography, and that after having the work well in hand, he was prevented from completing it by her relatives, who refused to permit him to see her.

Silver alleges that he made several trips abroad, and was under other great expense in procuring the data for the biography. Lday Cook holds that settlement in full has been made.

NOT DEAD, BUT SLEEPING

Tariff Commission Bill Will Be Revived by the Democrats

Washington, Dec. 9.—The report that the ways and means committee voted on strict party lines against the Payne tariff commission bill is only half true.

Representative Peters of Massachusetts says that the vote was taken upon the question of immediate consideration and that the Democrats decided that the entire matter had best be postponed till after the tariff board had reported. The Democrats are not hostile to the idea of a tariff board.

It is apparent that the tariff board theory is now accepted as sound in Washington and that it is only a question of time—and perhaps not of much time—before this theory can be put into practice.

Chicago's Police Chief Files Charges Against Subordinates

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Charges of neglect of duty and inefficiency were filed with the civil service commission by Chief of Police McWeeny against Police Inspector Wheeler, Captain Harding and Lieutenants Prim, Enright and Keleher.

The charges are a rsult of the failure of the police officers to suppress vice. It is expected that the officers will be tried by the commission next week.

Q.—Can you tell me if it is wrong to practice hypnotism, or mesmerism? And if so, why? (D. M. D.)

Answer.—Any interference with the Divine laws or arrangements is sure to result disastrously. The Creator formed man a free moral agent, endowing him with mental faculties, a moral sense, and a will to decide between right and wrong, good and evil. It is the will that controls or dominates the being. Some people have stronger, more powerful wills than others. It is possible for such to dominate the weaker willed individual, particularly where the latter deliberately surrenders the will to the influence of the other. This is all wrong; and is injurious in this way:—Frequent experiments have demonstrated that, where one's will is controlled by another, there is a weakening of the will of the person under control, and if persisted in, will eventually result in the complete destruction of the mind or will, leaving the subject an imbecile. Perhaps one of the principal reasons why there is such an alarming increase in the number of insanity cases is because of the practice of hypnotism on the part of thousands who are ignorant of its dire consequence.

TODAY'S COURT.

Gordon R. Badger was fined $20 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

John Knowlen and Sydney Wardman were fined $5 each on account of costs, for running a cart on the sidewalk in the Blue hills reservation.

—The export trade of the country is booming as never before. The calendar year will make an astonishing record. In October more than $3,000,000 in manufactures went out on every business day. The finished goods—that is manufactures ready for consumption—were just twice the value of those for further use in manufacturing showing that or chief business is not preparing the other fellow's raw material. But big as our foreign trade is, it might well be larger—Framingham News.

Some Gifts For Him

For the lawyer, a brief case.

For the motorist, a license case.

For the tennis player, a racket press.

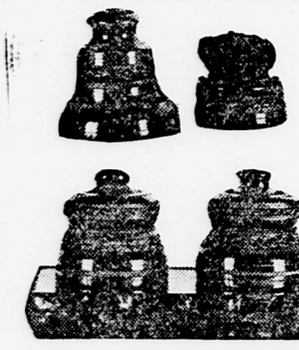
For the college boy, a leather covered sofa pillow.

For the smoker, a box of his favorite brand.

For the physician, the little railroad time table guide issued once a month, with information about fares, distances and all changes in schedules up to date. It is handy if he has suburban patients.

For grandfather, a reading glass.

For your fiance, a picture of yourself to fit his watch case or a flat folding



DESK SET OF POLISHED AND ROUGH COAL.

For the bookkeeper, an envelope and stamp moistener.

For the literary worker, a desk set like the one illustrated, which is made of rough and polished coal. The treatment of this product for ornamental purposes is unique and very successful. The set is stunning.

Artistic Leather Gifts.

Some charming Christmas gifts can be made from colored soft leather skins, which are sold now in almost all shops. For an example of such homemade presents take magazine covers. They can be inexpensively constructed and are suitable, as far as good form goes, to give to men friends. Incidentally nothing could be simpler than the manufacture of these covers, for a woman has only to take the measurements of some book and then make the leather slip large enough to be slipped on easily.

A flat piece of leather is cut according to dimensions, there being a corresponding piece of silk, preferably the same color. There must be a piece of thin canvas stiffening, about half an inch wide, in a strip long enough to go around the outer edge of the leather.

This strip must be basted down carefully to keep the leather on a flat surface and thus avoid a pucker. The canvas must then be placed about half an inch from the edge. In this way an even, stiff line is made, and over it the soft leather must be turned. The silk is basted down, putting the raw edge in, and the whole carefully sewed on the machine.

This done, two ends must be folded so they will form pockets to hold the magazine. These pocket flaps, as one might call them, need not be more than four inches deep, for this width will hold the book securely and yet admit of its being removed without a struggle. The flaps must be stitched together on the machine. This completes the case.

A girl who has any knack at painting or poker work may make most effective round or square covers of leather by choosing her own designs or by having them outlined.

Bags of endless kinds also may be manufactured. The leather box illustrated, designed for collars and cuffs, has a drawer for holding studs and links and is an ideal gift for a man. The expert worker in leather can turn out such a box, but the average donor of Christmas presents will buy this receptacle.

Cravat Holders.

These are fashioned so the cravats will lie flat, being folded only once in the center, and there can be no danger of crumpled ties.

Two little pockets are stitched on the inside of the holder, which have flaps held in place with glove fasteners. These are to hold the studs, collar buttons, scarfpins and cuff links.

The ties are simply laced in the holder smoothly. It is then folded over and laid in the suit case, trunk or bag. It takes up little room and is very convenient.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. Look the list over, and if your entertainment is not included, send it in.

A TRIBUTE IN FLOWERS.

The many relatives and friends of Mrs. Julia Galvin were deeply grieved to learn of her death on Monday morning, December 4th, at her home on River street, after a few months' illness of heart trouble.

Mrs. Galvin was married in New Haven, Ct., on September 13th, 1874 to Mortimer Galvin of Braintree, and has been a resident of Braintree for 37 years, being held in high esteem by all who knew her.

Besides her husband she leaves three children, Timothy R. a business man of Brockton, Mrs. Catharine G., widow of Chas. H. McAnarney, and Miss Helen L. Galvin, a teacher in the Bingham school, Somerville, and a well known singer. Also four step children, Daniel, Jeremiah and John Galvin of Braintree, and Mrs. Agnes Isles of Boston, who mourn the loss of a kind and devoted mother.

The funeral was held from her late residence on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. Solemn high mass of requiem was solemnized at St. Francis church, South Braintree at 9.30 A. M. Rev. Matthew McDonnell, the pastor was celebrant, Rev. A. Fitzgerald was dearon and Rev. P. Scannell of Quincy was sub-deacon.

The Gregorian mass under the direction of John Mahan of Quincy was sung by a quartet composed of Miss Josephine McCarthy, Miss Angela McMarthy, Dr. D. B. Reardon and Mr. D. J. Seward McCurdy all of Quincy.

The DeProfundus was feelingly rendered by Dr. Reardon, the Pie Jesu by Miss Angela McCarthy, and after the mass "Only Waiting," a favorite hymn of the deceased was sung by D. J. Seward McCurdy. As the body was being borne from the church "Some Blessed Day" was rendered by the quartet.

The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy, and prayers at the grave were said by Rev. Fr. Fitzgerald.

The large tribute of flowers showed the high esteem in which the deceased was held, and the sympathy of all was extended to the bereaved family.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY NEEDED

Pinchot Will Undertake the Task of Forming One

THINKS TIME IS NOW RIPE

History, Habit and Name About All That Is Left of Old Parties, According to Former Chief Forester—Names La Follette as Most Fitting Leader—Garfield Will Aid In Forming Proposed New Organization

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Gifford Pinchot, deposed chief forester, friend of former President Roosevelt and millionaire reformer, sounded a clarion call here for the organization of a third political party.

Mr. Pinchot advised calling it the "Progressive party" and he would make eligible to its membership all Republicans, Democrats and men of other political faith, as well as the independent voter. He proposes to coalesce the various brands of voters into an organization with but one issue, "Anti-Interests," and one slogan, "Down with the political power of the money and the trusts."

Mr. Pinchot also made his visit to Chicago notable by announcing that Mr. Roosevelt is absolutely out of the running as candidate for president in 1912. He named Senator La Follette as the most fitting leader of the proposed new party and in doing so, hinted that he believed that Roosevelt would support La Follette.

James R. Garfield of Ohio, secretary of the interior in the Roosevelt cabinet, aided Pinchot in sounding his call for a new party. Garfield added that President Taft would be beaten in his fight to obtain a solid delegation to the next national convention from Ohio and that his chances for renomination were nil.

A number of prominent Chicago Progressives have promised to aid Pinchot and Garfield in forming the party.

Mr. Pinchot made the following significant statement concerning his idea of the need of the party:

"What is left of the old parties in addition to the machinery of party organization is mainly a history, a habit and a name. When or whether we shall have a new party with a new name I cannot tell, but I do know that a political revolution in the minds of the people is already an accomplished fact.

"Let no vague talk about the middle of the road progressives deceive you. People who stand in the middle of the road need to keep their eyes open for the people's steam roller or they are likely to be steam rolled."

RUSSIAN PACT IN DANGER

Will Be Abrogated Unless Jewish Passport Question Is Settled

Washington, Dec. 9.—"If the Jewish passport question is not settled in a manner satisfactory to the United States, the treaty with Russia of 1832 will be abrogated."

This is the gist of the reply made by Senators Lodge and Crane of Massachusetts to a Hebrew delegation from Boston and Salem, which called upon the senators.

This answer was made with a full knowledge that it would be made public, and as one of the senators joining in it is the ranking member of the committee on foreign relations, it may be taken as representing not only the sentiment of that committee but of the Republican majority of the senate.

WANTED A FUR COAT

Denver Waitress Gets It After Saving Hundred Dollars In Dime Tips

Denver, Dec. 9.—One thousand dimes, all 10-cent piece tips received during two years, were paid by Miss Ivy Cole, a waitress in a local cafe, for a fur coat.

When she had selected the coat and began to draw from various bags and pockets the $100 in 10-cent pieces, the proprietor of the store gave evidence that he was not sure he wanted the task of counting the dimes.

"It took me just two years to get those dimes," said Miss Cole. "I decided to save the tips I received in dimes until I got $100 and then buy a fur coat. It is not so easy as it sounds, either."

ANDREW B. LAW

Fights Government Plan to Rush Home Rule

TO FIGHT HOME RULE

Law Says It Will Bring Ireland No Peace, but the Sword

London, Dec. 9.—At the opening at Bootle, Lancashire, of the Unionist campaign against home rule, the opposition leader, Andrew B. Law, said that his party had determined to fight the proposal to the last gasp.

Many people, he said, favored home rule, because they were tired to death of the Irish problem and glad to see it out of the way. The duty of the Unionists was to convince them that it would bring Ireland no peace, but the sword. Ireland wanted less politics and more industry. Mr. Redmond and his friends were promising Ireland more politics and less industry.

BRIEFS

The West Quincy M. E. church has recently donated its old communion service to a needy church in Connecticut.

Rev. W. D. McKinnon of Branford, Conn., a candidate for the pastorate of the Calvary Baptist church is to preach at both services at the church on Sunday.

Owing to an epidemic of smallpox among the students of Linden Agricultural Institute at Lindenville, Vermont, where he is a freshman, Lester Rollins of Highland avenue is at home for a month's stay.

A fine concert, under the auspices of the Fowler family, is to be given in Alpha hall on the evening of Dec. 12.

"The Black Devil," is the subject of Rev. Wesley Wiggin's sermon Sunday evening at the Wollaston M. E. church. C. H. Cheney of Neponset will preach in the morning. The Murray class for young men meets at 12. The Wiggin Bible class and the Royal daughters at the same hour. All people not attending any other schools invited. Miss Florence Bennett leads the Epworth league. There will be a song service.

An in-door picnic will be held in Memorial church Wednesday evening for those over twenty. One of the features will be an in-door base ball game. There will be a basket lunch and many other features of the summer picnic. A most enjoyable evening is anitcipated. This is the first social affair that has been held distinctly for the older people for some time, but many more are promised during the winter.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee sails with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoeng and other natives. Armed savages arrive and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

"I am afraid you are a female Shelley," he replied. "And as such you really drive me to become your partner in order to protect you."

"If you take me as a partner in order to protect me—I—I sha'n't be your partner, that's all. You'll drive me into buying Pari-Sulay yet."

"All the more reason"— he attempted.

"Do you know what I'll do?" she demanded. "I'll find some man in the Solomons who won't want to protect me."

Sheldon could not conceal the shock her words gave him.

"You don't mean that, you know," he pleaded.

"I do; I really do. I am sick and tired of this protection dodge. Don't forget for a moment that I am perfectly able to take care of myself. Besides, I have eight of the best protectors in the world—my sailors. You were living like a savage when I came along and found you—eating nothing but tinned meat and scones that would have ruined the digestion of a camel. Anyway, I've remedied that, and since we are to be partners, it will stay remedied. You won't die of malnutrition, be sure of that."

"If we enter into partnership," he announced, "it must be thoroughly understood that you are not allowed to run the schooner. You can go down to Sydney and buy her, but a skipper we must have"—

"At so much additional expense and most likely a whiskey drinking, irresponsible and incapable man to boot. Besides, I'd have the business more at heart than any man we could hire. As for capability, I tell you I can sail all around the average broken captain or promoted able seaman you find in the south seas. And you know I am a navigator."

"But being my partner," he said coolly, "makes you none the less a lady."

"Thank you for telling me that my contemplated conduct is unladylike."

She arose, tears of anger and mortification in her eyes, and went over to the phonograph.

"I wonder if all men are as ridiculous as you?" she said.

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. Discussion was useless—he had learned that; and he was resolved to keep his temper. And before the day was out she capitulated. She was to go to Sydney on the first steamer, purchase the schooner, and sail back with an island skipper on board. And then she inveigled Sheldon into agreeing that she could take occasional cruises in the islands, though he was adamant when it came to a recruiting trip on Malaita. That was the one thing barred.

And after it was all over, and a terse and businesslike agreement (by her urging) drawn up and signed, Sheldon paced up and down for a full hour, meditating upon how many different kinds of a fool he had made of himself. He had never seen a more independent woman who stood more in need of a protector than this boy minded girl who had landed on his beach with eight picturesque savages, a long barreled revolver, a bag of gold, and a gaudy merchandise of imagined romance and adventure.

He had never read of anything to compare with it. He smoked cigarette after cigarette. Satan, back from a prowl around the compound, ran up to him and touched his hand with a cold, damp nose. Sheldon caressed the animal's ears, then threw himself into a chair and laughed heartily. What would the commissioner of the Solomons think? What would his people at home think? And in the one breath he was glad that the partnership had been effected and sorry that Joan Lackland had ever come to the Solomons. Then he went inside and looked at himself in a hand mirror. He studied the reflection long and thoughtfully and wonderingly.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE MARTHA.

THEY were deep in a game of billiards the next morning, after the 11 o'clock breakfast, when Viaburi entered and announced:

"Big fella schooner close up."

Even as he spoke, they heard the rumble of chain through hawse pipe, and from the veranda saw a big black painted schooner swinging to her just caught anchor.

"It's a Yankee," Joan cried. "See that bow! Look at that elliptical stern! Ah, I thought so"— as the stars and stripes fluttered to the masthead.

"Martha, San Francisco." Sheldon read, looking through the telescope. "It's the first Yankee I ever heard of in the Solomons. They are coming ashore, whoever they are. And, by Jove, look at those men at the oars. It's an all white crew. Now, what reason brings them here?"

"They're not proper sailors," Joan commented. "I'd be ashamed of a crew of black boys that pulled in such a fashion. Look at that fellow in the bow—the one just jumping out; he'd be more at home on a cow pony."

The boat's crew scattered up and down the beach, ranging about with eager curiosity, while the two men who had sat in the stern sheets opened the gate and came up the path to the bungalow. One of them, a tall and slender man, was clad in white ducks that fitted him like a semi-military uniform. The other man, in nondescript garments that were both of the sea and shore and that must have been uncomfortably hot, slouched and shambled like an overgrown ape. To complete the illusion, his face seemed to sprout in all directions with a dense bushy mass of red whiskers, while his eyes were small and sharp and restless.

Sheldon, who had gone to the head of the steps, introduced them to Joan. The bewhiskered individual, who looked like a Scotchman, had the Teutonic name of Von Blix and spoke with an American accent. The tall man in the well fitting ducks, who gave the English name of Tudor—John Tudor—talked purely enunciated English such as any cultured American would talk, save for the fact that it was most delicately and subtly touched by a faint German accent.

Von Blix was rough and boorish, but Tudor was gracefully easy in everything he did, or looked, or said.

They were on a gold hunting expedition. He was the leader and Tudor was his lieutenant. All hands—and there were twenty-eight—were shareholders, in varying proportions, in the adventure. Several were sailors, but the large majority were miners, culled from all the camps from Mexico to the Arctic ocean. It was the old and ever untiring pursuit of gold and they came to the Solomons to get it. Part of them, under the leadership of Tudor, were to go up the Balesuna and penetrate the mountainous heart of Guadalcanar, while the Martha, under Von Blix, sailed away for Malaita to put through similar exploration.

"And so," said Von Blix, "for Mr. Tudor's expedition we must have some black boys. Can we get them from you?"

"In the first place we can't spare them," Sheldon answered. "We are short of them on the plantation as it is."

"We?" Tudor asked quickly. "Then you are a firm or a partnership? I understood at Guvutu that you were alone, that you had lost your partner."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE CHRISTMAS DINNER.

CHRISTMAS MENU.
Cream of Tomato Soup.
Celery. Olives.
Sweet Potato Croquettes.
Roast Turkey or Chicken, Giblet Sauce.
Cranberry Jelly.
Creamed Onions. Boiled Rice.
Mashed or Browned Potatoes.
Lettuce Salad, French Dressing.
Mince Pie With Cheese.
Plum Pudding, Hard Sauce.
Fruit and Nuts.
Coffee.

IN preparing the Christmas dinner much is left to taste. While turkey is regarded as the Christmas bird, if that fowl comes high, a plump tender chicken or pair of them may be roasted instead.

Some persons prefer roast goose. With roast goose, of course, goes apple sauce.

Advance Work.

Much of the labor incident to the Christmas feast may be done before the holiday. The fruit cake is better for being baked a couple of months earlier.

Some persons think a plum pudding ought to be nine days old before serving. If cooked in advance all it needs on Christmas day is a little steaming.

The turkey may be cleaned, drawn and hung in a cold place for a day, it will then be in better condition for roasting on Christmas.

The cranberry jelly may be prepared and the pies and doughnuts baked the day before Christmas. The confectionery may be made at odd times a week or two in advance. When served the pies and doughnuts should be placed in the oven for a few minutes, and then they will be warm when brought to the table.

The Christmas Table.

The Christmas table may be spread for dinner the day before if the dining room can be closed. Try to make it as attractive as possible.

Have flowers in the table center, even if it is only a geranium growing in an earthen pot. The pot may be banked with moss or covered with dark green crape paper, tied with cherry colored ribbons.

Even natural looking paper flowers are better than no flowers at all.

Cedar holly and ground pine together with many winter berries may be had at this season. If you live near the woods there are often charming colored leaves and exquisite mosses to be found.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES AND JOTTINGS

A Regular Saturday Feature of the Quincy Daily Ledger

There are many people who doubtless judge of the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, by what they know, or do not know about the local Association. The Association, like many other institutions, is able to do good in proportion to the opportunity and support offered them. That the need exists in Quincy, as much as in Oakland or Chicago, or any other city, is apparent to anyone who really knows the conditions existing. Young men are quite similar, wherever you find them. Why then are there cities in which the Young Men's Christian Association is in many senses "the whole thing." There are quite a good many such places. Many think a city like Brooklyn, for instance, is a hard place in which to do Association work. The price of membership is $15.00 a year and yet they have a waiting list. What is the reason? Partially because the young men appreciate the opportunity the Association offers them. In many smaller cities the people of the community realize what the organization means to a community.

Prorbably greatest advance made in the past ten years, by the Association has been made in connection with the government of the United States. When the work of digging the Canal was begun, President Taft, then Secretary Taft, realized great temptation that would confront the men working on the same. To meet this condition he arranged with the International Committee of the Association to organize the work there. This has been done. Buildings were erected and Association workers, in the employ of the Government were placed in charge of them. So successful has the work been, that a number of men have been added to the force of paid men and more buildings erected.

Doubtless, the greatest advance was made when a Secretary was placed on board a man-of-war. No place is more difficult for securing such an opportunity. Again the result has been such that men have been placed upon other ships. Recently, in reply to a letter addressed to the Navy Department, the acting secretary replied that the reason they granted such an unusual request, was because when the matter was put up to them by a Secretary of the International Committee, they decided to try the experiment, largely because of the results in other fields. Is it not a fact, then, that if the Association will work on the Canal, in the Navy Yards, Army Posts, and on board a Man-of-War it certainly ought to work in the city of Quincy?

There are places along the shore, where light houses have been placed on account of the danger to shipping. Life saving stations also have been established. Which, think you, would the Government rather do, rescue the ship-wrecked sailors, or in every way possible make the shore less dangerous, and have better charts of the shore? There is of course no question about the matter. Then this is just the position of the Association. By means of the physical, social, educational and religious training it is giving its members, the Association is endeavoring to keep them off the shoals. With a population of 6,000 or 7,000 between the ages of 12 and 40 in this city the Young Men's Christian association ought to have a membership of at least 1,000.

Many parents hide behind this hedge, that their boy has a good home and therefore does not need the Association. Did that father or mother ever stop to think of the possibility that the boy may go away from home? If he has not accustomed himself to the Association while at home; if father or mother speak slightingly of the Association while he is still at home, how can they expect him to make its building his home when away from home? How many boys living in homes which are very attractive, as far as the structure is concerned, are at home three nights a week? If the boy is not within the walls of that home, does the father or mother know where he is spending his evenings? A father and his boy came to the Association a few evenings ago. This father had found where his boy was spending his evenings and would not allow him to go there any more. He brought him in and paid for his membership. There are men in this city who feel very sure that a great many parents do not know where their boys are, or what they are doing. Do you suppose the fathers of these boys knew where these boys were, or what they were doing? This incident did not happen in Quincy. The boys had just received their diplomas, for it was graduation night. They may have had them in their hands or pockets at the time. After the events of the evening were over, they were seen coming out of a saloon. Perhaps they had been in to get a drink of ginger ale or chewing gum. The parents of not one of these boys would have believed their boys had been to such a place. Yet it was a fact nevertheless. And this was while they were still at home. At least two of the fellows had good homes. What influence did these have on the boys under these conditions? These are the type of boys who feel they have no use for the Association or whose parents feel they have a "good home" or they do not need the influence the Association has to offer.

Thirty-five attended the banquet, Thursday night, tendered by the ladies' auxiliary of the Boys' Work committee to the "employed boys." After the repast, which it is unnecessary to say was greatly enjoyed, an organization was formed and officers elected as follows:

President—Wallace Kemp.
Vice President—George McDonald,
Treasurer—Everett Clark.
Secretary—Harold Price.

In advancing the work of the new club the officers will have the assistance of the following cabinet: Dwight Gearwar, Bernard Gouterman and Charles Ross.

During the evening speeches were made by D. King, who took for his subject, "service" and Mr. Bissell of Newton who spoke about "opportunity."

After a most enjoyable evening the meeting adjourned until next Tuesday when plans will be considered for the extention of the work.

CHARGED WITH SIX DEATHS

Sandford's Trial Begun Immediately After His Indictment

Portland, Me., Dec. 9.—Without legal representation and with never a move to cross-examine a witness, Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us society of Shiloh, sat in the United States court and listened to testimony presented in support of the charge that he was respoible for the death of six members of his party during his recent world cruise on the yacht Coronet.

An indictment was returned earlier in the day by the federal grand jury. In it Sandford was specifically charged with failing to provide proper food for his followers when the yacht put to sea and with failing to put into port for provisions when the supply became short. The trial was immediately started, with Judge Hale presiding.

PLAN TO ABANDON BOSTON NAVY YARD

Citizens of Hub Stirred Over Report From Washington

Boston, Dec. 9.—Not for many years has any proposed action on the part of the federal government so stirred Boston, raised as much keen interest and discussion, and from many quarters aroused such bitter opposition, as the contemplated sale of the Charlestown navy yard, made known to Mayor Fitzgerald in Washington yesterday by President Taft.

Public men interested in Boston were aroused by the announcement just at the time when the $9,000,000 project for making Boston a great world port is under way, and after Secretary Meyer had recently been credited with a plan for making Boston perhaps the great Atlantic yard for the navy.

A storm of protests was the answer, although on the other hand there are those who think the removal of the navy yard will allow the place it occupied, and its dry docks, to be made available in developing the port commercially.

The government plan is to abandon the naval plants at Boston and Portsmouth, and establish a great naval station in Narraganseit bay.

"My family," said Miss Antique, "came over with the Pilgrims on the Mayflower."

"Did they really?" exclaimed Hicks. "How very interesting! And were you seasick?"

BRIEFS

The Old Colony Driving club of Weymouth is arranging for its annual banquet next month.

George E. Emerson of Hancock street has returned from his annual hunting trip in New Hampshire.

It is expected that the new court room building will be ready for occupancy by the first of February.

There was one good thing about the thick fog Friday night, it laid the dust which was becoming a nuisance, especially through City square.

Dr. D. B. Reardon's address before the Parents and Teachers' association oft he Adams school will appear in full, in Monday's Ledger.

Dr. Daniel B. Reardon of this city has opened a branch office in the Alden Bowditch house at East Braintree, to better care for his numerous patients in that vicinity.

The easterly wind early Friday evening, brought with it a thick fog which remained all night. At times the fog was so thick that it was impossible to see more than a few feet.

Not much has been heard from the slate makers up to the present time. Mayor elect Stone has doubtless had many applications for positions within the gift of the Mayor. Under the charter the present officials will hold over until the first Monday in February.

In the event of Samuel Gompers being deposed as the head of the American Federation of Labor, as a result of the Mcnamara cases, it is more than probable that he will be succeeded by James Duncan, of Quincy, who is the present First Vice President of the Federation.

Atlantic dramatists will be glad to know that Music hall, which has been condemned because it did not comply with the fire protection laws, is being renovated and made fit for use. It is planned to form the coming week in Atlantic a men's get-together club to discuss social, civic and religious questions.

Among large real estate sales recently recorded through the agency of James F. Burke, Savings Bank building, is the Tisdale property at the corner of Hancock street and Whitney road to Dr. Fred E. Jones who has moved in, also the Horace F. Spear property on Hancock street sold to Joseph D. Griffin of Quincy for occupancy.

MEN CAPTURED.

John Brown and Abraham Gingsburg, the two men captured by Chief Burrell and Officers Whalen and Thorne, after an exciting chase in a boat off Bakers' Yacht Basin, were arraigned in court this morning on a complaint for larceny of pig lead from the Baker Yacht Basin Co.

The evidence was that several hundred pounds of pig lead, used for ballast, had been taken from the yacht Bohemia by Brown and Ginsburrg. They were seen by the nigth watchman, rowing away from the basin, and the police notified. Officer Thorne also saw the men and when they did not stop at his command, fired a shot at them. Later when the Chief and Officer Whalen arrived, they took boat and went out after the men, and succeeded in makin gan arrest. The pig lead was found later near Federhen's wharf. After hearing the case, the court ordered Brown to make restitution and then sentenced him to six months in the house of correction but suspended this sentence until July 1. In the case of Ginsburrg he paid the costs of the case, amounting to $50 and was then setnenced to three months in jail. The sentence was suspended howaver until July 1.

As a result of the affair Brown will probably lose his job as yard foreman, at the Yacht Basin and Ginsburg will lose his license to drive a wagon for the collection of junk.

—Man is truly the handkerchief animal. On it he is very dependent. Can you imagine worse torture than being in church far down the "broad aisle" and no handkerchief, and, worse still, no wife with you whose dainty scrap of nothingness might give a momentary relief? A handkerchief is, indeed, a joyous accessory to one's daily equipment and a great help to those of limited originality at Christmas time.—Milford Gazette.

SAILED TODAY FOR A TRIP ABROAD

James Cowie of Quincy street, Samuel Mavers of Pleasant street, and Michael Flaherty of Broadway, left this morning for New York, there to take the boat to Liverpool, England. Cowie and Mavers will spend their time abroad visiting friends in Scotland, while Flaherty, in company with a relative who is also to join the party today, will tour the dicerent parts of Ireland, and visit his many relatives and friends.

On his return Flaherty will assume residence in Newport, R. I.

BOWLING WAS CLASSY.

Bowling of the high class order was exhibited at the Y. M. C. A. alleys last evening, wren teams captained by King and Monis respectively, clashed in a most exciting contest. King himself bowled but one string, the other two being identical. In this way, the score of the winner's was lower than it otherwise migrt have been.

The highest single string, with the bottle pins, was made by Burns, who reached the 163 mark. His sum total, 415, was also the highest marks of the game.

For the losers, Nicoll and Morris played about the same. The game was on of the Makaria league series.

BASKET BALL TONIGHT.

With two teams fighting for first place, each having won both of its games, the star a ttraction tonight ought to be the game between Harvard and Penn. Harvard had a narrow escape in their last game, when Columbia upset all the "dope" by leading until the last three minutes of play. Capt. Tirrell of Penn. has mapped out a strenuous campaign for his agile players, and the fans will not be surprised to see his team come out on top. "Charlie" Parker, the popular leader of the Crimson is not saying much but promises great action from his "bunch."

Another "crackerjack" game should result when the Navy, led by Capt. Melville, goes up against Tech. "Eddie" Newcomb has been feeling pretty good ever since he trimmed the fast Yale team two weeks ago and nothing will satisfy him except a victory tonight. Jack Melville is back with his team again, and he will endeavor to wipe out the sting of the last defeat, when the Army swamped them.

The third game will be for blood, for Lee Brooks of the Army, is determinedthat Yale will not get a victory to their credit. "Chick" Holmes the all star back of the Army team will endeavor to hold down "Toodie" Dineen the captain of Yale. Dineen is out for average for Tech slipped one over on him intheir last game and to keep a good position in the league,his team must win tonight.

First game at 7.45.

BRAINTREE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Nickerson have returned from a three weeks' trip to Philadelphia and vicinity.

There will be a regular meeting of the executive committee of the Improvement association as the Cochato club, Tuesday evening, Dec. 12, at 7.30 oclock. Open to the public.

Mrs. Laban Barnes and little daughter Miriam of Washington street were run into by an auto on Washington street, Boston, Wednesday, while shopping. Fortunately no bones were broken but Mrs. Barnes received a severe shaking up.

The two new houses being built off Middle street, one on River street for Mr. Lawley and the other on Putnam avenue for George H. Davis, Jr., are being constructed rapidly and will be creditable additions to the neighborhood.

Monday evening at the Cochato club the Tyrolean Alpine Singers entertained in the winter's program. They were announced and greatly assisted by Miss Cora G. Ramsden, a charming, talented reader. ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

By Teri Bus.

The McGregors played a tie game with Brockton on Saturday. Brockton is improving.

The Clan now tie for first place in the Boston District League. Quincy has champions.

The Fall River Oaks were penalized on several occasions for rough play in their game with J. & P. Coates last Saturday. The reputation of the Oaks is spreading.

Fall River Rovers last week roamed a little too far away from home! at least by the number of goals scored against them in the American Cup it would seem to be so. Seven goals to nothing was certainly a beating. We must keep our eye on Brooklyn.

The great surprise of the day came from Pawtucket. Even the most sanguine supporters of the Eagles did not believe that they could beat Howard & Bullough by 3 goals to 0. The game was a New England League one.

The Eagles' now lead in the New England league. J. & P. Coates have played a game more than the Eagles but with their defeat by the Oaks last week they now stand a point behind the iron workers.

The Oaks must cut out this rough house play if they ever want to become a popular team. Let them tomorrow take the field against the Eagles and play the game as it should be played. Play the ball, Eagles!

In the 3rd round of the American cup the Eagles travel to Pawtucket as they are drawn against the Howard & Bullough lads. Those teams are very evenly matched and a capital game should be the outcome. Con the Eagles reach the semi final?

It is hard luck on the Eagles to have to travel for the third time in this cup competition, for the last time they went to Philadelphia the great expense caused them to get into financial difficulties. Lovers of the game, and particularly supporters of the Eagles, would do well to rally round the Eagles at this time and give all the financial help they require. The Eagles look ascham pions, if only they had the financial support.

The following is the draw in connection with the 3rd round of the American cup:

Paterson Rangers vs. Winsooniag
Howard & Bullough vs. Fore River
Brooklyn vs. Phil. Victors.
West Hudsons vs. Wilderforce.

Games will be played on the ground of the first named club, and must take place on or before the last day of December.

The following bit of spicy news comes all the way from St. Louis: "If the present plans of the St. Louis Soccer League go through either the Tacony team, champions of Philadelphia, or the Fore River eleven of the ship yard at Quincy, Mass., will maek a trip to this city for the Christmas season to meet the pick of two teams who are leading the league in this city at Christmas time. The eastern team will play on Sunday, Dec. 24 and on Christmas Day, Dec. 25. The team to make the trip to this city will be chosen later this week." The Eagles are about as well knowna way from home as they are in Quincy.

The membership card of the Fore River Football and Athletic Club have met with a ready sale. Mr. John Quinn says he has only a few left. Have you secured yours.

CHARLESTOWN FIVE WIN.

By displaying great form in the second roll off, the Quincy combination obtained a substantial lead over their brother Knights, of the Fitton Council team, in the Columbus Club league series, played last evening at the Columbus Club alleys. At the beginning of the third string, it looked as if the local team was out for a victory, but failure to maintain the same pace, caused the Charlestown five to increase their averages and emerge from the contest, which, by the way was one of the hardest fought games that has taken place in the league this season, by the score of 1361 to 1319.

Katon of the home team was largely responsible for the remarkable burst of speed exhibited on the second string. He made the high mark of the game for a single string, reaching a pinfall of 121. His sum total for the three strings was also the highest of the rontest, having 297 to his credit, a mark which was one greater than the grand total of his team mate, Bliss, or four better than Flynn, who had the highest total average for the winners. Dealy was high single string player for the winners, obtaining 109. Bliss, Katon and Flynn were the stars of the interesting struggle.

It is reported that a man walked through the streets of Chicago late the other evening and was not waylaid by footpads.

DR. REARDON ON MEDICAL INSPECTION

Important Lecture At Meeting of School Association

The following discourse on "Medical Inspection" was delivered recently by Dr. D. B. Reardon at a meeting of the Parents and Teachers' Association of Adams school. Many important points are treated and will prope of great interest to all who were unable to attend the meeting.

There is an old true, much abused saying "a sound mind in a sound body" which has been, up to within past few years, utterly ignored. While diligent provisions have been made in the schools for "sound mind" shaping, it has been felt that the schools made little scrutiny as to the fitness for conserving and developing "sound bodies." It has been true that education up to a few years ago had given but scanty attention to the problem of the physical well-being of their charges.

All too often the same care-free attitude of mind has been shown by the parent. All children were taught that it was necessary to have the common diseases and the sooner the better. If the child breathes through his mouth, he always will, he will not grow out of it. The child's cough is only a slight cold. He always turns his head to one side when he wants to read. It's a habit he has got into. He has always been pale. It is nothing unusual.

Two great factors have been working in America toward Medical Inspection of schools. On the one hand is Medical Science operating to protect the community through its boards of Health, while in the other is educational science operating through the great school system of the world and expressing itself through the more or less scientific departments of physical training. Speaking historically medicine has labored to cure and prevent disease and deformity, while education has aimed at the intellectual equipment of the individual.

Our school system has developed enormously during the past years, developed faster than has the population. Schools in older days did not present any special problem from the standpoint of comunity hygiene. Now the school year lasts for 10 months and many cities vocation schools round out the calendar year. So the schools in their intimate commingly of children from practically all families for most, if not all of the year, afford the most extensive means for spread of contagious diseases that exists. Thus the community through its health boards has been able to protect itself from the spread of disease. Boards of Health have been compelled to lay forcible hands upon the schools time and again during epidemics, long before it became recognized that the school was a possible force and distribution of disease.

Medical Inspection aims at both the protection of the community and furnishing the physical condition under which wholesome life can develop.

In cases of serious epidemics it has always been recognized that parents have the right to insist that schools shall be safe places to send their children. This right has been recognized by the closing of the public schools during an epidemic, but despite the fact that it has long been recognized that the public school serves as a centre of exchange for contagious diseases, which pass from pupil to pupil, the occassional closing down and rare fumigation have constituted the sum total of preventive measures, with the single exception of thec oommonly insisted requirements of vaccination.

Again except in extreme cases, the school has taken little note of such defects of mind and body as might vitally affect the chances of successive happiness of the child, unless such defects were of the more directly alarming nature of contagious diseases. All children have been received on an equal basis. They have been treated equally no matter what their endowments or physical condition. The quick and the slow, sound and the sick have been grouped together and he who could not keep his place in his

MURDER CASE.

Saverio Espanio, who it is alleged murdered Guiseppe Rucher, during a row among the Italians on Water street, against whom the grand jury, last week, found a true bill in several counts for manslaughter, will be taken to Dedham this afternoon. Ever since the shooting and stabbing Espanio, has been confined to the City Hospital under guard. His condition has improved so much, that it is now possible to have him removed to Dedham jail and he was taken there in an automobile this afternoon. His case will probably be tried the present term.

This will therefore, be one of the cases with a speedy trial, and the chances are that the case will be disposed of inside of a month from the time the murder was committed.

Domenico Corseighliege, the third man, who was shot during the row, is still at the hospital and will not be able to be removed for some days. He is the man who received a shot through the eye and who, it was thought at one time, would not survive. It is now said that he is on the road to recovery and unless some new complications set in will soon be as good as ever, save one eye.

It was at a masquerade ball, and she recognized him at once.

"How did you come to recognize me, darling? Was it the loud beating of my heart that gave me away?"

"Oh, no," she replied, "It was your crooked legs."—Texas Sifter.

COULD NOT PROVE HIS CASE

And Defendant Discharged For Carrying Revolver

COST MAN $3

It is not often that the complainant in a criminal case is called upon to pay a fine, while the defendant is discharged, but such was the result of a case in court this morning, Some days ago, John McAlenie was in court, on complaint of John Russell, for carrying a loaded revolver and the case continued until this morning for a hearing. When the case was called, Russell took the stand but seemed to know but little about the defendants having a revolver, although he had sworn to the complaint. After hearing the evidence, the court ordered the defendant discharged, and ordered Russell the plaintiff to pay $3 on account of costs.

DAVID G. DOANE.

David G. Doane, one of Braintree's prominent citizens, passed away Tuesday, Dec. 5 at the age of 55 years. Mr. Doane was a native of Cohassett, receiving his education in the public schools of that town. He has been a resident of Braintree for the past twenty years, winning the friendship and esteem of his townspeople in an unusual degree.

He was one of the organizers of the Josas Perkins school association, and was active in every line that contributed to its development and advancement. He was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity attended All Souls' church and was a member of the Men's club of that church.

In amateur theatricals Mr. Doane enjoyed special popularity. His name appearing in the cast was always indicative of success.

Mr. Doane had many noble qualities. Those who enjoyed his intimate acquaintance knew that he possessed a warm heart and quick sympathy. He was ever ready to speak a word of encouragement or to extend a helping hand. His greatest pleasure was in doing something for others.

A great sorrow came to Mr. Doane a few years ago in the sudden death of his son Ralph, from which he never fully recovered. His firm spirit of resignation would not allow his friends to condole with him, but his very cheerfulness added to the pathos of that loss which he felt acutely but submissively.

Although in poor health for some time he did not give up his business in Boston until recently.

Mr. Doane is survived by a widow and two daughters, Alice and Ethel, who have received many expressions of sympathy in their bereavement.

The funeral services were held at the home on Bowditch street, Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman, pastor of all Souls' church officiating. The burial was in the Village cemetery, Weymouth.

DEGREES BY KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, exemplified the first and second degrees upon a number of candidates Sunday afternoon at Greenleaf hall. Tuesday evening the third degree will be exemplified on candidates from Quincy and Ave Maria Councils at St. Mary's hall. A large number of visitors are expected to witness the work, which will be under the direction of the District Deputy.

NEW STREET LIGHTS ARE BRILLIANT

The west side of Hancock street, between Granite street and the Wilson building, looked like the great white way Saturday night. This was due to a number of the new pattern Humphrey invested gas lamps that had been installed in front of the business houses in this section. The lamps gave out a clear white light and the illumination was an attractive one as well as showing some of the possibilities in up-to-date street lighting.

STILL IN LAST PLACE.

The members of the Quincy Council, K. of C. bowling team, are still in last place in the Columbus club league. The local team is composed of good players, but in every contest one of them seems to lose the standard form, and in this way, fate has loomed forth as a conspicuous obstacle. Katon of the local five, holds the high mark for a single string, having attained 121 and is one of the foremost howlers in the league. It has been a noticeable feature that many of Quincy's games were lost by close margins.

DRAMATIC PLEA BY SANDFORD

Eloquence Holds His Audience Almost Spellbound

CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER

Shiloh Prophet Asks Jurors to Say That He Went Down With Colors Flying and Guns Reverberating—"Two Courts in Session"—Released In $10,000 Bail Pending His Sentence a Week Hence

Portland, Me., Dec. 11.—"It is all right. The work at Shiloh will continue as long as I am able to direct it." This was the only comment which Rev. Frank W. Sandford made when the jurors in the United States district court, before whom he was tried on the charge of causing the death of six of the crew of the schooner yacht Coronet, returned a verdict of guilty on each count after being out forty minutes.

Sentence will be pronounced on the leader of the Holy Ghost and Us movement Dec. 18, and he furnished sureties in the sum of $10,000 for his appearance at that time. The punishment in a case like this as provided in the penal code of the United States is a fine of $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than ten years, or both.

The closing hours of the trial were marked by a scene the like of which was never before witnessed in a courtroom in Maine. Taking the witness stand, Sandford addressed the jury for an hour and a half and the greater part of that time he held the audience almost spellbound with his impassioned eloquence.

"I think I know what you are going to do with me, gentlemen," he said near the close of his remarkable statement. I think God told me sixty days ago on the water. Please give me this assurance—that wherever I go you will say that Mr. Sandford went down with his colors flying and his guns reverberating."

At times the self-styled Elijah's voice broke and he was near to sobbing, especially when he told how he had left a successful pastorate eighteen years ago to begin the work which resulted in the building of the temple and other buildings on the Durham sand hill, and then he would fairly shout and pound the railing of the stand with his fist to make more emphatic some declaration.

He boldly proclaimed that he was ready to take the consequences for the acts that had been charged up against him, and turning to the jurors he said:

"There is no squealing here, gentlemen. I am here for the rough and ready of the football match. Whatever happens, I shall do what I can to evangelize the world, wherever I go.

"If I go to jail I shall do the best I can. I do not consider myself a prisoner of the law, but a prisoner of the Lord. If you convict me, all right, but one thing I ask, gentlemen, and that is that you give me credit for being conscientious. I would to God you were all in my condition save these bonds."

In explaining his purpose in making his statement Sandford remarked: "My whole motive is simply to give each official the light he ought to have in deciding this case, for I believe, as much as I believe my name, that two courts are in session today—if not two courts in session today, they will be sometime in the near future. High heaven is watching this scene at this very moment, watching to see if justice is administered, watching to see if each man in his own heart is without prejudice in judging this case."

A story of the hardships encountered on various voyages followed, and Sandford declared that he would have completed his work in the north a year before the Coronet started for that part of the world if it had not been for the people on the Kingdom, the Shiloh vessel wrecked off the west coast of Africa.

He said the Kingdom's people were given to animal pleasure, while those on the Coronet were following the things of the spirit, and in speaking of the turning about of the Coronet when she was 600 miles south of the coast of Greenland he claimed this was because of the obstinacy of some on board the craft.

MISSING FOR SIX DAYS

Posse Finally Finds Man Close to Death From Exposure

Southbridge, Mass., Dec. 11.—Unconscious from hunger and exposure, with the spark of life barely flickering, searchers found James Leek, aged 30, who had been mysteriously missing since early Tuesday, in a crevice between two ledges in the woods a mile from the centre of the town. His emaciated condition indicated that he must have lain in the spot where he was found practically the entire six days that he had been absent.

Several times during the past two days members of the posse of 200 men and boys that had been combing the woods passed within sight of the cranny where Leek lay, but it was not until near dusk last night, when his friends were making their final search, that he was discovered.

Until Leek recovers sufficiently to explain how he came to be in the place where he was found the mystery will remain unsolved. Leek has a wife and one child.

LIQUOR LAW NOT ENFORCED

Pine Tree State Wetter Than Ever Since the Last Election

Bangor, Me., Dec. 11.—Maine prohibitionists are wondering why they are not reaping any fruits from their victory at the polls last September—why, as Maine voted to remain dry, it is now wetter than ever. A movement has been started here to prod up the officials, from governor down to deputy sheriffs, to a realization of their duty in enforcing the liquor law.

Men prominent in the prohibition cause have formulated a set of resolutions, and copies of the document were sent to all the city clergymen for submission to their congregations.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously by six churches of Bangor, and also by the Congregational church of Brewer. Several of the Bangor churches failed to take any action whatever.

PRESSURE OF WATER.

Its Effect Upon a Corked Bottle Lowered Into Ocean Depths.

A bottle partly filled with fresh water and tightly corked can be lowered into ocean depths, and on being raised to the surface it will be discovered on opening it that the fresh water has been replaced by salt.

This really extraordinary phenomenon is explained in the following way: The pressure of water increases as the distance from the surface increases. Thus at the distance of a foot beneath the surface the pressure of the water a square inch will be about half a pound; at a distance of, say, 200 feet it will be 125 pounds to the square inch. At ocean level the pressure of the atmosphere is a little over fourteen pounds. Thus if a bottle containing air were lowered thirty feet beneath the surface the pressure of water would more than counterbalance the pressure of the air. Ordinarily at this depth, therefore, the pressure of water should be sufficient to drive the cork within the bottle, but the cork is tightly wedged in position. To squeeze it within the bottle it, too, must first be compressed, and also there is friction to be overcome.

The distance varying, then, according to these conditions, at some point beneath the surface the weight of water will force the cork into the bottle, compressing the air before it. The salt water of the ocean mingles with the fresh water within the bottle. As the bottle again approaches he surface the air that remains within is subjected to less and less pressure till finally, now having itself a pressure greater than that of the water, it drives the cork back into position.—St. Louis Republic.

WHISTLER THE FIGHTER.

The Artist Always Took His Revenges In a Refined Way.

In "Whistler as I Knew Him" Mortimer Menpes, the author, has a good deal to say about Whistler the fighter and his quickness in resenting an affront. He is careful to add that Whistler was always refined in his methods:

While he was severe he was not actually brutal. He never treated his enemies in a coarse way. Any man who had offended him Whistler would rap sharply over the shoulders with his cane, and then by the time the sufferer had recovered the master would be in the next room explaining to every one how he had just felled his enemy.

Once he caught a man with whom he was for the moment enraged washing his face. Without a moment's hesitation Whistler dashed the unfortunate head straight into the basin of water, and while the foe was endeavoring to clear the soap from his eyes to see the cause of this sudden immersion Whistler was in the smoking room setting the men there in a roar with the account of his adventures.

When I first met Whistler he was in the act of searching for a man who had dared to criticise his Venetian etchings. "If you want to see some fun, Menpes," he said, "come with me." Fortunately the man had been warned and was nowhere to be found.

Feminine Ideals.

I look for the day when women will cease to be imitative, copying men, but will become completely, perfectly and proudly women.—A Woman's Letter in London Times.

UP TO DATE HOLIDAY HINTS

A Dainty Reticule Will Please Most Any Girl.

A linen hand bag to carry with the summer gown may be made up at little cost and will be a gratifying gift to the girl who is fond of stylish dressing, for the washable hand bag will be carried as much next season as it was last summer. The bag illustrated was stamped with an oriental pattern and worked with delft blue silk.

Any style hand bag will be acceptable. Some of the most expensive oriental effects in silk may be duplicated at home by the use of old fashioned brocade silks, tapestries and the addition of a little judicious embroidery. Silk bags ornamented with oriental embroideries are also fashionable. Heart shaped, shield shaped, square and oval bags and variations of these shapes are stylish. Bags of striped silk or satin with the flap fastened down by a fancy button and a cord in two colors (made by twisting together two cords of the desired colors) are also modish souvenirs.

EMBROIDERED LINEN RETICULE.

Hand Embroidered Belt.

Hand embroidered belts cost so much in the store and are so easy to make that they are well worth taking up when one approaches the question of what to give one's friends for Christmas. The belt illustrated here was of white grosgrain washable ribbon, adorned with sprays of foliage. Belts of stamped linen are also liked and may be embroidered in similar style. The belts may be finished with buckles as expensive as one chooses. Wrapped in tissue paper and packed in a pretty box, tied with Christmas ribbons, they are useful and attractive souvenirs.

HAND EMBROIDERED BELT.

Guest Room Towels.

The housewife will always welcome with delight handsomely embroidered towels as a Christmas gift. The illustration shows something particularly new and smart in towel designs. These designs are carried out on a fine quality of huck toweling. The little guest towel is finished with a hemstitched hem, above which is a dainty design of pond lilies darned in blue mercerized cotton, with the leaf and flower petals outlined with white thread.

The larger towel has a butterfly motif mingled with a design worked in white cotton. Yellow mercerized cotton is used to work the butterflies. A pretty buttonhole with a dot in each scallop adorns the ends of this exquisite towel.

HANDSOMELY EMBROIDERED TOWELS.

WHAT TO MAKE.

Presents That Will Delight the Traveler and Housewife.

Dainty accessories for the traveler are the toothbrush case and sponge case photographed here. Both of these are made of coarse gray crash, the edges of which are bound with plain blue silk. The cases are lined with white rubberized silk. The initial of the recipient of the gift should be embroidered on the outside of the flaps of the cases. A case for the comb and brush, the wash rag and other toilet accessories may be added to the outfit. Instead of pale blue the favorite color of the one who is to receive the gift may be used for binding the set and for working the monogram.

TOOTHBRUSH HOLDER.

SPONGE CASE.

Crochet Table Set.

Crochet table sets are now popular, and any woman who can crochet will find that the housewives of her acquaintance will be gratified to receive even the simplest handmade outfit.

The doily illustrated here is worked in coarse linen thread or a moderately fine crochet cotton. The pattern consists simply of a combination of wheels or rosettes. If a larger doily is wanted the row of single trebles around the inside wheel may be increased until the border is wide enough to make the doily of the desired width when the outer row of wheels is added. To make each wheel crochet a chain of twelve stitches and join it to form a ring. Then on the ring work thirty-six trebles. For the second row make one treble between each two trebles of the preceding row with a chain of two between each treble. For the third row turn, crochet four treble into every third hole of the preceding row with four chain between each of the four trebles. For the fourth row crochet four trebles in the center of the group of four trebles of the previous row and connect by chains of four.

For the fifth row crochet twelve trebles in the center of the group of four trebles, make a chain of two and draw a stitch up under the chains of four in the two preceding rows, chain two more and make a group of twelve trebles, and so on to the end of the row. This will complete one of the wheels. Twelve of these wheels are required for the doily. For the center of the doily connect each of the scallops that edge the wheels with a chain of twelve. For the next row crochet eighteen trebles on each of these chains. For the next row turn and make one treble and two chain between each of the two trebles of the preceding row. The three other rows are done exactly like the third, fourth and fifth rows of the wheel. The wheels may be fitted for the outside row into position and joined into place with a needle and thread.

An inexperienced crochet worker will find this doily a very easy affair to make. The pattern merely repeats itself, which simplifies the design.

Environment.

The street car conductor was about to be transferred to another line. Not his to reason why, yet on that occasion he did, and with the chief of the department.

"I don't like that line," he said.

"What's the matter with it?" asked the chief.

"It's commonplace," said the conductor. "I will lose my good manners if I go down there. The line I am on now is a well dressed line and a liberal education for the railway employee. I am not the same man I was when I was moved up there two years ago from a downtown line. I a mmore polite, my voice is lower, and I have spruced up in general appearance. It is that way with every man in the business. Put him on a line patronized by well dressed people and he will fix up to fit his surroundings. If I go back on that other line I will lose polish."

All the chief said then was "Well, well," but the conductor was not transferred.—New York Sun.

BURNS' ATTACKS ON GOMPERS

Head of Federation Prepared to Show That Darrow Pronounced John McNamara Innocent During Conference at Indianapolis—Lawyer Said to Have Asserted That It Would Cost $1,000,000 to Save Him

Washington, Dec. 11.—Strong denial that the officers of the American Federation of Labor knew that the McNamara brothers were guilty previous to their plea in open court at Los Angeles, is made in a lengthy statement issued from labor headquarters here.

This statement is signed by the McNamara ways and means committee, so called, and lays great stress on the assertion that the different members of that committee had implicit confidence in John J. McNamara previous to his acknowledgement of guilt.

The federation leaders declare they had never heard of the guilt of the McNamaras when they met at Indianapolis, and tell how they relied on the gas explosion theory in the Los Angeles Times case. They first learned the truth, they say, from published reports.

The entire history of the dynamiting case is reviewed, Detective Burns is again condemned for his statements, and a plea made for fair play to unions.

The carefully guarded secret of Gompers' defense against the attacks of Detective Burns cropped out through the carelessness of a girl stenographer employed at the American Federation of Labor headquarters.

When Gompers is summoned before the federal grand jury he will present a sworn statement signed by every labor leader in attendance at a recent conference with Clarence S. Darrow at Indianapolis, in which it is positively asserted that Darrow pronounced John J. McNamara innocent.

Following his declaration that McNamara was innocent, this sworn statement to the federal grand jury will show Darrow is further alleged to have told those present at the Indianapolis conference that it would take at least $1,000,000 to prevent his execution.

"What," one of the most prominent labor men in the country is said to have replied, "$1,000,000 to clear an innocent man! Then, in God's name, what will become of the labor movement if they arrest still other trade unionists and we have to raise $1,000,000 every time such an arrest is effected?"

"That is something I am not responsible for," Darrow is said to have replied. "I regard this as a life and death fight for organized labor. I also think that John J. McNamara is as innocent as an unborn babe. But it will take another $1,000,000 to clear him of the charge, and his conviction is assured if you don't furnish the money."

Added significance is given this statement, which is regarded as official, although the girl stenographer's name is withheld for obvious reasons, because of the fact that this conference was held less than six weeks ago.

It is conceded by all concerned that Darrow was considering the advisability of having his clients plead guilty as far back as July, and that he was convinced of their guilt even at that time.

Darrow's silence concerning the charges made against Gompers by Detective Burns, the girl stenographer said, was accounted for at labor headquarters by saying that the Chicago lawyer is one of the leading Socialists in the country. The Socialists invariably have fought Gompers at every point.

A most important phase of the development of the case against "the men higher up" developed in the visit of District Attorney Miller of Indianapolis to Washington for a conference with Acting Attorney General William Harr.

McNamaras In Penitentiary

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 11.—James B. and John J. McNamara have been taken to San Quentin prison. The decision to take them followed the brothers' final refusal to give away more facts as to their operations.

With the trial of A. B. Maple, Bert Franners and P. I. Bender, charged with attempting to blow up the hall of records in August, 1910, postponed until Jan. 4, the only thing remaining here pertaining to the McNamara case besides the grand jury investigation is the case of Bert H. Franklin, charged with having bribed a prospective juror for the McNamara trial.

Both District Attorney Fredericks and Assistant District Attorney Ford declare that Franklin will probably plead guilty.

PEACE JOURNEY DELAYED

Ex-President Eliot of Harvard Under the Surgeon's Knife

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 11.—Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, was operated on for appendicitis at Kandy, Ceylon. Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, his son, received a cablegram saying that the patient was comfortable and that conditions were favorable for quick recovery.

The party arrived recently at Kandy, having landed at Colombo Dec. 3. On Nov. 7 they departed from New York for an eight months' visit to the far east, Eliot planning to make numerous addresses for the Carnegie peace foundation in the hope of promoting amity among nations.

Should his illness prove to be no more serious than the dispatch indicated, Eliot's itinerary probably will not be disturbed much.

FIFTY YEARS NEEDED TO GET IN CONDITION

Our Army Unprepared For War, According to Stimson

Washington, Dec. 11.—In his annual report to the president, Secretary of War Stimson declares that the contingency of war with a first-class power would find the army of the United States practically unprepared.

He attributes this largely to the fact that the army was "scattered out over the country" in too many posts, and to a lack of reserves. The army on the peace footing habitually maintained, with miniature companies and troops, he characterized as ineffective for any serious war service.

As to the unpreparedness of the army in artillery and ammunition, Stimson says that "at the present rate of appropriation it is estimated that it would take more than fifty years to secure a reasonable supply of field artillery guns, carriages and ammunition that would be necessary in the event of war."

REPUBLICANS GATHERING

Roosevelt Supporters Said to Be Planning Stampede For Him

Washington, Dec. 11.—With the arrival in Washington of practically all the members of the Republican national committee, reinforced by party leaders from nearly every state, the following program seems to have been agreed upon:

Chicago will get the national convention apparently beyond all question of doubt, and it probably will be held the last week in June, and at this supporters of Mr. Roosevelt will rely upon a stampede to land the nomination for the presidency, although he has not stated he is a candidate.

ASSEMBLYMAN IS SHOCKED

Thinks an Anti-Flirting Law Is Needed In Empire State

New York, Dec. 11.—After spending some time on a popular Broadway corner, Assemblyman Hearn of Buffalo declared that at the next session of the legislature he would introduce a bill to make flirting in public a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment.

Hearn said he would make his bill apply to both sexes, since "that one who accepts the attention of a flirt is just as bad as the one who began the flirting."

ENTOMBED MEN ARE ALL DEAD

Belief of Those Who Are Trying to Rescue Miners

MANY FAMILIES MOURN LOSS

Crowd Around Mouth of Shaft, Hoping That Some of the Hundred Victims May Be Rescued Alive—Most of Wage-Earners of Tennessee Town Leave Widows and Orphans—Relief Forces Working Hard

Briceville, Tenn., Dec. 11.—Somewhere in the depths of the Cross Mountain coal mine probabl 100 men lie dead, while their sorrow-stricken families keep vigil at the mouth of their tomb, hoping against hope that their loved ones may be alive when rescuers reach them.

Eight torn and mangled bodies have been brought forth. Outside the immediate families of the entombed men, no one in this little mountain village believes that any living thing in the mine has survived the terrific explosion of coal dust that wrecked the workings Saturday.

For more than thirty-six hours every surviving miner in this region toiled, with no thought of food, sleep or pay, to remove the debris and force air into the innermost recesses of the mine. They practically have penetrated to the main entry head, nearly three miles in. Today they expect to be ready to work the cross entries, in which the great mass of bodies undoubtedly were cast by the force of the blast.

Black damp developed and stopped progress for a while, but soon the silent force pushed dauntlessly on, some of them till they were carried out, overcome by the noxious gases.

Thousands of the morbidly curious flocked into Briceville and crowded about the main entry to the mine. They saw nothing but the pitiable grief of the stricken families.

There is hardly a family in the entire Coal Creek valley that has not felt the touch of death. The problem of caring for the widows and orphans will be a grave one, requiring immediate solution. Certainly Briceville will be unable to care for her living with most of her wage-earners numbered among the dead.

Work of rescue moved slowly, partly because most of the entombed men are believed to be two miles from the opening and because of deadly black damp. The latter caused all work to be stopped for a time yesterday afternoon, but by nightfall it was resumed. Electrical devices for moving cars in the working were shattered by the explosion and debris cleared away in the tunnels is being hauled by mule cars to the surface. Mine experts say it will be days before each lateral has been penetrated.

Straining on the ropes that keep back the throng from the mine opening are the relatives of victims anxiously awaiting some word of life within the yawning mouth of the death trap. The situation becomes more tense as each car of debris is brought to the surface, for its driver might bring some word or with the debris might be a body of some loved one. The shrill whistle of the special train bringing coffins at 2 o'clock Sunday morning brought another horror to the already dazed inhabitants of the little town.

The special brought 175 boxes, and they were piled near the mouth of the mine. Only eight of these boxes were opened, but the others stand as sentinels of the grim monster, silently waiting the assignment that each is sure to receive.

No official or semi-official opinion has been given out as to the cause of the disaster. President Stephenson of the Knoxville Iron company and others interested have nothing to say in answer to this inquiry. It is generally believed, however, that the disaster was due to a "dust explosion."

An undertaker who examined the corpses found in the mine stated that in every instance the heads of the victims were bruised as if they had been thrown violently against the ceiling of the mine or the timbers on the side walls. This, it is claimed, argues in favor of the "dust explosion" theory.

FIRE DESTROYS CHURCH

Strong Evidence That It Was the Work of an Incendiary

Reading, Mass., Dec. 11.—Belief that the blaze which practically destroyed the historic Old South M. E. church here was of incendiary origin has grown to a certainty as a result of a searching investigation by State Fire Marshal Rice.

It was found that a rear window had been forced. Added to this, a strong odor of kerosene was noticeable where the fire started.

Q.—The Bible frequently refers to the "four corners of the earth." Does this support the theory that the earth is square and flat? (E. V. D.)

Answer.—Much of the Scriptures are written in language that should be considered in the accommodated sense. The expression "four corners" should be considered as meaning the four quarters of the earth, just as we use the expression today as signifying the four cardinal points of the compass. When it is said in the Scriptures that the sun rises, let no one suppose that the inspired writers did not know what they were writing about, for the evidence is clear and strong that the ancients knew as much, if not more than the peoples of today, about astronomy. As the youth, who has acquired a smattering of knowledge, thinks that he knows morethan his father, so many today think that modern knowledge and information is away in advance of that possessed by the ancients. This twentieth-century conceit is entirely unwarranted. There are no poets, authors, sculptors, artists, architects, philosophers, and mathematicians living, that would compare with those of the remote past, as all people of real intelligence know. The world's foremost scientists are just beginning to find out some facts that were stated in the Bible more than three thousand years ago! Humility is a charming virtue.

Q.—Did the early Christians practise "Communism"? (W. E. V.)

Answer.—Yes: the early Christians practised communism until it was found to be impracticable. We read, "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. * * * Neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of lands or houses, sold them, and brought the prices of them that were sold, and laid them down at the Apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need. * * * And in those days * * * there arose a murmuring." (Acts ii, 44; iv. 34, 35; vi, 1.) The Lord gave no instructions to the Christians to have all things in common, but permitted them to practise this method until they had learned certain lessons of experience. Because of inherited traits, weaknesses and imperfections of character, it is impossible to live together in peace and harmony in a large community and have all things in common. This has been demonstrated again and again by the experiences of communistic societies that have been formed in the past. Even where two parties in a marriage contract agree to have all things in common and where there is every incentive to live together in love and peace, how few really successful unions there are! If any feel disposed to think that the principles of "communism" can be successfully carried out, it is suggested that a boarding house colony of fifteen or twenty people be organized and then let all make desperate efforts to preserve the peace without the aid of the police!

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

By the time winter really gets here it will have had lots of practice.

Virginia justice seems to be quick, reasonably sure, and decidedly unsentimental.

Wisconsin raised $10,000,000 worth of potatoes this year, but it probably costs Chicago double that sum to eat them.

When the Italians tackled Turkey they expected to carve it up in a jiffy, but like most birds, it is turning out to be very tough.

A new play is announced by the title of "The Wife Decides." It may be new on the stage, but its an awfully old story in the gallery.

Permission to engage again in Wall street speculation would perhaps be a tonic that would restore C. W. Morse to health.

If women are allowed to smoke in public conveyances, what will become of the old-time distinction between the smoker and the ladies' car?

The general massacres in China indicate that all parties have agreed to the population ofthat over crowded the population ofthat over corwded country.

It must be embarrassing to work for the sub-divided Standard Oil Co. now, and have thirty-four different bosses standing over you giving different orders.

Senator Smoot says Congress will do nothing but play politics this season. We have faith to believe, however, that in odd moments they may pass one or two bills for the good of the nation.

Man slaughtering motorists should be punished. If they were compelled to appear on the streets driving at less than fifty miles an hour, they might feel so publicly disgraced that the penalty would be sufficient.

They are working in New York to secure quiet zones about the schools so that the children won't be disturbed. Elsewhere the effort is to secure quiet zones for the neighbors who live near school buildings.

In spite of the fact that the Old Farmers' almanac issues reliable weather predictions a year in advance, the government continues to spend several millions a year on the Weather Bureau.

W. Morgan Shuster is having his troubles as treasurer of Persia, but as we have our suspicions that the cash if counted would not net over $4.75, we do not advise Uncle Sam to try to get any share of it.

Much fun is being made of California's woman jurors. But as no man who can earn more than $1.75 a day is willing to serve on a jury now, it may be necessary to seek candidates in some new quarter.

CHRISTMAS FROM BEHIND THE COUNTER.

1911 years ago on Dec. 25 the angels on Judea's plains sang the message of peace and good will to men. And ever since on Christmas eve something of life's harsh and hostile strivings soften down for the moment.

For the time being we cease to heave economic and competitive brickbats at each other, and exchange jolly greetings of good fellowship, with an avalanche of gifts, the majority of them at least harmless.

And yet in spite of the merriment and friendliness of the season, with its message of peace and good will as the echo of the far off angel song, for thousands and thousands of salespeople, the season is an agony of fret and strain.

What a contrast from the sweet song of far Judea to the scene to be enacted on the evening of next Dec. 24, in a thousand department stores, where until the closing doors fairly push the shoppers into the street, the mob will be storming the shelves and counters. Behind the counter are packed the fuming salesgirls, jammed so thickly thathey are falling over each other, knee deep in paper waste so that every motion is impeded, their tousled stock in an exhausting confusion and disarray, the otherwise gentle girls nerved almost to the swearing point, with swollen and aching feet, tired backs, unstrung nerves.

The stores of our own town do not see the most strenuous phases of this melee. And yet human nature is much the same here as elsewhere, and the week before Christmas is a week of turmoil for most people in retail trade.

And all this dread period of fret and strain for many thousands of people could be relieved, if without the slightest cost or trouble to themselves, people would anticipate their wants by a short period and buy early. And the buyers would find better assortments, in cleaner condition.

And yet in spite of incessant pleading to "buy your Christmas gifts early," the majority of the public continues in the same old thoughtless way. What selfish, irresponsible children we are, after all!

JUST BEFORE CHRISTMAS.

But jest 'fore Christmas I'm as good as good can be!

First thing she knows, she doesn't know where she is at!

But sometimes when the groceryman is worrited an' cross,
He reaches at us with his whip, an' larrups up his hoss.
An' then I laff and holler, "Oh, ye never touched me!"
But just 'fore Christmas I'm as good as I can be.

But gran'ma she has never been to see a Wild West show,
Nor read the life of Daniel Boone, or else I guess she'd know
That Buff'lo Bill an' cow-boys is good enough for me!
Excep' jest 'fore Christmas, when I'm good as I can be!

And then old Sport he hangs around, as solemn like an' still,
His eyes they seem a-sayin': "What's the matter, Bill?"
The old cat sneaks down off her perch an' wonders what's become
Of them two enemies of hern that used to make things hum!
But I am so perlite an' 'tend so earnestly to biz,
That mother says to father: "How improved our Willie is!"
But father, havin' been a boy hisself, suspicions me
When jest 'fore Christmas I'm as good as I kin be!

For Christmas with its lots and lots of candies, cakes an' toys,
Was made, they say, for proper kids, an' not for naughty boys;
So wash yer face and bresh yer hair, an' mind yer p's and q's,
An' don't bust out yer pantaloons, and don't wear out yer shoes;
Say "Yessum" to the ladies, an "Yessir" to the men,
An' when they's company, don't pass yer plate for pie again;
But, thinkin' of the things yer'd like to see upon that tree,
Jes 'fore Christmas be as good as yer can be!

—A novel feature of the Men and Religion Forward movement is on trial at Lynn, where Carroll Westall, manager of advertising for a large commercial institution in Boston, is conducting, before pastors and church workers, a course of lectures designed to teach the churches how to advertise—how to advertise in a large sense; to bring to the help of uncommercial good effort the stimulation which publicity, skillfully handled, supplies in business. It is now widely perceived that if the church is to "come back" it must develop greater efficiency and offer more definite appeal to live men who seek and are willing to fight for justice and righteousness on earth. But some churches which are making real headway toward vigorous grappling with society's wrongs are not reaching the unchurched with evidences of their work; their light is obscured. That fact calls for the publicity expert.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

JUST TYPE.—"The paper says flour is going up, Mrs. Guggin."

Mr. Scrappington—"Well, what of it?"

Mrs. Scrappington—"What is needed a great deal worse is the recall of husbands!"—Puck.

MUSICAL.—"Is your boy Josh fond of music?"

"I should say so," replied Farmer Corntossel. "When one o' these here musical comedies comes along Josh wants to be right up as close to the orchestra as possible."—Washington Star.

FEARED IT.—"Abner, how about this Salome dance you've booked for the opery house? Some of our best citizens are a little worried about it."

"Oh, I've cut out all the objectionable features, you know."

"That's jest it. We was afeered you would."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

PEEVISH.—"You are unreasonable," declared the physician.

"You stuff yourself with 20 kinds of rich food, and then kick because you have to take two kinds of medicine."—Washington Herald.

GOOD SHOT.—"I was out in the woods hunting yesterday and I shot a man who was wearing one of these fuzzyhats."

"Well?"

"I am afraid people may think I did it intentionally."

"Afraid? Why, man, if they think that, you will get all the more credit."—Houston Post.

THE SHIP CAPTAIN

His Life Pays the Penalty if His Vessel Be Wrecked.

SAD TRAGEDIES OF THE SEA.

Brave and Skillful Mariners Who Went to Death With Heroic Calmness When Disaster Overwhelmed the Craft Committed to Their Care.

For this is the law without excuse
For all of the lords of the sea—
That each must hold his ship from harm,
Whatever the odds may be.

There are many tragedies of the sea that the world knows very little about, or, knowing, very soon forgets. These are the tragedies of the men whose lives have been spent in the hard and exacting service which the sea demands, whose long years of toil and zeal and skill have brought the high responsibilities of command and whose careers have been cut short by the fault of an hour—yea, even by the error of a minute.

The old rubric that those who never make mistakes have had few opportunities for making them does not apply here. There is never a voyage that does not have its possibility of error, and in many of them arise the sudden emergencies which bring the acid test of presence of mind, cool judgment, expert seamanship and skill. Let these qualities fail the master mariner in his time of need, and, no matter what might have been the stress of body or brain, or of both, his professional career is at an end, if the lapse involves disaster to his ship.

There is that veteran mariner Captain Frederick Watkins. He it was who commanded the City of Paris when the old Inman liner came staggering to port with the Atlantic waves swashing about her hold and surging against her bulkheads, the result of a fog shrouded impact with an iceberg. The liner was thronged with passengers. The unforeseen danger came near to sending her and her thousand souls to the bottom, but the energy, resourcefulness and skill of her commander brought her safe to port—a deed to be long remembered.

It was remembered up to a few years ago, when a slight miscalculation on the part of Captain Watkins sent his vessel upon the Manacle rocks, on the Cornish coast. Now you may search all of the obscure places of the earth and you may not locate him.

There was the Prinzessin Victoria Luise of the Hamburg-American line, which drove hard upon the coral beach at Port Royal, in the island of Jamaica. The vessel was thronged with tourists, making a jaunt to the West Indies. Fortunately the sea was calm, and there was no difficulty in getting passengers ashore. When the last had been safely landed the captain went to his stateroom and put a bullet through his brain.

The pitiable part of it all was that he had no need to. It was not the brain he shattered that was at fault, but the Kingston earthquake, which had destroyed the lighthouse.

Captain Griffith of the Mohegan stood on the bridge of his fast sinking ship until the waters engulfed him. Delonde of the French liner Bourgogne, sunk in mid-Atlantic by a collision with the British steamship Cromartyshire, was last seen on the bridge, with hand on whistle cord, as his vessel took the long dive. Von Goessel of the Elbe went down with his ship, standing with folded arms upon the bridge as the vessel slowly sank.

One of the saddest tragedies of the sea was the wreck of the British steamship Waiearapa, which went ashore on Great Barrier island while on a voyage from Sydney to New Zealand. As the vessel neared the entrance to the harbor of Auckland a thick fog shut in. Captain McIntosh, who commanded her, had been many [illegible] was reported to be very careful and [illegible] While the steamer was groping her way through the mist it was noted that he was exceedingly nervous and depressed.

When night came the fog was so thick that the officers could not see half a ship's length ahead. A few minutes past midnight there was a sudden crash which laid the steamship almost on her beam ends, disabling all of the boats on the careered side. Captain McIntosh was on the bridge at the time. A great wound which had been torn in the vessel's side showed the extent of the disaster. As soon as he realized that his ship must become a total loss the captain strode to the end of the bridge and, exclaiming "This is the last watch!" plunged overboard to his death.—Walter Scott Meriwether in Munsey's Magazine.

DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Lime Starvation the Basic Cause, Says a Chemist.

"The almost universal decay of the teeth is proof positive that our nation is suffering lime starvation," writes a chemistry lecturer in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

"Our dentists prescribe tooth washes and tooth pastes, advocate local hygiene, fill cavities and fit bridges, and all this time ignore the fact that the basic cause is lime starvation.

"Dentists will tell you that the sugar you take in your mouth acts directly upon your teeth. Dentists shut their eyes to the evident fact that decay starts first in the pulp beneath the intact enamel and honeycombs the interior tooth until the shell-like bridge of enamel breaks beneath the strain.

"The enamel gives absolute protection against the external attacks of acids and sugar. I have immersed sound teeth for months in a solution of fruit acids and sugar and have been unable to detect any erosion of either the enamel or the pulp.

"When you eat sweetmeats the sugar, with its irresistible affinity for soluble lime, combines with the calcium of the blood, and the blood retaliates by sapping the soluble from the pulp and substance of the teeth. Druggists make use of this affinity of soluble lime for sugar when preparing the official sirup of lime. Lime forms a solution thirty-five times stronger in simple sirup than in the same quantity of water. If you want your children to have sound, white teeth, see that their diet is rich in lime and poor in sugar."

To Restore Leather Bindings.

To restore the leather bindings of books wash them first very lightly and carefully with clean warm water in which a tiny piece of soda has been dissolved, in order to free the leather from grease; then wash with clear water to remove the soda and dry. Dissolve a bit of gum arabic the size of a small bean in a teaspoonful of water and beat it up with a teaspoonful of the white of an egg. With a bit of sponge go lightly over the leather with this glair and let it dry. Should the glair froth up on the leather, as it is very likely to do if there is much tool work on the book, dab it until it subsides with the palm of the hand or with the sponge squeezed as dry as possible.

Those Buried Treasures.

"My speech was rather lengthy, I am afraid," said the young statesman, "but I assure you that it contains numerous gems of thought."

"Perhaps," replied Mr. Growcher, "but I have never allowed myself to take the slightest interest in these stories of buried treasures."—Washington Star.

YOUR MORNING MAIL.

It May Be Dangerous to Open It at the Breakfast Table.

Did you ever hear that it is dangerous to open your morning mail at the breakfast table? According to a Berlin scientist, Professor Kron, and the London Lancet, it is dangerous—very. Professor Kron has succeeded in tracing several cases of contagion to the old custom of waiting until you sit down at the breakfast table before opening and going through your morning mail. He calls attention to the fact that the average man or woman goes down to breakfast with hands and face scrupulously clean, teeth scrubbed and throat gargled. In that condition he is prepared to eat without danger of swallowing more disease germs than may have possibly escaped the watchful attentions of the cook.

But instead of doing that he handles letters and papers which have passed through many hands before reaching his own. Between bites he opens envelopes and wrappers and in doing so unthinkingly paves the way for the absorption of all kinds of germs which may or may not do him a great deal of harm.

It has long been the custom in many well regulated households where the breakfast hour is fixed somewhat late and where the mail carrier gets around before breakfast is served to place each person's morning letters by his or her plate in the dining room. This, says the Lancet, is a custom which should be abolished at once. Letters should be opened and read either before or after breakfast, but never at the table during the handling of food.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Sunday morning called out a goodly number of worshippers to the Wollaston Unitarian church. Early in the service, as has been his custom, of late, the Rev. Carl G. Horst, read a devotional poem, this time his selection being Adelaide. A. Proctor's beautiful poem "Through peace to light." It was a fitting opening to a sermon upon prayer, the text of which was taken from Luke 11:1—"Lord teach us to pray."

The keynote of the sermon was touched in the statement that prayer is not a blind asking for personal favor or individual blessing, but a communion with God and the cultivation of such a spirit as shall put one in a right relation with the laws by which our natures are governed. Finite asking may not change Infinite laws, but we may so grow into harmony with the stability and exactness of those laws, as to recognize their wise and beneficent purpose and find in their key unchangeable ness our greatest source of strength.

The great thought pervading the sermon was of gratitude that we are so fashioned as to be able to live intelligently under laws that we know to be unchangeable.

"Consider the lilies" was most acceptably rendered by Mr. Bates and Miss Abbie Penley and the words of the closing hymn were appropriate to the spirit ofthe service.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire,
That trembles in the breast.

At the 4.30 vesper service the church was filled to its capacity. The Temple quartet rendered several selections finely and Rev. Mr. Horst gave a brief discourse from the text "Thy will be done" in which he emphasized the devotion and consecration implied in the petition, rather than weak surrender of one's own will to the inevitable. A yielding of our will to the divine will implies a desire for active service in furthering God's large plan for humanity, and a willingness to be the means of the accomplishment of God's will through acceptance of life's responsibilities.

The regular monthly meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club will be held tomorrow evening. Dinner at 630 o'clock. Abner Post, M. D., of Boston, will speak on "A Rival of Tuberculosis." This is a most timely topic. Both the subject and the discussion that follows are sure to make this meeting one of the best of the season.

Rev. Carl G. Horst will address the Women's Alliance of North Easton at their regular meeting tomorrow afternoon.

The constitution, by-laws and covenant of the church have been printed in book form and any member of the Wollaston Unitarian society, who has not yet received a copy of the same, is requested to notify the clerk of the parish, William H. Boynton, 113 Elmwood avenue.

Unitarian literature may be had free of charge on application to Miss H. E. Turner, 74 Winthrop avenue.

Seldom a Sunday passes that we have not out-of-town friends worshipping with us. Last Sunday we were glad to welcome to our pews members of the Unitarian churches in Pittsfield and Braintree.

We are glad to announce that the Rev. Calvin Stebbins of Framingham, Mass., whose sermons in our church always leave a deep impression upon the worshippers, will occupy our pulpit Sunday morning.

The Young People's Religious Union at its meeting Sunday evening at 7 o'clock will have the second in its series of stereopticon lectures dealing with the social question of the time. Raymond Hall will conduct the devotional service and the Rev. Elmer S. Forbes of Boston, national secretary of the Social and Public Service department of the American Unitarian Association will give a stereopticon lecture on "How the other half lives." The public is cordially invited. Please be in your seat before seven o'clock.

The members of the parish are reminded that the Junior Lend-a-Hand club has taken upon itself the work of raising money for the prevention and extermination of tuberculosis and has Red Cross Christmas seals in any quantity to sell.

The Child Labor Committee of the Fathers and Mothers club of Boston, the Legislative Committee of the Massachusetts Congress of Mothers and the Legislative Commitee of the Quincy Women's club have united in an effort to get popular sentiment on the subject of the Mother's Pension Bill, recently passed in Illinois, focussed into action in Massachusetts. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise will speak for them in Huntington hall, Jan. 1, at 8 P. M. on the subject, "The Institution and the Child" in relation to the Mother's Pension bill. This bill provides that widowed mothers of children too young to work be allowed a pension of $10 a month for the first child and $5.00 for each succeeding child, until the children come, in turn, to the working age. This pension intended to reenforce the mother's efforts is considered in the light of a recognition of the, mother's service to the state, in bearing and rearing children, and of her effort to provide worthy citizens for the State, and is in no sense charity, hence given only to those mothers who are fit and proper guardians of their children.

ST. JOHN'S AND ST. MARY'S.

Besides the regular Sunday masses, special services were held last evening at St. John's, St. Mary's churches, West Quincy, in honor of the Immaculate Conception. These services consisted of vespers, sermon and benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

In St. John's church a very instructive and eloquent sermon was delivered by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell. In St. Mary's, the preacher was Rev. Andrew Dore, of Somerville who discoursed in a most fitting manner on the significance of the occasion. In both churches, the regular choirs furnished music.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

All the services at the First Presbyterian church were well attended Sunday. The pastor, Rev. James A. Matheson preached morning and evening. The topic for the morning was "Renewing the Kingdom." Israel renewed her vows and pledges to King Saul, after his first victory in battle. There is a renewing of church devotion, consecration and interest in spiritual things today. When this is sure the individual becomes better and men in general are developed. The untouched spiritual possibilities of the church are reached; the mass of a suffering world are satisfied. In Christ, men become electrified with the desire to do good; God's love after concentration is disseminated and the world gradually and surely becomes better.

The evening topic was "Sin," found in every book, chapter in the Bible. Sin is a burden of the heart and life, voluntarily carried by men. A man's sin becomes a burden to others, drawing him, when down and at the same time estranging them from God. This happens because sin has attacked the heart of life. God is angry with the sinner but hates the sin in the sinner. He will be punished here and hereafter unless he turns from his sins.

The remedy is not found in any book or system outside the book of God and the way presented by Christ. Apart from the cross there is no help. Christ is the centre of the entire life and so lifts the sinner out of sin and draws him to himself.

The Home department of the Bible school held a most enjoyable social on Friday evening of last week. A large number were present to take part in and listen to the feast of body and mind. This branch of the school is flourishing and every department of the Bible school is in excellent condition. Nearly 200 members are enrolled in the Home department. The lessons are faithfully studied at home and the offerings are good.

The increased knowledge displayed by the children in the school is an evidence of faithful teaching and study by the parents in the home. The department placed a window in the church when remodelled. Each yearan offering is sent to Home and Foreign Missions. During the evening several inspiring addresses were made, and many songs added to the event. Mr. John Bissett, Sr., the president is greatly interested in the success and development of the branch of our church work. The Bible school is busy preparing for the Christmas festival to be held during the Christmas season.

The monthly meeting of the "Ruth and Lydia" class will be held tonight at the home of Miss Helen Kenn.

DR. REARDON ON MEDICAL INSPECTION

studies has been as unquestionably left behind, as has been he who through illness could not keep his place in school. That the assumption of a universal mental and physical equal is false and is a poor business policy, has been pointed out many times. As in all movements the leaders have been far in advance of the rank and file and in our own as in other countries, a great majority of people have been too much engaged in special interests to give heed to the great problems involved in the work of improving the educational and physical well being of the young.

With the great changes which have been coming in life former conditions have disappeared and the indifference has become impossible. The results of these changed conditions on the health of the child have become so marked as to insistently demand attention. Parents, school authorities and health authorities, have been unable to avoid recognizing the fact that the school has become the most certain centre of infection in the community.

From these conditions grew up medical inspection for the purpose of detecting contagious disease, and segregating such cases for the protection of other children. Wherever established the good results of medical inspection havs been evident. Epidemics have been checked or avoided. Improvements have been noted in the cleanliness and neatness of the children. Teachers and parents have come to know that under the new system it is safe for children to continue in school in times of threatened or actual epidemics.

The changes in the length of the school term, and the increase in number of years of schooling demanded of the child, has caused a great advance in the standard of work required. When the standard was low, the work was not beyond capacity of even the weaker children, but with close grading, fuller courses, higher standards and constantly more insistent demands for intellectual attainment, there has been a change. Pupils have been unable to keep up with their classes. Terms "backward," "retarded" exceptional as applied to school children have been added to the vocabularies of school men.

Inquires have been made into the causes underlying the phenomena of backward and retarded children, of those who were unable to keep up with their classes, or those who seemed to be different from their companions in their ability to do the work demanded. As a result of these inquiries, physical examinations have been conducted by physicians connected with the schools. Surprising numbers of children have been found who through defective eyesight have been seriously handicapped in their school work. Many are found to have defective hearing. Other conditions are found which have a great and formerly unrecognized influence on the welfare, happiness and mental vigor of the child. Attention has been directed to the significance of adenoids and enlarged tonsils, or swollen glands and carious teeth.

Persistently, earnestly and quietly this work has been pushed to a successful experimental accomplishment, and as a result, we have today medical inspection in its various forms, not only for the detection of contagious diseases, but also for discovering those physical defects which interfere with the child's ability to do his school work, or which if neglected will seriously affect his physical efficiency in after life. The movement constitutes a sign and a result of the gradual awakening which has developed into a wave of interest in matters that pertains to the health of school children, that is now sweeping over the civilized world. Teachers and parents are commencing to realize that from their viewpoint and from that of the school physician, the problem of the pupil with defective eyesight, may be quite as important to the community as that of the child who has some contagious disease. This child placed in a school where physical defects are unresognized and disregarded is unable to see distinctly, and headaches, eyestrain and failure follow all his efforts to study. He cannot see the blackboards and charts, printed books are indistinct or are seen only with mdch effort, everything is blurred. Neither he nor his teacher know what is the matter, but he soon finds it impossible to keep pace with his companions and becoming discouraged, he falls behind in the unequal race.

In no better plight is the child suffering from enlarged tonsils and adenoids, which prevent proper nasal breathing and compel him to keep his mouth open in order to breath. Perhaps ear trouble developes. He is soon considered stupid. This inference is strengthened by his poor progress in school. Through no fault of his own he is doomed to failure. He neglects his studies, hates his school, leaves school long before he has completed his course, and is well started on the road to an inefficient and despondent life.

Public schools are a public trust. When the parent delivers his child to their care, he has a right to insist that the child, under the supervision of the school authorities shall be safe from harm and will at least be handed back to him in as good condition as he was at first. Not only has the parent the right to claim such protection, but even if he does not insist upon it, the child himself has a right to claim it. The child has a claim upon the state and the state a claim upon the child which demand recognition.

In other words "when the state or city for its own protection compels a child to go to school, it pledges itself not to injure itself, by injuring the child." We are beginning to find out that many of our backward pupils are backward purely and simply because through physical defects they are unable to handle the work of the school program. What those defects are and the causes that lie behind them are things that we must know. Education without health is useless. It would be better to sacrifice the education, if in order to obtain it, the child must lay down his good health as a price. Education must comprehend the whole man, and the whole man is built fundamentally on what he is physically. Children are not dullards or possessed with defections by the will of an unscrutable providence, but rather by the law of cause and effect.

Th objection that the state has no right to permit or require medical inspection of the children in the schools will not bear close scrunity nor logical analysis. The authority which has the right to compel attendance at school has the added duty of insisting that no harm shall come to those who go there. The Massachusetts law with its mandatory "shall" is certainly preferable to the New Jersey law with its permissive "may." When the subject is considered both from the standpoint of the individual and that of the school, the wonder is not that Medical Inspection is now being agitated, but rather that it was not long ago put into practice.

Nor is the state in assuming the medical oversight of the pupils in the public schools, trespassing upon the domain of private right and initiative.

Under medical inspection absolutely nothing is done for the parent but to tell him of the needs of his child, of which he would therwise have been in ignorance. It leaves it to the parent to remedy the need. It gives him a larger responsibility than before. Whatever view be taken of the right of the state to enforce measures for the correction of defects discovered, the argument for and against do not enter in the present discussion. It seems difficult to find a logical basis for the argument that the state has not the right to inform the parents of defects present in the child and to advise as to remedical measures which must be taken to remove them.

The justification of the state in assuming the function of education, and in making that education compulsory is to insure it more preservation and efficiency. Whether or not it is to be successful will depend on its individual members. But the well being of a state is as much dependent upon the strength, health and productive caacity of its members as it is upon their knowledge and intelligence. In order that it may insure the efficiency of its ritizens, the state through its compulsory education requires its youth to pursue studies which experience has proved necessary to secure that efficiency. Individual efficiency hence rests not alone on education or intelligence but is equally dependent on physical health and vigor. While the laws of the state may make mandatory, "training in intelligence," it may also command training, to secure physical soundness and capacity.

Much time may elapse before there will be brought to bear in the schools the measures, now successfully practised in some places, for conserving and developing the physical soundness of rising generations. But nevertheless, the movement is so intimately related to the future welfare of our country and is being pushed with so great energy and earnestness by its advocate, that it is destined to be successful and permanent.

Not alone our unwillingness to be outdone in the public service by foreign nations, not alone our sense of practical foresight, but our inherent feeling of obligation toward our children, and our recognition of this service as one of necessity for the state and national well being are forcing upon us the recognition of the place of public activity as a principal part of our public education.

LUCK OF A MINER.

What He Deemed a Disaster Brought Him a Fortune.

The miners of New Mexico tell a queer story which illustrates their belief in luck. A miner was trudging along one hot day through a gulch, with the sun shining on his back, when he smelled smoke and presently, to his dismay, discovered that his knapsack was on fire.

Like all miners, he carried a large lens for the purpose of examining specimens, and for want of room he had hung the glass on the outside and the rays of the sun had been concentrated on his pack.

As among the contents were fifteen pounds of powder he lost no time in dropping the dangerous burden and getting as far away as possible. The haversack fell between two big rocks, while the miner from a safe distance mournfully watched the smoke rising from his sole worldly possessions.

Presently there came a deafening explosion, and the miner went to gather up what he could find. Then his eyes almost started out of his head at seeing the quartz that had been blown up fairly glistening with gold. His powder had literally blown open a gold mine, and he was made a rich man in an instant. He named the mine the "Nick o' Time."—Exchange.

Her Dear Husband.

"Why," exclaimed a newly married woman to a bunch of friends, "for three months after our marriage my dear husband made me bake hot biscuits for him every meal."

"And yet your husband is a strong, healthy looking fellow," answered her friend, in astonishment. "Doctors say that such a diet is terrible, and"—

"Oh, yes, this husband is healthy. I was referring to my first husband!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Great Love.

"Could you love me, darling?" he whispered, with a tender, pleading look in his eyes, "if I had only the one coat to my back?"

"I could," she replied softly as she nestled in his great strong arms, "if I knew you had sacrificed the others to buy me a new dress."—London Mail.

Chinese Throne Ready to Make Any Compromise Necessary

Pekin, Dec. 11.—Tang Shao Yi, representing Premier Yuan Shi Kai, accompanied by several infiluential officials, left here for Wuchang, to negotiate with General Li, the revolutionary commander, and delegates from various provinces, looking to a peace settlement.

The government professes confidence that the revolutionaries will accept a limited monarchy, but Tang Shao Yi possesses plenipotentiary powers and it is understood that the government is prepared to agree to a compromise practically on any terms.

TO DEFEND HIS INTEGRITY

Stanley Explains "Invitation" to Gates to Give His Testimony

Washington, Dec. 11.—The refusal of John D. Rockefeller and his almoner, Rev. F. D. Gates, to accept the "invitation" of the house "steel trust" investigating committee to appear and testify, drew a pointed and laconic note from Chairman Stanley of the committee. Stanley sent Gates the following letter:

"Sir—My recent communication to you was intended not to provoke a discussion of the value of the Merritt testimony, or of your personal integrity, but to give you an opportunity to defend it."

There was no letter addressed to Rockefeller. The committee resumed its inquiry today.

Gloucester, Mass., Dec. 11.—Grave fears are entertained here for the safety of the schooner Alice R. Lawson and the nine men of the crew.

It is nearly a month since the schooner left Newfoundland, bound here, and although the owners, the Gorton-Pew Fisheries company, have not lost hope, it is generally feared that the schooner foundered in one of the gales which followed its departure from Bonne bay.

LATEST NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Importance of accessories—New Footwear—Muff, Scarf and Bag Sets—Long Coats and Trimmings.

Smart accessories go a long way toward accounting for the style noticeable wherever a crowd of Knickerbocker women get together. Given a fairly presentable suit and a stunning matched up set of muff, scarf and bag or hat, and a much more expensive get up without such up-to-date finishes, and honors will rest with the first wearer. Nothing changes the appearance of a costume so completely as small fixings worn with it, and a woman who aims to present an attractive ensemble can not be too particular about the gloves, boots, neckwear, muff etc., that complete or spoil the effect of any costume.

NOVELTIES.

Never were there more novelties to select from than this season in fact their variety is somewhat bewildering, unless one keeps in mind one's limitations. In choosing a "Matched Set" for instance it should go well with the various coats, suits and dresses of the outfit, and be of that happy medium that can be worn for almost any occasion, if economy is studied. Otherwise there is no limit to possibilities in matched accessories for day of evening wear.

FUR FASHIONS.

It is not an overstatement to say that fur enters into the make up of almost every fashionable costume seen from tailor mades to dancing frocks. The various pelts of all furry beasts are employed for women's comfort and adornment. The perfection of treatment of the skins, whereby they have lost all odor, stiffness and the weight that was formerly characteristic, is accountable for much of this popularity, though elegance of appearance and becomingness are their chief recommendations.

NEW MUFFS.

Among the newest muffs are those that have a wide roomy pocket in front with or without an overhanging pointed flap that conceals the opening. With such muffs, the ubiquitous bag can be dispensed with, a consideration that appeal to many women. All muffs are very large, very flat and without any stiffness in the lining or any appreciable padding of the skin. One can find in the most fashionable stocks, sets made up of single furs, or of combinations of two or more pelts in an endless variety of styles, prices, and colors, so that any taste or pocket book may be uited and smart fur accessories secured for any occasion. C. C. Shayne shows especially charming creations in fur, that embody the last word in style and quality.

FOR THE YOUNG GIRL.

For the young girl there are dainty sets of white fox, ermine, white or blue mouffion, Iceland Lamb, sable squirrel, Raccoon or skunk. The last two probably the best wearing pelts known among the long haired furs, and for evening, the cosiest sort of long white coney coats that cost little more than a pretty cloth garment. For more general wear nothing is more desirable than the Caracul coats that stand the hardest usage admirably and can be bought from $65 up. With a light brocaded lining these black coats become dressy enough for almost any wear and as they are made to completely conceal the dress they give the effect of a fur costume, the last word of elegance from Paris.

LONG SCARF STOLES.

Long scarf stoles of fine quality caracul with huge muffs to match constitute a very complete fur garment, since the scarfs extend nearly to the foot of the skirt, and are about 18 inches broad. A distinct novelty seen was a set of mole skin in smoke color, the scarf having three equal length ends that when adjusted formed a very complete and novel covering for the chest and shoulders. Tassels to match finished the ends and the huge muff was similarly adorned. The flat furs, or those with short pelts like seal and ermine, are the ones used for scarf toles.

THE LATEST FOOTWEAR.

The last word in fashionable footwear is the boot that buttons all the way down to the very sole with from sixteen to eighteen buttons. These have very short patent leather vamps, with tops of kid or cloth. The uppers are white, tan, black, russet, or they match the color of the gown. Velvet shoes have gone out, fortunately, for they were never suitable for anything but carriage wear.

A NEW WRINKLE.

One of the latest wrinkles is to have the fancy bag carried with a dressy get up, match the little waistcoat, or fancy revere worn with the suit coat.

The vivid touch of contrasting color now so much desired, can be easily supplied in this way and varied at will.

—Nothing like the present need for alertness has been known since the days when men went armed, and the fittest to survive was the one who saw the other first. In time, no doubt a motorist will be able to take it for granted that every pedestrian is at alert as though running a 90-horse-power motor at full speed; but while the slow witted and absent-minded survive something must be allowed for their infirmity.—"Springfield Republican."

BANKER KILLS HIMSELF

Institution of Which He Was President Is In Receiver's Hands

Philadelphia, Dec. 11.—Peter Boyd, aged 57, a well-known member of the Philadelphia bar and president of the Tradesmen's Trust company of this city, which recently went into the hands of a receiver, shot and killed himself in his law office.

Worry over the failure of the trust company is believed to have mentally affected Boyd. After the closing of the concern he was much broken physically. In a statement to the depositors Boyd promised to pay depositors dollar for dollar.

Boyd had a lucrative practice in the civil courts and in the management of estates. He was prominent in city affairs and was a popular speaker on the stump in the interests of the Republican party, but never sought office himself. He is survived by his wife and one son.

REAL CULTURE IN BOSTON.

Englishman Has Good Things to Say of Americans In General

London, Dec. 11.—Arnold Bennett, who has arrived from New York, has given his impressions of America and things American. He said:

"New York is a wonderful place, but then so are all the other cities I visited—Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Minneapolis and Chicago.

"Two things struck me during the eight weeks I have been away from England—first, that Americans are not the boastful, vulgar people that the are represented as being, although they have indeed much to boast of; second, they do understand the science of comfort, not only in the hotels, but in their homes.

"Boston is a centre of real culture, sinbularly English in appearance. Indeed, some of the streets might have been taken straight out of London or Kensington.

FORTY MEN ROBBED BY MASKED BANDITS

Lined Up In Poolroom and Relieved of More Than $200

New York, Dec. 11.—Five masked robbers burst into a poolroom in Brooklyn and with revolvers lined up forty men, whose pockets they rifled of more than $200.

While the robbery was going on, two men escaped and gave the alarm. Police officers surrounded the building and caught two of the masked men as they were bolting out of the front door. Three of the robbers escaped by plunging headlong through the glass and sash of the rear windows to the back yard.

The two men the police caught gave their names as Thomas Winter, aged 28, and James Ianugi, 21 years old.

Buchtel Denies That Peonage Exists In Colorado Sugar Beet Fields

Washington, Dec. 11.—In a statement made public here ex-Governor Buchtel of Colorado vigorously denied that conditions approaching peonage existed in the sugar beet fields of Colorado.

The statement referred to the testimony of James Bodkin before the house sugar investigating committee, that men and women in the beet fields worked sixteen hours a day at back-breaking labor. Buchtel explained that these men and women were Russians or Italians who worked by the job, not by the day, and that they made big wages.

DURLAND A SUICIDE

Insurance Company's Detectives Agree With Medical Examiner

Boston, Dec. 11.—The investigation by the detectives of the Equitable Life Asusrance society of the death of H. Kellogg Durland, the novelist, who committed suicide on the night of Nov. 18 by taking cyanide of potassium, has been completed.

Nothing was discovered by the insurance company's investigators which failed to agree with the finding of suicide by Medical Examiner Magrath, and the $15,000 insurance money will probably be turned over to Mrs. Durland.

POSTAL SERVICE SURPLUS

First Time It Has Been Recorded In Twenty-Eight Years

Washington, Dec. 11.—"For the first time since 1883 the annual financial statement of the postoffice department shows a surplus instead of a deficit."

This is the burden of the annual report of Postmaster General Hitchcock. He indicates that the placing of the postal service on a self-sustaining basis means an improvement and extension of facilities and, at no distant day, one-cent lettetr postage.

A parcels post and pensions are advocated by the postmaster general.

HINDU WOMEN.

Whatever Their Station They Are Gracious and Picturesque.

There are, of course, all kinds of Hindus. They range from the lowest levels of superstition and ignorance to high attainments of intelligence and culture. But in one respect they are all alike. "Never once," says Mr. Begbie, "have I detected the very smallest smirch of vulgarity either in manners or in dress." The Hindu may believe in 30,000,000 gods, he may hold that the world is flat and that his soul's salvation is endangered by the shadow of a European, "but he will have charm of manner and make a picture either in the unhandseled jungle or on the platform of a railway terminus."

But the Indian woman is the crown of her creation, as, of course, all women are everywhere. She may be unable to read or write, she may give food to idols and believe that her god or devil rides around the village at night on a plaster horse or a mud elephant, "but she will be modest and gracious in her manner, and her dress will be as beautiful as the flowers of the field." No matter how savage and heathen, how ignorant and stupid these people may be, they "have a nobility in their manner and a loveliness in their raiment."—San Francisco Argonaut.

His Wrong Lead.

Some forty years ago at Aldershot the camp was commanded by Sir James Yorke Scarlett, a Crimean veteran. On the occasion in question he was directing some sham fighting. In a manner then usual he was leading a line of skirmishers of one force against another many yards in front, as in earlier times he had led the heavy brigade at Balaclava against three times its numbers. To a soldier of the younger school it seemed a preposterous proceeding, and Sir Evelyn ventured to criticize it.

Sir James replied: "Young man, have I not ordered you twice to hold your tongue? If I like to lead my skirmishers, what the — is that to you?" Sir Evelyn replied, "Ten thousand pardons, sir, but it is the enemy's line in retreat you have been leading for the last ten minutes." He was shortsighted and did not wear glasses, so was unable to see the distinguishing mark, a sprig of heather worn in the shakos of the troops he was attacking.—Westminster Gazette.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Goloma and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Sheldon inclined his head toward Joan, and as he spoke she felt that he had become a trifle stiff.

"Miss Lackland has become interested in the plantation since then. But to return to the boys. We can't spare them, and, besides, they would be of little use. You couldn't get them to accompany you beyond Binu, which is a short day's work with the boats from here. They are Malaita men, and they are afraid of being eaten. They would desert you at the first opportunity. You could get the Binu men to accompany you another day's journey through the grass lands, but at the first roll of the foothills look for them to turn back. They likewise are disinclined to being eaten."

"Is it as bad as that?" asked Von Blix.

"The interior of Guadalcanar has never been explored," Sheldon explained. "The bushmen are as wild men as are to be found anywhere in the world today. I have never seen one. I have never seen a man who has seen one. The Austrian expedition—scientists, you know—got part way in before it was cut to pieces. The monument is up the beach there several miles. Only one man got back to the coast to tell the tale. And now you have all or any other man knows of the inside of Guadalcanar."

"But gold—have you heard of gold?" Tudor asked impatiently. "Do you know anything about gold?"

Sheldon smiled, while the two visitors hung eagerly upon his words.

"You can go two miles up the Balesuna and wash colors from the gravel. I've done it often. There is gold undoubtedly back in the mountains."

Tudor and Von Blix looked triumphantly at each other.

"Old Wheatsheaf's yarn was true, then," Tudor said, and Von Blix nodded. "And if Malaita turns out as well"—

Tudor broke off and looked at Joan. "It was the tale of this old beachcomber that brought us here," he explained. "Von Blix befriended him and was told the secret." He turned and addressed Sheldon. "I think we shall prove that white men have been through the heart of Guadalcanar long before the time of the Austrian expedition."

Sheldon shrugged his shoulders.

"We have never heard of it down here," he said simply. Then he addressed Von Blix. "As to the boys, you couldn't use them farther than Binu, and I'll lend you as many as you want as far as that. How many of your party are going and how soon will you start?"

"Ten," said Tudor; "nine men and myself."

"And you should be able to start day after tomorrow," Von Blix said to him. "The boats should practically be knocked together this afternoon. Tomorrow should see the outfit provisioned and packed. As for the Martha, Mr. Sheldon, we'll rush the stuff ashore this afternoon and sail by sundown."

As the two men returned down the path to their boat Sheldon regarded Joan quizzically.

"There's romance for you," he said, "and adventure—gold hunting among the cannibals. Aren't you sorry you became a cocoanut planter?"

"What do you think of them?" she asked.

"Oh, old Von Blix is all right, a solid sort of chap in his fashion; but Tudor is a flyaway—too much on the surface, you know. If it came to being wrecked on a desert island I'd prefer Von Blix."

"I don't quite understand," Joan objected. "What have you against Tudor?"

"A man of Tudor's type gets on my nerves. One demands more repose from a man."

Joan felt that she did not quite agree with his judgment, and, somehow, Sheldon caught her feeling and was disturbed. He remembered noting how her eyes had brightened as she talked with the newcomer.

A second boat had been lowered, and the outfit of the shore party was landed rapidly. A dozen of the crew put the knocked down boats together on the beach. There were five of these craft—lean and narrow, with flaring sides and remarkably long. Each was equipped with three paddles and several iron shod poles.

"You chaps certainly seem to know river work," Sheldon told one of the carpenters.

"We use 'em in Alaska. They're modeled after the Yukon poling boats, and you can bet your life they're crackerjacks. This creek'll be a snap alongside some of them northern streams. Five hundred pounds in one of them boats an' two men can snake it along in a way that'd surprise you."

At sunset the Martha broke out her anchor and got under way, dipping her flag and saluting with a bomb gun. The union jack ran up and down the staff, and Sheldon replied with his brass signal cannon. The miners pitched their tents in the compound and cooked on the beach, while Tudor dined with Joan and Sheldon.

Their guest seemed to have been everywhere and seen everything and met everybody, and, encouraged by Joan, his talk was largely upon his own adventures. Descended from old New England stock, his father a consul general, he had been born in Germany, in which country he had received his early education and his accent. Then, still a boy, he had rejoined his father in Turkey and accompanied him later to Persia, his father having been appointed minister to that country.

Tudor had gone through South American revolutions, been a rough rider in Cuba, a scout in South Africa and a war correspondent in the Russo-Japanese war. He had mushed dogs in the Klondike, washed gold from the sands of Nome and edited a newspaper in San Francisco. The president of the United States was his friend. He was equally at home in the clubs of London and the continent, the Grand hotel at Yokohama and the selectors' shanties in the Never Never country. He had shot big game in Siam, pearled in the Paumotus, visited Tolstoy, seen the Passion play and crossed the Andes on muleback, while he was a living directory of the fever holes of west Africa.

Sheldon leaned back in his chair on the veranda, sipping his coffee and listening. In spite of himself he felt touched by the charm of a man who had led so varied a life. It seemed to him that the man addressed himself particularly to Joan. Sheldon watched her rapt attention, listened to her spontaneous laughter, quick questions and passing judgments and felt grow within him the dawning consciousness that he loved her. Then as if the scene had been prepared by a clever playwright, Utami came upon the veranda to report to Joan the capture of a crocodile in the trap they had made for her.

Tudor's face, illuminated by the match with which he was lighting his cigarette, caught Utami's eye, and Utami forgot to report to his mistress.

"Hello, Tudor," he said with a familiarity that startled Sheldon.

The Polynesian's hand went out, and Tudor, shaking it, was staring into his face.

"Who is it?" he asked. "I can't see you."

"Utami."

"And who the dickens is Utami? Where did I ever meet you, my man?"

"You no forget the Huahine?" Utami chided. "Last time Huahine sail?"

Tudor gripped the Tahitian's hand a second time and took it with genuine heartiness.

"There was only one Kanaka who came out of the Huahine that last voyage, and that Kanaka was Joe. The deuce take it, man, I'm glad to see you, though I never heard your new name before."

"Yes, everybody speak me Joe along the Huahine. Utami my name all the time, just the same."

"But what are you doing here?" Tudor asked, releasing the sailor's hand and leaning eagerly forward.

"Me sail along Missie Lackalanna her schooner Miele. We go Tahiti, Raiatea, Tahaa, Bora-Bora, Manua, Tutuila, Tpla, Savaii and Fiji islands—plenty Fiji islands. Me stop along Missie Lackalanna in Solomons. Very soon she catch another schooner."

"He and I were the two survivors of the wreck of the Huahine," Tudor explained to the others. "Fifty-seven all told on board when we sailed from Huapa, and Joe and I were the only two that ever set foot on land again. Hurricane, you know, in the Paumotus. That was when I was after pearls."

"And you never told me, Utami, that you'd been wrecked in a hurricane," Joan said reproachfully.

The big Tahitian shifted his weight and flashed his teeth in a conciliating smile.

"Me no t'ink nothing 't all," he said.

"All right, Utami," Tudor said. "I'll see you in the morning and have a yarn."

"He saved my life, the beggar," Tudor explained, as the Tahitian strode away and with heavy softness of foot went down the steps. "Swim! I never met a better swimmer."

And thereat, solicited by Joan, Tudor narrated the wreck of the Huahine, while Sheldon smoked and pondered and decided that whatever the man's shortcomings were, he was at least not a liar.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CELERY FOR CHRISTMAS.

CELERY, used as a relish with salt, has a place on most Christmas tables, but it is remarkable in how many households this vegetable is unappreciated.

Celery salad—that is, the white stalk of the celery cut up and served on lettuce leaves with a dressing, either of oil and vinegar or of mayonaisse—is frequently served, but the dishes so favored by the French, in which stewed celery is used with various sauces, are almost unknown in American households.

Salad Hints.

Celery salad served with chopped English walnuts in about the proportion of half as much of the chopped nuts as of the sliced celery is nice.

The mayonnaise dressing poured over the nut and celery salad may be diluted by adding to it beaten cream, about one-quarter as much cream as mayonnaise.

Celery must be well washed before it is used and, if it is for a salad, may be made crisp by allowing it to stand a half hour in water to which about a teaspoonful of lemon juice has been added. Only white fresh celery should be purchased. When it is to be used uncooked, as for a salad, cut off the leaves and root, wash and scrape and cut into thin pieces.

Cooking Celery.

Celery With Sauce.—Celery is improved in flavor if parboiled in water for about fifteen minutes. After that it may be taken off the fire drained and served with white sauce.

Celery Fritters—Dip into a batter, which is made as is usually done for fritters, four inch lengths of the boiled celery. These are then fried in hot fat. The fritters may be served with tomato sauce.

Baked Celery.—Take the parboiled celery. Cut into neat pieces, drain and season with pepper, salt and grated nutmeg. Stew in a pan with layers of fat bacon and stock. When done place in a baking dish, pour over it cream or veloutee sauce. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and Parmesan cheese. Bake in the oven until the top is nicely browned.

Stewed Celery.—Cook the heart and white stalks of celery in a saucepan with milk and water and a little salt. Drain, arrange on hot buttered toast and pour over a good egg sauce. Sprinkle with a little minced parsley. Serve hot.

A GAME OF BRIDGE.

John W. Gates Sprung a Surprise on His Young Friend.

John W. Gates' last office was in the Trinity building. He called his firm Charles G. Gates & Co. Others termed it "the house of the twelve apostles," as a dozen partners were in it. Gates was considered a good bridge whist player. Often after 3 p. m. bridge was played in the office. One day there were only three to play. A young man of good family, but not wealthy, came in.

"Sit down," said Gates agreeably. "I hate to play with a dummy."

"How much a point do you play?" asked the newcomer.

"Fifty," said Gates.

"I can't afford it," was the rejoinder. "Twenty-five is a big game for me."

"Well, make up the rubber" said Gates disappointedly. "We'll play for twenty-five."

The young man played well, had luck and won.

"We have a sort of clearing house here," said Gates when the game ended. "I'll send you your check in the morning."

The young man got a check for $13,000. Astounded, he took it to the signer.

"What does this mean?" he asked. "I circulated that I won $130. We were playing for 25 cents a point, weren't we?"

"We were playing for $25 a point," returned Gates.

"Wha-at! Why, if I'd lost I couldn't have paid."

"If you hadn't paid we'd have run you out of the city," said Gates coldly. "But you won. Cash that check." It was cashed.—New York Tribune.

The Logical Lunatic.

A lunatic was in the habit of catching imaginary flies. When asked to explain her strange action she pointed under her cloak and replied, "The flies are to feed this mongoose."

"But there is no mongoose."

"Well, there are no flies."

RAILWAY SIGNALS

"Fireworks" That Serve as Train Protectors.

CODE OF TORPEDO AND FUSEE

Messages These Audible and Visible Danger Signs Convey to the Engineer—The Use of Pyrotechnics as Signals In the Naval Service.

"Pop, pop," or perhaps a single "pop," sharp and distinct like that of a giant firecracker heard not only on the Fourth of July, but on every day in the year, Sundays included. What did it mean? And on almost any night as I look out of my window I see the edge of the wood or the fields lighted up by red or yellow fireworks. Why this strange illumination?

As all these queer happenings took place on the railroad a few rods from my house I made inquiries of the railway officials, and here are some interesting facts about the use of these curious "fireworks."

The general superintendent of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad explained as follows:

"Our rules provide for the use of detonators, commonly known as torpedoes, as audible signals and of 'fusees' as visible signals.

"These torpedoes are attached to the top of the rail on the engineer's side of the track by two small flexible metal straps, which are easily bent around the ball of the rail, as shown in the picture, and hold the torpedoes securely in place until exploded by the first train passing over this track.

"The explosion of one torpedo is a signal to stop; the explosion of two, not more than 200 feet apart is a signal to reduce speed and look out for a stop signal.

"The fusees are of similar construction to the well known Roman candle used for fireworks celebrations, except that they burn a steady flame without explosions. A sharp iron spike at the bottom end will usually stick in the ground or in the cross tie when thrown from the rear of a train and holds the fusee in an upright position, where it is more plainly visible.

"A fusee must be lighted and left by the flagman whenever a train is running on the "time" of another train or behind its own time and under circumstances which call for such protection.

"A fusee on or near the track, burning red, must not be passed. When burning yellow the train may proceed with caution when the way is seen and known to be clear. Standard fusees burn red for three minutes and yellow for seven minutes and can be seen for quite a distance.

"You will gather from the above explanations that the red glare of a flaming fusee on or near the track warns the approaching engineer that a preceding train has passed over his track less than three minutes ahead of him, and under no circumstances must he pass this signal while burning red. When the flame turns to yellow he may proceed with caution, only as the way is seen and known to be clear, keeping in mind that when the fusee changed from red to yellow he was exactly three minutes behind a preceding train, which may have stopped within a short distance or may be proceeding at an unusually slow rate of speed."

The superintendent of the Shore line division, another branch of the same railroad, gives this additional detail regarding torpedoes:

"When a train stops upon the main line and requires protection against a following train the flagman goes back a specified distance and places one torpedo. He then continues a farther distance back, placing two torpedoes. As soon as the train he is protecting is ready to start the engineer blows a specified whistle signal, which is a notice to the flagman to return to his train. On the way back he picks up the one torpedo, leaving two on the rail to warn the engineer of an approaching train that another train is a short distance ahead and to give the flagman time to run back and get aboard of his own train."

Of the use of fireworks as signals in the navy the chief of the bureau of construction and repair of the navy department, Washington, makes the following statement:

"All modern ships are fitted with electric signals, and the use of such signals is general in the naval service. In the case of small vessels having no electric installation and also for use in case of the failure of the electric signals the navy has a system of colored stars in connection with rockets for the purpose of signaling.

"These are in no sense the ordinary commercial fireworks, but are manufactured by the service for naval use exclusively.

"There are no photographs of this system of signals for distribution. The apparatus consists of a specially designed pistol from which are fired cartridges containing the colored stars that are used in the service code."—New York Mail.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON M. E.

Rev. C. H. Chenney of Neponset preached a strong sermon on the "Fire of God," at the Wollaston M. E. church. There was a large attendance at Sunday school. The deaconess led the Junior League with a large attendance. Miss Florence Bennett led a very fine Epworth League. This meeting was very helpful. In the contest the Reds have 143 points the White 212.

Comparing the eating of brown bread at all meals, the same as bad literature, Rev. Mr. Wiggin gave a strong sermon Sunday night. He said in part: "The choice of Companions determines life, the choice of books determines the strength of the mind. The librarian of the Boston library gave in answer to an inquiry that out of the books taken out last year 84 per cent were novels, and most of these were of the lower grade. Then headed "And if the fathers and mothers only knew what their children were reading. Do you wonder Boston is what it is today. If you sing ragtime music continually, read ragtime books forever, take ragtime companions for life, think ragtime thoughts entirely you will have a ragtime life as a result. When I was first starting my life in the ministry, I boarded at a house where they had brown bread for breakfast, brown bread for dinner, and brown bread for supper. If I'd always had brown bread I would have liked it. But I knew what potatoes and other things were and I wanted them. Just so is the bad reading to us after we have had good reading.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold a business meeting with Mrs. Crothers, 149 Beale street, Thursday at 7.30 P. M. and the Epworth League a business meeting at 8 P. M. Miss R. M. Chamberlin will give a talk on her travels last summer.

FOOD OF THE MEXICANS.

Frijoles and Tortillas the Main Diet of the Poor.

People at home in the "states" may think the food of the Mexicans meager. It is comprised chiefly of frijoles and tortillas, supplemented by the fruit of the cactus when in season.

Tortillas are thin little cakes made of corn boiled with lime, and these serve as the chief food. Every house has a metate, a sort of stone trough, which rests on the ground, and on this the corn is crushed to a paste and then patted into thin round cakes and tossed on a clay griddle to cook. Don't think as you ride down the street that in every house a child is being spanked—it is only the patting sound made by the women as they deftly shape the tortillas in their hands.

The lime in which the corn is softened is said to account for the very strong white teeth of the natives. Frijoles are, of course, beans and after being boiled a long time with onions, chili and other savory bits are put into boiling lard for their final flavor. Knives and forks are not needed where a tortilla can be folded in the middle and used as a scoop for the beans. These two articles of food form almost the entire diet of the poor.

All food is very hot, from the chili put in it, and one doesn't realize the peculiar flavor that cinnamon will give to many dishes until he has eaten it in everything, from coffee to ice cream. While pulque, the fermented juice of the maguey, our century plant, is the national drink, if a peon is very drunk it is probably due to mescal or tequila, two stronger drinks made from the same maguey.

Cooking is generally done over a few pieces of charcoal on the ground. Often have I seen women cook an entire meal over as little charcoal as one hand can grasp.—Los Angeles Times.

LURE OF DANGER.

Tragic Recklessness of a Trio of Fire Fighting Heroes.

Former Chief Croker of New York in the World's Work says that, although the whole fire service is founded on the principle of obedience, it is almost impossible to drag a man from danger when his battle blood is up.

"In 1905," he says, "I lost three good men in a big warehouse fire in Thirtieth street through recklessness inspired by this spirit. The building had been pretty well gutted, and one of the walls was getting shaky. Directly under this wall were three men from an engine company hugging a 'lead' of hose, their helmets down over their eyes and playing their water on the flames, which almost singed their faces. I saw their danger—it would have been obvious to any one but these three fight maddened heroes—and shouted: "Get back there, men! Get back from that wall!"

"They paid as much attention to me as if they had been stone deaf. I ran over and shoved one after the other back into the street out of danger.

"'When you're told to get back, get back,' I said. 'You obey orders.'

"Then I turned my back and hurried to another point of the fire. The wall fell before I had gone ten yards. I looked around for the three men. They were nowhere in sight! The moment my back was turned they had rushed back to play their stream in that place of peril, and when the wall fell it buried them beneath the bricks—dead."

Lost Time.

The late Sylvanus Miller, civil engineer, who was engaged in a railroad enterprise in Central America, was seeking local support for a road and attempted to give the matter point. He asked a native:

"How long does it take you to carry your goods to market by muleback?"

"Three days," was the reply.

"There's the point," said Miller. "With our road in operation you could take your goods to market and be back home in one day."

"Very good, senor," answered the native. "But what would we do with the other two days?"—Boston Record.

The Last Luxury.

Ten-year-old Arthur had been telling impressively of the number of servants employed in his home. He continued, "And our house is fixed so that if you want a drink or a window raised or to go upstairs or anything all you have to do is to pull a chain."

"But what do you want with so many servants in that sort of a house?" asked one of his hearers.

"Oh," replied Arthur, "we have the servants to pull the chains."—Judge.

Drops and Minims.

Drops vary in size according to the conditions under which they are produced. Some are large and some are small, some long and some short. The drop of the druggist is called a minim, of which 480 go to make a fluid ounce and 76,800 to make a gallon. An actual experiment in filling a one ounce measure will probably show that 400 drops make a fluid ounce. The average drop is 20 per cent larger than the minim.

Too Big a Pill.

The man in bed had never been sick before. The doctor, wishing to ascertain his temperature, pointed the thermometer at him and commanded, "Open your mouth, Jim."

"Wait a minute doc," objected the patient. "I don't b'lieve I can swaller that."—Judge.

Ill habits gather by unseen degrees, as brooks make rivers, rivers run to seas.—Dryden.

"TIN EARS" BANE OF THE PUGILIST

Many Fighters and Clever Ones, Too, Have Ugly Appendages.

BAT NELSON'S TWO BEAUTS.

They Are So Mussed Out of Shape He Cannot Hear—Majority of Bruiser Type Escape, While Clever Men Are More Often Afflicted.

Dermatologists have been quoted as authority for the well circulated phrase, which every one will recall readily, "Beauty is only skin deep." Such a source of information surely ought to be reliable.

Take the cauliflower ears of a fighter—those big masses of mangled flesh that decorate the sides of the face. They are the beauty spots of the pugilist. Sometimes they are called "tin" ears and again "bum" ears, but no matter under what name they are equally attractive to look upon. Psychologists find something aesthetic in them. They are beautiful in their ugliness, although, Lord knows, the poor maulers who carry them about do not hold that opinion. And the depth of the beauty is sometimes four inches. Ask Bat Nelson or Unk Russell.

Funny thing about pugilistic ears. Many of the bruiser type of fighters possess ears as perfectly shaped as those of any private citizen, while boxers of the hit and get away school wear conspicuous insignia of their profession.

Frank Erne was clever. So were Patsy Haley, Jem Driscoll, Owen Moran, Tommy Murphy and Al Greenwood. They all have tin ears. Greenwood has two excellent specimens. "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, Young Erne, Owen Moran, Jimmy Walsh and Danny Dunn are three more scientific men whose hearing organs are a mass of swollen muscle. There are many others.

Gaze upon Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and you will not find a sign of a bad ear. Flynn has been through many fights too. Stanley Ketchel was in many hard battles, but he emerged with his ears flawless. Billy Papke, Al Kaufman, Mike ("Twin") Sullivan are great mixers, but they have yet to experience the sensation of a swollen ear. You could name fifty more of good reputation. Mike's ("Twin") ears are flat, but not puffy.

It was different with Battling Nelson. He took so many wallops that both ears were mussed out of shape, and he is deaf now. You have to get close up to him before he can hear you speak. Willie Lewis, Grover Hayes, Frank Klaus, Bert Keyes and Unk Russell are clouters with bruised ears. Russell has a pair of them. Nelson and Russell have two of the best ever taken out of a prize ring.

Young Corbett was a clever fellow, whose features are normal to this day. Corbett was lucky, as was his namesake, Jim Corbett, but there are several others in the same class. So there are fast men with and without bum ears and knockerouts who never try to get out of the way of a punch.

It is so easy to get cauliflower ears it is surprising that more fighters do not have them. The rub of a glove across the ear in a clinch will start one, and a few more touches will cause it to puff. However, it is in turning the head that most boys suffer them. With a punch coming straight for the nose they will wait until the glove gets almost to them, when they shift their head to one side, leaving the punch go around the neck. But many times when going round the head the glove will connect with the ear. After a fighter has advanced so far in science it becomes a habit to turn a punch as well as the proper method of procedure. Still, Abe Attell's defense lies chiefly in movements of the head which avoid a punch. And Abe hasn't a sign of a bad ear after thirteen years of fighting.

CHARLES WATSON SAUNDERS.

Charles Watson Saunders was born Kentville, Nova Scotia Nov. 2, 1821. When quite young he came to the states locating in Brookline where he was united in marriage to Miss Louisa J. Fall. Later they moved to Braintree buying the Bradford Hollis estate and carrying on a high grade farming business. At another time in his life in Braintree he learned bootmaking and again he conducted a meat and provision store in Holbrook block. So it is readily seen that for many years he was a citizen in Braintree. He was formerly associated with the Old Baptist church society but after the building of the new Methodist church building both he and his wife became members of that church and were active for its interest and progress. For a time they made their home on Middle street, but for the past twenty years resided at 1051 Hancock street, Quincy.

About three years ago his wife died and since then Mr. Saunders has not been well. A heart trouble affected him seriously for over a year and six weeks ago he took to his bed failing steadily and passed away last Saturday at five o'clock. Funeral services were private and were held from his late home Tuesday, Rev. Edward Norton officiating. His six sons acted as bearers and the interment was in the Plain street cemetery in the family lot. The flowers were very beautiful ad mutely testified the love and esteem of the givers.

Mr. and Mrs. Saunders were blessed with a family of twelve children. Mr. Saunders is survived by nine children, six grandchildren, two great grandchildren, and one great, great grandchild.

His children are William Watson, George Henry, Charles F., Alva A. Saunders of South Braintree, and Mrs. Mary E. Glover, Mrs. Lucinda F. Thayer, Albert A. Saunders, Elmer A. Saunders and Mrs. Albert L. Hayden of Quincy.

For many years Mr. Saunders has been tenderly cared for by his children and lived with his daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Glover of Quincy, who has bestowed every attention upon him and nursed him through many an illness. Mr. Saunders was a retiring gentleman in disposition but a great lover of his home and family and a sincere christian.

The best shooting, however, occurred at Norteman's stand at Sheep island, where the gunners brought back 16 geese, four brant and between 30 and 40 ducks. The day before Thanksgiving a flock of geese alighted and at the first shot, Mr. Norteman brought down four.

DR. KNIGHT THE SPEAKER

At Meeting of Wollaston School Association

FORMERLY A RESIDENT

At the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association on Monday evening Dr. Frederick H. Knight, superintendent of the Little Wanderers' Home in Boston delivered a lecture on "Practical work with imperfect children."

Dr. Knight will be remembered as an old resident of Wollaston where for three years he held the pastorate of the Wollaston Methodist church.

I will not devote much time to theories on this important matter, said the speaker, but want to speak for a minute about the queer child.

Somewhere in the world there is one perfect child or one that comes nearer than any other to being perfect. Owing to the great number of children the probability that it be found in Wollaston is extremely small.

Upon the standards of testing children there is a wide opinion and yet we recognize the fact that some children are queer. Some show no marked characteristic of any respect. They may be in the right grade of the right height and weight for their age. They may be bright but the teacher knows they are queer.

Sometimes these queer children may be perfectly charming and this fact may make the child the chosen one and the object of many close friendships. The teacher generally finds herself unable to give a satisfactory definition to it.

If subject remained a child in this situation would not be serious but bye and bye the child will become a man or woman with a grown person's work to do. The queer, man or woman is not quite as interesting.

This is a brand new problem and one that was little thought about ten years ago. We are all at sea as to causes and definitions and nearly so as to what should be done.

It seems true that the best thing to do with the queer child is to make the child conform to type. Just as other problems have been sloved and surmounted the problem of the queer child will soon be swept away.

For the problem of the imperfect child from a physical standpoint there is no time that has held so much hope for the future as the present.

The speaker went into detail regarding a case of three deformed children that had come under his own observation and which is not unknown in Wollaston.

All three are at present on the road to recovery while fifteen years ago there was not a man that would have successfully dealt with the case. There is every reason to feel hopeful and full of courage for if there is a child with an ailment at the present day that is not curable it will be soon.

The case was told of two Vermont children who were practically hopeless and who after three years of constant care and treatment have rapidly improved and in the near future will probably turn out to be normal in every essential.

After all, said Dr. Knight, there are very few hopeless cases. But there are cases that cause an infinite amount of skill and patience extraordinary.

STREETS COMMITTEE REPORTS ORDER FOR WIDENING OF HANCOCK ST. DAMAGES PLACED AT $38,000

Commissioner Bainbridge Imparts Astonishing Information Regarding Water Waste. $1,500 More For Investigation

Order Introduced For Purchase of Water Meters And Another For Wollaston School

Although Monday night's meeting of the City Council was a comparatively short one, it was one of the most important of the year, from the fact that what is considered to be one of the most important orders of the year was reported. It was an order widening Hancock street, between the Ledger office and Elm street. This is the main thoroughfare of the city and has long been recognized as far too narrow for such a street.

In addition to this, an order appropriating $20,000 for water meters, $6,450 for school furnishings for new Wollaston school building, $1,500 to continue the investigation of water leakage were passed. Councilman Branch and Jenkins were absent.

A communication was received rom the Mayor appointing Edward P. Powers a constable. Confirmed.

A communication was received from the Bay State Street Railway Co. accepting a location for the turnout on Billings road.

The Committee on Elections reported the result of the election of Dec. 5, which was declared to have been as read.

HANCOCK STREET.

The Committee on Streets, reported an order taking the land for the proposed widening of Hancock street, between the Ledger office and the junction of School and Elm streets. The order proposes to make the street a uniform width of 65 feet between these two points. The greater part of the land, to be taken for the widening, is from the easterly side, although a small strip is taken from the John Hall and Quincy Real Estate Trust on the westerly side to straighten the line.

The order calls for the appropriation of $38,000 for that purpose, the amount being borrowed under a special act of the legislature for 1899, which allows the borrowing of money outside the debt limit for street widening, etc. The order also provides that of the amount appropriated, the sum of $4,000 shall come due each year for nine years and $2,000 on the tenth year, the date of the bonds being Jan. 1, 1912.

The awards of damages for land taken along the street by the order is as follows:

James H. Stetson	$1,800.00
Packard estate	5,354.17
Emerson estate	4,420.25
Jones estate	6,578.49
Wilde estate	1,977.25

Murphy estate	1,216.07
Tarbox estate	996.83
Berry estate	1,339.46
Welsh estate	1,131.00
EAST SIDE.
Hall estate	$116.67
Quincy Real Estate Trust	489.58

GAS INVESTIGATION.

The special committee appointed to investigate the price paid for gas in Quincy, reported at length. The report was accepted and a vote of thanks etxended to the commitee.

Councilman Smith offered an order amending the ordinance concerning the assessors. The amendment provides that the board shall meet three times a week and that the chairman shall be in the office during regular business hours, except when doing field work. Referred to joint committee on Finance and Ordinances.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order for a light on Birch street. Referred to the Executive.

WATER METER.

The order appropriating $20,000 for water meters took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

Councilman Sandberg moved to lay on the table. Motion lost.

Councilman Gardner objected to the order. He did not hink the leaks were caused by the lack of meters. It was a gamble as to what kind of meters to use. It had been reported that the meters that the city was using were losing water for the city.

Councilman Smith spoke at length for the order. It would equalize the water rates and put the department on a business basis. It was only fair that people should pay fo r what water they used.

Councilman Cherrington favored the order.

Councilman Sodergren saw no need of rushing the order through at this season.

Councilman Nowland said that it was a plain business proposition. People should pay for what they use.

Councilman Leslie hoped the order would pass. It was one of the best business bills of the year. There was a great deal of water wasted where meters were not used.

Councilman Bailey thought it a good business proposition.

The order was then passed 16 voting yes and 3 no. Those voting no were Councilmen Gardner, Sandberg, and Sodergren.

SCHOOL FURNISHINGS.

The order appropriating $6,459 for furnishings for the Wollaston school was passed.

WATER LEAKAGE.

The order appropriating $1,500 to carry on the water leakage investigation took its second reading and the rules were suspended.

In reply to Councilman Richards the Commissioner said,—That he had met with fair success in locating the districts where the leaks were and that they were now being traced to individual places. He had found leaks that it took two and three hand pumps to take care of. He thought thatthe amount of $1,500 would clear up the matter. He knew of no other method as good as the one he was now using. Practically two-thirds of the water metered to Quincy was going to waste through leaks. Water was leaking at the rate of 200 gallons a minute.

The order was then passed to be ordained, 16 voting yes and 4 no. Councilman Craig, Richards, Sodergren and Sandberg voting no.

A LEGACY.

On motion of Councilman Smith, the communication from the Mayor relative to paving City Square, was taken from the file and referred to the new Council.

Adjourned at 8.47 until Monday, Dec. 18.

LADIES' ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of Auxiliary 5, A. O. H., was held Monday evening and the following officers elected:

President—Miss Catherine Barry.
Vice President—Mrs. John Byron.
Recording Secretary—Miss Nellie King.
Financial Secretary—Miss Alice O'Brien.
Treasurer—Mrs. Hannah McGrath.
Chair Lady of Relief Committee—Miss Margaret Egan.
Sentinel—Miss Mary Sheahan.
Sergt. at Arms—Miss Anna Scanlon.
Court Physician—Dr. George M Sheahan.

The officers will be installed early in January. Nearly all of the above are reelections.

NOT A CIVIL SERVICE JOB.

Many inquiries have been made of the local secretary of the Civil Service Commission in relation to the janitorship of the new court building being erected in Quincy. The inquiries are relative to when a Civil Service examination is to be held for the position. The fact is, that there will not be any, for it is not a civil service position. The appointing of a janitor for the building, lies with the board of County Commissioners and parties seeking the position, should make application to them. It is understood that up to date twenty or more have applied for the position.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

It is reported, that a man arrested late Monday night for drunkenness and sent to the police station, attempted to commit suicide by hanging himself with his neck tie. He was discovered by Officer Holloran and prevented from carrying out the rash act. Then he wanted something to eat and was told to wait awhile and a lobster salad would be ordered for him.

—Boston's "Little Citizens" have started a crusade to make the streets cleaner and to pick up the litter which careless people, both big and little, throw about. The movement might well be imitated in Quincy and all the rest of the suburbs.

MAY BUILD DOCK AT FORE RIVER

Commission To Urge One Near Shipbuilding Works

One of the first suggestions to come before the new Dock Commission, which was appointed last week by Gov. Foss, says the Boston Journal, is the building of a dry dock adjacent to the plan of the Fore River shipbuilding plant at Quincy Point. Continuing the Journal says:

"The commission is specially charged by the terms of the act which created it to make a special report to the Legislature by Jan. 15 on the matter of a dry dock, and the chairman has unofficially already given some attention to the matter.

In past drydock discussions a dock in the inner harbor has been talked about. When, four years ago, the Chamber of Commerce specially agitated the matter the program called for one on the South Boston flats.

It is now appreciated that a drydock to be of real value must be one with a shipbuilding yard close by, and there is none such in South Boston. The Atlantic Works are on the other side of the harbor, but it would take up a very considerable amount of waterfront property to locate a dock there, and the possibility of the construction of one at Fore River has come to the public attention.

Inasmuch as the State will own it, it will be built adjacent to the property of the Fore River people. They will have the plant to do the repair work which will be the natural excuse for the use of such a dock by vessels in distress."

This statement is of the greatest importance to the City of Quincy, for the building of a dry dock within its border and along its water front, means much toward the development of our unsurpassed water front. In addition to this, it will mean the bringing to Quincy, large vessels upon which repairs are necessary.

It will be remembered that some years ago there was considerable talk that United Fruit Co., were considering seriously of making Quincy the home port for its line of vessels. This company has many steamships in its service and there is doubtless one or more of them hauled up at all times for repairs. With a large dry dock in Quincy, such as it is possible to build, it is not among the impossibilities that the original scheme of the United Fruit Co., to make Quincy its home port would again come to the front.

Frank Fessenden Crane, Quincy's Dock and Water Front Commissioner has given this plan considerable study, and his annual report, which is now in the hands of the Mayor,

GREAT HONOR FOR CLAN McGREGOR

"Moot" Celebrated By Initiation of Record Number

OFFICERS ELECTED

The scots of Quincy were much in evidence Monday night, the occasion being a "Grand Moot" at Alpha hall, and parade from Clan hall by way of Franklin, School, up Hancock street to the Centre, round the fountain back to Alpha hall, where the moot was held. The procession was headed by banner bearer Thomas Johnston carrying the glorious stars and stripes in the shelter of which was carried the banner of Scotland, The Red Lion Rampant on a Golden field. The Pipers in full scottish costume followed, accompanied by the drums, etc., then the line of Clansmen some six hundred strong.

Many spectators crowded the line of march and cheered as the procession moved along. At City Hall, Mayor Shea, in the midst of the City Council, very graciously saluted the clansmen, who enthusiastically responded to the honor.

After the Clansmen filed into the main auditorium of Alpha hall, Chief Alfred O. Diack called the meeting to order and introduced the business of the evening, which was the initiation of the largest number of new members that has ever been the honor of any Clan of the order to initiate at one time. One hundred and two names were on the list. Chief Diack and his staff assisted by a number of Past Chiefs conferred the degree.

—The educators of the country are importuned to teach almost every sort of ism and theory in the schools of today and maybe might listen to one more suggestion. Perhaps if there is one characteristic that predominates particularly in the wicked, careless and dishonest, it is irreverence; lack of reverence for law and established order in the first place; lack of reverence for the rights and privileges of others; of the honest opinions and the good name of fellowmen; of property; of religion and things religious. So long as we cannot without grave dangers teach religion in the public schools, perhaps a steady, persistent course in reverence during the nine years of the common schools and four years more in the high might have an effect upon the rising generation, developing a sense of justice and fairness, as a result of the feeling of reverence and respect for law, property and reputation.—Spencer Leader.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Judging by the press reports of the conditions in China, the "Son of Heaven" is a long way from home.

Reciprocity after all was beaten in Canada by only 25,857 votes. Now, suppose that Champ Clark had not made any foolish remarks!

The chief trouble with the trust plans to dissolve seems to be that they don't dissolve anything but the savings of the public.

It would be a curious performance of the political whirligig if Wall street should discover that after all Col. Roosevelt was a friend in disguise.

The New York court of Appeals has ruled that a boy of 8 years is not worth $5,000. Some boys aren't. They grow up to judges of the Court of Appeals.

The literary digest is running a "Fifty Years Ago" column of war. Says a S. C. contemporary: "We hope it will soon get around to the second battle of Manassas. The way the Yankees have been licking us of late is disheartening."

Another recount Saturday night and it is to be hoped that it will be the last. With the coming of the voting machine, such uncertainties will be an impossibility. While the total was not materially affected, drastic means should at once be found for the elimination of the necessary publicity. If the secrecy of the ballot is desired measures should be taken to bring about that end.

RED CROSS SEALS.

If you want to contribute toward the local warfare against tuberculosis, as well as to encourage the general movement, you can do it by purchasing the Red Cross seals that are now on sale by the anti-tuberculosis committee 80 per cent of the proceeds will be retained for use in Quincy, the balance going to the national and Boston associations to cover the expenses incident to the preparation and distribution of the seals.

In placing them on second or third class mail matter, care should be exercised not to put them on the strings or fasteners or in any other way to seal the package, as it may thus be converted into first-class matter and subject the receiver to postage.

On letters and first-class mail the latest ruling of Postmaster General Hitchcock is that they may be placed on either side, preference being given to the back of the envelope as a seal.

NORFOLK CO. BOARD OF TRADE.

Eight civic organizations representing the towns of Dedham, Franklin, Medfield, Norwood, Walpole, Canton and Sharon were present by delegates at a meeting held recently to arrange for the organization of a federation of the Boards of Trade or other improvement associations of Norfolk County.

Five other towns sent communications favorable to the proposed movement, among them we hope, being our own city of Quincy, which could not but help receive many benefits by such cooperation—among them those dealing with transportation questions, efficiency in town government, forestry, including forest fires, insect pests, highways, telegraph and telephone service and many other problems of vital interest that can be more advantageously cared for by cooperation than by the individual effort of the various town associations.

We believe says the committee, that it is desirable "To form an organization of the various local boards of trade or other improvement associations of Norfolk county for the purpose of furthering mutual and special, civic business and legislative matters, tending to advance the prosperity of the various towns of the county.

It is to be hoped that our local Board will enter heartily into the extension of the work.

WASTE OF WATER.

Commissioner of Public Works Bainbridge imparted the astonishing information to Council, Monday night, that an investigation conducted by his department revealed the fact that two-thirds of the water the city buys from the Metropolitan Water Commission is lost through leaks in the pipes.

With such startling news, the city fathers did well to make a further approrpriation to carry out the investigation and have the matter adjusted at an early date. Water meters would become a "third wheel on a cart" and a "paying department" a farce, if the taxpayers are not informed at an early date that the appalling loss of 200 gallons of water a minute has been eliminated.

THE OPENING OF CONGRESS.

When the new member lands at the Washington terminal for the first time, he has a sub-conscious expectation that he will be pointed out on the street as a national figure. He must feel a chill of disillusion when he is met only by raucous voiced cab drivers and newsboys.

Initiated into his duties, he gets lost in the capitol, turns up in Statuary hall or subterranean rooms filled with packing cases, and has to be identified by the door keeper before he can take his seat.

He first begins to realize his insignificance when he bobs up with a "Mr. Speaker," full of some subject, accetting his constituents, only to be informed that Mr. Brown has the floor, when Mr. Brown had not done the first thing to seek the speaker's attention.

When he finally gets the speaker's eye, and prepares to open the floodgates of his eloquence, some congressional sophomore secures from him the right to rise for information, and inquiresif the gentleman is a member of this body. The laugh that follows this hazing of the freshman ruins his flimsy structure of oratory.

This year the new members have had four months of it already, and have learned that politically and socially they have about as much influence as a government clerk. As too many of our states send a constant rotation of inexperienced men to the national legislature, the new congressman is nearly as transient a figure as the tourist.

To the man living at a distance from Washington, the first day's session, with the reception of the president'smessage, seems a historic occasion. On the scene it is not more impression than a revivalist camp meeting. The clerk making mince meat of the periods of the presidential message, the hasty exit of the members to the smoking room and barber shop, the small sons of congressmen who sit on their fathers' knees or play horse on the revolving chairs, the white coated negro barber at the door exchanging jokes with statesmen—all these scenes shock old world observers used to the trappings of form and ceremony.

THE FRIENDLY HAND.

James Whitcomb Riley.

When a man ain't got a cent, an' he's feelin' kind o' blue,
And the clouds hang dark an' heavy,
an' won't let the sunshine
through,
It's a great thing, O my brethren, for a feller just to lay
His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort o' way!

It makes a man feel curious; it makes the tear-drops start,
An' you sort o'feel a flutter in the region of the heart.
You can't look up an' meet his eyes;
you don't know what to say,
When his hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort o' way.

O, the world's a curious compound,
with its honey an' its gall,
With its cares an' bitter crosses; but a good world, after all.
An' a good God must have made it—
leastways, that"s what I say
When a hand rests on my shoulder in a friendly sort o' way.

Mother—"And then did your husband lose his temper?"

Daughter—"I only wish he had."

GENTLER.—"Why don't you football players cut out the rough work?"

"Why, then all the fun would be gone."

GALAHAD DEBATE.

"That Labor Unions are a Menace to the Community," was discussed by Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church Sunday. The subject proved an excellent one for discussion.

The affirmative said: "Labor unions as a general rule, developed a prejudice against capital, and by so doing often stood in their own light. They were ever trying to get a wage for men who were not capable of earning it, and on this account played an important part in the present high cost of living. They cause women to work in various mechanical departments, supplanting the men, at a lower wage scale by trying to predominate and regulate business. Their leaders are not ideal men and as the times show they are a menace."

The negative disagreed saying: "That capital and labor must be considered as one. For without either we should decline. Capital is labor bottled up. You cannot get any power from a stream unless you dam it up. capital acts the same way. So if capital organizes so should labor for they both have the same object in view, only from a different view. Labor has made mistakes and so has capital. The shake up in labor at the present time is a good indication for good for that organization. Labor by carrying a non-productive class for a number of years has now arrived at that stage in history where she has lowered the value of the dollar. But she is speedily remedying this by making her dead wood productive and in so doing has brought new life and blessing into the community. She is no longer the organization to which the indolent can became part. Her principles and ideals upon which she is built is too inspiring for better civilization. This is evident by her condemnation of those who seek to destroy buildings and life. The dawn of civilization came through organization and without organization nothing can be accomplished. Labor therefore is a very important part of the bulwark of government.

TEST PAPER RULED OUT UNDER OLD LAW

Brings "Poisoned Pen" Trial to an Abrupt End

Philadelphia, Dec. 12.—A technicality, based on a federal rule of practice in force for more than 100 years, brought to an abrupt end in the United States court here the "poisoned pen" case in which Miss Harriet DeWitt of Easton was accused of writing anonymous and obscene letters to an Easton clergyman, his wife and some of his neighbors, and a verdict of not guilty resulted.

The case was called before Judge McPherson, and when the government tried to have admitted in evidence a sample of Miss DeWitt's handwriting, the court ruled it out on the ground that under the federal rule of practice a test paper cannot be admitted as evidence unless it has some other bearing on the case other than a mere test to show comparison of handwriting.

J. C. Swartley, assistant United States district attorney, who conducted the case for the government, announced that with the exclusion of this test paper the case fell, and Judge McPherson directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

—Are all murderers insane? A shrewd lawyer could gather sufficient evidence about a lot of us sane people, let alone murderers, that would lead a jury to give the matter of allowing us to run at large serious thought.—Mansfield News.

It is impossible to do all that should be done in the public schools and yet it is hard to convince the parents that the school cannot do all that is necessary.

There are not many cases that are hopeless providing that they are taken in charge early enough and in a persistent, sympathetic and skilful fashion.

How about the defect that never can be remedied? What can be done for the defective child whose defect must abide? For these there was never so much hope as today. The speaker related the story of little Bassill, the Italian boy, whose brain development had ceased at the age of five.

The time will come, said Dr. Knight when by state law all feeble minded children, male and female will be taken and cared for by the state and their surrender to the state made compulsory.

It is a well known fact that not one normal child has been born of feeble minded parents. Thus by marriage this long and pathetic procession of feeble minded continues down through the centuries.

If there is any one problem that should be thought of seriously and handled vigorously it is the problem of the feeble minded. What I have tried to do is to give you a word of courage and reason to hope for the brrightest day that defective children have ever seen.

At the lecture's close Dr. Knight was asked the question as to how queer children might be discovered in as much as parents seldom believe or admit it. He stated that in the future the family physician and the teacher would probably deal with it.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and Miss Clara E. G. Thayer, chairman of the benevolent committee reported for the good work done for the poor at Thanksgiving. Three delegates were appointed to attend a meeting in Boston in favor of widow's pensions.

IRON WORKERS GIVE UP BOOKS

To Be Used In Probe of Great Dynamite Conspiracy

NO PROMISES OF IMMUNITY

Representatives of Erectors' Association, Which Has Been at War With Union, Say That Evidence Has Been Voluntarily Surrendered For Use Before Federal Grand Jury—Hockin Enters a Denial

Indianapolis, Dec. 12.—That one or more officials of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers are surrendering voluntarily to the government information needed in the investigation of an alleged nation-wide dynamiting conspiracy against structural iron contractors who maintain the "open shop" was made known in statements by representatives of the National Erectors' association.

Without opposition, it was explained, letters and records have been conveyed by detectives engaged by the Erectors' association from the headquarters of the Iron Workers' association in this city to the office of the United States district attorney.

"No promise of immunity to men suspected of complicity in the dynamiting conspiracy have been made by the government," said Charles W. Miller, the district attorney. "But of course, we will accept evidence from any direction to be presented to the grand jury when it resumes its session next Thursday."

"I have got the evidence from the office of the Iron Workers' association," said Detective Foster of the Erectors' association, but I will not say who turned it over to me. Certainly if it had been necessary we could have obtained a search warrant and made a raid, but this was not necessary."

Walter Drew, counsel for the Erectors' association, added to Foster's statement that he regretted that the status of the investigation should be made public at this time.

The members of the Erectors' association who are employers of non-union workers have suffered from one hundred explosions against their property since the association declared for the "open shop" in May, 1906.

In the face of the announcement of the Erectors' association's representatives, Herbert S. Hockin, secretary of the Iron Workers' association, flatly denied that any papers had been taken from his office. The Erectors' association and the Iron Workers' union were as antagonistic now as they had been for the last five years, he said. "I have entered into no negotiations with the erectors or with the federal authorities," he added.

"The authorities can get anything in this office through the legal means provided, but nothing has been given out or taken by force since the raid on this office last April, when John J. McNamara was arrested and a mass of our records seized."

The letters taken from the iron workers' headquarters are to be used, it is said, in the federal grand jury's inquiry into the allegations that groups of men in many cities were implicated with John J. McNamara and James B. McNamara in dynamiting depredations.

DARROW NAMED IN BRIBERY

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 12.—The name of Clarence S. Darrow, chief of counsel for the McNamara brothers, was brought into the preliminary hearing of Bert H. Franklin, a defense investigator, charged with bribery before Justice Young.

George N. Lockwood, the veniremman whom Franklin is accused of bribing, testified that Franklin told him he "would see Clarence S. Darrow and arrange how the money was to be paid." The utterance created a sensation.

New England's Lowest Priced Home Furnishers
1495 Hancock St., Quincy. Open Monday, Friday and Saturday Evenings

Q.—Matthew ix, 34, reads: "But the Pharisees said, He casteth out devils through the Prince of the devils." What is the meaning of this passage; is there more than one devil If so, who are these other devils? (W. R. H.)

Answer.—A critical examination of the Scriptures reveals the fact that there is one great Adversary, Satan, and that he dominates a host of fallen angels, called devils, or more properly, demons. These demons, in association with Satan, have deceived and afflicted the human race in various ways ever since the time they left their first estate, their former habitation (Jude 6.) Through the aid of spirit mediums, clair-audients, clair-voyants, etc., these evil spirits have impersonated the dead and communicated with their friends and relatives. Sometimes these demons take complete possession of the mental faculties of those who yield to their control or influence and thereby these become demoniacs. This is called obsession. Many cases of obsession are recorded in the Scriptures of which we cite two or three instances: Luke viii, 30; iv, 35, 36, 41; Acts xiii, 8-11; xvi, 18. The Jews were well acquainted with the operations of these demons, and the hypocritical Pharisees in the above expression sought to discredit the Master.

Q.—Kindly explain the following text and say whether the incentive to do a righteous act should be one of reward or whether that of principle? —Jesus answered and said, "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, but he shall receive a hundred fold now in this time, HOUSES AND BRETHREN, AND SISTERS, AND MOTHERS, AND CHILDREN, AND LANDS, WITH PERSECUTIONS: and in the world to come eternal life."—Mark x, 29, 30. (J. E. B.)

Answer.—The import of the Master's words here is that the one making the sacrifice of earthly things in His service and in the service of the Truth, should receive a reward a hundred times greater than what is lost or sacrificed. The words in capitals are not to be found in the old, original manuscripts. We believe that the incentive held out is both that of principle and reward. Remember that the lesson is not merely that of performing "righteous acts"; but is that of sacrifice! It is reasonable for the members of the race to do good and to act righteously as a matter of self preservation and to maintain conditions of peace, but it would be foolishness on the part of any one to give up and leave those things that are cherished, for Christ's sake, if there were no hope of a reward. We read of the Lord Jesus Himself that for the joy (reward) that was set before Him, He endured the cross, despising the shame, and is now set down at the right hand of the Majesty on High. (Hebrews xii, 2.) The Apostle says—"If in this life only we have hope in Christ (if there is no hope beyond this life with its promised rewards), we are of all men most miserable. * * * Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die."—I Corinthians xv, 19, 32.

WILL TENDER BANQUET TO MAYOR SHEA

Event In Honor of Retiring Executive Will Be Great Demonstration

TAKES PLACE JAN. 2, 1912

St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, bids fair to prove the mecca of attraction for hundreds of people on the evening of Inauguration Day, when the Copeland club, one of the city's foremost organizations of young men, will bring to a close in a most fitting manner the term of present administration, by tendering Mayor William T. Shea a banquet. The occasion will be one of especial significance, as it will be graced by the presence of many prominent business and public officials all of whom will pay their respects to the chief executive who is about to terminate a most successful Mayoralty career.

No pains are being spared to make the event one that will be treasured for many years, and judging from the activity that has been displayed thus far, under the guidance of Councilman John D. Smith, chairman of the committee on arrangements, every thing points to the observance of an event which gives every promise of eclipsing any celebration ever held within the walls of the popular West Quincy hall. It is expected that the hall will be taxed to its utmost on the night of the banquet .

BRIEFS

Regular meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks tonight at Electa hall.

The Walkover Girls give a dancing party in Alpha hall Friday evening.

Dr. Reynolds has been confined to his home several days by a throat trouble.

Kenneth Smith of Willow street has returned to Wollaston after a visit of ten days in New York.

The water department is getting ready to send out its semi-annual water bills. They will be mailed the first of the year.

This is the month of society elections. Secretaries of lodges are requested to forward to the Ledger a list of successful candidates.

Mayor Elect Stone has gone to Maine, for a brief business trip and rest after a strenuous campaign. In the meantime, the slate makers are getting busy.

The report of the special committee, appointed by the City Council to investigate the price of gas paid in Quincy, will be published in full in Wednesday's Ledger.

There is sometalk of the City Councils of 1911 and 1912 holding a banquet inauguration day night the same as was done last year. If held the banquet will probably be in one of the Boston hotels.

Monday evening marked an important date in the history of the Town River Boat club, which is situated at the foot of Edison street. The entertainment consisted of selections by an orchestra, vocal and cornet solos, recitations and chorus singing. Remarks were made by members of club and visitors. Last but not least on the program was a fine clam chowder prepared by members. Great credit is due Thompson B. Crane who as chairman of the entertainment committee so ably managed the affair.

Roscoe Ricker of Quincy is making good progress in his studies at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, as evidenced by his performance in a pupils' recital given in Recital hall, Conservatory building on Saturday. Mr. Ricker is perfecting himself in violin technique, and his rendering of the violin score of Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor for pianoforte, violin and violincello was received with enthusiasm by a large audience. These recitals are given each week, with the object of affording the more proficient students of opportunities for public performance.

LAST MINUTE GIFT.

Charming Trifles That Are Quickly and Easily Made.

A case for milady's lingerie waists makes a charming Christmas gift. The case illustrated is of sheer white lawn patterned with a mauve floral design. A yard of the material is sufficient to make the case. The lawn is folded so that the selvage edges meet in the center of the length of lawn. The edges are finished with an inch wide hem. The ends, top and bottom of the case are basted together, and the entire case is brier stitched around with lavender embroidery silk.

Buttons and buttonholes are placed down the center hems to close the case.

Linen Trunk Sets.

Pretty gifts that are easily made are the linen trunk sets. They may be made of linen in any color which is a favorite of the person for whom the gift is designed. It is usually best to make them of the natural linen and let the satin ribbon binding bring out the color. They are for the bottom and top of each tray, hatbox and small trays and include the bag for rubbers, bathing outfit, soiled clothes bag and toilet case.

They are all bound with satin ribbon and have satin ribbon ties and are embroidered to match with the initials either in the center of each piece or at the corner. They are very handy and save taking the usual number of towels for the same purpose.

Many also add the tray sachet pads if a more elaborate gift is desired. The steamer pillows are another favorite gift this year, and they are covered with brown or yellow denim embroidered with a large heraldic design in the centers, with the initials at one corner. They are cut and shaped to fit the steamer chairs and have soft ties of the same material.

The Camera Calendar.

A woman who owns a good camera, even though it be a small one, may begin her Christmas presents right now by taking attractive little pictures which may later on be mounted on blotters, calendars and the like and give a note of personality to her gifts. There are special photograph colors by which the black and white prints may be tinted in artistic style and without the need of any special artistic training. With a camera and these colors delightful booklets and other remembrances may be provided for one's friends.

Attractive Little Offerings.

Red socks of elderdown flannel with satin ribbon bindings and drawstrings.

Kitchen bags of brown crash, with bright tapes, for the old bits of damask used for polishing glass.

FANCY APRONS AS GIFTS.

The Busy Needlewoman Will Welcome Them at Christmas Time.

For the girl who is addicted to fancy work or the woman who sews the pretty apron illustrated here would be a most acceptable Christmas offering. It is simple to make, too, and inexpensive. A yard of novelty dotted swiss was used in making this apron. For the woman who has many presents to make and little time in which to make them this apron is to be commended, for the bows are pinned in place with safety pins, and the lower part of the apron, which is turned up to form a pouch pocket, is also secured in this way. One single width of the material is used, and this is edged with lace below and herringbone stitched. Above a casing is made for a ribbon whose office is to secure the apron around the waist.

Serviceable aprons with deep pockets are acceptable for the woman artist. They may be made of heavy linen and trimmed with embroidered bands or supplied with an application of hand embroidery.

PINCUSHION GIFTS.

Several Quaint Conceits That Will Delight the Recipient.

The making of pincushions appeals to many women of artistic inclinations, especially home workers, as the work gives opportunity for turning to account odds and ends of lace, dress materials and trimmings.

Pincushions for hanging should be divided for those intended to be laid on a table, a bureau, to rest either in a pocket, basket, a housewife or bachelor's roll, or to stand upright in a cardboard or celluloid tube, or again to offer a combination of pincushion and needlecase or key rack. Those delicately painted form a class of their own. Almost all household utensils, game requisites, fruit and flowers, vegetables, animals, birds, butterflies, fish, leaves, have been represented by the pincushion caterer without omitting the gallery of national costumes composed of native dolls dressed from original sketches and keeping company to a legion of fanciful conceits much admired for the beauty of their heads, bought detached from most dealers in dolls and toys. In this wise there is the always attractive baby with long clothes, in contrast with the lady in Louis XV. balloon skirt encircled with numerous frill flounces. An up to date fantasy is a small dolly in a Welsh milkmaid dress bearing the yokes and pails, the latter filled respectively with a solid and a soft cushion, while the steeple hat stands also as a cushion, and pins with glass knobs form the yoke and its pendants. Such pincushions can hardly be termed practicable, but they are fetching and ingenious.

The pincushion in the cut is made like a mattress and the material used in holly ribbon tied at one corner with a wide bow or red satin ribbon. In the middle of the cushion a design is formed of black and white pins with glass heads.

EVENING CAP FOR GIFT.

Most Girls Would Like This Dainty Headgear.

For the girl who goes out much in the evening a pretty cap to wear to the dance or the theater will be an appreciated gift. The dainty little piece of headgear illustrated may be made from bits of lace and silk one has about the house. The crown is of Dresden silk over a wire foundation. About this crown is a band of pink chiffon held with a buckle of pale blue chiffon roses. A fall of lace frames the face.

To Delight the Baby.

A girl is making as a Christmas present for the child of one of her friends a blanket rug that may prove a suggestion to young mothers.

The thought came to the girl when she heard her friend complain that she must not keep her baby in a chair or carriage so much, but must let it roll on the floor. As that floor is drafty the mother foresaw bad colds.

She bought the biggest and thickest gray blanket she could find. One that is part cotton washes better. The edges she has bound with a four inch strip of turkey red which first had the color set in it with sugar of lead.

Glazed chintz such as is used for nursery furnishing was bought in remnants. This meant a varied assortment of Mother Goose, Greenaway and Dutch figures, which were cut out carefully, basted to the blanket in scattered intervals, then appliqued by buttonholing the edges in heavy red cotton.

This blanket will protect baby from the cold floors and at the same time amuse him for hours to creep after the pretty pictures.

THE TALE OF A PIG

Chief Justice Marshall's First Case as a Lawyer.

HE OUTWITTED A DEADBEAT.

When Marshall Sued Old Haskin Smiled, When the Case Was Won and Payment Claimed He Laughed, but When the Climax Came He Wilted.

Chief Justice John Marshall's first case as a lawyer was tried in Fauquier county, Va. It was the suit of Cohn versus Haskin, and the descendants of the great interpreter of the constitution delight to this day to tell of the subtle strategy whereby the budding jurist achieved victory over that case hardened deadbeat of a Haskin person.

This same Haskin, it appears, was a man possessed of property. But he was also possessed of a shrewd knowledge of the law. He kept all he had in his wife's name, excepting what the statute exempted from seizure for debt.

In an evil and absentminded moment Cohn, who ran a general store in Haskin's neighborhood, trusted him for sugar and coffee to the amount of $11. This was years before the eruption of young Marshall into the law, and in the interim Cohn had given the claim for collection to every young lawyer in the county to cut his teeth on. Swiftly following Marshall's unfurling of his shingle to the Fauquier winds came Cohn with his claim. Even the callow attorney recognized it as a veteran among claims. However, having nothing else to while away the time, he took the case, Cohn promising him all he could get out of it, which showed Cohn's valuation of it as an asset.

Young Marshall promptly brought suit, at which Haskin smiled. When judgment was obtained, Marshall rode out in person to Haskin's place and demanded payment, at which Haskin laughed.

And while Haskin chuckled the keen eye of the young lawyer wandered about the farmyard. He saw one plow, which was exempt under the law; also one harrow, also exempt; also a huge leviathan of a pig drowsing lazily in a pen—a very Gargantua of a pig.

"That's the only pig I got," volunteered Haskin, reading the lawyer's thought, for Haskin, also law wise, knew that under the statute he was entitled to one pig exempt from seizure for debt.

The future chief justice rode home pondering deeply. Next day he was seen strolling around the outskirts of the town looking into casual pigsties and keeping his thoughts to himself.

One noon shortly after a youth, trudging along the big road in front of Haskin's house, stopped to ask for a bite to eat. Over his shoulder he carried a gunny sack. Haskin handed him out a pone of bread and a chunk of meat and then demanded a quarter for the repast. "I haven't got a quarter," replied the youth; "thought you would give a feller a little snack like that."

"Not much," growled Haskin. "What you got in that bag?"

"Nuthin' but a month old pig," answered the youth. "Say, if you gimme a quarter in money I'll give you the pig and we'll call it square."

"I reckon you stole that pig," commented Haskin, "else you wouldn't sell it so cheap. Here's your quarter; gimme the pig."

The youth disappeared with the quarter, and Haskin, with the content of one who has driven a hard bargain, carried the shote over to the barnyard and spilled it into the pen where lay the porcine Gargantua. Coincidentally there rose out of the alder bushes adjacent the forms of young Marshall and another man—the other man was the constable. In his hand he held a writ of execution. He climbed solemnly over into the pigsty and, pointing to the fat porker, said:

"I levy on that pig in the suit of Cohn versus Haskin," and he waved his hand to a man who was waiting with an empty wagon down the road.

"But that pig is exempt," exclaimed the irate Haskin. "The law allows me one pig."

"You've got him there," answered the constable, pointing to the shote as he trussed up the big fellow and called to the man in the wagon to lend a hand. "You can't make your selection for exemption after the levy's made."

"But the fellow that sold me that shote stole him," urged Haskin, growing desperate. "I can't own a stolen pig."

"All right," put in young Marshall, wholly unperturbed. "Mr. Constable, just arrest him for receiving stolen goods."

But Haskin had fled to the safety of his back porch, seeing which the constable, Marshall and the man in the wagon hustled the complaining porker aboard and drove away, leaving the bewildered Haskin to ruminate at leisure over the intricacies of the law which permits a man to keep even his religion in his wife's name, but ravishes away his choicest pig from under his very nose.

And, concluding, the multiple descendants of the great John also delight to tell how that pig sold for $19.85—enough not only to pay the ancient claim, but to satisfy exactly the demands of court and constable for costs, leaving not a penny over for the grief stricken and wicked Haskin.

To which the reader may add, "And they all lived happily forever after"—except Haskin.—New York Times.

HAD FOREWARNING

Consul In Cuba Was Told That Maine Would Be Blown Up

Bedford, Ia., Dec. 12.—A. C. Bryce of this city, who was United States consul at Matanzas, Cuba, in 1897, says:

"Two nights before the destruction of the Maine a man whom I knew and who was not an American, came to my residence at midnight, and upon the promise that I would not reveal his name, told me the Maine would be blown up. I sent a special messenger to Fitzhugh Lee, consul general at Havana, but the officials there failed to credit the warning. The next day the explosion took place.

"When I returned to the United States I reported the incident to President McKinley and the secretary of state, and the president requested that no publicity be given to the incident at that time. I respected his wish, but feel at liberty to make a statement now that the naval board has reported that a mine touched off from the outside caused the ship's magazine to explode.

REPUBLICANS GAIN VOTES BY RECOUNT

The recount of the votes cast at the recent municipal election for Councilmen from Ward Two, which was held Saturday evening, did not alter the result as announced the evening of election by the election officers. The recount was held in the Council Chamber by the Registrars and was watched by all of the candidates for the office of Councilmen. The result of the recount was that each of the Democratic candidates lost one vote, while Stephen L. Devaney and one of the Republican candidates each gained a vote. There are therefore six votes between Carruthers and Duffy instead of five.

POSSE HUNTING FOR HIM

Wealthy Italian Kills Couple Who Were About to Wed

Bradford, Pa., Dec. 12.—While discussing arrangements for their honeymoon trip to follow the wedding scheduled for next week, Miss Grace Cable and her intended husband, Anthony Kohnen, were shot and instantly killed at the woman's home here.

The police and a posse are searching for Rosario Antonelli, a wealthy fruit dealer, who, it is alleged, was insanely jealous of the girl.

A servant in the Cable household was entertaining a friend in the kitchen when they heard the shots and attempted to stop the Italian as he rushed through the room. He fired at them and succeeded in making his escape.

Little James had been imparting to the minister the important and cheerful information that his father had got a new set of false teeth.

"Indeed, James?" replied the minister indulgently. "And what will he do with the old set?"

"Oh, I suppose," replied little James, with a look of resignation on his face, "they'll cut 'em down and make me wear em."—Saturday Evening Post.

Not Forced Out of Bureau of Navigation by Secretary Meyer

Washington, Dec. 12.—President Taft sent to the senate the nomination of Commander Andrews to be chief of the bureau of navigation in the navy department, succeeding Rear Admiral Nicholson, who will assume command of the Asiatic squadron.

The latter asked to be relieved as chief of the bureau, but friends in congress objected to the transfer, saying it had practically been forced by Secretary Meyer. To the president, however, Nicholson announced that he was entirely content.

Boston, Dec. 12.—Governor Foss and several others were the speakers at the exercises held by Old South chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, in celebrating its fifteenth anniversary. "The enfranchisement of women is not yet accomplished, but it is coming," said the governor. "Political leadership is not yet established as one of women's tasks. And yet the inspiration and the faith which are leading this country ahead today arise very largely from the wives and mothers of America. It always has been so; let us believe that it always will be."

New York, Dec. 12.—The prosecution in the trial of Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, the chorus girls, charged with shooting W. E. D. Stokes, now critically ill, confronted Miss Graham on the culmination of her cross-examination with some new letters.

They were placed in evidence to show that the young woman's exoneration of Stokes had been the subject of considerable negotiation and that she had promised in more than one letter "not to make him any trouble."

One of these letters, which took the defense completely by surprise, concluded with a request that Stokes submit the statement he wished her to sign.

Republican National Committee Meets Today at Capital

ONLY FRICTION OVER OHIO

Chairman of State Committee Is Opposed to Taft, While National Committeeman Vorys Favors President's Renomination — Actual Move to Force Nomination on Roosevelt In 1912—No Attempt to Conceal the Concerted Movement

Washington, Dec. 12.—Late comers among the members of the Republican national committee, who arrived in Washington for the meeting today, found that the program of procedure had practically been agreed upon and that apparently the only possibility of friction would be a transposition of the factional differences in Ohio to the national committee.

Prominent Ohio Republicans continued in conference in an effort to bring about at least a semblance of harmony. The chief difference is over the method of selecting delegates to the Republican national convention. Walter Brown, chairman of the state committee, and Arthur I. Vorys, the national committeeman from the state, were in a long conference. Brown, who recently came out in opposition to President Taft, favors a presidential preference primary, while Vorys, the Taft manager in the state, favors the selection of delegates by the state convention as usual.

There appeared to be little possibility of disarranging the program for the meeting of the committee. This program includes the selection of Chicago for the convention city and fixing the time as the last week in June. John F. Hill of Maine, who has been acting chairman since the resignation of Postmaster General Hitchcock, will formally be elected chairman, but will serve only until the convention nominates, when a man agreeable to the presidential candidate will be elected by the newly constituted committee.

The committee will discuss presidential primaries at some length, but will declare that the subject is one for the disposition of the states. The committee will take the ground that it has no right to dictate to a state the method of selecting its representatives in the convention and will adopt a resolution that delegates may be elected in the manner prescribed by law in the various states. So far six states have adopted the primary system.

All attempts to disguise the fact that a concerted movement is on foot looking to the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt as the Republican candidate for president in 1912, were apparently dropped when it became known that members of the national committee were being sounded as to their view of the feasibility of "forcing" the nomination of the former president.

Little is talked of but the prospective attitude of Roosevelt. It became known that several prominent Republicans on their way to Washington to attend the conference here this week had stopped over in New York and had long talks with Roosevelt, and that still others had made engagements to see him either at New York or Oyster Bay following the meeting of the national committee.

The supporters of Roosevelt now here are basing all of their arguments in his behalf on the claim that while the former president has announced that he is not a candidate he has not stated that he would not accept the nomination if it were tendered to him.

They claim that "as a good American citizen, Roosevelt could not do otherwise than accept, once the convention had acted." No attempt, it is said, will be made to bring the Roosevelt sentiment to a focus at this time.

The hopes of his supporters is to achieve victory in the convention itself. For this reason they have practically dropped the fight to have the national committee declare in favor of presidential primaries at this time, but they are pressing the argument that delegates should go to the convention uninstructed.

HACKED MAN TO PIECES

Hungarian Lynchers Acquitted Because They Were "Mesmerized"

Agram, Hungary, Dec. 12.—Autosuggestion was the defense accepted by the judges here when they acquitted six peasants who had taken part in a brutal lynching.

The inhabitants of the village of Ribnik had been greatly excited by a number of cases of arson in the neighborhood, and as the authorities failed them they organized a police force themselves.

Armed with scythes and shotguns, they finally seized an itinerant brushmaker, whom they believed to be the guilty man. He was dragged before the assembled villagers and tortured until he made a confession. Then more than 100 persons beat him to death with flails, chopped up the body with scythes and burned the fragments in a heap of straw.

Though the public prosecutor asked for death sentences, defending counsel succeeded in persuading the judges that the peasants, in the common excitement, had, so to speak, mesmerized one another and were therefore not responsible for their actions.

NOW POSTOFFICE MASCOT

Kitten Makes Hundred and Fifty Mile Trip In Mail Sack

Leominster, Mass., Dec. 12.—When Fred A. Rainville, clerk at the postoffice, opened a New York and Chicago mail sack yesterday, out jumped a black kitten, giving Rainville the surprise of his life.

The sack was last locked up in Albany, so that the kitten must have been in close confinement for several hours on its journey of 150 miles.

After being fed a saucer of milk it went to playing friskily. The clerks will keep the kitten for a mascot.

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

CHAPTER XIV.

A MATTER OF TRAINING.

THE days passed, and Tudor seemed loath to leave the hospitality of Berande. Everything was ready for the start, but he lingered on, spending much time in Joan's company and thereby increasing the dislike Sheldon had taken to him. He went swimming with her, in point of rashness exceeding her, and dynamited fish with her, diving among the hungry ground sharks and contesting with them for possession of the stunned prey, until he earned the approval of the whole Tahitian crew. Arahu challenged him to tear a fish from a shark's jaws, leaving half to the shark and bringing the other half himself to the surface, and Tudor performed the feat, a flip from the sandpaper hide of the astonished shark scraping several inches of skin from his shoulder. And Joan was delighted, while Sheldon, looking on, realized that here was the hero of her adventure dreams coming true. She did not care for love, but he felt that if ever she did love, it would be that sort of a man—"a man who exhibited," was his way of putting it.

He felt himself handicapped in the presence of Tudor, who had the gift of making a show of all his qualities. Sheldon knew himself for a brave man, wherefore he made no advertisement of the fact. Life pulsed steadily and deep in him, and it was not his nature needlessly to agitate the surface so that the world could see the splash he was making. And the effect of the other's amazing exhibitions was to make him retreat more deeply within himself and wrap himself more thickly than ever in the nerveless, stoical calm of his race.

"You are so stupid the last few days," Joan complained to him. "You don't seem to have an idea in your head above black labor and cocoanuts. What is the matter?"

Sheldon smiled and beat a further retreat within himself, listening the while to Joan and Tudor propounding the theory of the strong arm by which the white man ordered life among the lesser breeds. As he listened Sheldon realized, as by revelation, that that was precisely what he was doing. While they philosophized about it he was living it. But why talk about it? It was sufficient to do it and be done with it.

He said as much, dryly and quietly, and found himself involved in a discussion, with Joan and Tudor siding against him.

"The Yankees talk a lot about what they do and have done," Tudor said, "and are looked down upon by the English as braggarts. But the Yankee is only a child. He does not know effectually how to brag. He talks about it, you see. But the Englishman goes him one better by not talking about it. The Englishman's proverbial lack of bragging is a subtler form of brag, after all."

"I never thought of it before," Joan cried. "Of course. An Englishman performs some terrifically heroic exploit and is very modest and reserved, refuses to talk about it at all, and the effect is that by his silence he as much as says: 'I do things like this every day. It is as easy as rolling off a log. You ought to see the really heroic things I could do if they ever came my way.' Confess, Mr. Sheldon, don't you feel proud down inside when you've done something daring or courageous?"

Sheldon nodded.

"Then," she pressed home the point, "isn't disguising that pride under a mask of careless indifference equivalent to telling a lie?"

"Yes, it is," he admitted. "But we tell similar lies every day. It is a matter of training, and the English are better trained, that is all. Your countrymen will be trained as well in time. As Mr. Tudor said, the Yankees are young. Certainly we are proud inside of the things we do and have done—proud as Lucifer, yes, and prouder. But we have grown up and no longer talk about such things."

"I surrender," Joan cried. "You are not so stupid after all."

"Yes, you have us there," Tudor admitted. "But you wouldn't have had us if you hadn't broken your training rules."

"How do you mean?"

"By talking about it."

Joan clapped her hands in approval. Tudor lighted a fresh cigarette, while Sheldon sat on, imperturbably silent.

Joan was looking intently across the compound and out to sea. They followed her gaze and saw a green light and the loom of a vessel's sails.

"I wonder if it's the Martha come back," Tudor hazarded.

"No, the sidelight is too low," Joan answered. "Besides, they've got the sweeps out. Don't you hear them? They wouldn't be sweeping a big vessel like the Martha."

"Besides, the Martha has a gasoline engine—twenty-five horsepower," Tudor added.

"Just the sort of a craft for us," Joan said wistfully to Sheldon. "I really must see if I can't get a schooner with an engine. I might get a second hand engine put in. If you were not so medieval I could be skipper and save more than the engineer's wages."

He did not reply to her thrust and she glanced at him. He was looking out over the water, and in the lantern light she noted the lines of his face—strong, stern, dogged, the mouth almost chaste, but firmer and thinner lipped than Tudor's. For the first time she realized the quality of his strength, the calm and quiet of it, its simple integrity and reposeful determination. She glanced quickly at Tudor on the other side of her. It was a handsomer face, one that was more immediately pleasing. But she did not like the mouth. It was made for kissing and she abhorred kisses. For the moment she knew a fleeting doubt of the man. Perhaps Sheldon was right in his judgment of the other. She did not know, and it concerned her little; for boats and the sea and the things and happenings of the sea were of far more vital interest to her than men, and the next moment she was staring through the warm tropic darkness at the loom of the sails and the steady green of the moving sidelight and listening eagerly to the click of the sweeps in the rowlocks.

Nor did she take interest in the two men beside her till both lights, red and green, came into view as the anchor checked the onward way.

"It's the Minerva," Joan said decidedly.

"How do you know?" Sheldon asked, skeptical of her certitude.

"It's a ketch to begin with. And, besides, I could tell anywhere the rattle of her main peak blocks—they're too large for the halyard."

A dark figure crossed the compound diagonally from the beach gate, where whoever it was had been watching the vessel.

"IT'S THE MINERVA," JOAN SAID DECIDEDLY.

"Is that you, Utami?" Joan called.

"No, Missie; me Matapuu," was the answer.

"What vessel is it?"

"Me t'ink Minerva."

Joan looked triumphantly at Sheldon, who bowed.

"If Matapuu says so it must be so," he murmured.

"But when Joan Lackland says so you doubt," she cried, "just as you doubt her ability as a skipper. But never mind, you'll be sorry some day for all your unkindness. There's the boat lowering now, and in five minutes we'll be shaking hands with Christian Young."

Lalaperu brought out the glasses and cigarettes and the eternal whisky and soda, and before the five minutes were past the gate clicked and Christian Young, tawny and golden, gentle of voice and look and hand, came up the bungalow steps and joined them.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE CHRISTMAS PUDDING.

NO Englishman would consider a Christmas dinner at all correct if it was not served with a big plum pudding, brought to the table wreathed with a blue flame of burning brandy.

There is also a well established prejudice in favor of Christmas puddings in most American households.

In the shops are sold plum puddings ready for serving. Excellent as these are, many housewives prefer to make their own puddings.

While for an affair of state a rich plum pudding is all right, for the family dinner a simpler one is better. When there are children in the family a day after Christmas attack of indigestion must be warded off if possible.

A Temperance Recipe.

Most plum puddings contain brandy. In this one orange juice is substituted for the liquor.

Take a cupful each of white sugar, seeded raisins, currants, orange peel, finely cut citron and chopped suet; a half cupful of milk, four eggs, three tablespoonfuls of orange juice and a pint and a half of breadcrumbs taken from the inside of the slice; also a teaspoonful each of nutmeg, allspice, cloves, mace and a half teaspoonful of cinnamon, all reduced to a powder and combined before adding to the pudding. Care must be taken that the skin has been removed from the suet before chopping and that the currants and raisins have been well cleaned.

Combining the Ingredients.

Mix these ingredients in a good sized bowl, taking first the sugar, fruit, breadcrumbs and adding the eggs one by one as you mix these ingredients together. Then pour in the milk, orange juice and spices, mixing with the hands. Butter a bowl or enameled pan and pour the pudding into the vessel.

Cover with a piece of oiled paper, and over this tie a well greased cloth. Cook the pudding in a steamer if possible. If no steamer is to be had pour the pudding into a well greased muslin bag, and by means of strings suspend it in an ordinary boiler, so that it may be thus steamed.

Also the pudding may be baked in the oven, about two hours being necessary with a moderately hot fire.

THE MISSING MISS ARNOLD

Today the Anniversary of Mysterious Disappearance

FUTILE WORLD-WIDE SEARCH

Police and Family of Young Woman Believe She Is Dead—Pictures and Description of Her Sent to Practically Every City In the World—Death Records of Hundreds of Cities Looked Into Without Avail

New York, Dec. 12.—It is one year this morning since Miss Dorothy Arnold, daughter of Francis R. Arnold, head of the importing house of F. R. Arnold & Co., 7 West Twenty-Second street, disappeared from the home of her parents at 108 East Seventy-Ninth street. The disappearance has remained a mystery to this day. The police and family are convinced that the girl is dead.

The first public announcement that Miss Arnold was missing was made at police headquarters in this city on the night of Jan. 25 by the then Second Deputy Police Commissioner Flynn.

In the six weeks' interval between the day that Miss Arnold went away and the public announcement of it the Pinkertons, the detectives of the New York department, and detectives in other cities of this country had searched in vain for a trace of the missing young woman.

Pictures and descriptions of Miss Arnold were sent to practically every city in the world, and it is said that every hospital, private as well as public, on this continent and in Europe, was investigated in the hope that among their patients the young woman might be found. On the theory that she was dead, morgues in America and Europe were searched and the death records of hundreds of municipalities looked into.

The girl friends of the missing girl were asked to aid, and some of her young men friends were questioned in the hope that a romance might have been at the bottom of the case.

One of these men, George S. Griscom, Jr., of Pittsburg, to whom Miss Arnold had been reported engaged, was in Florence, Italy, when she disappeared, and he came home to join in the search. For more than a month he directed a search from Atlantic City before he gave up the case as hopeless.

PICTURES ON EXHIBITION AT CRANCH SCHOOL

Through the efforts of principal Arthur S. Townsend and the courtesy of the Emery School Art Company of Boston, the pupils of the Cranch school were given a rare treat this morning and at the same time were afforded a splendid opportunity to derive much useful and instructive benefit through picture studies of a varied nature. In all, two hundred pictures, including representations of the world's famous masterpieces in painting, sculpture work, architecture, and developed interest in the life of man and the beauty of nature, were displayed, and the attention of the pupils of the different classes was held to a high degree.

To bring the importance of the works of the different artists more vividly to mind, Mrs. Ada W. Tillinghast, an authority on all the pictures which had been loaned, and an ardent student of all works of art, visited the various rooms in the school building this morning and explained in detail the significance of the different pictures. The science of art to the world was eminently portrayed by the speaker and in each room, at the conclusion of her short talk, Mrs. Tillinghast submitted to a number of questions which were forthcoming from the pupils.

Among other developments in the study which were depicted by the speaker, and which met with exceptional favor, were the character study of "Joan of Arc," which brought forcibly to bear the similarity of the likeness of the saint to that of the undaunted leader St. Michael the study of the evolution of the book, showing the diverse steps, from that taken by the primitive man, down through the early ages and up to the modern facilities which are now in use in the printing of books and a survey of the Roman Forum and the prominence which was attached to the building in olden days.

The pictures have been displayed on the lower floor and are strewn about the hall and walls, thereby presenting in themselves a most exquisite appearance to one whose gaze they happen to meet. The pictures are photographs of famous paintings, statues, ruins and nature scenes. They have all been taken from nature either directly or from the original statues or paintings, thus eliminating any loss of delicate shading. The photographs average considerable size and have been placed on large screens.

This evening in the school hall, Mrs. Tillinghast will give an extended and detailed lecture on the different pictures on exhibition, and as the price of admission has been fixed at a nominal sum, it would be well for any one interested, or any one else who is desirous of ascertaining and deriving much educational and historical information to present himself on this occasion. The speaker is thoroughly versed in the subject and everywhere her lectures are being highly appreciated.

The exhibition includes, "Indian Statues," by Cyrus E. Dallin, "A Norwegian Fjord," by Adelsteen Normann, "Alice," by William Chase, "The Torn Hat," by Thomas Sully, "At the Riverside," by Henri Lerolle, "Hiawatha," by Elizabeth Norris, "The Questioner of the Sphinx," by Elihu Vedder, besides numerous colored viwes of nature by Riviere, together were many other reproductions of the works of the greatest master minds.

BRIEFS

It is rumored that Dr. Jones' house on Hancock street has been sold and that a moving picture theatre will be erected on the site.

The second annual concert and ball of Branch 8, of the Labor league, will be held in Alpha hall on the evening of January 9th.

will doubtless have something to say relative to the dry dock question.

On indication as to how the members of the new commission feel on the all important question of development of the water front along Massachusetts Bay, can be gleaned from the interviews with Chairman Bancroft and George S. Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce on the question.

"We want to work with the business men of Boston and we want the business men of Boston to work with us.

"First, we want your general support in keeping up constantly a public sentiment favorable to the progressive development of the port.

"Second, we want active and practical support, opinions, your advice, business for the facilities which the port has today and for those which we are instructed to give it in future —GEN. HUGH BANCROFT, chairman of the Harbor Board.

"Let us stand solidly, enthusiastically and together behind the members of the new Harbor Board. They must have the co-operative interset of the great public. The Chamber of Commerce will study contemporaneously with them Boston's development and desires to be a great auxiliary to the Harbor Commission. Pull, tug and work together for Boston.—GEORGE S. SMITH, president Chamber of Commerce.

LOOKS LIKE SUCCESSFUL SEASON.

From the start which has been made, and from the enthusiasm that has greeted the same, it looks as if a most successful season is in store for those teams which comprise the Greater Boston Basket Ball league. The standing to date shows the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. team and the St. Joseph's A. A. of the West End tied for first place, each having two games to its credit.

The first and second teams of the Quincy A. A. have the same record thus far. Each has won and lost a game. The senior team defeated the Cunningham Gymnasium quintet in the opening game, but lost to Lynn Y. M. C. A. Saturday. Just the reverse was the fate of the members of the second five. Manager Flynn feels confident that his team will exhibit fine form in the future games and predicts that both of the local teams will accredit themselves in fine style before the season is well under way. The second team of the local association is being regarded as the most formidable second team in the league and those who have seen its members, the majority of whom composed the star Quincy High aggregation of last year perform, claim that they stand a fine chance of acquiring the honors of supremacy for the second teams of the league.

It is to be regretted, however, that a protest is to be entered against the local association by Dr. Burnett of the Cunningham Gymn, who claims that Quincy A. A. had two professional players in its lineup when it played the Milton team in St. May's Hall. The outcome of the protest will be keenly watched for it is not definitely known who the men are, that the object of protest will be directed against. The Milton team was beaten and the rivalry on the occasion was such as to give tendency that every effort will be used to make a victory for either side.

Detective's Find Results In Jarman's Bail Being Raised

New York, Dec. 12.—On request of Assistant United States District Attorney Gruber, Commissioner Shields raised from $2500 to $7500 the bail of Alfred J. Jarman, a member of the force of a scientific publication, charged with having counterfeit money in his possession.

The increase in bail was due to allegations by Captain Flynn of the secret service that a search of Jarman's room resulted in the discovery of a small lithographic press, ten plates for making $10 treasury notes, and moulds for dimes and quarters.

LADIES' NIGHT OF ORDER OF ODD FELLOWS

Granite Lodge of the Order of Odd Fellows, observed Ladies' night in Farnum's hall, West Quincy, Monday evening. The affair was largely attended and proved a great success. Provost's orchestra furnished music and after a fine program from eight until nine o'clock, dancing was enjoyed until midnight.

During the evening, refreshments were served under the direction of the commitee on arrangements. and the event itself was pronounced to have been a most gala one. William C. Martell was in charge of the floor, assisted by Joseph Cavanaugh and a number of aids.

TOWN RIVER YACHT CLUB.

The formal opening of the Town River Yacht club took place at the club house, Monday evening. The house was very prettily and appropriately decorated for the occasion. There were 125 members and friends present, the Quincy Yacht club and other yacht clubs of Quincy bay being well represented. Music was furnished by Richardson's orchestra and Messrs. Emery, Anderson, and Sweeney rendered several vocal selections, also graphophone selections rendered at intervals constituted the musical program of the evening.

Owing to absence of Mayor-elect Commodore E. R. Stone, T. B. Crane officiated as toastmaster. Commodore Whittemore of the Quincy Yacht club being one of tre speakers, expressed himself as much in favor of the new organization and wished the club a prosperous future. He extended an invitation to use the floats and club house privileges of the Quincy Yacht club.

Other speakers were Ex-Commodore Crane of the Q. Y. C. and Vice Commodore E. N. Emery of the T. R. Y. C. Recitations were given by Daniel Ring which were well received. E. P. Barnes former secretary of the T. R. Y. C. gave a very interesting history of the new organization, and spoke of its foundation, its present condition and future prospects. His remarks called for great applause. From the plans mapped out by Mr Barrows it can be readily seen that the yachting season of 1912 promises to be one of great sport and full of interest to all those who are affiliated with this progressive oganization. Plans are already under way for the development of several racig classes.

As a fitting close to the ceremonies of evening a genuine old fasrioned clam chowder was served. After few mometns of general jollification amongst those present, this joyful band of yachtsmen desphrsed at a late hour.

Delcevare King, chairman of the Massachusetts No-License League spoke Monday at one of the ten outdoor mid-day automobile no-license rallies in Lynn and on Saturday night spoke at both of the big evening outdoor rallies. Lynn is voting today.

BASKET BALL RESULTS.

"Stop Harvard and the Army," is now the slogan at the Y. M. C. A. basket ball league games. The reason is not hard to find for both of these teams have won all of their games and unless a defeat is soon marked up against each one, the championship will undoubtedly come to one or the other. It is true that with one exception their games have been played against the supposedly weaker teams and before the season is much older, they both will run up against an unlooked for snag.

The Army—Yale game, Saturday night, nearly resulted in a victory for Yale and if Edgar Nicoll had not had the hardest luck of any player in the league, the game would without a doubt, have been a victory for Capt. Dineen. Twice Nicoll had two easy tries for the basket and each time the ball rolled completely round the edge of the goal, hesitated an instant and then, dropped out. One of these shots was in the last few minutes of play and with the score at 14 to 14, his basket would have won the game. The work of Price, as right forward, and Holmes as left guard for the Army, was exceptionally good, altho tre audience thought that "Chick" was using a little too much football against Dineen. For Yale, Dineen and Nicolls were the stars, altho Croucher played unusually well. The score of the game was Army 18, Yale 14.

SECOND GAME.

The Harvard—Penn game was also a "thriller" from start to finish. Neither one of these teams had lost a game and each one was out for "blood," for a victory meant a toptie with the winner of the Army-Yale game. Penn put up one of the hardest and fastest games of the season and it was due to the marvelous "come-back" of Kemp, the Harvard Centre, that Capt. Parkers team was returned a winner. All through the game, Fred Corthell, who was playing centre for Penn, had been sticking to Kemp like the paper on the wall and it looked as if Harvard's star center was going to be "shown up" at last. Kemp came strong, however, at the finsh, for the pace had been too fast for Corthell, and his last basket, together with that of "Lucky" Burns, settled the game, the final score being 17-13 in favor of Harvard, Parker passing, and the blocking of Veale, who held Joe Pinel to two baskets, were also features for Harvard's game.

Capt. Tirrell, with a wonderful one hand shot from the side of the floor early in the 2nd half and "Bobbie" Summers guarding and blocking of Parker, excelled for Penn. Too much credit cannot be given to Corthell, for he never played basket ball before this season, and his work against Kemp stamps him as a "comer."

THIRD GAME.

Tech 30—Navy 10. Poor Navy just when it seemed that they had a chance to put up a good game with a full team in the line up, hard luck again came their way, for word was received from Cobb, the crack forward, that he would be unable to play. Capt. Jack Melville, has indeed had poor luck, for in only one game has he had his regular line up and even that time he was up against Yale who trimmed them soundly. It is doubtful, however, if Navy would rave been able to down Tech, with all of its regulars in the game, for Capt. "Eddie" Newcomb certainly had his eye with him Saturday night, getting no less than 6 baskets. Newcomb's shooting was easily the feature of the game, for he scored almost every time he got ris bands on the ball, some of his goals being "clan,," from beyond the centre of the floor. If Tech can keep up its present pace, the leaders will have to play pretty good ball to beat them. The whole team is working together and their passing was exceptionally good on Saturday evening. Phil Wood was the only member of the Navy team to score in their game and all of the 10 points made, go to his credit. He missed enough easy tries, most of which were directly under the basket, to have put his team in the running if he had scored them. A little chest weight work, and all around exercise would do Wood plenty of good for his shots at the basket, invariably fell short. Capt. Melville played a good game the 2nd half, although in the first half of the game he was trying to cover three men most of the time.

FORE RIVER EAGLES WIN.

Fall River Oaks paid a visit to Fore River grounds Saturday, and played the Eagles in a New England league game. The grounds were in a slippery condition, caused by a heavy shower, just previous to the game. There was only a fair attendance. The Oaks were slow in coming on the field and it was not until 3.20 P. M., (35 minutes late from advertised time) that play commenced. The Oaks, colors, which were light green stood out well on the field against the navy blue of the Eagles.

Mr. Kerr of Worcester, who acted as referee, wisely decided to play two 35 minute halves only, instead of two 45 minute.

The Eagles started play, and the ball travelled quickly to the Oaks' goal. Foley stopped a fine kick by J. McDonald, and the ball went out of play. Dunlop had a run, and Reilly sent a long kick up to the Eagle ground, where Hendry missed, but Oaks were pulled up for off side. The Eagles were back in a twinkling, by Elliot and a free kick was given. This brought the Eagles to twelve yards in front of goal, when Reilly charged from behind and another kick was given the Eagles. Campbell let drive a hard kick, and Albian did not see the ball until it was lying in a cozy corner of the net. This goal was scored after six minutes' play. The kick off was followed by a rush by the "greens" to the Eagles' goal and Sharples was called upon to save. M. Sullivan made a good but fruitless try to break away by himself, and a foul was given Fore River. Campbell sent the ball well down the field, when Elliot sent it over the bar. Dunlop returned the kick, and Foley kicked out. A corner kick was given, the ball landing in front of goal. Harrison let drive and the second goal was registered ten minutes after play had started. The "greens" started again in great form, but play was held up by Reilly disputing a decision of the Referee. Play was stopped and Mr. Kerr read the "riot act," after which Reilly resumed play. The Eagles could not get away, and play remained at mid field, until Cannon brought play in front of the Eagles' goal. A free kick outside the penalty line gave the "greens" a capital opportunity to score, but erratic shooting spoiled the chance. Harrison had a fine run, and Dunlop brought play to half field, where Reilly kicked the leather into touch. Campbell returned in fine style, and Elliot sent in a good shot which Foley blocked. Immediately after Rennie sent in a stinging shot but no goal resulted. Play remained in front of Oaks' goal, until J. Sullivan kicked out of field. The Cooner kick failed to produce results. Oaks were now having a good part of the play, and the ball travelled from goal to goal in quick succession. The rough play element was now brought into force, and Sullivan, centre forward, was quickly checked. Elliot from the touch line sent in a fine shot but the goal keeper saved well. The visitors came away now in fine style and the only good combination of the team was now shown. M. Sullivan and Cannon sending in two dandy shots for Sharples to clear. A foul brought relief to the Eagles, and Hendry's kick to midfield and play remained there until half time was sounded. After an interval of only a couple of minutes play was resumed, the "greens" kicked off, the forwards took play to Eagle territory, where Campbell in daring style stopped a combined rush. Sullivan in side right had a shot for goal, and Rennie sent one to Dunlop who gained ground with a fine run, until Holmes overtook him. The Eagles now content with two goals lead were satisfied to play quietly, but it nearly cost them dearly, for the Oaks were playing hard and it was only through poor shooting combined with good goal saving that saved the Eagles goal, just outside the penalty line. J. McDonald in trying to head the ball missed it and caught it with his hand, a kick was given the visitors and the ball landed in front of Fore River goal. Moran had a fine run, passed to Dunlop, and Rennie had an unsuccessful shot for goal. Booth was the means of breaking up another finely continued run by the Eagles, and Sullivan blocked. Harrison started some rapid firing shot and the Oaks' goal was called upon to save three shots which he did with credit. Cannon with a long kick sent the ball into touch, and Dunlop with a fine seven sent the ball a little too high, and over the bat, Campbell returned the kick out; and play settled at the Eagles' goal and for a few minutes it was in great danger, one shot from Cannon striking the bar, and bouncing back Rennie sent it up to the other end, where the Oaks were taken by surprise, the goal keeper ran out to meet the ball, but he misjudged Moran, who getting possession scored a clever goal. The fading light now greatly interfered with play, and it was with difficulty that the game could be followed by the spectators around the ropes. The remainder of the game brought no further scoring. Thus finished a stubbornly contested game, the result being Fore River Eagles 3 goals, Fall River Oaks 0.

Late Saturday night it was rumored that he Oaks have lodged a protest against a win for the Eagles.

The teams were as follows:

EAGLES		OAKS
Sharples	g	Albion
Hendry	rb	Foley
Melville	lb	Booth
Elliot	rh	Holmes
Campbell	ch	Reilly
Boyd	lh	Southwick
Moran	rof	Gray
Dunlop	rif	M. Sullivan
Harrison	cf	J. Sullivan
Rennie	rif	Oldham
J. McDonald	lof	Cannon

The lines were: For the winners, Hughes for the Eagles, and Sullivan for Fall River Oaks. Mr. Kerr ably officiated as referee.

HAVE HAD ENOUGH BROKEN PROMISES

Organized and Determined Body of Jews on Trail of Treaty

Washington, Dec. 12.—William G. McAdoo, together with almost his entire executive committee of prominent Jews, appeared before the house committee on foreign relations yesterday. The Jews are hot on the trail of the treaty of 1832; they are well organized and determined. The representatives of the National Citizens' committee which is here in Washington is to be a permanent body, and this movement of American Hebrews, as is very apparent from the crowded and interested committee room, is no flash in the pan.

The speakers were not disposed to think that President Taft and the state department are going to solve their troubles for them—they have had enough of promises and are saying so bluntly. Ambassador Guild has not been long enough in Russia to draw the fire away from the administration.

City Council Committee After Investigation Presents Its Report

Company Had Promised Reduction At Hearing

At a meeting of the City Council held Monday evening, the special committee, appointed to investigate the causes existing for the high price of gas in Quincy, made its report. It is as follows:

Dec. 11, 1911.

Quincy City in Council:—

The Committee appointed by the City Council by vote, Sept. 11, 1911 to interview the Gas Co. and the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners with the object of cheaper gas service in our city, having performed their duty, submit the following report:

In view of the fact that the Gas Co. has claimed that the reason for the high price of gas originally charged has been owing to the conditions prevailing prior to their entering the field, your committee has gone into the situation under the old company up to June 30, 1901, this having been used as a basis in a measure for our unfavorable position at this time and a committee having looked into the matter at that date we submit their analysis, this having been submitted by your committee to the Gas Co., and also to the Gas Commissioners. The report of their findings then were as follows:

An analysis of these data shows that the physical conditions of the Citizens' Gas Light Co., in 1900 is practically the same as it was in 1889. (As a matter of fact there has been no material change in the plant for twenty years.) No land has been bought and no buildings added. Since the present owners have had possession $1226.50 have been spent in improving the machinery and manufacturing appliances. A comparison of the balance sheets shows the machinery and manufacturing appliances were valued at $8,500.00 June 30, 1889, while on June 30, 1900, they were valued at $18,126.50, an increase in value of $7,626.50 from an expenditure of about $1200.

Street mains in 1889 were valued at $10,000, in 1900 at $33,474.03, an increase in value of $23,474.03, but the mains have not been materially extended. The table of Sundry Ex-

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN RAID OF CLUB

Another chapter, in the sensational raid on the Quincy associates some days ago, was enacted in court this morning, when Mark J. Myatt of the Boston & Quincy express, was arraigned on three complaints for violation of the liquor law. The complaints were for keeping and exposing, violation of the express law and for the delivery of liquor knowing it to be used for illegal purposes.

Myatt was represented by Albert E. Coffin, Jr., and after arraignment the case went over until next Wednesday for disposition.

Wise—"Borrows owes you money, eh? Well, I suppose he'll pay you back some day, but you can't make him hurry."

Markley—"You're wrong there. The mere light of me walking along the street has made him hurry several times lately."—Philadelphia Press.

PREPARE FOR RECEPTION

Testimonial To Miss Sheahan Will Be Largely Attended

LETTERS RECEIVED

If the many good wishes and tokens of congratulation that are being showered upon her at the present time, can be taken as any assurances, then the reception, to be tendered Miss Eliza C. Sheahan, Thursday evening, at the Adams school, promises to be a memorable occasion. The reception will be held from 8 until 9 o'clock and it is expected the hall will be taxed to its utmost by the former pupils and friends of one whose teaching career has lasted for over 46 years.

The committee in charge has spared no efforts to make the event a successful one from every standpoint, and the mere announceemnt of the reception itself, has called forth hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States, whose contents have been varied, many were expressive of joyous enthusiasm that the writer could be present, while others deeply regret they cannot come. All conveyed good wishes and congratulations to the veteran teacher.

It is evident that Miss Sheahan enjoys the friendship of hundreds of friends, to whom she has endeared herself by her splendid personality.

Immediately following the reception, the retiring teacher will be tendered a banquet by the teachers of the school, the chairman of the school committee, and the superintendent of schools. The banquet will take place in the room where Miss Sheahan has taught for so many years.

A cordial invitation to former pupils is extended to be present at the informal reception.

LECTURE BY ABNER POST, M. D.

At the Monthly Meeting of Wollaston Unitarian Club

INTERESTING SUBJECT

The Wollaston Unitarian club held its monthly meeting in the vestry Tuesday evening The full quota of members were present to enjoy an excellent chicken supper.

Abner Post, M. D. a noted Boston physician was the speaker and took for his subject "A rival of tuberculosis."

There are people, said the speaker, who say that if tuberculosis were banished from the face of the earth human life would be almost perfect. This is not so, as tuberculosis has a rival that is fully as widespread.

Doctor Post told of its first mention by a Spanish writer in 1493 and of its subsequent spread over the European continent.

The disease took its name from a shepherd youth in a Latin poem upon the subject. It is sometimes looked upon as a punishment of the Almighty for unchastity but it is fair to say that this is not always a fact by any means.

The speaker told of the many cases that had come under his observation at the Boston Dispensary and regretted teh fact that the law made no provision for persons so afflicted except to send them to the poorhouse.

In the army and navy the cases run as high as 40 per thousand, the Mexican war serving to first bring the scourge into this country.

Doctor Post mentioned the tremendous strides toward its cure that had been taken since 1905 when apes and other animals were first experimented upon.

In the last two years a marked advance has been made through the experiments of Professor Ehrlich in Germany who after 606 experiments with various compounds finally discovered a partial cure.

This cure has only been in common use since February of the current year and by it the medical faculty have only gotten hold of one corner of a great truth. The act of kissing, the telephone mouthpiece and the use of the public drinking cup were mentioned as common ways by which the disease might be communicated.

The tremendous infant mortality from this disease through hereditary causes was mentioned and the speaker closed with a plea that the subject be looked upon and treated simply as the contagious disease that it was.

Numerous questions were asked and the meeting concluded with a rising vote of thanks to Doctor Post.

SECURED THE BANNER.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Memorial church, brought home the banner Tuesday night from the East Norfolk Union meeting held in the Wollaston Baptist church. Memorial C. E. members met in the church early and called the roll, then sent delegates after members that had not responded. In this way they were able to have thirty of the thirty-two members present. Since the election of officers the society has got down to business and is making the pledge mean something especially in attending the regular Sunday and mid-week meetings.

Was Enjoyed By Many Tuesday Evening In Alpha Hall

THE PROGRAM

A large gathering assembled in Alpha hall Tuesday evening to listen to the concert by Mr. and Mrs. Fowler and family. The program prepared was varied and interesting and very pleasing to the audience.

The opening chorus "The day is past and over" was sung by the entire family, in soft and subdued tones, their voices blending beautifully. A solo by Lynde Fowler, was finely rendered and elicited much applause.

A piano solo, by Percy Coupal was admirably played and he responded to an encore. Master Coupal, is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Fowler.

"Ave Maria" by Mascheroni was sung by Miss Jessie Fowler, who responded to an encore. A piano trio, Overture to "Rossini's Italiana in Algieri," was skilfully interpreted by Mrs. Coupal, Mrs. Brooks and Carl Fowler. The quartet "Tell her I love her so," sung by Linde, Carl, Raymond and Victor Fowler was most pleasing and they responded with "A hunting we will go." The sextet, "Twilight" sung by Mrs. Coupal, Mrs. Brooks, Verne, Christine, Jessie, Edna and Zoe Fowler called forth much applause from the audience and the "Swing song" by Percy Coupal and Waldo Fowler pleased greatly and they responded to an encore. "Come where the Lilies Bloom" a double quartet composed by Mrs. Coupal Miss Verne, Jessie and Edna Fowler and Howard, Linde, Carl and Raymond Fowler was delightfully sung. "Your Voice" a solo by Edna Fowler was happily received and she responded.

A piano, duet "Marche Russe," was performed exceptionally well by Mrs. Brooks and Carl Fowler. The solo, "Indian Love Lyrics," was sweetly sung by Mrs. Coupal and the obligato and chorus, "Fair is the night" rendered by Raymond Fowler was very pleasing and elicited much applause. A mandolin duet, by Miss Verne and Raymond Fowler was admirably played and much enjoyed as wa sthe trio, "Waves of the Sea" by Mrs. Coupal, Jessie and Carl Fowler which was especially pleasing to the audience. The closing number on the program "The lilies blossom white" was by the chorus of fifteen voices and was a fine ending to a fine concert.

Carl Fowler was the director and Mrs. Grace Fowler Brooks accompanist.

Mr. and Mrs. Fowler and family do not claim to be professionals but there is so much of sweetness and harmony in their voices, and their selections are so refined and sympathetic that it is really a treat to listen to them. The family has resided in Wollaston twenty years and ahs many friends who wish them success and hope to have the pleasure of listening to another concert in the near future.

TODAY'S COURT.

James F. Sullivan was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy and for evading car fare on the railroad. He was fined $15 for drunkenness and sentenced to three months in the house of correction for evading his fare. The latter sentence was suspended.

Bert Haverley was fined $25 for disorderly conduct on a public conveyance at Quincy.

John Madden was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Mark J. Myatt of the Boston & Quincy express was arraigned on 3 complaints for violation of the liquor law. Cases continued until next Wednesday.

HEARD IN PASSING.

"I do hope if Quincy ever has another public hall it will be put in somebody's back yard, in the cellar, or any place where it is quiet. There is no pleasure in attending fine entertainments for the clatter of street cars, wagons and sidewalks chatter so interminge with the music or speaker's voice that it is annoying, and that is putting it mildly."

GRANITE MEN DINE AND HAVE A FINE TIME

Annual Meeting And Banquet of Manufacturers' Association Held In Boston Tuesday Evening

Alfred O. Diack Was Elected President

The annual meeting and banquet of the Granite Manufacturers' association, was held Tuesday at the New American house Boston, and was the occasion for the gathering of a large number of the trade. The annual meeting was held at 4.30, in one of the spacious rooms of the hotel and these officers were elected:

President—Alfred O. Diack.
Vice President—Francis Morrison.
Treasurer—James Joss.
Secretary—Thomas J. Dunphy.

Executive Committee, The President, Vice President and Treasurer, ex-officio E. D. Marnock, Thomas Bishop, Andrew Johnson, John C. Murray, Joseph Walker and George Clark.

Membership committee—Alexander Mundie, Peter J. Cahill, matrick W. Mannix, Alexander D. Smith, Harry S. Nicoll.

Alfred O. Diack, the new president, is almost too well known to the residents of Quincy to need any introduction. Born in Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1867, he came to this country at the age of 21 years and has been employed in the granite trade ever since. He worked for a time as a granite cutter in Texa, Colorado and California, as well as in the New England states.

He became a citizen soon after coming to America, as he felt satisfied that America would be his future home. He was always a believer in trades unions and had been in this country but a few months, when he became affiliated with and was made secretary of one of the foremost branches of the Granite Cutters' union at Milford. He also held office in branches of the union in other places, in which he was located.

He came to Quincy in 1893, and soon began business for himself with W. L. Birnie, under the firm name of Birnie & Diack, which business has since continued. His place of business is on Columbia street and is one of the prosperous firms of the city, employing from 35 to 40 cutters.

Mr. Diack represented the South Quincy ward in the City Council for several years. He was appointed by Mayor Thompson a member of the board of Managers of Public Burial Places, which office he still holds.

He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and a Knight Templar. He is also a member of the lodge, encampment and canton of Odd Fellows and is the present Chief of Clan McGregor, O. S. C., which organization, Monday evening made a record for initiations.

It was nearly 6 o'clock before the vote at the afternoon meeting had been tabulated and a few minutes later, to the music of Wilson's orchestra, the guests and members, marched into one of the dining rooms for the banquet. Across one side of the room was a long table at which the officers and guests of the association were seated. These included Mayor Shea, Charles L. Hammond, postmaster of Quincy, Rupert F. Claflin of the Granite bank, A. M. Hunt of Granite, Marble and Bronze, W. J. Parker of the Monumental News, Sewal W. Jones, President of the National association, R. D. Smith, secretary of the National association, James Adie, President of the Barre, Vt. association E. A. Bugbee of Barre, Frank Fessenden Crane, Dock and Water Front Commissioner, John Q. A. Field, John Spargo of the Quincy Telegram and George T. Magee of the Daily Ledger.

The head table was profusely decorated with carnations and fernery and looked very attractive. Before the attack was made on the menu, a flash light picture was taken of the party. The menu was as follows:

Cotuits
Potage Pierre le Grand
Consomme Printaniere
Olives Radishes
Scallops a la Newburg en Casserolettes
Roast Vermont Turkey,
Cranberry Jelly
Marrow Squash Delmonico Potatoes
Sweetbread Patties a la Poutell
Gateau Marguerita Frozen Pudding
Roquefort Cheese Crackers
Demi Tasse

Music during the dinner was furnished by Wilson's orchestra.

John C. Murray, the retiring president of the association, presided at the post prandial exercises and in calling the party to order extended a cordial welcome to the association. He said that he would make no extended remarks at that time as he was in the down and out class but would introduce as the first speaker Mayor Shea, who was also a member of the association.

Mayor Shea in opening, said that he was also about to become a member of the down and out class. I want to thank you for electing me four years as you did. I appreciate it and I claim to be just as nonpartisan as ever. The quicker we cut out party designation in Quincy the better. My four years as Mayor has convinced me that Quincy has a hard row to hoe and can not afford to play politics in municipal affairs.

There are a few politicians, who do not dare to let the question of elimination of party designation at municipal elections, go to the people. Speaking of the abolition of the grade crossings, he said that he had

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Although John D. Rockefeller has quit work, it is believed if he is prudent and does not go in for automobiles too strong, that he has enough laid up for a rainy day.

Mayor Brand Whitlock of Toledo has declined a $500 raise of salary and some people will feel in doubt whether he should be nominated for the Hall of Fame or the dime museum.

The widow of a victim of the Los Angeles Times explosion has sued James McNamara for $50,000. James, however, has nothing left but his hide, and no way is apparent of getting that tanned as it should be.

If you go to Washington and spend all your money, don't forget that your congressman will be glad to lend you enough to get home on. That has become a part of his duties.

We can't seem to believe they will jail the packers, but things have changed since the period when no trust magnate could be persuaded to pay any attention to a summons and appear in court.

THE WATER FRONT.

"Quincy has a big water front and it is only a question of time when it will be developed. If we only stand together and have a common interest in developing the city, we can bring it into a highly respectable place." These were the remarks of Rupert F. Claflin, Esq., cashier of the Granite National Bank, at the banquet of the Granite Manufacturers' Association. They represent the concensus of opinion of every Quincy speaker. Co-operation is the slogan and with it will come, we venture to say, one of the greatest water front developments in the small city history of the country.

The first good news comes with the suggestion of the new Dock Board of Boston that a high dry dock be built near the great shipbuilding works. As far as Quincy is concerned, from a business standpoint, what that means can not be estimated. The bringing of great vessels to this port for repairs, with the probability of a future terminal, indeed makes the outlook bright.

What is needed, therefore, is the "get together" spirit. That is what will make Quincy. Let each and every one do his share to bring about the desired result.

SEEKING FOREIGN TRADE.

A gathering of manufacturers and exporters was called by the Philadelphia Commercial Museum to meet Dec. 12, to discuss "Export trade—how to get it and how to keep it."

Some interesting papers could be written on "How not to get it." For instance, our shoe exporters have a may of shipping to South America the particular styles that happen at the moment to be popular on Broadway or La Salle street.

The Foxy Grandpas of Germany, however, know better. They long ago learned that the South American with his swagger Latin blood, has always a love for the flaunting of dudish attire. Hence high heels go on to the Brazil shoes, no matter what the New York or Chicago styles.

Every important store in Guatemala City has one or more young Germans working as clerks. They usually get about two pesos (85 cents) a week and board. They take the low pay because they expect later to become agents with good salaries to represent the German syndicates for export trade. The personal and intimate knowledge they are acquiring of Central American tastes and busines habits will enable their principals to outwit any competitor who is not equally well represented on the ground.

American shippers have often sent goods to Sodth America packed in heavy cases, when the final means of transportation to destination is donkey back. The goods remain in the steamship warehouse until the owner is willing to sell them at a sacrifice, so that the buyer can repack them in 125 pound cases, one to go on each side of the patient mountain climbing donkeys.

The American wastes no palaver on the equatorial dagoes. He signs his letter "Trdly yours." This curtness goes in our atmostphere of hustle, where unnecessary flourishes never get beyond the firm's correspondence clerk.

The astute Euopean knows better how dear to the Latin heart are the ornate uowers of business rhetoric. He signs himself "Let me express to you, my dear sir, the complete assurance of my most profound consideration and esteem."

Foreign trade is a great game.

THE PRICE OF GAS.

The committee recently appointed by Council to investigate the "gas" question, has made its report and we are forced to admit, although we regret doing so, that it is very disappointing. About all that has been accomplished, is a reiteration by the corporation, of its intention of making a reduction in the price of gas of ten cents. This is not at all satisfying and from the report submitted, will not prove to the patrons of company that they are receiving the same consideration as that given to Milton and all other adjacent towns.

We have only to quote the committee's report to bear out our argument. It says:—

"The fact that the people of Quincy having in five years contributed to this company about $98,000 more than the people of Milton would pay for the same service, we feel it our duty to insist that having established the business now on a paying basis, that the people we represent are now entitled to similar rates, and we have no doubt the Gas Co. on extra consumption will lose nothing by making voluntary concession in view of the fact also that the people of Quincy have been very fair in the matter."

Seems that Quincy is not getting a fair deal in this important matter.

MAY BE SOLD AS JUNK

New Hampshire Street Car Line Proves to Have Been a Failure

Concord, N. H., Dec. 13.—The sale of the Portsmouth and Exeter street railway, which is owned by the New York Trust company, is authorized in a decree filed by Judge Aldrich in the United States circuit court.

The court stipulates that the public be given an opportunity to buy the road as a going concern at a sum considerably less than an upset price based upon the value of the material entering into its construction if sold as junk.

Masters appointed in the case found the value of this material to be $63,000. If no one desires to purchase the road as a going concern, the decree orders that it may be sold for junk and dismantled.

The road extends for about twelve miles from Exeter through Stratham and Greenland to Portsmouth.

Governmen Brings Suit Against Big Machinery Company

Boston, Dec. 13.—A bill looking to the dissolution of the United Shoe Machinery company was filed in the United States circuit court here by William S. Gregg, spcial assistant to Attorney General Wickersham.

The petition charges that "the defendants have by unlawful combinations, contracts and conspiracies and by exclusive use any tying provisions which they have made a part of the lease and license agreements between them and the boot and shoe manufacturers for the use of their machines, by the acquisition and control of former competing shoe machinery manufacturing concerns, and by other acts set forth in the petition, acquired and now control more than 98 percent of the trade and commerce in the United States in the shoe machinery."

GRANITE MEN DINE

hoped to be able to have the question settled before he went out of office and that he had frequently conferred with ex-Governor Bates, the chairman of the commission, but had been recently told by him, that it was doubtful if the plans could be made ready in time for the finding to be given out.

Another question of much interest to the granite trade is the public dock question. Much is now being done in that line. The question is an important one and the dock wants to be located right. A gentleman of the Canadian Pacific railroad, who was an expert in public docks, had been in Quincy looking over the sites and in a short time, he will give his ideas. He went about the city unknown and his opinion will be unbiased.

He was proud that our city had made great gains in valuation, and that the financial condition of the city was all right. Quincy was a good place to live and work in. The tax rate may go up a little in the next few years, if so, the reason was, because the City Council this year had insisted on short loans. We are all right in Quincy and we shall continue to prosper and to grow.

President Adie, of the Barre association, said that he brought the heartiest congratulations from Barre, your daughter. But the daughter has outgown the mother. Barre people realize the business conditions, and we have made up our minds to better it or burst. Quincy and Barre are like two sisters and we ought to get together and build up an organization and put it on a firm footing. He hoped that the Quincy organization would join with them, for there was no reason why you should sell monuments cheaper than we, or that Barre should sell cheaper than Quincy. To his mind, Quincy and Barre had nothing to be ashamed of in the monumental line. But there has been too much throat cutting going on. Let us get together and put business on a proper basis. It means a lot of hard work and we all must stand together. He urged the appointment of a committee to take up the matter and see if the two associations could not organize. There is the best of feeling between the associations and we can do much for each other. We are too closely related to allow anything but the best of feeling to exist.

Charles L. Hammond, superintendent of the Quincy Post Office, told how closely the government was identified with the business of Quincy. He wanted to say, if there was any improvement in the service that the association desired, he would be very glad to take up the matter with them. He thought, however, that the manufacturers were getting good service. We now have a late night collection, which is forwarded direct to New York, so that a letter leaving Quincy in the late evening, is delivered in the first morning delivery in New York. It behooves us to trade at home in the matter of the purchase of stamps and forwarding of mail, for the more business, the better service it means for the dity. He then touched upon the money order end of the office and of the large business done by that department.

In conclusion, he said that Quincy would shortly have a postal savings bank and the money would be deposited in the loval banks. We work while you sleep, that is the reason we get a morning delivery at South Quincy at 8 o'clock.

Rupert F. Claflin, cashier of the Granite National bank, said he liked to meet the manufacturers in a social way. He wanted it understood that his feelings toward the population in general was good. I have said that our business will not prosper until the government takes its hands off. He did not believe it a good thing to divide corporations and cut them up into small cut throat concerns. We must have larger concerns to compete with foreign nations. We can do something by educating our young men to become more accomplished. The only thing for men in Quincy, is to play a man's part. Try to tell the truth and work together for the common end. The man who kicks at everything, is not as good as the man who sees something good in all things. Quincy has a big water front and it is caly a question of time when it will be developed. If we only stand together and have a common interest in developing Quincy, we can bring the city into a highly respectable place.

In introducing the next speaker, President Murray spoke at length on the dock question. He believed that a public dock would be a paying investment. It was a public question of great importance. If we can ship our goods for three cents per one hundred, less than now, it means much to us. He told of how contracts for large amounts could not be secured in Quincy on account of the high rates. If we can only ship to Chicago by water, we can save much money. He then introduced Frank Fessenden Crane, Quincy's Dock and Water Front Commissioner.

Mr. Crane said that it would be wonderful how far reaching it would be, if the granite manufacturers pulled together. Last week 114 business men of Massachusetts gave a dinner at Washington to three of the greatest congressmen, Randall of Louisiana, Moore of Pennsylvania, and Small of North Carolina. Our senior senator was our spokesman. It was a notable gathering and was brought about by the efforts of two Quincy men, ex-Mayor James Thompson and Mayor Shea. This year the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange was interested in the question and the result was that the state was represented by 114 men. This would never have been, but for the interest of Mayors Thompson and Shea.

Last year he went to Washington for Mayor Shea and succeeded in getting an appropriation of $140,000 for a channel in Weymouth river and this year $5,000 had been secured from the state for a basin at Houghs Neck. This shows some of the possibilities.

In 1908, the local banks, and Granite Manufacturers' association, issued a book, which was taken to the National Rivers and Harbors congress, now every section of the country has one of these.

It was an effort to put Quincy before the world. He then touched upon the Erie canal and told what it had accomplished, also of the proposed Narragansett canal. Much money will be expended in terminals and we have the goods here in Quincy, for one of those terminals. One of the ways to get it will be through the public dock. It would be hard to please you all in the location of the dock, but it will be planned to give the greatest benefit to the greatest number. We want a good sensible dock. Mayor Shea said he wanted as good a man as could be secured, to go over the situation and the man selected, has just completed a three million dock for the Canadian Pacific railroad. He came to Quincy and made a thorough study of the locality and it was expected that his report would be forthcoming any day. He hoped that when we get that report, the Granite Manufacturers would back it up. Let us get together and work as a unit.

Alfred O. Diack, the new President of the association, said that if he had realized that Mr. Murray was to be a candidate for reelection, he would not have entered the contest. He wanted to thank the members for the honor conferred upon him, however, and he would do his best to make good. We must get down to business.

Seward Jones, president of the National association, told several stories and then getting down to business urged the members to take advantage of the association for data and information. The National association was in a prosperous condition and much information was being gathered for the members. The real important thing of the National association was the special reports. We have data on every manufacturer in the country and instead of relying on the book special reports should be secured from the association. You can do much for yourself if you will only avail yourself of this privilege and keep posted.

The last speaker of the evening was John Q. A. Field. Mr. Field said that up to within a short period, he had been connected one way and another with the granite business for sixty years. There was a time when Quincy furnished all of the cellar stone used in Boston and there were 25 sloops that transported granite, but they had stopped for want of trade. Things have changed. The question of a dock must be well looked into before we find what we can do. He believed that with the taking of wharfage in Boston, people would be compelled to find sleeping places and that Norfolk Downs would be bound to grow, and that the development of the Boston dock system would mean a business boom for Quincy. He doubted if a dock in Quincy would pay. He hoped to see the time, however, when it would pay. He hoped that if it would be of any advantage to Quincy, it would be looked into and plans made. What kind of a dock, is a question that must be decided and as the tax payers must pay for it, he hoped it would belooked into carefully.

This concluded the speaking and the meeting closed with all joining in singing Auld Lang Syne.

THIRD DEGREE EXEMPLIFIED

On Class of 50 Knights of Columbus at St. Mary's Hall

COLLATION FOLLOWED

The third degree in the Knights of Columbus was exemplified at St. Mary's hall, Tuesday evening, on a class of fifty candidates from Quincy and Ave Maria councils. The work was performed in a most excellent manner by District Deputy Charles J. Brady and suite, assisted by District Deputy J. Philip O'Connell.

There was a large attendance of knights, not only from the two Quincy councils, but from councils in towns and cities in the immediate vicinity of Quincy.

The evening was unusually mild, and with the windows closed and lack of ventilation, the air in the hall was said to have been almost suffocating for the spectators, but must have been much more so for the fifty candidates who rode the goat.

A bountiful lunch was served in the lower hall after the work of the evening.

Following the reading of a communication from the Monmouth, Ill., Chapter on the subject it was voted to protest against the use of the public press by members, to discuss persons, measures and details of management of the D. A. R. Mrs. Sayward reported on the recent musicale, and it was voted to use the proceeds as a foundation for a building fund for a Chapter house.

Mrs. A. S. Paige, chairman of the entertainment committee, introduced Mrs. Arthur P. Homer who read a most interesting and comprehensive paper on Ann Hutchinson. Miss Margaret Hall sang pleasingly two songs "For Love's Sweet Sake," and "Rocking in de win," with Mrs. William Burrill at the piano. Refreshments were served by the hostess, with Mrs. Walter Field, Miss Hall and Miss Ficken of Ashmont, assisting.

Five members were privileged to attend the fifteenth anniversary of Old South Chapter at the Old South Meeting House Monday morning and were inspired by the addresses especially that of Dr. Van Allen to greater interest and pride in the work of the D. A. R.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

A very important event of the week was the meeting of the Quincy Branch Alliance in the parlor of First church Monday afternoon. A good sized audience was present and the meeting was very inspiring and uplifting. Mrs. George G. Saville, president, was in the chair and welcomed the guests in her usual gracious manner.

The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn "Love Divine, All Love Excelling." That old but beautiful hymn by Charles Wesley.

Mrs. Isabelle Davis, secretary read the erport of the last meeting which was a Thanksgiving service. Mrs. Davis said in part that a large number were present and much appreciation was expressed of the very interesting remarks by Rev. Arthur Whitney of Plymouth who spoke of the manner in which the early settlers observed Thanksgiving. Mrs. Davis reported $21.40 in the treasury. As the Alliance devotes much money to charity and other good works funds do not remain long in the treasury. The report was approved and accepted.

Mrs. Saville spoke of the work of the Alliance and asked members to express their opinion in regard to having a Christmas party for the children. In response, Mrs. Frank Davis, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. John W. Sanborn and Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann expressed their views. It was finally decided not to hold the party this year.

Mrs. Sanborn who had charge of the entertainment spoke impressively and said as this was a Christmas meeting the program prepared pertained exclusively to Christmas and would also illustrate the tenets of the creed of the church.

The program opened with the anthem "Joy to the World," with Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann at the piano, Mrs. John D. Buckingham conducting, the music committee leading and the audience joining in.

Mrs. Charles Bickford owing to illness was unable to be present and Mrs. Sanborn very modestly announced that she would try to read in her place "One Night in Bethlehem" by W. J. Dawson of New York. She certainly succeeded for the audience listened with close attention. The story was a benediction in itself.

Mrs. Isabelle Davis read "The Princess of Make Believe" a poem of a little girl with a vivid imagination who imagined herself a princess.

The youngest member of the Alliance and an active worker on the Cheerful Letter Committee, Mrs. Saville's little daughter Natalie recited a little poem, "Christmas-tide," by Josephine Brown.

Mrs. Saville read from "Folk lore of Childhood" by Alexander F. Chamberlain, giving the story of "The little Pine Tree," and Mrs. Wilson Marsh closed with a settlement story, the last chapter of the book "Joey the Dreamer," by Henry Oyen.

These readings were interspersed with music by the commitee on music, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs John D. Buckingham, Mrs. Nathaniel S. Hunting, Mrs. James H. Slade.

Mrs. Slade sang a "Lullaby to the Christ Child," by Barnby and a folk lore carol "Noel," by Augusta J. Holmes very effectively and in her usual fine voice. Mrs. Buckingham, Mrs. Hunting and Mrs. Slade sang, "Joy to the World, the Lord is come." Mrs. Paffmann presided at the piano with her accustomed grace and skill. At the close of the exercises all joined in singing, "A Mighty Fortress is our God."

The efforts of those contributing to the afternoon's entertainment, won many favorable comments.

Refreshments were served by the ladies consisting of delicious cake, cocoa, candy and other dainty concoctions, the hostesses being Mrs. George T. Magee, Mrs. Osborn Rogers and Mrs. Ralph L. Lovell and the pourers Mrs. Hunting and Mrs. Lovell.

Miss Dora A. French and sister Mrs. Charles H. Porter received warm greetings from their many friends after several weeks' absence from the meetings.

QUINCY YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large gathering Saturday evening at the regular meeting of the Young Women's club, to hear Miss Mary Wiggins, who represented the Consumer's League. With the president, Miss Marie Bass presiding, a short business meeting was held.

Miss Wiggins gave an interesting account of conditions in factories and large department stores of our state. She told what the Consumer's League was doing to help these conditions, and urged members of the club to ask for the label when buying articles.

At the close a vote of thanks was given Miss Wiggins, after which dancing was enjoyed.

The next meeting promises a jolly time for all who attend. It is to be a baby party, and members are asked to come in appropriate costume, and also to bring a photograph of themselves when they were small, and a small gift for Santa's pack.

The Dramatic class will meet at the clubhouse Saturday evening at seven-thirty. All those desiring to join are requested to be present.

Miss Marie Bass, Miss Edith Fox, Miss Mabel Lovejoy and Miss Ruth Kemp, members of the cast "Love and a Way" are to be guests of the New England Women's club in Boston December eighteenth. In the evening they will present their play as a part of the entertainment.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

For its annual musicale Tuesday afternoon the Quincy Women's club overflowed into Music hall. These musicales have been popular features of the club program and soon outgrew the capacity of the clubhouse, being given last year in Alpha hall and this year comfortably filling Music hall. Another innovation was allowing the public to subscribe and enjoy the fine music which is always a feature.

The entertainers were the Weber Male quartet of Boston and Grace Sanborn Cole, reader, the quartet being composed of A. C. Prescott, first tenor, A. F. Cole, second tenor, G. H. Woods, baritone and W. E. Davison, bass.

There were ten members on the program, quartet singing, solos, and readings but so appreciative was the audience that in every case the encore was so enthusiastic that it met with a response and in some cases two. The blending of the voices in the quartet and the pleasing selections rendered were thoroughly enjoyed as was also the solo work by Mr. Prescott and Mr. Davison. The deep bass voice of Mr. Davison showed to especial advantage in his solos. Annie Laurie and Sweet Miss Mary by the quartet received most hearty applause and by request at the close of the concert the quartet sang Rock of Ages, which was finely rendered.

Grace Sanborn Cole proved a delightful entertainer, her readings being given with a natural ease and finish that called forth appreciative and hearty applause.

During the concert home-made candy was sold by the Exchange department of the club and Red Cross Seals by members of the Anti-Tuberculosis association. The 4-page programs were a gift to the Music committee from W. G. Shaw. The Music committee Mrs. Jennie B. Worcester, chairman, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Miss Alice Gertrude Coe, Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, Mrs. Victor E. Miller, Mrs. Frank J. Moore, Mrs. Albert R. Moulton, Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Mrs. Edith Cary Page, Mrs. H. E. Ricker, Mrs. H. W. Tirrell, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, and Mrs. Charles Sampson not only arranged the concert but ushered and looked after the comfort of those attending.

It was a fine entertainment, reflecting credit on the committee and adding one more to the many good things presented since the formation of this club.

The musicale was preceded by a half hour business session as it was one of the regular meetings of club. The usual reports and announcements of committees were given.

NURSES' REGISTRY.

The Quincy Registry for nurses the latest institution to which our attention has been called, is what has long been needed in Quincy, and is being welcomed most heartily by the various people whom it will benefit. The physicians, who are so busy they can claim no time fortheir own, find it a great relief that a telephone call will perhaps bring just the assistance desired in a very short time.

Then, too, nurses, whose expenses go on while not occupied are glad of an opportunity to fill in the vacant time with short calls they would not have known about except for the Registry, which in that way saves them money.

The public must see that the Registry will be of great benefit to it, for when sickness comes suddenly, and little time can be lost in search for a nurse, what a blessing to be able to secure a first class nurse, vouched for by both physicians and patients in less time than it would take to walk to the house of the nurse and back again.

The Registry will serve these three kinds of people provided these three kinds of people will serve the Registry. It must be able to depend on other than emergency calls and have cooperation and patronage to give the best possible service.

STOKES UNDER THE KNIFE

Miss Conrad Gives Her Testimony as the Trial Proceeds

New York, Dec. 13.—While W. E. D. Stokes was under a surgeon's knife for an operation, Ethel Conrad, charged with Lillian Graham with attempting to murder him last June, was on the witness stand corroborating every feature of the testimony of her chum that they had shot the millionaire in self-defense.

The operation on Stokes was for an abscess of the kidney, and it is said that it has been successful.

Miss Graham's ordeal had lasted through two and a half days of steady examination. She stuck to every material point and likewise denied every material charge that Stokes had made against her.

Miss Conrad was smiling much of the time and convulsed the court by several of her sharp replies. The girl explained her friendship to Miss Graham by saying that the latter had nursed her so devotedly during her illness last April that she decided never to leave her.

PERCY'S IRE AROUSED

Attacks Hearst For Article In Magazine Published by Him

Washington, Dec. 13.—Senator Percy of Mississippi rose to a question of personal privilege in the senate and delivered a scathing denunciation of an article relating to his election published in the November number of a popular magazine.

He also bitterly attacked William R. Hearst, who, he said, owned the magazine and inspired the article, and former Governor Vardaman, nominated by the Mississippi Democratic primary to succeed Percy.

MAKES A GIFT OF $1,600,000

Royalty to Promote Popular Education In India

CLOSE OF DELHI DURBAR

Delhi, Dec. 13.—King George and Queen Mary were solemnly crowned Emperor and Empress of India here amid a scene of unrivalled gorgeousness. King George in person proclaimed his coronation.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Lord Hardinge announced that the king had resolved to devote 50 lakhs of rupees (about $1,600,000) to the promotion of education in India, and that further generous gifts would be made for the same purpose.

He also announced that a half-month's pay would be granted to the non-commissioned officers and the men as well as the reservists of the British army in India, and that officers and men of the native army in India would be eligible hereafter to be awarded the Victoria Cross for bravery on the field of battle. A half-month's pay was also granted to subordinate civil servants. Certain classes of prisoners were released from jail.

Another important change announced by Hardinge was that the seat of government was in future to be transferred from Calcutta to Delhi.

Before dawn thousands had crowded the great amphitheatre where the proceedings were staged. British governors in state equipments and Indian princes in magnificent carriages of gold and silver began to arrive on the scene hours before daylight.

The British officers and the native potentates were the privileged guests. The princes and all the women guests were gorgeously dressed and displayed the greatest collection of jewels that even India has ever seen. The native royal women guests were placed in a second and smaller amphitheatre, from whence they had a splendid view of the ceremonies from behind screens and curtains.

Lord Hardinge received King George and Queen Mary when they arrived on the scene. Massed bands crashed out with "God Save the King" at the second of their majesties' arrival. The vast multitude broke forth in thunderous cheers and trumpets blared and drums rolled in one of the mightiest manifestations of loyalty conceivable.

The king then made his coronation speech, addressing the multitude in a clear, distinct voice that easily reached over the greater part of the audience. Then ascending the steps of the royal pavilion, their majesties turned and again faced the multitude, which sang "God Save the King," with a mighty volume of sound that was audible for miles.

Q.—How shall we account for the seeming contradiction of the following Scriptures—John i, 18, where it says "No man hath seen God at any time," and Exodus xxiv, 9, 10—"And they saw the God of Israel: and there was under His feet as it were a paved work of a sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness"—(H. C. H.)

Answer.—To properly understand the Bible it is essential that the student should continually bear in mind that much of the Scriptures contain symbolic or figurative expressions, and the remainder is in clear, literal statements. To distinguish between the two forms of expressions is what the Apostle calls "rightly dividing the Word of truth." (II Timothy ii, 15). Saul, on his way to Damascus, had but a glimpse of the glorified Lord Jesus and so overwhelming was the sight that he was prostrated to the earth, and blinded to such an extent that it required a miracle to restore his eyesight. In view of this, think what the effect would have been upon Moses and his associates had they actually seen the Almighty God of whom the Apostle says—"Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light that no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting" (I Timothy vi, 16). We are forced to the conclusion, therefore, that what Moses and those with him saw was but a representation of the Deity, or a vision of some kind or other. We remember also, in this connection, the transfiguration on the mount; the Apostles who were with the Lord thought they actually had seen Moses and Elijah with the Savior. But what they saw was merely a "vision" (Matthew xvii, 9). Moses and Elijah were dead. The Scriptures say, "The dead know not anything."

CHICAGO GETS BIG CONVENTION

June 18 Is Fixed by Republican National Committee

HILL SUCCEEDS HITCHCOCK

Ex-Governor of Maine Heads General Committee, While New Is Chairman of Committee of Arrangements—Taft Not Alarmed by Loud Talk About Roosevelt—Republican Leaders Discouraged at Outlook

Washington, Dec. 13.—The Republican national committee, in session here, ratified the program which had been arranged in advance for its deliberations. The national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president will be held in Chicago, beginning June 18. The vote in favor of Chicago was overwhelming, the ballot showing Chicago 42, Denver 7, St. Louis 1, absent 3.

By a vote in which only seven states cast affirmative ballots, the attempt of Senator Borah to inject an optional presidential primary feature in the call for 1912 was lost.

John F. Hill, ex-governor of Maine, was elected chairman of the Republican national committee to succeed Frank H. Hitchcock, now postmaster general. After Hitchcock's resignation was read and accepted Hill was chosen unanimously.

The committee appointed Senator Borah of Idaho, Victor Rosewater of Nebraska, William Ward of New York, John G. Capers of South Carolina and F. O. Lowden as a subcommittee on the call for the 1912 convention.

On a committee to devise rules and regulations for primaries in the District of Columbia, Committeemen Jackson of Maryland, Martin of Virginia and Beeber of the District of Columbia were named.

When former Senator Scott proposed the announcement of the committee on arrangements, Borah interposed objections as to the method of choosing them, but later withdrew his opposition.

Harry New of Indiana heads the committee on arrangements for the next Republican national convention. The southern states were given representation in the appointment of Committeeman Duncan of North Carolina. Other members of the committee are Mulvane, Kansas; Williams, Oregon; Rosewater, Nebraska; Vorys, Ohio, and Hill, Maine.

The loud Roosevelt talk failed to frighten President Taft from his trust and tariff program. The Sherman anti-trust law will be enforced as long as he is in the White House and it is on the statute books, and if his influence is strong enough to bring it about, the more obnoxious schedules of the present tariff law will be revised within the next five months.

There has been a lot of Roosevelt talk about the hotel that is headquarters for the Republican national committee. To the uninitiated this talk has been puzzling. The wise politicians have recognized the fact that it was a manufactured movement—manufactured for the purpose of influencing the president.

Outside of New York city and Cleveland no sections of the country have sent men here to talk up a Roosevelt movement. It is an interesting fact that William L. Ward, national committeeman for New York state; Charles F. Brocker, committeeman for Connecticut; Franklin Murphy, committeeman for New Jersey, and one or two other members of the organization have been lending encouragement to the Roosevelt talk.

A leading feature of this committee meeting is an utter lack of optimism with respect to next year's presidential campaign. In the exchange of views that has gone on continually since the committeemen came to town, there has been little encouragement for those Republicans who had hoped to hear at this meeting that the outlook for the Republican party in the nation is improving.

It would not be going beyond the bounds of truth to say that the private opinion of practically every member of the Republican national committee at this time is that unless the Republican party can "come out of the woods" it will lose the presidency next year.

FEMININE FANCIES

THINGS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

In this column we publish from day to day recipes and other notes especially interesting to women.

Cut them and paste in scrap book for reference.

IN GAY NEW YORK.

Horse Show and Opera Crowds—How They Look and What They Wear.

The city is at its gayest just now and Fifth Avenue which has a constantly increasing number of dainty shops outdoes in attraction the famous Rue de la Paix of Paris.

The crowds one sees on the Avenue, at the opera and at all the smaller affairs is well worth looking at from almost any point of view. The Horse Show that closed the season at the Garden a short time since was if anything more brilliant than any of its predecessors. Good taste was the rule in women's dress at both day and evening sessions, and though very costly outfits were worn, garishness, except in a few stray instances, was notably absent.

AT THE OPERA.

At the opera there have been an unusual number of red gowns worn, but as a rule the red material is thin, and draped over white so that its effect is softened. Red is undoubtedly the predominant color however in all its various shades, from Hunter's pink to the new Egyptian tone.

At the opening night of the Opera one distinguished leader of the inner circle wore not a single jewel with her dress of silver lace, in surroundings where strings of pearls, diamonds, rubies and emeralds flashed and sparkled in endless combination. Tiaras were more in evidence than at last year's opening night, but were not nearly so much worn as some years since when every woman seemed to aim at being a near-Duchess or Marchioness.

SCARF DRAPERIES.

Some of the prettiest evening and dinner gowns are evolved from a series of scarf draperies. There is a tight fitting messaline underdress, draped with scarfs wound about the skirt while the bodice will have a matching scarf draped about the shoulders in fichu gashion, or prolonged below the waist in sash effects. No end of bead fringes are used, and the scarfs are garnished with either printed, painted or embroidered designs. Sometimes all three methods are combined, and very up-to-date effects are secured where pretty bordered materials are more or less beaded, edged with narrow fringe to match, and then use in scarf style for draperies.

TOUCHES OF FUR.

Touches of fur, swansdown, or marabout lend character to many and otherwise too flat dress and hits of gold lace and garish trimmings would appear tawdry if used in the old way, are up-to-date and pretty, gleaming through a veiling of chiffon or net.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

DELICIOUS HOLIDAY MACAROONS.

ARE you fond of macaroons? Well, the little folks always are, and macaroons are cakes that will add to the luxury of any Christmas table. As nuts form the basis of macaroons, they are nutritious as well as delicious.

How to Make Them.

One recipe for preparing macaroons is as follows: Take one-half a pound of almonds. Soak them in boiling water until the skins rub off easily.

Then reduce them to a paste by pounding them in a mortar, using about a teaspoonful of rosewater to moisten them. Add to this about half a pound of sugar.

Beat two eggs until they are stiff. Stir in enough of the white of eggs with the almonds to form a paste.

Take flour on the hands and work the paste into cakes the size of the macaroons you buy. Place them on buttered paper laid on a pan. Put in a moderately hot oven and bake a few minutes.

Another Recipe.

One can also make good macaroons according to this recipe: Take one-half a pound of almonds. Blanch, dry and pound in a mortar with a little rosewater until they are a paste.

Take the whites of three eggs and beat them, stirring in half a teaspoonful of almond essence. Add to the eggs a coffee cupful of white sugar.

Then work in the almond paste, using about a tablespoonful of flour to give it consistency. Take a lump about the size of a walnut, flatten and place on a pan covered with buttered paper. Bake until they are a light yellow.

Inexpensive Macaroons.

Only an ounce of ground or grated almonds is required in this recipe. Take the white of one egg to which has been added about a tablespoonful of milk. Moisten the almonds with rosewater and pound to a paste in a mortar. Add to the beaten eggs and milk their weight in powdered sugar, then stirring the almond paste mixed with about two ounces of sifted flour. Bake on buttered paper in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

With Cocoanut.

For cocoanut macaroons take a quarter of a pound of shredded cocoanut, a quarter of a pound of powdered sugar and the whites of two eggs. Proceed as for almond macaroons.

A dessert may be made from an ordinary rich boiled custard with the addition of ground macaroons. Add to the uncooked custard six ground macaroons. Cook the macaroons in the custard, add a light flavoring of vanilla and when it is cold turn a tablespoonful of it into a custard glass, put in a couple of cherries or nut meats, fill the glass more than half full with the custard and then top it with whipped cream.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Variety Cake. Cream one cup of butter, add two cups of sugar and beat. Add the yolks of five eggs beaten until light colored, one cup of milk, three and one-half cups of flour sifted with five level teaspoons of baking powder. Flavor with a teaspoon of any flavoring preferred and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs.

Creamed Walnuts. White of one egg, two teaspoons cold water, three-fourths teaspoon vanilla, confectioners' sugar, English walnuts. Beat together the egg, water and vanilla, and add gradually enough sugar to make the mixture stiff enough to mould. Shape it in balls, flatten and place the half of a walnut on each side.

Fruit Filling for Layer Cake. Take four tablespoonfuls of very fine chopped citron, four tablespoonfuls of finely chopped raisins (seeded), half a cup of blanched almonds, chopped fine, and a quarter of a pound of finely chopped figs. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, adding half a cup of sugar, then mix in the chopped ingredients. Put it between the layers of cake while the cake is very hot, so that the egg may cook a little. This filling is delicious.

Roasted Stuffed Leg of Pork. Get your meat cutter to bone the leg for you and stuff it with an onion stuffing. Boil your onions—the quantity depends upon the size of the leg—until nearly done, take them up and drain well, now chop them and add butter, sage, pepper and salt to taste. To a quart of the prepared onions allow one-half cup of stale, dry bread crumbs. Put the stuffing into the leg where the bone was taken out and sew up. Score the outside with a sharp knife in squares, season well with salt and pepper, sprinkle with a generous handful of dried crumbs and bake until a nice golden color.

THE VOTE-BUYING PROBE

New Bedford Men Are Taken Into Custody by State Police

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 13.—The first decisive step against the corrupt vote buying ring of this city was taken last night when state police officers arrested George Lawton and Antone Sylvia, on charges of a conspiracy to purchase votes at the last state election.

A third man, William B. Foster, was arrested about midnight on the charge of having promised money to a voter at the state election.

Although secrecy was observed by State Inspectors Flynn and Daly in securing the warrants and making the arrests, the news spread like wildfire.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Prevent Washday Smells.

Jones—"Holy smoke! Is some one burning glue in the kitchen?"

Mrs. Jones—"No, Theodore. It's washday you know, and what you smell is the suds-steam from the washboiler."

Anty Drudge—"Why don't you use Fels-Naptha and do away with the washboiler? Then there will be no steam to permeate the whole house every washday."

The Different Kind of Soap. That, in a nutshell, is Fels-Naptha.

Different—because Fels-Naptha is more than a soap—it is a different way of washing.

Different—because Fels-Naptha gets the wash ready for the line in about half the time of any other soap.

Different—because Fels-Naptha itself does the work of loosening the dirt from the fabric, which every other soap leaves to you to do with the washboard.

Different—because with Fels-Naptha there's no backache: no need for long bending over the tub, as with other soaps.

Different—because Fels-Naptha saves the clothes: (1) from weakening of the fibre by heat; (2) from the wear of hard rubbing.

Different—because Fels-Naptha actually does in cool or lukewarm water what the best other soaps will not do even in scalding hot water.

Follow directions on the red and green wrapper, summer or winter.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

News, as usual, Young brought—news of drinking at Guvutu, where the men boasted that they drank between drinks; news that the Matambo had gone on a reef in the Shortlands and would be laid off one run for repairs.

"That means five weeks more before you can sail for Sydney," Sheldon said to Joan.

"And that we are losing precious time," she added ruefully.

"If you want to go to Sydney the Upolu sails from Tulagi tomorrow afternoon," Young said, "and you can catch her as late as 5 tomorrow afternoon—at least so her first officer told me."

"But I've got to go to Guvutu first." Joan looked at the men with a whimsical expression. "I've some shopping to do. I can't wear these Berande curtains into Sydney. I must buy cloth at Guvutu and make myself a dress during the voyage down. I'll start immediately—in an hour. Lalaperu, you bring 'm one fella Adamu Adam along me. Tell 'm that fella Ornifiri make m' kai-kai take along whaleboat." She rose to her feet, looking at Sheldon. "And you, please, have the boys carry down the whaleboat—my boat, you know. I'll be off in an hour."

"I'll go over with you," Sheldon announced.

"Let me run you over in the Minerva," said Young.

She shook her head laughingly.

"I'm going in the whaleboat. You, Mr. Sheldon, as my partner, I cannot permit to desert Berande and your work out of a mistaken notion of courtesy. And as for you, Captain Young, you know very well that you just left Guvutu this morning, that you are bound for Marau and that you said yourself that in two hours you are getting under way again."

"But may I not see you safely across?" Tudor asked, a pleading note in his voice that rasped on Sheldon's nerves.

"No, no, and again no!" she cried. "You've all got your work to do, and so have I. I came to the Solomons to work, not to be escorted about like a doll. For that matter, here's my escort, and there are seven more like him."

Adamu Adam stood beside her, towering above her, as he towered above the three white men.

"We start in an hour in the whaleboat for Guvutu, big brother," Joan said to him. "Tell your brothers, all of them, so that they can get ready. We catch the Upolu for Sydney. Leave the guns behind. Turn them over to Mr. Sheldon. We won't need them."

"If you are really bent upon going"— Sheldon began.

"That's settled long ago," she answered shortly. "I'm going to pack now."

An hour later the three men had shaken hands with Joan down on the beach. She gave the signal, and the boat shoved off, six men at the oars, the seventh man for'ard and Adamu Adam at the steering sweep. Joan was standing up in the stern sheets reiterating her goodbys, a slim figure of a woman in the tight fitting jacket she had worn ashore from the wreck, the long barreled Colt's revolver hanging from the loose belt around her waist, her clear cut face like a boy's under the Stetson hat that failed to conceal the heavy masses of hair beneath.

"You'd better get into shelter," she called to them. "There's a big squall coming, and I hope you've got plenty of chain out, Captain Young. Goodby! Goodby, everybody!"

Her last words came out of the darkness, which wrapped itself solidly about the boat. Yet they continued to stare into the blackness in the direction in which the boat had disappeared, listening to the steady click of the oars in the rowlocks until it faded away and ceased.

"She is only a girl," Christian Young said with slow solemnity. The discovery seemed to have been made on the spur of the moment. "She is only a girl," he repeated with greater solemnity.

"A dashed pretty one and a good traveler," Tudor laughed. "She certainly has spunk, eh, Sheldon?"

"Yes, she is brave." was the reluctant answer, for Sheldon did not feel disposed to talk about her.

They gained the veranda, where they sat in silence over their whisky, each man staring straight out to sea, where the wildly swinging riding light of the Minerva could be seen in the lulls of the driving rain.

An hour later Christian Young stood up, knocked out his pipe and prepared to go aboard and get under way.

"She's all right," he said, apropos of nothing spoken and yet distinctly relevant to what was in each of their minds. "She's got a good boat's crew, and she's a sailor herself. With this favoring bit of breeze she has sail on already, and she'll make Guvutu by daylight. Good night."

"I guess I'll turn in, old man," Tudor said, rising and placing his glass on the table. "I'll start the first thing in the morning. It's been disgraceful the way I've been hanging on here. Good night."

Sheldon, sitting on alone, wondered if the other man would have decided to pull out in the morning had Joan not sailed away. Well, there was one bit of consolation in it—Joan had certainly lingered at Berande for no man, not even Tudor. It was not very flattering, but what could any man count in her eyes when a schooner waiting to be bought in Sydney was in the wind? What a creature! What a creature!

Berande was a lonely place to Sheldon in the days that followed. In the morning after Joan's departure he had seen Tudor's expedition off on its way up the Balesuna, in the late afternoon through his telescope he had seen the smoke of the Upolu that was bearing Joan away to Sydney, and in the evening he found himself standing staring at the nail upon which from the first she had hung her Stetson hat and her revolver belt.

Why should he care for her? he demanded of himself angrily. Never had he encountered one who had so thoroughly irritated him, rasped his feelings, smashed his conventions and violated nearly every attribute of what had been his ideal of woman. But he loved her. That was the point of it all, and he did not try to evade it. He was not sorry that it was so. He loved her. That was the overwhelming, astounding fact.

Once again he discovered a big enthusiasm for Berande. It must succeed not merely because Joan was a partner in it, but because he wanted to make that partnership permanently binding. Three more years and the plantation would be a splendid paying investment. They could then take yearly trips to Australia and oftener, and an occasional run home to England—or Hawaii—would come as a matter of course.

He undertook more clearing of bush, and clearing and planting went on under his personal supervision at a faster pace than ever before. He experimented with premiums for extra work performed by the black boys and yearned continually for more of them to put to work. Blacks he must have, and if Joan were fortunate in getting a schooner three months at least must elapse before the first recruits could be landed on Berande.

PRICE OF GAS WILL BE REDUCED

pense and Construction Charges shows that the total amount expended for mains since the present owners took possession is $1,362.40.

In 1889 the number of meters in use was 338, valued at $500.00. In 1900 the reports show 469 meters in use valued at $3778.91, an increase in value of $3278.91 for an increase of 131 in the number of meters in use. The most remarkable item of all, however, is the increase in notes payable.

On June 30, 1889, notes payable were returned at $12,500.00. On June 30, 1900 they stood at $38,500, an increase of $26,000.00, whereas the table of "Sunday Expense and Construction Charges" made up by the Auditor of the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners a copy of which is filed herewith shows that the total expenditure for maintenance and development of the plant during the administration of the present owners has been but $3,753.61, while they have taken out in interest and general salaries a sum exceeding $42,000.00. The conclusion is obvious. The citizens of Quincy, by paying an exorbitant price for gas, are carrying the burden of a large interest bearing debt which is not represented in the plant, and will doubtless be expected to retire this debt to the manifest advantage of the present owners of the company who are also the holders of the notes.

We now come to the situation under the present Citizens' Gas Light Co., and submit the following:

Miles of mains laid, 82 1-2. The consumption in the last fiscal year, sixty one million feet. The company claimed loss in three years, $17,282.50. Amount invested, $490,000. They claim that the ten cents reduction in the price of gas was a saving to the consumers last year of $6,200.

Asked why when $49,000 had been expended in 1906, $350,000 in stock was authorized but said stock was not issued then and was not issued until 1910 when a dividend was declared. Answer, preferred to raise on notes and charge interest.

Question, from whom money was borrowed. Answer, much of it from Mass. Gas Co.

Question, how the forty-five cents charged the Citizens Gas Light Co., of Quincy compared with other places. Answer, a list presented showed from thirty cents per thousand up to in one case an accomodation service at forty seven cents.

Your committee find seven stockholders outside of the Mass. Gas Co. as follows:—

Sears	Quincy	5 shares
Burgin	Quincy	2 "
Richards		5 "
French		5 "
Hunt		2 "
Grant		3 "
Page		3 "
Mass. Gas Co.		3805 "
Total		3830 "

The case in brief submitted to the president of the Consolidated Gas Co. and the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners follows:

Are the operating charges reasonable?

Should the consumer be charged depreciation on a plant in course of construction?

How much has been expended in constructing the 82 1-2 miles of mains laid in Quincy since starting here?

Is it not a fact that the consumers having paid, on interest, in five years sixty-four thousand seven hundred and seventy-two dollars.

Int.	$64,772
and depreciation charges of	9,170
in 5 years making a total of	73,942
also paid a dividend of	7,660
totaling	81,602

and given the privilege of extending a plant which the representative of the Gas Co, frankly admitted was a better field than Milton where they received from the start 80 cent gas.

This admitted, and the fact that the people of Quincy having in five years contributed to this company about $98,000 more than the people of Milton would pay for the same service, we feel it our duty to insist that having established the business now on a paying basis, that the people we represent are now entitled to similar rates, and we have no doubt the Gas Co. on extra consumption will lose nothing by making voluntary concessions in view of the fact also that the people of Quincy have been very fair in the matter.

The following figures show what Quincy consumers have paid more than Milton would pay for the same service in five years from 1906 to 1910 inclusive:

1906 excess over 80 cents	$11,904
1907 excess over 80 cents	11,338
1908 excess over 80 cents	17,434
1909 excess over 80 cents	24,909
1910 excess over 80 cents	32,339
Total excess	$97,924

Table interest charged of consumers in Quincy on notes covering construction costs.

Interest	1906	$2,503
"	1907	8,398
"	1908	18,010
"	1909	19,967
"	1910	15,894
		$64,772

Table of depreciation charges charged consumers in Quincy evidently to cover original purchase.

Depreciation	1906	$500
"	1907	2,905
"	1908	1,730
"	1909	999
"	1910	3,036
		$9,170

We claim to have paid running expenses, paid interest on a plant in course of construction, which, now extended, will increase its business automatically from the fact that stock which should logically have been issued in 1906 was not issued until 1910. In the meantime the consumer paid the freight.

Operating	1906	$18,713
"	1907	22,538
"	1908	28,662
"	1909	37,652
"	1910	47,767

In response to the work performed and the figures submitted your committee submit the following report from the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners as follows:

December 8, 1911.

Mr. John R. Richards, Chairman,
City Council Committee,
Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—

I have to advise you that, in accordance with the understanding between your Committee and this Board, we have conferred with the representative of the Citizens' Gas Light Company relative to a reduction in the price of gas and have now received the written assurance of the company that on Mar. 1, 1912, the maximum net price wil be reduced from $1.40 to $1.30 a thousand feet.

We understand also from the company that it intends to make other reductions whenever a further increase in output will enable it to do so.

Very truly yours
F. E. Barker, Chairman.

DEATH CHAIR FOR WOLTER

Judgment of First Degree Murder Affirmed by Court of Appeals

Albany, Dec. 13.—Albert W. Wolter, convicted of the murder of Ruth Wheeler, a 15-year-old stenographer, in New York city on March 24, must pay the death penalty. The court of appeals affirmed the judgment of conviction of murder in the first degree.

The charred body of the Wheeler girl was found on a fire-escape outside of Wolter's flat, where she had gone in search of employment as a stenographer, the day after the murder. Wolter's arrest followed and evidence produced at the trial was to the effect that he had strangled the girl in attempting to assault her and then partly burned her body in the fireplace.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

A most successful social of the East Norfolk Union of Christian Endeavor took place in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church on Tuesday evening, a large audience being present from Quincy, Atlantic, Milton and other places to enjoy the fine program afforded.

The program opened with a piano duet by Miss Joseph Walther and Mrs. Charles M. Roach followed by vocal solos by Miss Ruth L. Hardy, "L'Henre Exquese" and "A Rose Table" were the offering of the oloist.

Miss Thornton of Boston gave two readings entitled "At the ribbon counter" and "The little tin soldier." Both were well received.

A quartet consisting of William Bullock, Edward Bullock, Arthur Bullock and Charles Wade were pleasing in "A hundred fathoms deep" and "How can I leave you."

A reading "In the earthquake zone" a tale of gossip was followed by "Settin' round the fire" and "Nellie was a lady" by the quartet.

Two solos "Star of the desert" and "Three for Jack" by William Bullock, accompanied by Edward Bullock were sung and a piano duet by Mrs. Walther and Mrs. Roach brought the program to an end.

At the roll call which followed, the society from the Atlantic Memorial church was found to have the surprising result of 30 present out of a membership of 32.

To them the attendance banner was awarded amid rounds of applause. Coming second was the Wollaston Congregational society with 14 out of 18 present.

For the first time Chester A. Boynton presided in his new office of president. At a recent meeting Chas. M. Roach was elected vice president.

The evening closed with a social hour and the serving of refreshments. Much credit for the success of the social is due to the local entertainment committee composed of William Bullock, Mrs. Charles M. Roach, Miss Eleanor- Dunn, Miss Grace Scher merhorn, E. C. Roberts and Revere Dresser.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Despite the fact that no basket ball will be played this season in any of the Boston High schools, Manager Roland Estey, of the local High combination, has arranged a fine schedule of games to date, and when the dates that are still pending are decided upon, Quincy High shall have had every opportunity to display its ability in this department of athletics. A fine list of candidates is on hand at the school, from which to choose a fast aggregation, and while none of last year's star players will appear in the lineup, the students of Quincy High are eagerly looking forward to a most successful season.

Coach Arthur Staff will have charge of the squad, and if his work with the football aggregation can be taken as any criterion it is safe to say that he local quintet will rank well among the interscholastic teams when the season is at an end. A novel method has been introduced in selecting the players for the high school team. All of the classes were represented by baskt ball teams. The teams came together in the gymnasium yesterday, with teh result that the Juniors defeated the Sophomores to the tune of 26 to 17, while the Sophomores triumphed over the Freshmen by the score of 26 to 12. The final game will be played tomorrow and announcement will be made of those who will start practise for the regular High school team.

The teams were comprised of the following players: Freshman—Elkins, Larkin, forwards, Brown; centre, Hadlock and Fowler, backs.

Sophomore—Finlay, Jenkins, forwards, Bullock, centre, Young and Holmes, backs.

Junior—Estey, Larkin, Prout, forwards, Trask, centre, Crane, Baird, Beal and Bullock, backs.

Senior—Chapman, Johnson, Prout, Sprague, forwards, McDonald, centre Hall, Johnson and Blackmur, backs.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Many Warm Contests In Massachusetts Cities

NO TURNOVERS ON LICENSE

Worcester, However, Goes Wet by Greatest Majority—Disorder In Chelsea, Where New Charter Porvisions Are Disobeyed—Chicopee Five-Cornered Fight Won by Rivers by Twenty-Three Votes—Results In Other Places

Boston, Dec. 13.—Three, four and five cornered contests for mayor marked the election in a majority of the fifteen Massachusetts cities where balloting took place yesterday. Three of the cities, Beverly, Lynn and Medford, did not elect a mayor, and in all of the other twelve candidates were numerous.

In Chicopee and Newburyport five sought to be chief executive; in Malden four; in Worcester, Salem, Pittsfield and Woburn three; and in Everett, Newton, Melrose, Somerville and Chelsea there were two candidates each.

Following is the wet and dry vote of the fifteen cities:

	1911.		1910.
	Yes.	No.	Yes.	No.
Beverly	1042	1501	1087	1954
Chelsea	2512	1846	2236	1781
Chicopee	1484	1195	1320	979
Everett	1005	2620	814	1886
Lynn	7289	7685	7070	7262
Malden	1904	3746	1667	3148
Medford	470	1000	631	1384
Melrose	553	1955	408	1279
Newburyport	1486	1524	1453	1497
Newton	1080	4042	802	1733
Pittsfield	2997	2351
Salem	3424	3698	3180	3717
Somerville	2150	4741	1544	3968
Woburn	1320	1657	1196	1695
Worcester	13836	8002	12846	8519

In every case where mayors sought re-election they were successful.

James H. Malone defeated George W. Ford at the most bitter city election in the history of Chelsea by a majority of 791 in a total of 4457 votes cast in the election for mayor, and the city went wet. Malone received 2525 votes and Ford got 1734. There were 198 blanks cast for the head of the ticket. Scenes of wild disorder attended the election.

Under the charter, there is no political designation in Chelsea, and although the charter strictly prohibits the use of money or the hiring of vehicles, there were a score of automobiles and carriages bringing voters to the polls during the day.

After four years of ruling by Republican Mayor Logan, the voters of Worcester elected D. F. O'Connell, Democratic candidate, to the office of mayor by a majority of 1983, while the yes voters outdid the no voters 13,536 to 8002, making a difference of 5534, the largest in the history of the city.

One of the most interesting of Salem's many keenly contested fights for mayor was won by Rufus P. Adams, who secured re-election, vanquishing two opponents.

Newburyport has been dry for five years and a strenuous effort was made to swing it over. Instead the voters again went on record in favor of no-license. Robert E. Burke was re-elected mayor.

Lynn will continue in the dry column another year, the city having voted for the fifth consecutive time against the legalized sale of intoxicating liquors.

Melrose chose Charles E. French, president of the board of aldermen, to be mayor, the defeated candidate being Thomas H. Gilman.

Twenty-three votes gave the mayoralty election to Frank A. Rivers, Independent, in a five-sided contest at Chicopee.

Mayor Helton B. Miller of Pittsfield, Republican, won re-election in a three-cornered contest by sixty votes. The city council will be Democratic, 12 to 9.

George L. Farrell was elected mayor of Malden from a field of four candidates.

The voters of Woburn re-elected Mayor Murray, Democrat, by a plurality of nearly 200 votes in spite of the fact that there was a three-cornered fight on.

James H. Chambers was elected mayor of Everett, defeating Thomas J. Huey. Mayor Wasgatt was not a candidate for re-election, but instead ran for the school committee, defeating J. J. Irwin, his opponent, 2541 to 1224.

Mayor Charles A. Burns was successful in his fight for re-election at Somerville.

On the license question Medford stood firm against the saloon, as usual.

Aldermanic contests furnished the only interest in the Beverly city election.

Mayor Charles E. Hatfield of Newton, chairman of the Republican state committee, was returned to office for another two-year term by the voters of that city after one of the most strenuous contests yet known in the Garden City.

WOLLASTON GLEE CLUB MAKES NEW STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE IN LOCAL MUSICAL CIRCLES

Large Audience Enjoys Delightful Concert In Congregational Church

Edward E. Bullock, Tenor, In Fine Voice

Former successes are forgotten. Past triumphs have faded away in the dim horizon before a new era of musical excellence established by the Wollaston Glee rlub Wednesday evening.

On the ever ascending plain traversed by the club, the summit must be reached and the hundreds that attended the concert in the Wollaston Congregational church went away feeling they had seen a new standard established for Quincy musical endeavor.

Not only was the Glee club at its best and Edward E. Bullock, its tenor soloist in fine form, but to cap the climax was the presence of Stephen S. Townsend, without doubt the finest soloist ever heard in Quincy and oft heralded as America's leading baritone.

His powerful voice not only came forth true and clear but his interpretive feeling as evidenced by his tone in the delicate shadings of the softer portions showed the finesse of a master.

Quality, harmony and rythm prevailed throughout a well balanced program with an attractive unity of choruses and solo parts opening with an inspiring chorus and closing with an operatic masterpiece.

Conductor Crowley in common with the music loving public has the right to feel infinitely pleased that under his charge the chorus has so developed as to attract to its concerts the vast audiences that assemble and command the assistanhe of artists of ability and note.

As a groundwork the part of the alcompanist, William E. Weston must not be omitted. His ready response to the will of the director in the choruses made for stability and strength. His accompaniment of the solos was especially noticeable where his ability to divine the psychological moment for either stress or cessation added greatly to their success.

The opening chorus of "Ossian" by J. Beschnitt composing solos by Messrs Capen and Bates and quartet work by Messrs Mann, Wiley, Van-Buskirk and Falconer with a variety of volume and tone was pleasing.

The club made a fine appearance and were under perfect control of their conductor John A. Crowley.

Stephen S. Townsend, the premier attraction of the evening was given a hearty reception and following his translation of the aria "Vision Fugitive" by Massenet was greeted with an ovation. He responded with "The charms of Polly Willis," a lively ditty by Arme.

"! Saving Victim" a chorus by Counod with organ accompaniment was marked for strength and fullness of tone. It was repeated in response to a hearty encore.

That Edward E. Bullock, Wollaston's own tenor, has not lost any of his great popularity was manifest by the applause that greeted him. His solo "Hear my cry, O Lord" by Wooler was followed by a high plaintive "Serenade" by Neidlinger. Absolute silence followed this for a second and then an outburst of plandits.

"Lochinvar" by the chorus with Mr. Townsend as soloist closed the first half of the program. The vibratory strains of the solo and the spirited freedom of the chorus lead to a perfect furor of appreciation that demanded its repetition.

"Some reckon time by stars" a chorus by Rogers opened part second, being followed by Mr. Townsend. His offering this time was a group of songs all of which were well received. They included: "Passing by" by Purcell, "Requiem" by Foote, "Rolling down to Rio" by German, "Now sleeps the crimson petal" by Quilter, "It is not always May" by Gounod, and "O this is my departing time" by Fisher.

"Is John Smith within," a medley of humorous trend, preceded the closing success of the evening "Song of the Toreador" and "Carmen" with solo by Mr. Townsend.

The familiar strains splendidly sung served as a fitting conclusion for the most successful musical attempt Wollaston has known.

Enthusiastic Meeting of A. O. H. Held Wednesday Evening

DONATION FOR MEMORIAL

The annual meeting of Division 5 A. O. H., was held Wednesday evening. The meeting was largely attended and the members were very enthusiastic. At the close, Rev. T. C. Martin, pastor of the church exhibited some dandelions which he gathered Tuesday, something unusual for this time of year.

20 CANDIDATES ADMITTED TO MEMBERSHIP

At Special Meeting of Loyal Order of Moose

OFFICERS ELECTED

A special meeting of the members of the Quincy lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, was held in Greenleaf hall, Wednesday evening, for the purpose of filling vacancies among the list of officers. Through some technicality at the election held the week previous, another ballot was required for the office of dictator, which resulted in the election of Albert Williams, who also received the highest number of votes at the previous meeting. For the office of vice-dictator and secretary, no one had a majority vote at the former meeting held for elections and as a result, the elections to these offices were in order.

Joseph Halter was elected vice-dictator, while Edward J. Fegan was chosen secretary. The former is a well known clothing salesman and is connected with the Norfolk Clothing Company of this city. The newly appointed secretary is widely known in local circles and is an attorney of high repute.

The meeting was largely attended and twenty candidates were admitted to membership.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL OF Wm. REYNOLDS

The funeral of William Reynolds, one of Quincy's well known granite manufacturers, was held Wednesday afternoon from his late home on Glencoe place. The service was conducted by Rev. James Matheson, of the Water street Presbyterian church and was largely attended. A large delegation of Clan McGregor, O. S. C., as well as a delegation from the Granite Manufacturers' Association were among those present. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, the remains being escorted to the cemetery by Clan McGregor, who performed their burial service at the grave.

CONTEST OVER PRESIDENCY

Of Houghs Neck Associates Takes Place Next Meeting

MR. WALL TO RETIRE

A regular meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates, took place in Associates' Hall, Wednesday evening, and was attended by a large number. James E. Wall, president of the organization, was in the chair and the nomination of officers for the coming year consumed the greater part of the evening. Nominations were placed for various offices in the organization.

The election will take place at the next meeting and the fight for the presidency, which is about to be made vacant by Mr. Wall, will resolve into a contest between Thomas F. Phillips and Henry W. French. Mr. French was defeated for the office last year by the present incumbent. Mr. Phillips is a well known real estate dealer and has frequently taken part in various measures pertaining to the interests of the Houghs Neck section.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a collation was served and an entertainment furnished by the different members, added to the enjoyment of the occasion. The annual banquet and installation of officers will take place on New Year's night.

CITY CLERK WILL SPEAK.

City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray, is to give a talk tonight, before the Ward Four Improvement association on the duties of the City Clerk. The ordinary layman is unfamiliar with the many duties that devolve upon a City Clerk and the talk should be an interesting one.

Farewell Party Tendered Edward Meekin Wednesday Night

LEAVES FOR SCOTLAND

"Auld Lang Syne" and "Will Ye No Come Back Again," songs that will ever be dear to Edward Meekin, of Centre street, brought to a close a delightful farewell party given in his honor, Wednesday evening.

The affair came as a complete surprise to Mr. Meekin and was attended by twenty-five friends and fellow teachers of the First Presbyterian church Bible school, it was given at the home of Miss Michael.

A beautiful fountain pen, representing the high esteem in which the honored one is held, was presented in behalf of those present by George Wilson, who in a neat speech wished a bon-voyage and the request to use the pen and think of the many good times he had while at Quincy. Mr. Meekin leaves for Scotland, his native land, Friday.

During the evening, games were played, Miss Minnie Miller rendered solos and Mr. Meekin gave a recitation.

Refreshments were served and at a late hour the guests departed after having a most enjoyable evening.

Among those present were: Edith Elrick, Helen Elrick, Minner Miller, Nettie Miller, Susan Tytler, Lillian McIntosh, Margaret McIntosh, Annie Walker, Jennie Beer, Mary Morrison, Margaret Morrison, Belle Michael, Margaret Michael, Jennie Norrie, Georgie Michael, John Rashleigh, George Wilson, John McLay, Edward Meekin, Alex. —Whether waterway improvements henceforth are financed by federal bonds, federal appropriation or state bonds, the essential thing is to secure such improvements against restricting ownership. The next half century is bound to see a great utilization of waterways as the modern development of the transportation scheme of the country. The time to conserve the welfare of the public is in the initial stages.—Boston Record.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Justice Hughes declines to have his name used for president, but as he forgot to get it copyrighted some newspapers keep on printing it.

Dynamiting used to be reckoned one of our safest sports, but under the new Burns rules it may become as dangerous as foot ball.

Couldn't the Gas Co., cut off another five cents on the proposed reduction of gas? A dollar and a quarter seems a lot cheaper than $1.30, in fact quite a bargain on present rates.

A woman's Hall of Fame has been made up by the Illinois Equal Rights Association, and we fail to find a single dressmaker or milliner in the bunch.

California will probably make women eligible to any of their elective offices. This is simply extending their scope as family governors to a state wide scale.

President Taft is sending in messages on the serial story plan, but we must remind him that eight volume novels are no longer included among the Six Best Sellers.

The dollar a day pension bill is all right, but somewhat too limited. We favor extending it to heroes of peace as well as war, including police, firemen, newspaper workers, and any man who is struggling to support a family under the present cost of living.

Although the new chains around First church look much better and will keep people from crossing the grass, there are those who think there could be still another improvement and that is to remove a post or two at each walk. They were placed near together in old times to keep out straying cattle but that reason does not exist now. As going through this church yard has become as common a matter as walking along any of our sidewalks, pedestrians think their comfort should be looked after. Squeezing between the posts is uncomfortable, especially so to ladies in nice gowns or those carrying bags or bundles and in wet weather is particularly disagreeable even to church attendants.

HOT SHOT FROM BARRE.

Our esteemed friend, Mr. Langley, editor of the Barre Times, presents us with a red hot "broadside" for our apology for the local granite firms in not receiving a part of the immense contract for the government, representing thousands of dollars.

The Vermonter claims that shipping facilities had nothing whatever to do with this case--backing his argument with the statement that Quincy is far better off than Barre. He seems to think that it was merely a case of get out and hustle, a sort of "Johnny on the spot" affair. For an additional posy in the pretty little bouquet is added, "this was not one of the cases where everything comes to him who waits."

Whatever was the cause of losing the good, big order, the opinion from a competing district is surely worthy of consideration.

DEATH IN COAL MINES.

The cost in human suffering of the power for our mills and winter heat for homes, was again brought home by the terrible accident in a coal mine near Briceville, Tenn.

In the footsteps of every worker who enters the darkness of our coal mines, dodging this way and that in the grisly shadows cast by his flickering lamp, there follows the specter of death. Yet to the miner it is all in the day's work.

It is not so to the little wife on the hillside. In the background of every air castle she builds for a better life for her children, there looms the dread shadow of the orphan asylum.

American born men are getting out of our mines. It is not merely that our safety appliances are not good, but that the mines are filling up with alien employes who understand no English, and who seem to lack practical judgment.

Every step taken by a man amid these underground perils calls for that practical hard headed comprehension of physical strains and forces which is the inheritance of most Americans, descended from men who have long pioneered among the powers of nature.

Every woman who employs servants who do not speak our language knows the utter confusion wrought in the home by non-English speaking domestics. If she says "Don't sweep the parlor," instead of "No sweep the parlor," the maid usually fails to catch the negative in the order, and thinks it is a command that she shall sweep the parlor.

How infinitely worse is the situation when the tools are kerosene and gun powder instead of brooms and dust cloths!

American coal mines kill and injure annually about 10,000 men. The record is about three times as bad as in European mines.

The comparative safety across the water is reached by many expedients which our happy go lucky American temperament should require. The European mines limit the nature of explosives, the amount of a charge, they provide separate ventilating shafts, they have emergency stations underground with special access to the upper air. They have otufits for relief parties by which the rescuer breathes from tanks of compressed oxygen, so that he can get the victims out before suffocation takes place. There are many other devices.

THOMAS BALL.

Thomas Ball, the famous painter and sculptor, died Monday at the home of his son-in-law, William Couper of Montclair, N. J. The funeral services were held on Tuesday and the body will be taken to Florence, Italy, for interment. He was born in Charlestown, June 3, 1819, the son of Thomas and Elizabeth Hall Ball. The father was a painter by trade and he encouraged in his son the characteristics and inclinations which afterwards determined the life work of the man. At an early age the boy was obliged to give up his schooling and go to work on account of the death of his father. He was able to secure a position in the old Museum and here surrounded by the beautiful paintings, he was entirely happy. He began to make miniatures in oil. Later he made life size portraits, one of his mother gaining the first prize at an exhibition.

He was at this time a member of the Handel and Haydn society and was the original Elijah in America. His love of music continued through life and he achieved much success as a vocalist.

In 1851 he gave up painting and became deeply interested in modeling, adopting it as his profession. His most famous paintings were "Christ in the Temple with the Doctors" and "Christ Chiding Martha." His first successful bust was of Jenny Lind, this was followed by one of Daniel Webster.

In 1854 he married Miss Nellie Wild of Boston and they located in Florence where he was associated with Hiram Powers, the Brownings and others famous in art and literature.

The equestrain statue of Washington in the Public Garden, Boston, is probably his greatest work of art. This was the result of three year's work and it was unveiled in the gardens Jan. 29, 1869. He filled meantime many orders for busts of statesmen, poets and authors in Europe and America. In 1897 he came to America to reside perfmanently. Among his many celebrated works were "Signing of the Declaration of Independence," "St. John, the Evangelist," pronounced by some authorities to be his most ideal production, and busts of Charles Sumner, Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson, P. T. Barnum and countless others. Dartmouth college conferred upon him the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

In 1891 Mr. Ball published an autobiography which he confined largely to the members of his immediate family. He was the last of his generation but he was survived by his daughter and by two nieces and four nephews. One of the latter is Willie A. Newcomb of 37 Sherbrooke avenue, Braintree, who is quite naturally very proud of his distinguished uncle's career.

Mr. Newcomb has lived in Braintree for eleven years and is employed as shoe inspector at the Williams Kneeland factory. He is a member of the Crescent lodge No 82 I. O. O. F. of East Weymouth, is a charter member of Steadfast Rebekah lodge No. 98 of East Weymouth and of Wompatuck encampment of East Weymouth.

NO LICENSE LEAGUE IS REJOICING

Over Vote Polled In Various Cities Tuesday

MR. KING'S REMARKS

Delcevare King, chairman of the Massachusetts No License league, gives the sentiments of the state organization over the result of the license vote in various cities, Tuesday, on the following statement:—

"We are profoundly gratified at the result. To have all four cities—Lynn, Newburyport, Salem and Woburn—stay no-license, is more than we dared hope.

"Lynn, which prior to 1906, had license for 11 years, and only once in its history two no-license years in succession, has now voted no for the fifth successive time.

"Newburyport, which prior to 1906, never had two no-license years in succession, has now voted no for the sixth successive time. Salem which since 1898 has not had three no-license years in succession has now voted no for the third successive time.

"Woburn, which prior to 1906 never had two no-license years in succession, has now voted No for the fifth successive time.

"Lynn, Newburyport and Woburn, which prior to 1906 were definitely license cities with a very occasional no-license year, have now become definite no-license cities.

"The winning thus of these three cities is without parallel. Thus there will continue to be four cities in Massachusetts of over 50,000 inhabitants without saloons, the only four instances in all the world of cities of this size where the voters of the cities themselves have voted out the saloon.

"There are cities of this size under prohibition,but that is by a State majority and not a local majority."

PERFECT STEEL BALLS.

They Have Never Yet Been Made, Even In the Laboratory.

One of the needs of the day is a perfectly spherical steel ball, and yet it has never been made even in the laboratory, much less in the shop for commercial uses. When we consider the importance of ball bearings for automobiles, motorcycles and other machinery the imperfections in steel balls must appeal to all as of the greatest moment. Of course we make pretty good steel balls, which could not have been manufactured a few years ago. So far as the eye can discern, they are perfectly spherical, too, and ordinary measuring instruments will not be able to detect any difference in them, but nevertheless they are not perfectly spherical.

A steel ball for automobile bearings must be perfect within .0001 inch, and they are made even more perfect than this, but mathematical perfection in this respect seems to be almost as illusive as squaring the circle or discovering the perpetual motion machine.

When the steel ball was first used in the bearings of bicycles it was a very imperfect sphere. It was not called upon to bear any great load, and the velocity was not great. At the best the load on it was not more than 200 pounds, and at the rate of sixty miles an hour the revolutions were not more than 720 per minute. Compare that with the load and velocity of the modern ball bearings of automobiles. Frequently the load approximates a thousand pounds and the velocity is anywhere from 800 to 1,200 revolutions. The small steel balls must take the maximum load of the car and pass it on to others without binding or catching. A slight imperfection in any one ball would cause trouble. In fact, it is impossible to use balls with any appreciable variation in size from one another, and the more nearly round they are the better the results.

Steel balls are not only made more perfect in shape than ever before, but they are harder and tougher. As there is a tendency to flake, only special steels can be used in their manufacture, and these tough, hard steels are all the more difficult to work with to secure perfect roundness. The chrome steel, of which most balls for bearings are made, is one of the most difficult of steels to cut or shape, and the work of handling it has developed special tools and machines made of even harder material.

While we have not yet made the perfectly spherical steel ball and perhaps may never succeed, the point of perfection reached is little short of wonderful. The approximately perfect steel ball is a matter of vital importance wherever machines and machinery are made and used. The application of the ball bearing system is extended to new lines of industrial use each year, and builders of all kinds of apparatus are taking advantage of the perfection reached by the manufacturers of these little spheres of tough steel.—Harper's Weekly.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY---WHY!

One of Quincy's solid financial institutions is the National Mt. Wollaston bank, of which Horace Frederick Spear is the present cashier. He is a son of Horace B. Spear, who was one of the Town Treasurers and cashier of the Mt. Wollaston bank for many years. Mr. Spear was born in Quincy in January 1863 and educated in the public schools of his native place and at the Chauncey Hall school, Boston, from which he graduated in 1881. He then entered the Mt. Wollaston bank with his father and upon the latter's retirement, June 1, 1887, he was elected to succeed him.

He was elected as one of the Councilmen from Ward One, at the election in 1894, and served in 1905, as a member of the standing Committees on Finance and Streets. He served but one year, however, as his business interests would not permit of giving the time which it required.

Mr. Spear resided in Quincy up to within a few years, when he built himself a handsome residence at Marshfield. Here he has spent his summers and some of his winters.

Business cares prevent his taking an active part in social organizations.

AID OF CONSUMPTIVES.

Saturday from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. the annual Christmas sale, under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Charitable Association, in aid of the Free Home for Consumptives, will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston. In buying your gifts here you are helping a most worthy charity. The various sections of Boston and suburbs will be represented with booths, grabs, and the many novelties of a fair will create great amusement for the children. The "Boston baked bean" supper will captivate all true Bostonians. The doll table "The old woman in a shoe" will be an interesting feature, by the Dorchester Juniors. The "Herald-Globe-Post-Transcript-Journal-American- Traveller -Advertiser-Record" candy booth will be a bower of intellectual beauty.

THE LADY'S SHOP.

Quincy's newest store "The Lady's shop" is to be a permanent establishment. The line of ladies' neckdressings now on sale for the holidays will be a feature of the regular business which is to be millinery under the management of Mrs. Hattie M. Starbird, until recently in charge of Mrs. O. F. Clark's at Brewers corner. Jan. 1st the shop will be put in hands of interior decorators and when finished will rival the big shops of Boston for completeness of stock and up-to-date ideas.

—There is no further need of race suicide to keep the human family down to a minimum: the automobile at the head of the list, didn't know it was loaded, thought it was a deer, and thin ice are doing the work, says the Weymouth Gazette.

TAFT ORDERED FEDERAL PROBE

Shown Extent of Dynamite Plot While In Los Angeles

FACTS FURNISHED BY LAWLER

President Took Immediate Action After Fredericks Had Vainly Sought to Bring Government Authorities Into the Case—Timely Assistance to Prosecution Despite Possible Political Harm to Chief Executive

Los Angeles, Dec. 14.—President Taft personally initiated the government's present investigation both here and at Indianapolis into the dynamiting conspiracy in which the McNamara brothers figured. The president, when he visited Los Angeles on Oct. 16, was apprised by Oscar Lawler, then an assistant of District Attorney Fredericks, of the strong case built up by the latter against the McNamaras.

The president's action was taken forty-eight hours after he left here. The McNamara trial was then but five days old, but the president was convinced, it is said, of the array of facts gathered by the state and was told that the McNamara brothers were not the only guilty persons.

Details of alleged tampering with witnesses and evidence in various parts of the country and the inability of the state authorities here to bring all offenders to justice were related to the president. It was a final move of the people here to ask the nation's chief executive to assist them in the matter in which they were being balked on many sides. It was through Lawler, a friend of the president, that the action was instituted.

Lawler declines to discuss the matter. It can be stated positively, however, that the president was approached by Lawler after Fredericks vainly sought some other way to bring the federal authorities into the case.

Fredericks knew, he said, there was evidence in Indianapolis which was not accessible to the state authorities here, except by the intervention of the federal government. Lawler saw the president and told him the circumstances. According to persons who since have learned the details of that conference, Lawler pointed out the number of labor leaders who were involved.

The possibility of fpolitical injury to the president was taken into consideration. With union labor lined up on the side of the McNamaras at that time, which was long before the confessions of guilt were dreamed of, it was indicated to the president by many persons that an unfavorable political effect might result with the labor element in the country if he took a definite stand in the McNamara case. The president, it is said, told Lawler he would proceed regardless of that.

Federal authorities were anxious to go ahead if he would say the word. Immediately after leaving here the president was in communication with Attorney General Wickersham and the order went forth to United States District Attorney Miller to begin the government's investigation at Indianapolis.

The effect here, so far as the state was concerned, was immediate, and many witnesses who had been persuaded by friends of the defense not to come here to testify came over to the side of the state.

VICTORY FOR DEMOCRATS

Carry Everything In Arizona In First State Election

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 14.—The first state election in Arizona has resulted in a sweeping Democratic victory for senators and representatives in congress and state offices, according to admissions of Republican leaders, though figures are not available.

The amendment to the constitution eliminating the recall of judges passed almost unanimously.

There appears to be little hope for any Republican on the state ticket, with the possible exception of Cleaveland for secretary of state. Figures on the legislature are not available.

BRICEVILLE MINE HORROR

Half a Hundred Unfortunates Are Still Unaccounted For

Briceville, Tenn., Dec. 14.—With the passing of another day without the discovery of any more live men in Cross Mountain mine, hope for the rescue of the fifty odd men still unaccounted for reached its lowest ebb.

Progress in the search was obstructed by a fire which raged from early Tuesday until 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, requiring the efforts of half of the government helmet crew to extinguish it. Forty-five bodies have been brought out of the mine.

Boston, Dec. 14.—Cable dispatches from Kandy, Ceylon, received in Boston say that Dr. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard, is stronger, following the recent operation, but that the crisis has not entirely passed.

Q.—Where was the Garden of Eden? Will it ever be restored? (H. C. R.)

Answer.—The theory was advanced some years ago that the Garden of Eden was located at the north pole, and that "the flaming sword" which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life" (Genesis iii, 24) was, what is now known as the aurora borealis! Recent investigations, however, by contemporary explorers, have clearly demonstrated that Edenic conditions do not exist at the pole! The location usually assigned for this earthly paradise is that of the land of Mesopotamia, or of Armenia. These regions are often referred to as "The Cradle of hte Race." Two thousand years, nearly, after father Adam and mother Eve were ejected from the Garden, there occurred a mighty cataclysm, the Flood which completely obliterated all traces of the former order of things—"the world that was." Because of this effacement of the antediluvian records, it would be impossible to locate definitely the former site of the Garden of Eden. This beautiful garden is to be restored, but on a world-wide scale, during the "Times of refreshing that shall come from the presence of the Lord"—"the times of restoration of all things." (Acts iii, 19-21.) See also Ezekiel xxxiv, 25, 26; Isaiah xxxv, 1-7.

Q.—We hear a great deal about "FUTURE PROBATION" these days. Does this mean that every one is going to get a second chance for eternal life. (G. W. S.)

Answer.—The Bible nowhere teaches a "second chance" for the world of mankind in general; but it does plainly teach that there will be one, full, fair opportunity of salvation offered to every man, woman and child born into this world. There are few, if any, who would be so narrow minded and selfish as to think that the Lord would give them a fair chance to obtain eternal life and then would deny their neighbors a similar chance. Up to the present time but a very small proportion of the human race has had an opportunity of salvation. Even today fully three-fourths of mankind are in darkness, about 1,200,000,000 in number. As Christ died for all, and "God will have all men to be saved and to come to a knowledge of the truth," it follows that those who have never had a chance for eternal life must get that chance in the life to come. The Scriptures, rightly understood, teach that "now is the day of salvation" for the Church of Christ, and for the Church alone. And the world's day of salvation will be during that thousand-year era of Christ's reign, when He rules for the purpose of lifting up and blessing all mankind, all who are obedient.

All the pupils of the primary grades will be called into the assembly hall Friday afternoon for the purpose of viewing a number of Stereopticon scenes, indicative of the spirit appropriate to the Christmas season. The principal will explain the various pictures in detail in order to convey a clear idea of the significance of every slide.

WRESTLING MATCH AND ATHLETIC MEET.

Tonight at the Y. M. C. A. the regular monthly handicap athletic meet will be held, with an entry list of 22 different athletes. As this meet is in the nature of a try-out for the dual meets soon to be held with Cambridge, Malden and Hyde Park Y. M. C. A.'s the competition in all the events is expected to be keen.

Great interest is being shown in the wrestling match, which is between two of the local members who have recently joined. Paul Skerakis, the unknown "Greek" was the champion middle weight man of the Detroit Y. M. C. A., while his opponent, John Burns, although 25 pounds lighter, was one of the best wrestlers of the Providence Y. M. C. A. Mr. S. Fabyan, physical director of the Clapp Memorial Association of East Weymouth will referee the match.

The handicaps and entries for the different events are as follows:

Potato Race—John Wilson, Henry Trask and Wallace Kemp, scratch; J. McOrale, T. Cheli, 2 feet; Fred Croucher, 3 feet; E. Rich, G. Shirley, P. Skevakis, 4 feet; K. Wood, 5 feet; J. Melville, 6 feet; E. Altstein, 7 feet; V. Johnson, 8 feet.

440 yard dash—P. Wood and T. Chell, scratch; H. Trask, 5 yards; S. Dineen, 8 yards; E. Pletch and T. Djerf, 10 yards; P. Skevakis, 12 yards; V. Johnson, 16 yards.

AN OLD GOLD BRICK

Used For Fleecing the Innocents a Generation Ago.

THE PATENT SAFE SWINDLE.

It Was a Plausible Trick That Generally Caught the Coin and Sent the Bewildered Victim Out of Town In a Hurry For Fear of Arrest.

Although the essentials of imposture remain unchanged from generation to generation, so that the rogue of today would have no trouble in recognizing his counterpart of the seventeenth century, nevertheless there are fashions in thievery, as in everything else. Old tricks are cast off like threadbare coats in favor of newer ones, and these in turn are discarded when publicity has rendered them familiar and therefore less effective, but plausibility and address are the indispensable qualities of the gentry who live by their wits.

The newest type of confidence man is the get-rich-quick individual who breathes of money and wouldn't turn his hand to a small "job." He angles for victims with new corporations and great business ventures for bait, but he is the same man who a generation ago raked in the sheckels by means of the patent safe game. This game is now an outworn fashion. But it had its points.

Let us suppose a countryman, carpetbag in hand, to have alighted at the union station and set out to see the sights. Although his name is conveniently printed on the outside of his bag or set down in a legible hand on the hotel register, he is amazed to find himself hospitably greeted by an utter stranger, who knows his name and the town from which he hails. The stranger is an old friend whom the countryman is ashamed to think he cannot remember—place is the word. But the stranger is very affable and lays himself out to entertain the newcomer. They stroll about town in company, visit a bar or two, exchange reminiscences and at the end of a few hours are bosom companions. The stranger invariably pays the score, has a lordly disdain of money; good fellowship is its own reward.

The two stroll by devious ways until finally while they are walking arm in arm down a quiet bystreet the stranger's eye is caught by a curious object lying on the pavement. He pauses to examine it. It is a miniature globe about the size of a billiard ball. The stranger turns it over curiously in his fingers and finally sees that it is fitted with a small plug, which comes out under pressure. Continuing his explorations, he then unscrews the top of the plug, takes out a piece of crumpled paper, shows his dupe the empty box and throws the paper on the ground. There is a similar bit of paper in the small chamber at the end of the plug, but this the countryman does not see. The two then stroll on, discussing the mysterious ball.

Presently they come upon a worried looking man, who is studying the ground with a face the pattern of despair. The roper observes him and wants to know whether he has lost something.

"Lost something, indeed!" says the man. "Why, I've lost an invention of mine that I wouldn't have taken $10,000 for. It was a patent fire safe which would save hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of papers and valuables every year. I was just on my way to Blank & Blank's, the safe manufacturers, to get one made, and here I have lost the model."

The roper is evidently much touched by the inventor's distress. He produces the wooden globe and is immediately overwhelmed with expressions of gratitude.

"But what good is that invention of yours?" asks the roper.

"Well," says the inventor with pride, "you see, it is set on props. When there is a fire all you have to do is to knock out the props and the safe rolls down an incline right out of the building as neat as you please. There's a box inside to hold the papers. There is a paper in this box right now."

At that the roper winks slyly at the farmer and whispers in his ear, "I'll make him a bet on that piece of paper."

"Come," says the roper, "that's a pretty tall yarn. I don't believe there's any paper in that ball. I'll bet there isn't a scrap of paper in it."

"I'll bet you $1,000 there's a paper in it," says the inventor, much incensed.

"I haven't that much with me," says the roper, "but I'll just bet you a hundred on it." With that he takes out a number of bills, say $50 or so, and a bank check for the other $50. To his friend the farmer he says, "Will you just lend me $50 on this check until I can get to my hotel?"

The farmer sees that his friend is sure to win. He advances the $50, when, behold, the inventor draws out the plug, removes the concealed paper from its small chamber and collects the bet. The roper is decidedly crestfallen, but while he is still lamenting his folly a policeman rushes up, charges him with gambling and makes a grab for him. Roper flees, but the farmer is caught. After protesting his innocence the farmer is allowed to depart. Still fearful of arrest, he flees the city. When he presents his check he discovers that roper, inventor and policeman are all confidence men who have enriched themselves at his expense.—Chicago Record Herald.

EDISON'S TRIP ABROAD HIS FIRST IN 22 YEARS.

The Inventor Says He Goes For a Rest and to Worry.

For the first time in twenty-two years Thomas A. Edison is making a European trip. With him went his son, Charles, and in London Mrs. Edison and their daughter, Miss Madeline, will join them. The family will make an automobile tour of the continent and will pass seven weeks in the jaunt.

"Have you anything new up your sleeve?" he was asked before sailing.

"No," he replied. "I have just finished something new. My talking pictures are complete. Two hundred sets of them have been made, and they are wonderful."

Mr. Edison had been working for some time upon a device to make the moving picture machines and the phonograph take each other's hands and furnish a combined entertainment.

"I shall not lecture while abroad," he continued. "I am going for a rest, and if I meet any of the distinguished persons of the other side it will be quite by accident. You know, I want to go away and worry for awhile. You see, over here I have been too busy to worry, and I had to cut my usual Florida trip in the winter for work. Now I am going to worry a little for a change."

"Are you working with the aeroplane any?"

"No, I am not. Thirty years ago I took up the aeroplane, but could not get an engine that would do the work. I did invent an engine. I made one with guncotton as the explosive instead of gasoline. Since then I have never fooled with the subject."

PENSIONS FOR AGED.

Berger Would Aid All With Income of Less Than $6 Per Week.

A bill to pension the "veterans of industry" was introduced in the house by Victor L. Berger, Socialist member from Wisconsin. Attached to the measure is a radical clause forbidding the supreme court of the United States to pass upon its validity.

The bill provides for a pension of $1 to $4 a week for every person more than sixty years old who has an income of less than $6 a week.

"The old working men and working women," declared Mr. Berger, "are entitled to a living outside of the poorhouses and without the aid of private charity. If the old parties and the supreme court do not realize that fact they will be wiped out of existence, together with the old constitution."

It is the belief of the Socialist representative that his old age pension bill is constitutional.

"But some of the capitalistic supreme court justices may hold different opinions," he said. "The bill furnishes a good opportunity for testing the power of the federal courts to annul necessary legislation passed by congress."

Mr. Berger asserts that through a thousand ways the country spends a greater amount to relieve the destitution of the aged than his bill asks for.

"It is time now," he says, "that we meet the problem in a scientific and economical way."

LIVES ON 26 CENTS A WEEK.

Athlete Offers to Show Editor How He Keeps Down His Bills.

To prove a man can live comfortably and be healthy, happy and strong on 26 cents a week for food, George H. Ward, seventy-three years old, a long distance walker, has invited the doubting editor of a Connecticut newspaper to be his guest for one week. Mr. Ward said that in three years he has eaten only cereals, potato chips, crackers and peanut butter. His budget last week:

Oatmeal	12c.
Crackers	5c
Peanut butter	4c
Flour	2c.
Tea	3c.
Total	26c

Mr. Ward is hale and hearty. The ruddy glow of youth is in his cheeks. His step is elastic and all his faculties are unimpaired. A year ago he walked from Middletown, Conn., to New York city and back in fifty-seven hours, eating only a half pound of peanut butter and half a pound of crackers on the journey.

Mr. Ward says if the editor accepts his invitation to board with him a week he will make a new man of him in the seven days and pay the 26 cents himself.

A walk of four miles before breakfast every morning is part of Mr. Ward's program. He drinks only tea and water.

SCORNS CLOTHES.

Monosyllabic Marvel Has Gone Nude For Sixty-one Years.

A strange man named John Castellow has grown to be sixty-one years of age, hale, hearty and happy, without ever wearing a stitch of clothing and without ever using a single word but the monosyllable "Gee."

He lives four miles east of Windsor, in Bertie county, N. C., and his health is perfect, not having missed a meal in fifty years. His body is normal and well shaped, but his strength is prodigious. He can break a double plow line as easily as if it were a cotton cord. He is gentle and has never been known to hurt a living soul intentionally. He cannot speak a word except the one monosyllable "Gee," which he uses in various intonations to express all his desires and emotions.

Sandford Will Make No Fight Against His Sentence

PART OF THE DIVINE PLAN

He Thus Explains Deaths of Six Members of Crew of the Coronet—Will Transfer Shiloh Property to Holland, Who Succeeds Him as "Moses"—Colonists May Go to Work Under New Management

Durham, Me., Dec. 14.—From the great Shiloh temple, on the top of Beulah hill, there comes word that Frank W. Sandford, the convicted leader of the cult, has been directed to make no fight against whatever sentence may be imposed upon him for manslaughter.

Sandford also has announced again his displeasure of having anyone interfere in what he declares is the will of the Almighty.

From their dwellings, the faithful are still making pilgrimages to the temple, there to continue the praying for the deliverance of their leader.

Sandford still declares that the world is still unable to realize that the deaths of six members of the crew of the Coronet was part of the divine plan. He still maintains that if the Shilohites had not insisted on turning back from the course, which had been pointed out to him by the "voice" from heaven, they would have returned in good health.

There is considerable business for Sandford to attend to before he leaves the colony. As president of the Kingdom company, which corporation holds the title deeds to all Shiloh's property, he must make the necessary transfers to his successor, who is to be C. E. Holland, the "Moses" of the flock.

It is rumored that under the new management Shiloh will install some industrial machinery and an effort be made to increase the scarce funds by a little labor. This has always been objected to by Sandford, who believed implicitly that everything would be provided for them by prayer.

When scarcity reigns, however, the colony has suffered so that many have left its confines. This, it is pointed out, could be avoided if the colony had some slight work that would insure an income in troublesome times.

Sandford will be sentenced in the Portland federal court on Dec. 18.

NO RADICAL CHANGES

Navy Yard Consolidation Pigeon-Holed For Some Time to Come

Washington, Dec. 14.—It is learned here definitely that the house committee on naval affairs will not allow the matter of the navy yard consolidation to come before the house at this session, no matter what Secretary Meyer recommends.

In other words, Representative Padgett's committee has placed on the proposition to abolish the Charlestown (Mass.) navy yard before it has been laid before the members. Representative Murray, who talked with Padgett, is emphatic in his declaration that for some months at any rate Massachusetts need not worry about any radical naval changes.

DEATH OF MRS. WELLS

Boston Woman Was Well Known In the Literary World

Boston, Dec. 14.—Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells, widow of Samuel Wells, and widely known for her educational work and as an author, died suddenly at her home in this city after an illness which was of only three days' duration.

In her literary work Mrs. Wells was a contributor of periodicals and newspapers and she gave much study to normal methods of instruction and Sunday school manuals of ethics, and had written much on these subjects.

BRYCE'S TALE OF WARNING

Nothing Known of It by State, Navy or War Departments

Washington, Dec. 14.—Emphatic disclaimers were made at the state, war and navy departments of the possession of any information confirmatory of the statement of ex-Consul Bryce that he was warned of the approaching destruction of the Maine two days in advance by a Cuban sympathizer in Matanzas.

Admiral Wainwright, who was executive officer of the Maine when the ship was destroyed, also says that no warning reached him.

STORIES CASE REVIEW END

Sharp Contrast In Appearance of Women on Witness Stand

New York, Dec. 14.—The case of the state against Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, on the charge of attempting to murder the millionaire sportsman and hotel proprietor, W. E. D. Stokes, probably will be in the hands of the jury by tonight. The spirited Miss Conrad reappeared yesterday for cross-examination and late in the day Stokes' young wife appeared on the witness stand.

Miss Conrad has sworn her age is 19, and the millionaire's bride looked scarcely older. Both are pretty. Miss Conrad is a brunette and was dressed all in black, while Mrs. Setokes is a tall, lithe blonde, with Titian-hued hair. The millionaire's wife wore a brown suit.

Her lips trembled during the few minutes she was on the stand, but she faced the court with evident determination to do all she could to help her husband's cause. Miss Conrad, on the other hand, went through a long ordeal of questioning with vim and humor in her replies, often giggled and made the spectators in court laugh.

BRIEFS

A beautiful day for shopping and the local stores are looking forward to a good trade this afternoon.

Councilman George A. Bolster has accepted a position in the drug department of Houghton & Dutton's store.

It is said that up to the present time, Mayor-elect Stone has received ten applications for every job in the gift of the Mayor.

The storm that was threatening Wednesday, sidetracked and did not visit Quincy. For a time it looked as though it would rain at any minute.

Mayor Shea is having every department official, make an inventory of city property in his department, which will be turned over to Mayor elect Stone on his inauguration.

One of the steam fishing trawlers, launched at the Fore River last week, is about ready for her trial trip which will take place in a few days. This means that the vessel will be delivered inside of eight weeks from the date of the laying of the keel, which is going some.

MILTON CHORAL SOCIETY.

Singers who a few weeks ago signified their desire to join a chorus to give the spring concert of the Milton Education society series, held their first meeting last week with 125 present. It was decided to organize the Milton Choral society and the following officers were elected: Chairman, William B. Thurber; secretary, Miss Harriet E. Whittier; librarian, Miss Mary Dinnie; assistant librarian, Douglas Field; monitors, Fisher Luther and Miss Florence Brown; committee on hall, Jesse B. Baxter.

Arthur H. Ryder, who is to act as director of the chorus, told the singers that he saw every prospect of success, providing members co-operated by being prompt and regular at rehearsals. The chorus began its first rehearsal, taking Mendelssohn's Rhine song for the initial trial.

STEAM TRAWLING.

Congressman Gardner has introduced a bill forbidding sea fishing by steam trawling. "This style of fishing," he says, "has swept the North sea of fish, and I propose to prevent devastation of our Atlantic coast."

The Fore River Shipbuilding Co. has built several of these trawlers which are a success as far as big catches are concerned but probably they are disastrous to the supply of fish in years to come.

RED CROSS SEALS.

PRACTICAL IMMIGRATION

Subject of Lecture Before All Souls Men's Club

J. J. HURLEY SPEAKER

The regular monthly meeting of the All Souls' Men's club of Braintree was held in the assembly hall Wednesday evening with about 170 members in attendance from all sections of Braintree. Supper was announced at 6.30 o'clock, the menu being up to the high standard set by the club with venison as the piece de resistance. After supper cigars were lighted and the speakers were introduced, in his characteristic and comprehensive way, by President Morrison of the club.

The first gentleman to address the members was Jeremiah J. Hurley, U. S. Commissioner of Immigration at Boston who spoke on "Practical Immigration by a Practical Immigration Man." Mr. Hurley's remarks were clear, concise and witty, interspersed with stories both humorous and pathetic. He held the close attention of his hearers and shed much light upon this subject which is of such vital importance to all true Americans.

He declared himself as in favor of restricted immigration, pointing out the dangers to the country arising from an influx of vicious foreigners and the benefit derived from receiving those of the better class. Condemned most strongly the agents of the steamship companies in Europe who decoyed peasants to America by unscrupulous methods and showed how important and responsible is the position of immigration inspector. He described the many clever tricks used to outwit the U. S. government by persons not eligible who desire to land on our shores. Mr. Hurley's remarks radiated wit and humor and he was applauded to the echo.

The next speaker was Leslie Hayford, field secretary of the North American Civic League for immigrants. This league aims to protect the aliens landing in this country from sharks and scoundrels, to educate them in American manners and customs and to make it possible for them to obtain honest employemnt. Mr. Hayford is a most forceful, earnest and convincing speaker and assured his hearers that it was the solemn duty of all true Americans to help these newcomers and do all possible to make them into good, honest citizens of our great republic.

He told of the schemes to entrap the unwary immigrant, of the dangers to young girls and of the thousand and one dodges to defraud the ignorant foreigner by sharpers who meet incoming steamships from Europe.

Mr. Hayford spoke with authority and his words made a deep impression. The speakers were tendered a unanimous vote of thanks for their efforts as was also Mr. Edwin L. Emerson of the club for his generosity in providing the venison for the supper. The deer was shot at Richmond, Quebec, by men from the factory of the Boston Last Company. Mr. Emerson is president of the company and sent down the venison expressly for this meeting.

Rev. D. Roy Freeman made a brief mention of the peoples' forum, the first meeting of which will be held in the assembly hall of the church on the afternoon of the first Sunday in January. There is a list of notable speakers announced for the season. After singing "America" the meeting was closed at 9.40 o'clock.

GRANITE SHIPMENTS.

Returns from the two railroad shipping terminals for the month of November, show the total amount of rough and finished granite shipped that month to have been 23,490,868 pounds. Of this amount 9,461,012 pounds was forwarded from Quincy Adams and 14, 029,856 pounds from West Quincy. It is not expected that the shipments for the month of December will be quite as large.

WHIST AT GRANITE CITY CLUB.

Ten tables were in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. Play was commenced at 8.30 and twenty-five hands were played, after which ice cream and cake were served. Henry F. Tilden secured the high score with 75 per cent with Shirley F. Nutting second with 68-4 per cent.

FORT RILEY DYNAMITING

Minister and Woman Implicated In Series of Outrages

Junction City, Kan., Dec. 14.—Rev. Charles M. Brewer, formerly a chaplain in the United States army, now a pastor of a Baptist church in Olustee, Okla., has been accused in a confession of Private Michael Quirk of implication in a mysterious series of explosions, which have baffled military authorities at Fort Riley for six months and destroyed property valued at $500,000.

Commissioner Chase states that Brewer had been arrested at Olustee and is being held for United States marshals. Mrs. Anna Jordan of Kansas City, also implicated in Quirk's confession, was arrested in Kansas City, following a telegram to the police.

Quirk declared he committed these crimes at the instigation of Brewer, who sought revenge because he had been court martialled and dismissed from the service for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

Brewer was born in Alabama thirty-four years ago. He became chaplain in the United States army in 1907. He is married and has several children.

Gibraltar, Dec. 14.—Princess Louise Victoria, sister of King George V., and her daughters, had a thrilling experience when the steamship Delhi, on which they were voyaging to Egypt, struck the reefs off Cape Spartel, the northwest extremity of Africa.

While being taken ashore by the longboat of the British armored cruiser Duke of Edinburgh, they were thrown into the water by the capsizing of the boat, and one of the daughters had a narrow escape from drowning. She was rescued by a sailor and carried to land with the others, all suffering severely from the cold.

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR TAFT MEN

Hard Work to Get Pledged Delegates to Convention

"BIG BUSINESS" IS FEARED

Forces Behind La Follette and Roosevelt Would Have Delegations Unpledged—New Does Not Agree With Lee's "Inspired" Statement That Taft Cannot Carry Indiana—Hitchcock's Name Mentioned In Plot

Washington, Dec. 14.—From now the battle within the ranks of the Republican party will be waged over whether delegates to the Chicago convention shall be sent instructed for William H. Taft or for no one. The La Follette people want uninstructed delegates and so do the opponents of Mr. Taft.

The friends of the president realize more clearly than before the meeting of the national committee that they have some real work before them. The interchange of ideas incident to the meeting made it evident to them that "big business" is more to be feared in the coming contest for delegates than are the forces behind Senator La Follette.

The Taft men appear to take it for granted that big business will try to nominate Theodore Roosevelt. They cite the demand from certain sources that all delegates shall be sent uninstructed as good evidence of this scheme.

The statement of Edwin M. Lee, chairman of the Indiana Republican state committee, that Mr. Taft cannot carry Indiana in 1912, will be made an issue in that state. Lee is a candidate for re-election, and the Taft Republicans will oppose him, believing that the Hoosiers desire to see Taft renominated and are ready to fight to bring about that result.

Harry New gave out a statement answering that made by Lee. New charges that Lee issued his statement as a part of a prearranged plan and says he knows the influences that were back of it.

"If Mr. Taft cannot carry Indiana, no other Republican can," said New. "I had information several days ago, when Lee was brought to Washington by way of New York, that he would issue the statement that was given out yesterday. As early as last Saturday I told the president that it was forthcoming.

"I know of the influences that are responsible for Lee's change of sentiment. It is part of a prearranged plan and is entitled to the usual discount allowed in matters of this kind. If the Republican party cannot win with Taft, it certainly cannot win with anyone else. Lee and I differ radically in our opinions. I believe that the electoral vote of Indiana will be cast for Taft and that the attempt of the gentlemen who have inspired Lee's statement will fail of their purpose."

Mr. New, chairman of the special committee that will have complete charge of the convention arrangements, stayed over for a conference with the president. New already has engaged hotel quarters in Chicago for the national committee and will at once arrange for the use of the Coliseum for the convention. The election of delegates will begin early in January and will continue until thirty days before the convention is held.

St. Louis and her boomers are greatly disappointed over their failure to secure the convention and charge that Chicago was selected as the result of a deal between the La Follette progressives and other anti-Taft Republicans who will try to stampede the convention for Roosevelt under the leadership of Frank H. Hitchcock.

This serious charge against a member of the president's own cabinet will be taken with a grain of salt, but it is pointed out that Chicago would be much more convenient for the purposes of the opponents of Taft than for those of his friends.

THOUSANDS CHEER ROOSEVELT AT HUB

Hailed by Huge Mob in Heart of Financial District

Boston, Dec. 14.—In State street yesterday afternoon there was a foretaste of what politicians hope or fear may happen at the Republican national convention next June. For half an hour or more about 8000 people, mostly men, fairly blocked the main thoroughfare of the financial district waiting for the appearance of Theodore Roosevelt.

When he did appear, though momentarily, the throng set up a great shout which proved that the colonel's popularity has increased rather than diminished hereabouts. Roosevelt has been to meetings of the Harvard overseers at 50 State street before, and he has always drawn a crowd, but never before has the throng been so large or so enthusiastic as it was yesterday.

The former president raised his hat and shouted "Hello, boys," and with his son, Kermit, as "interference" he charged the surging mass and landed in his automobile.

LABOR DEPLORES VIOLENCE

Gompers Issues Statement to Unions Connected With Federation

Washington, Dec. 14.—President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor sent out a statement to the international and national unions of the federation, in which he says that labor is now the object of a more violent attack than it has ever sustained before.

He says that every union man deplores violence and crime. The entire statement is an official defense of labor, issued as a result of the McNamara case.

The statement is considered a summons to union men to rally about the standard of labor and defend it against all attacks.

BETRAYED GERMAN MILITARY SECRETS

Heavy Sentences Are Imposed Upon British Spies

Leipsic, Ger., Dec. 14.—Heavy punishments were meted out to the English spies arrested at Hamburg and who have been on trial behind closed doors before the imperial court, charged with betraying German military secrets.

Max Shultz, an English shipbroker, was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. One of his associates, an engineer named Hipsich, was condemned to twelve years in jail; another engineer named Walff was sent to jail for two years; a merchant named Von Maack and Shultz's housekeeper each received three years.

Shultz was accused of using his profession of shipbroker as a cover for corrupting shipyard workmen and getting them to betray German naval secrets. It is believed that he succeeded in getting documents of value to those who employed him out of the country. He is regarded by the German naval authorities as a most dangerous spy connected with an institution whose activities cover all the shipyards and arsenals of Europe.

ADVENTURE

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1911, by the Macmillan Company.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gomez and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Jon Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

CHAPTER XV.

NEWS OF JOAN.

A WEEK after the Upolu's departure the Malakula dropped anchor, and her skipper came ashore for a game of billiards and to shock Sheldon with the little surprise born of information he was bringing with him.

Captain Auckland played the billiards first, and it was not until he was comfortably seated in a steamer chair, his second whisky securely in his hand, that he let off his bomb.

"A great piece that Miss Lackland of yours," he chuckled. "Claims to be a part owner of Berande. Says she's your partner. Is that straight?"

"'HOLD ON,' SAYS I, 'WAIT TILL I SEE MY OWNERS.'"

Sheldon nodded coldly.

"You don't say? That is a surprise! Well, she hasn't convinced Guvutu or Tulagi of it. They're pretty used to irregular things over there, but—ha! ha!"

"There is nothing irregular about it. It is an ordinary business transaction." Sheldon strove to act as though such transactions were quite the commonplace thing on plantations in the Solomons. "She invested something like £1,500 in Berande"—

"So she said."

"And she has gone to Sydney on business for the plantation."

"Oh, no, she hasn't."

"But didn't the Upolu sail?"

"The Upolu sailed all right." Captain Auckland sipped his whisky with provoking slowness. "only Miss Lackland wasn't a passenger."

"Then where is she?"

"At Guvutu last I saw of her. She was going to Sydney to buy a schooner, wasn't she?"

"Yes, yes."

"That's what she said. Well, she's bought one, though I wouldn't give her 10 shillings for it if a nor'wester blows up, and it's about time we had one."

"What schooner? Where is it? How did she happen to buy it?"

"First, the schooner Martha," the skipper answered, checking his replies off on his fingers; "second, the Martha is on the outside reef at Poonga-Poonga, looted clean of everything portable and ready to go to pieces with the first bit of lively sea, and, third, Miss Lackland bought her at auction. She was knocked down to her for 55 quid by the third assistant resident commissioner. I ought to know. I bid 50 myself for Morgan and Raff. My word, weren't they hot!

"'Twenty,' says I for my bid. 'Twenty-five,' says the little girl. 'Thirty,' says I. 'Forty,' says she. 'Fifty,' says I. 'Fifty-five,' says she. And there I was stuck. 'Hold on,' says I; 'wait till I see my owners.' 'No, you don't,' says she. 'It's customary,' says I. 'Not anywhere in the world,' says she. 'Then it's courtesy in the Solomons,' says I. And then she smiles at Burnett as well—you know, one of those fetching smiles, and damme if Burnett doesn't begin singing out, 'Goin', goin', goin'—last bid—goin', goin' for 55 sovereigns—goin', goin', gone—to you, Miss—er—what name, please?'

"'Joan Lackland,' says she with a smile to me, and that's how she bought the Martha."

Sheldon experienced a sudden thrill. The Martha, a finer schooner than the Malakula and, for that matter, the finest in the Solomons—she was just the thing for recruits, and she was right on the spot. Then he realized that for such a craft to sell at auction for £55 meant that there was small chance for saving her.

"But how did it happen?" he asked. "Weren't they rather quick in selling the Martha?"

"Had to. You know the reef at Poonga-Poonga. She's not worth tuppence on it if any kind of a sea kicks up, and it's ripe for a nor'wester any moment now. The crowd abandoned her completely. You know Malaita, and you know Poonga-Poonga. That's where they cut off the Scottish Chiefs and killed all hands. There was nothing to do but take to the boats. The Martha missed stays going in, and inside five minutes she was on the reef and in possession. The niggers swarmed over her, and they just threw the crew into the boats. I talked with some of the men. They swear there were 200 canoes around her inside half an hour and 5,000 bushmen on the beach. Said you couldn't see Malaita for the smoke of the signal fires. Anyway, they cleared out for Tulagi."

"But why didn't they fight?" Sheldon asked.

"It was funny they didn't, but they got separated. You see, two-thirds of them were in the boats, without weapons, running anchors and never dreaming the natives would attack. They found out their mistake too late."

"But what is Miss Lackland intending to do."

Captain Auckland grinned.

"She's going to try to get the Martha off, I should say, or else why did she pay 55 quid for her? And if she fails she'll try to get her money back by saving the gear spars, you know, and patent steering gear and winches, such things. At least that's what I'd do if I was in her place. When I sailed the little girl had chartered the Emily. 'I'm going recruiting,' says Munster. He's the skipper and owner now. 'And how much will you net on the cruise?' asks she. 'Oh, 50 quid,' says he. 'Good,' says she. 'You bring your Emily along with me and you'll get 75.' You know that big ship's anchor and chain piled up behind the coal sheds? She was just buying that when I left. She's certainly a hustler, that little girl of yours."

"She is my partner," Sheldon corrected.

"Well, she's a good one, that's all, and a cool one. My word! A white woman on Malaita and at Poonga-Poonga of all places! Oh, I forgot to tell you. She palavered Burnett into lending her eight rifles for her men and three cases of dynamite. You'd laugh to see the way she makes that Guvutu gang stand around. And to see them being polite and trying to give advice! Lord, Lord, man, that little girl's a wonder, a marvel, a-a-a catastrophe. That's what she is—a catastrophe. She's gone through Guvutu and Tulagi like a hurricane. Every last swine of them in love with her, except Raff. He's sore over the auction, and he sprang his recruiting contract with Munster on her. And what does she do but thank him and read it over and point out that, while Munster was pledged to deliver all recruits to Morgan and Raff, there was no clause in the document forbidding him from chartering the Emily.

"'There's your contract,' says she, passing it back. 'And a very good contract it is. The next time you draw one up insert a clause that will fit emergencies like the present one.' And Lord, Lord, shy had him too!

"But there's the breeze, and I'm off. Goodby, old man. Hope the little girl succeeds. The Martha's whacking fine boat, and she'd take the place of the Jessie."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME CHRISTMAS BEVERAGES.

TEMPERANCE drinks in which Christmas healths may be drunk are in demand at the holiday season. There are many of these, and some of them are quite delicious. Fruit juices may be bought, and these may be used as the basis for many of the drinks.

Served with cake in tiny glasses capped by a spray of mint or a glace cherry, they will add to the charm of the children's informal Christmas tree party.

Of course some refreshments must be on hand when friends come in to look at the wonderful Christmas tree, and what nicer than something of this sort handed around on trays by the little ones themselves.

Innocuous Christmas Beverages.

Here are some recipes for harmless fruit drinks:

Lemon Nectar.—Pour over the thin, yellow rind of four lemons two gallons of water boiling hot. Cover closely and let stand until cold; then add the juice of the lemons, two pounds of sugar and one pound of raisins that have been put through a mincing machine. Mix well and let stand for four days in a very cool place. Strain and bottle for use.

Orange Sirup.—To each pint of orange juice add one pound of granulated sugar. Let it stand over night. In the morning boil it ten minutes and bottle. Two or three spoonfuls in a glass of cold water will make a delicious drink.

Pineapple Drinks.

Here are some beverages in which pineapple is the chief ingredient:

Pineapple Cobbler.—Pour slices of pineapple cut in dice, one lemon and one orange sliced very thin, eight tablespoonfuls of sugar, one pint of iced water and one cupful of shaved ice. Place the fruit in a bowl strew with sugar and a little ice and in ten minutes add the iced water. Stir well and pour into glasses half full of shaved ice.

Pineapple Water.—Peel one large ripe pinapple, slice it and mash well in a basin. Pour over it one pint of boiling sirup and the juice of one lemon. Stir well and cover. Allow to stand two hours, filter through a fine cloth and add one quart of pure water. Chill if allowable.

A Fruit Cup.

Christmas Cup.—Prepare in a bowl a mixture of different kinds of fruit, according to what is in season—oranges, pineapple and bananas, peeled and cut in small pieces; grapes, seeded and skinned. Mix with the fresh fruit some canned cherries and pour over all heated grape juice or some sirup flavored with orange or lemon juice. Chill this on the ice. Partly fill some fancy glasses with the mixture and serve on the top of each a spoonful of sherbert or ice cream. Trim the glasses with holly sprays.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Quincy residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Quincy citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an effective kidney medicine. They fixed me up in good shape some years ago, and since then I have had no kidney trouble."

Driving Alaska Island Blue Fox Breeders Out of Business.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 14.—Blue fox breeders who invested large sums in fox ranches on the western Alaska islands are gradually retiring from business. One concern, caiptalized at $100,000, has petitioned the courts for dissolution.

The industry has two chief drawbacks. Eagles carry off the fat puppies, and the breeders find it almost impossible to capture the fleet footed ones that escape the eagles. Employes sometimes chase a litter of young foxes six or eight times around the island.

New York, Dec. 14.—The jury in the supreme court that has been hearing testimony in the suit brought by H. C. Silver to recover $30,000 from Lady Cook for breach of contract returned a sealed verdict in favor of the defendant.

The plaintiff's contention was that Lady Cook had engaged him to write her biography, and after doing considerable work on the book, she refused to continue her part of the contract.

A fine opportunity to survey the calibre of the Quincy A. A., will be afforded the local bloods this evening, when the members of the local organization, endeavor to revert the tables on the Lynn Y. M. C. A. five, conceded to be one of the fastest combinations in the state. The two teams met recently, with the result that the local five was decisively beaten. The failure to adapt themselves to the gymnasium at Lynn, in which the game was played, coupled with the obstacles encountered in acquainting themselves with the situation of the baskets, caused the local team to succumb to its first defeat of the season.

But now the chance is at hand to make up for the loss and if the practice indulged in and the benefit and marked improvements in the team play that have been derived from the same, during the past week, can be taken as any indications of what can be expected, those in atendance will be treated to basket ball contests of the high class order. Manager Flynn feels confident that his aggregation is the peer of the Lynn team and will not be satisfied unless his players triumph over the visitors, by a larger score than was noticeably when the Lynn team was returned the victor.

As the second teams, but little need be added. The local second team experienced no difficulty whatsoever in proving its superiority over its Lynn opponents. Any one who saw any of last year's players perform, knows exactly, just what is to be expected this evening. The games thus far, have met with great favor among the local fans, and the spirit of enthusiasm that seems to prevail, is greatly indicative of the stirring struggles that were witnessed in the West section of the city years ago, when this good old "Granite City" was represented in the athletic field by a contingency that could ably cope with the best to be found. Such an assertion, may, at first thought, appear rash but any one who wants to be convinced of the fact, should journey to St. Mary's hall this evening, and if the teams live up to present expectations, he will be amply repaid for his presence, and at the same time he shall have added another impulse to placing Quincy in the position, especially as regards athletics, to which she is entitled.

The final game of series of basket ball games in at the local High school, is to be played this afternoon, in an effort to determine the relative efficiency of the various players who are trying for the regular high school team. There is a fine list of players at the school this year, players who have had experience in different branches of athletics in the past, and who, if but given the opportunity, can accredit themselves in fine style. Coach Staff expects to round out a formidable team and feels that Quincy High will be well represented. It is not to be supposed that the record of last year will be surpassed, but with Coach Staff at the helm, it would not be surprising to see some great strides made in all departments.

Another youngster is beginning to loom forth in the limelight as a boxer of repute and he is none other than "Jimmy" McDonald, the well known local 127 fistic artist, who last evening sent "Tony" Meani, a pride of Boston, down to a quick defeat, in the bouts of the B. A. A. The local lad disposed of his opponent in one round, the contest being stopped at the expiration of three minutes. He has been forging to the front of late and gives every promise of developing into an able boxer.

He is clever, agile and possesses a heavy blow. He has been trained under the tutelage of well known local boxers, all of whom predict that the lad has a brilliant future before him within the roped arena. We are well represented in all departments of athletics, and the performances of our local boys who don the mitts have always been of the sort worthy of our praise. Young McDonald will bear much watching in his respective department and he already enjoys the friendship of a number of local fans who are rooting hard for him in his new field.

DELL'S TEAM DEFEATED.

The lead obtained in the first two was too great to overcome, and as a result the team captured by Morris was enabled to triumph over Dell's team in the bowling match of the Makaria league, rolled off last evening at the Granite street alleys. Morris, of the winning combination was high single string man, his mark being 96.

Dell of the losers was a close second with 95. The highest sum total was made by Morris, who attained the 262 mark, his nearest competitor being Dell, who had a grand average of 253.

PILLMAKING CRABS.

Queer Way These Tiny Creatures Get Their Food From the Sand.

Curious little crabs, mostly about the size of a pea, are found in abundance on the shores of the Malay peninsula. They are usually first perceived on the beaches after the going down of the tide, when they give the beach the appearance of being covered with loose, powdery sand and holes of various sizes. Upon looking more closely it is perceived that little radiating paths converge among the litter of sand to each hole and that the sand itself is in minute balls.

At the approach of an observer there immediately becomes apparent a peculiar "twinkle," which is nothing else than the simultaneous and rapid retreat of a multitude of the tiny crabs into their holes.

Should one who is watching these curious little creatures take up his position by one of their holes and remain perfectly motionless they will in time come out, when he will be enabled to see them at work.

Coming cautiously to the mouth of the hole, the crab will reconnoiter a bit, and when satisfied that no enemy is near it will venture about its own length from its lurking place. Then, rapidly taking up particles of sand in its claws, it will deposit them in a groove beneath the thorax.

As it does so a little ball of sand is rapidly projected as through its mouth. This it seizes with one claw and deposits on one side, proceeding in this manner until the smooth beach is covered with little pellets or pills corresponding in size to its own dimensions. This is evidently its method of extracting particles of food from the sand.—Harper's Weekly.

Pay of French Ministers.

Ministers in France are not so well paid as in England. All members of the French cabinet receive the same salary, £2,400 a year, and as they have to forfeit the allowance of £600 which they receive as senators or deputies their net annual gain through taking office is only £1,800. It is true they are provided with official residences, furnished, heated and lighted at the public expense. Their tenure of office is, however, so precarious that they can never venture to let their private residences, so they save nothing under the head of rent.—London Chronicle.

BRIEFS

Miss Mary Dearborn a former principal of the Coddington school was a welcome visitor to our city today. She is leaving soon for the winter in Florida.

It is expected that there will be a great demand for tickets to the banquet to be tendered Mayor Shea by the citizens of West Quincy, at St. Mary's hall, Monday evening Jan. 1. This will probably take the place of the inauguration day banquet that has been mentioned.

CLAPP MEMORIAL.

The second meeting of the Men's club of the Clapp Memorial, East Weymouth, was held on Wednesday evening. After a royal good supper was disposed of M. Alexander Chandler, of the firm of Chandler and Farquhar, of Boston, gave a most interesting and suggestive address on the "Value of men's clubs in the community." There was a large number present, and all were enthusiastic over the success and growth of the club.

On Saturday night, Dec. 9, two splendid games of basket ball were played in the gymnasium. The Memorial teams were defeated, but by so small a margin that the victory might well have been decided by a toss of the penny, so closely matched were the teams. The First Memorial team played against the Braintree Quintet, and the Intermediate team played against the Union A. C., of So. Weymouth, in the South Shore Basket Ball League.

On Monday afternoon the Grammar School League played the first games of its series. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd of Grammar school children present with their teachers. This is the second year of the League, and the children of the schools are finding in it a great deal of pleasure. The games on Monday were between the Humphrey and Athens, with Humphrey victor,—and the Hunt and Bates, with Hunt, victor. There will be two games every Monday afternoon according to the schedule below. At the end of the series a beautiful cup will be presented to the winning school.

On Saturday of this week, there will be two games at 8 o'clock. Clapp Memorial first team will play the State Street Five of Boston, and the Clapp Memorial Second team will play the "All Collegiate Team" of Weymouth. They will be good games, and you are invited to see them.

Mr. Bradbury, of the Mechanic Arts high school, of Boston, is giving the senior boys a series of talks on wireless telegraphy. The are proving of great interest and practical value to the boys.

AN IRISH LEGEND.

The Foxes Mourn When a Head of the Gormanston Family Dies.

"Among the oldest families in Ireland are the Gormanstons. It is said that when the head of the house dies and for some days before the foxes leave all the neighboring coverts and collect at the door of the castle. This strange phenomenon," writes E. T. Humphries in the National Review, "occurred when the twelfth Viscount Gormanston died in 1860 and again in 1876, when the thirteenth viscount shook off this mortal coil. The fourteenth holder of the title died in 1907. Inquiry was then made to test the truth or otherwise of the weird legend.

"The son, in a letter published in the New Irish Review, stated that when in the chapel watching his father's remains prior to burial he heard noises outside as of a dog sniffing at the door. Upon opening it there was a full grown fox close to the steps and several more around the church. The coachman confirms the presence of the foxes; so does another family retainer.

"The daughter of the thirteenth successor wrote saying that upon the illness of her father the foxes sat in pairs under the bedroom windows, howling and barking all night, and if driven away returned.

"The family crest is a running fox, and a fox is one of the supporters of the family arms."

Arrows and Big Guns.

In the days of mailed knights and battleaxes there was safety at a distance of 400 yards. That was about as far as the best archers could shoot an arrow. Neade, a famous archer under Charles I., states that the ordinary range of the bow was between 320 and 400 yards, though it is on record that one man was shot a distance of 463 yards with the wind. Compared with this is the latest naval gun with a range of fifteen miles.

The Oxidization of Brass.

Brass when immersed in a hot solution consisting of one-half ounce of golden sulphuret of antimony and four ounces of caustic soda in each gallon of water becomes oxidized with a pleasing brown shade. The shade becomes darker if the metal is immersed in a dilute solution of sulphate of copper, used cold, about four to eight ounces to the gallon. Several immersions in the same manner give deeper brown tones.

COAST DEFENSE.

Concrete Forts and Big Guns That Protect Our Sea Line.

The modern seacoast fort is a battery whose guns are protected in front and flank with enormous monoliths of concrete, covered, in the sides exposed to the fire, with sand enough to deflect projectiles before they reach the concrete, says the Engineering Magazine. Deep down in the interior of these huge masses of stone are placed the magazines and operating rooms required for the service of the batteries. They are simply caves in stone, artificial, to be sure, but as permanent as the everlasting hills. It is weird and uncanny to reflect that in one of those caves, scintillating with the highest resources of science, men stand over a drawing board on a table and practically see and plot on a chart every movement and position of the ships of a hostile fleet and flash forth to the gunners in the open such instructions for pointing their guns as enable them to make consecutive bullseyes on a target 6,000 yards away or from groups of great twelve inch rifled mortars to make 47 per cent of hits with flocks of projectiles on the deck of a moving target anywhere within range.

It is vastly important that such rooms be made as comfortable as possible for the strained human intellects working out their country's defense within them. But to make them comfortable is a difficult problem. In the United States the first modern batteries were completed during an exigency caused by the war with Spain. But since their completion during the warm and humid months of summer and early fall their galleries, magazines and service rooms reek with moisture. Water stands in great beads upon the walls and ceilings, from which it drips down to form great pools upon the floors, and they are not safe places for either human beings, ammunition or material of war. To remedy the evil many expedients have been tried and much valuable experience gained. But the problem is beset with difficulty.

FALLS ONLY TO RISE.

An Experiment Which Shows a Sort of Perpetual Motion Effect.

A novel experiment in the demonstration of perpetual motion is to be performed simply. A glass beaker about six inches high and four inches in diameter is filled with water to the height of about four and a half inches, and two and one-half to three ounces of commercial aniline are added, which will sink to the bottom of the vessel.

The temperature of the beaker and its contents is now raised to 170 or 175 degrees Fahrenheit by means of a burner, when it will be observed that the aniline will rise to the surface of the water, from which it will hang in a mass of curved outline. Almost immediately the suspended aniline commences to alter in shape, and gradually a large drop an inch or more in diameter detaches itself from the mass and falls through the water.

And now, the detached drop having fallen to the bottom of the beaker, comes the surprising part of the experiment. The fallen drop is seen gradually to rise to the surface, where it joins the mass from which it previously broke away. At once another drop commences to form and, having become detached, falls and rises in the same manner as the previous drop.

So long as the temperature of the water is maintained at 170 degrees Fahrenheit or over this procedure continues indefinitely.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Worked Both Ends.

Queens at their best are but women. Said Mary of Modena once in her days of exile, "It took all the jewels that all the goldsmiths could procure to decorate my crown." She was "powdered" with gems, which Fountainhall says "made her shine like an angel."

And Queen Caroline, too, the wife of George II., used to allude to Lord Hervey's rather personal remark that her crowning dress "was as fine as the accumulated riches of the city and suburbs could make it, for, besides her own jewels, she had on her head and shoulders all the pearls she could borrow of the ladies of quality at one end of the town, and on her petticoat all the diamonds she could hire of the jewelers at the other."

The Polar Bear.

The polar bear is a pretty formidable brute. A specimen of this species has been killed weighing 1,000 pounds and measuring nearly thirteen feet from nose to tail. The strength of the polar bear is beyond belief. One was seen feeding on the body of a white whale fifteen feet long and weighing at least three tons. The whale had been dragged by the bear out of the water on to the ice.

In These Degenerate Days.

"Huh," exclaimed the yardstick as it moved rapidly over the bolt of cloth, "you're not all wool."

"That's all right," retorted the bolt of cloth; "you're not a yard long, either."—Chicago Tribune.

A Jolt to Romance.

"Hubby, you have a lock of my hair, haven't you?" "Of course." "See if you can match it in some puffs when you go downtown."—Pittsburg Post.

LUCKY LAST LOOK

It Preserved the Declaration of Independence In 1814.

SAVED IT FROM THE BRITISH.

The Precious Document Would Have Been In the State Department When It Was Burned but For Pleasonton's Final Glance Around the Room.

Comparatively few of the present generation know how near to being lost was once the most precious of our national documents, the Declaration of Independence. It was during the war of 1812. The Declaration of Independence hung for many years in a frame in the state department in the room then occupied by Stephen Pleasonton. Mr. Beaseley, commissary of prisoners of war in London, forwarded to the state department some London newspapers, stating that the English fleets and transports were receiving troops at Bordeaux, France, with the intention of operating against Washington and Baltimore. Soon after it was learned that the British fleet was in Chesapeake bay and that it was ascending the Patuxent. The officials and citizens of the little capital city were hourly expecting an attack.

Upon receipt of this information, which was a few days before the enemy entered Washington, Mr. Monroe, then secretary of state, James Madison being president, mounted his horse, rode to Benedict, a small village on the Patuxent, where the British forces were being landed, and climbed an eminence within a quarter of a mile of the village, in order to ascertain the strength of the enemy. Being convinced, after his inspection, that we had no force available that could successfully resist them, he sent a note to Mr. Pleasonton by a vidette, advising him to see that the best care was taken of the books and papers of the state department.

Acting at once upon this authority, Mr. Pleasonton purchased some coarse linen and had it made into bags of suitable size, in which he, assisted by others in the office, placed the books and other papers.

While engaged in this work General Armstrong, then secretary of war, passing the state department on his way to his own office, remarked that he thought they were unnecessarily alarming themselves, as he did not think the British were serious in their intentions of coming to Washington. Fortunately Mr. Pleasonton was of a different opinion, and observed that it was the part of prudence to take measures to preserve these valuable papers of the revolutionary government. Had Mr. Pleasonton delayed but a few days, had he followed the advice of the secretary of war, an irreparable loss would have been sustained. For the papers which Mr. Pleasonton had placed in the coarse linen bags comprised the secret journals of congress, then not published; the correspondence of General Washington, his commission, resigned at the close of the war; the correspondence of General Greene and other officers of the Revolution, as well as laws, treaties and correspondence of the department of state from the adoption of the constitution down to that time.

Mr. Pleasonton had the bags carted to a grist mill, which he selected as a suitable depository. The mill, which was unoccupied, belonged to Edgar Patterson and was situated on the Virginia side of the Potomac, beyond the Chain bridge, two miles above Georgetown.

The last load had left, and Mr. Pleasonton was just quitting the vacant rooms when, glancing back suddenly to see whether anything had been left behind, to his consternation he saw the Declaration of Independence, which had been overlooked, hanging upon the wall. He hastily cut it out of the frame and carried it away with the other papers.

He then began to be uneasy about the place he had chosen, for if the British took Washington, which he firmly believed they would do, and very soon at that, they would in all probability detach a force for the purpose of destroying a foundry for the making of cannon and shot in the neighborhood and, of course, would consider a grist mill too valuable a thing to be left standing in a country they meant to subdue. Mr. Pleasonton therefore visited some of the Virginia farmhouses, whose owners were only too willing to loan him wagons in which to convey the documents to Leesburg, a distance of thirty-five miles. There they were deposited in an empty house, the keys of which were given to Rev. Mr. Littlejohn, who was one of the collectors of internal revenue.

Worn out with his labors, Mr. Pleasonton states in a letter, he retired early to bed that night and slept soundly. Next morning he was informed by the people of the little tavern where he had stayed that evening that they had seen during the night, the same being the 24th of August, a large fire in the direction of Washington, which proved to be the light from the public buildings, which the enemy had set on fire and burned to the ground.

When he returned to Washington on the 26th he found the public buildings still burning and learned that the British army had evacuated the city the preceding evening in the belief that the Americans were again assembling in the rear for the purpose of cutting off their retreat.—Kansas City Times.

'Tis well said that man has no greater enemy than himself.—Firenzuola.

CITY CLERK McGILVRAY GIVES INTERESTING TALK AT THE WARD FOUR "SMOKER"

Duties of City Official Instructively Outlined Before Members of Improvement Association

Important Fact Regarding New Marriage Law

There was a very large attendance Thursday evening at the smoke talk of the Ward Four Improvement association at St. Jean hall. President Stephen B. Little presided and introduced as the speaker of the evening, City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray, who gave the association an exceedingly interesting and instructive talk on the office of City Clerk and some of the multiple duties connected therewith.

At the start Mr. McGilvray explained that the City Clerk was the clerk, ex-officio, of the Board of Managers of the Woodward Fund and property as well as of the Board of Registrars of Voters. He told of the many records, which the laws of the commonwealth made it necessary for the City Clerk to keep, among which was that is known as vital statistics. These were the records concerning the births, deaths and marriages of all residents of Quincy, which included as well, the records of persons who died elsewhere but were buried here, of marriages, where one of the contracting, as well as both contracting parties, were residents of Quincy.

Thematter of licenses and permits, which the general laws provided should be issued by the City Clerk, including the so-called marriage licenses, explaining in detail the new marriage law which goes into effect Jan. 1, and provides that five days' notice of the intention of marriage must be given. In fact, he explained, in detail, all of the records which have to be kept by City Clerks. The fees from these licenses, he said, with the exception of the fees for dog licenses, were paid to the treasurer and became a part of the general city receipts. Fees from dog licenses were paid to the county treasurer and later a certain portion of them were returned to the city, to be used for schools or other educational pur-

RAND CLASS ENTERTAINS

Delegation From So. Boston At Social In Wollaston Church

WALTHER CLASS PRESENT

A large delegation from the Rand class of South Boston were the guests of the Rand class of Wollaston at their social in the Wollaston Baptist church on Thursday evening.

Both classes were formed by James L. Rand, now a resident of Wollaston. The South Boston organization came into being some fifteen years ago where Mr. Rand then resided. The Wollaston class has been in existence a little over a year.

Beside the South Boston contingent, the Walther class of the Baptist church and all young men of the community were invited, a large number responding. As each guest entered the hall he was presented with a tag inscribed with the legend "I am Mr.—— of ——, Glad to shake hands with you."

James L. Rand, teacher of the class acted as master of ceremonies and the evening opened with selections by an orchestra composed of Charles Sayward, Max Pinkham, Lucien H. Thayer and Mrs. Charles N. Roach.

Vocal solos by William Bullock accompanied by his brother Edward Bullock followed and were well received.

Charles N. Roach, president of the Wollaston Rand class welcomed those present with a few fitting words to which response was made by Albert Davis of the South Boston class.

In place of the speaker expected, Dr. Alexander Blackburn of the South Boston church related some interesting "War stories."

Dr. Blackburn is a veteran of the Civil war serving in the vicinity of Tennessee in the command of General Thomas.

He told in detail of the fighting in and around Nashville where the Confederate army under Hood were finally defeated.

The speaker told of General Thomas, broad of shoulder and strong of countenance who was greatly beloved by all his men and by them fondly called "Old Pap" Thomas.

The last review before General Thomas preceding disbanding was especially noteworthy each platoon as it came in front of the general breaking up and cheering him while Thomas sat on his horse with tears streaming down his cheeks.

A selection by the orchestra and a duet by William and Arthur Bullock closed the entertainment. Refreshments followed. A pleasing effect was made with the punch glasses which spelled the name "Rand."

Eben Hardy, president of the Walther class invited those present to attend the social of the Walther class to be held on Monday evening at which Rev. W. F. Armstrong for many years, missionary to India, will tell why he believes in the Bible.

FORMER STUDENT DEAD.

George H. Leatherbee of Brookline, a former student of Adams Academy died at his home, Thursday. Mr. Leatherbee was treasurer of the Tremount Lumber Company, with which he had been identified for the past 10 years. After leaving the local academy, he entered Harvard, graduating in 1882. He was a member of the Varsity football team and Hasty Pudding club.

HAS TAUGHT 46 YEARS IN SCHOOL SHE ATTENDED AND FROM WHICH SHE GRADUATED

Magnificent Demonstration of Love and Esteem Is Shown By Friends and Pupils To Miss Eliza C. Sheahan

Many Pay Homage To Venerable Instructor

Displaying the deepest sort of affection that it is possible to show and equally appreciative of the successful terminus of a long teaching career, hundreds of former pupils and friends gathered in the Adams school building, Thursday evening, and tendered a reception to Miss Eliza C. Sheahan, one of Quincy's foremost school teachers, who has just rounded out 46 years of teaching service. It was a most inspiring sight to see friends and former pupils ushered into the reception room to again renew acquaintance with the veteran teacher. The fact that many of her former pupils were accompanied by their children must have been a source of pleasure to the honored one, whose many years of active work, must have enabled her to meet with changes of a varied nature.

The rooms in which the reception took place, was the same room in which Miss Sheahan had taught, all the desks and chairs having been removed for the occasion. Miss Sheahan is to retire from active work at the close of the present term and the reception proved a most fitting honor to her achievments. To enumerate the different men and women who were present would be a difficult task, for it is safe to say that every former pupil, who found it convenient was in attendance.

The affair was attended by many prominent business men and representative citizens. The members of the school committee were there as were also the former teachers in the Adams school, included among them was George I. Aldrich, superintendent of schools in Brokline, formerly superintendent of the local schools. The room in which the reception took place was very handsomely decorated. while Christmas greens and bowers

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The New York police advise women to carry money in their stockings. This is secure, but we fear it would arouse too keen curiosity among the men in methods of safe deposit.

While there may be lots of trouble to get any one to take Jim Sherman's place as vice president, it would be inhuman to compel any man to sit around doing nothing for more than four years.

As Sam Gompers will have ample chance to talk when the American Federation of Labor meets again, it would seem judicious just now for him to conserve his lung power a little more carefully.

The government says naval efficiency would be promoted by selling three navy yards. The politicians will say that this will impair their efficiency in carrying the next caucuses.

Yellow journalism appeals to some people or papers would not be yellow but it is certainly questionable taste in an individual or newspaper to go out of its way to circulate slander or malicious gossip for the sake of catering to a depraved taste. A newspaper that banks on increasing its circulation in this way may get the circulation but for reliability and truthfulness it has no standing when it comes to clean journalism.

RECKLESS MOTORISTS.

That something drastic must be done to prevent the reckless motorist from continuing on his path of destruction, is shown by the appalling gain in the number of motor mishaps, presented in a report issued by the Safe Roads Automobile Association. The report shows that injuries resulting from these accidents in the month just passed were 129, against 79 for 1910, a gain of 70 per cent this year. The number of deaths due to these accidents was ten, a gain of 100 per cent. over the record of 1910, when there were only five for November.

These facts show bzeyond a reasonable doubt the appalling conditions that exist with regard to reckless driving along Massachusetts highways.

Undoubtedly the small fine is a farce and the big one ineffective in a greater number of cases. The most effective weapon, aside from imprisonment, is the suspension and revocation of the license to drive the machine. Where other ways fail this is one that makes offenders "sit up and take notice."

CHEAPER POSTAGE.

It is a satisfaction to know that the post office is paying its way, in spite of constant expansion of the service. The postmaster general is giving earnest consideration of one cent letter postage, and it might be made forthwith, in his opinion, if the second-class rate were raised from one to two cents a pound. While there is a call for reduced letter postage, it is not clamorous and it is a question whether a majority of the people would rather have something else in connection with the postal service—a parcels post for example.

TIRED OF TIPS.

"He that giveth no quarter shall receive no quarter" has so long been the fervent slogan of the waiter, that one is surprised to learn that a unanimous kick against the tipping habit was made in New York a day or two ago by the International Hotel Workers' Union.

The waiters want a regular salary, perhaps a commission on sales, and entire abolition of tips. This would mean about a five per cent increase in the price of food, but the saving to the public would be several times that amount.

The tipping habit is keenly annoying to that immense class of people who want to deal kindly and justly, but who resent being made victims of a graft that benefits principally the proprietor.

Over in the old country, where the entire force of a hotel lines up like hungry crows to ravage the outgoing guest, the system is far less expensive. In England, where Julian Ralph said he tipped everybody on the Island except the Prince of Wales theaverage restaurant fee is only about 3 to 5 per cent of the bill.

It would take a man of resolute temperament to walk into an American hotel, order a seventy-five cent dinner, and pay a waiter two cents. The face the waiter would make up would be handed down through tradition from father to son.

Travelling men would tumble over each other to patronize hotels on the basis suggested by the Waiters' Union. New rich people and those who are making a bluff of wealth, however, would still continue to give the fees. Then it would be up to the proprietors to discharge employes caught accepting them. After they had done it once or twice, the thing would stop.

A Brooklyn waiter, plaintiff in a recent suit to recover damages testified that his usual receipts by tips were $60 a week. The majority of th diners, who from the immaculate heights of dress suits and white shirt fronts looked down on him as a menial and inferior, were earning much less than that.

The American public dislikes the practice because of its burdensome expense, because it makes the people pay two prices, it leaves them embarrassed by not knowing what a service will cost, it subjects people who want to do the fair thing to constant insult, it leads to adulation of wealth, it sets at nought the democratic "first come, first served" principle, and it compels servants to cringe before the rich and neglect the poor.

PLANS FOR EIGHT DAY CAMPAIGN

Men and Religion Movement Arrange For Jan. Meetings

NOTED LEADER PRESENT

It was announced Thursday that Fred B. Smith of New York, international secretary for religious work of the Y. M. C. A. in North America, known as one of the world's foremost leaders in this work, will be one of the specialists who will conduct meetings in the eight-day campaign of the Men and Religion-Forward Movement in Boston, Jan. 13-22.

During the campaign, Rev. John M. Moore of Boston, secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Society, will be a leader of the missionary institutes and conferences. Community extension meetings will be in charge of James R. Smith, known as "Railroad Jim," who will come here from St. Louis, and A. M. Brunner of Chicago. Both men are experienced in conducting meetings in shops and factories.

A brief snopsis of the various meetings is as follows:

Two mass meetings Jan. 14 will be addressed by Fred B. Smith and Rev. Charles Stelzle. Beginning the following day and throughout the week until Friday, men's meetings will be held each noon in Tremont Temple, with addresses by Rev. Mr. Stelzle, Mr. Smith, W. E. Biederwolf, Pro. Taylor and Dr. W. J. Williamson. On Monday evening Jan. 14, a men's supper will be held in Tremont Temple. Daily at noon throughout the week, shop and factory meetings will be held.

On Tuesday and Wednesday from 9.30 until 4.30 P. M. the convention arranged largely for out of town visitors will be held in the Park Street church. From 4.30 P. M. until 6 P. M. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday there will be five institutes in Boston on Bible study, boys' work, evangelism, missions and social service.

A special luncheon for business and professional men will be held Wednesday noon. At 8 o'clock in the evening, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday platform meetings will be held in each of the district centers. Friday and Saturday evenings will be partially devoted to conferences on boys' work. Sunday afternoon, Jan. 21, 10 evangelistic meetings for men will be held in the district centers.

Our Business Is Increasing Every Day

The ever increasing and well-deserved patronage of our food mart is mainly due to the fact that we at all times sell standard quality pure groceries and meats at prices that are as low or lower than any other store in the city. Then again, the spic and span cleanliness for which this grocery and market of ours is noted wins many friends. Thus day by day the volume of business increases and the mere announcement of a Saturday sale at this store is welcomed by hundreds of thrifty housewives.

Annual Dance of Gas Light Co. Thursday Evening

FLOOR MANAGERS

The employees of the Citizens' Gas Light company, gave their first annual dance, Thursday evening, in Alpha hall. The affair proved to be a most enjoyable one and was pronounced a great success by the many who were in attendance. The music for the occasion was furnished by Wilson's five piece orchestra and from 8 until 9 o'clock an instrumental concert was in order.

Dancing started at 9 o'clock and terminated at midnight. Delegations from other departments of the Gas company were present in large numbers. There were twenty numbers on the dance order, all of which represented expressions familiar to gas employees.

The floor was in charge of George Ellard, assisted by Samuel Burns and the following aids: George White, D. Delorey, James Cleary, H. Gullickson, J. O'Brien, F. Johnston, J. Leary, F. Walsh and M. Lynch.

MAYOR SHEA'S GLOVES.

A year or more ago Mayor Shea had the misfirtune to lose a pair of automobile gloves of which all efforts to find a trace were fruitless. The loss was charged up to the profit and loss account and the incident forgotten. One day this week, however, a small boy walked into the office with one of the gloves, which he said he had found on Adams street and seeing the name of the owner on the inside, had hastened to return it.

The Mayor was glad to get the one glive back and he says that as someone has probably had the use of the other glove fir sometime, he hopes that it will be returned to him so that he may use them a little; or if the party will make himself known he will give him the other glove.

TODAY'S COURT.

George Gilbert was sent to the State Farm for drunkenness at Weymouth. Gilbert was in court Thursday on the same complaint but under the name of Henry Thomas. He was fined $10 and the sentence suspended He left the court room filled with good advice that had been given him by the Probation Officer, but instead of heeding the advice he immediately started in again and as a result was arrested.

Frank Hinkley was arraigned for assault at Quincy. Case continued until Dec. 20.

were artistically strewn about the hall in a manner that attracted attention. The decorations were arranged by Miss May Birnie, assisted by the teachers of the school.

Miss Sheahan was assisted in receiving by Chairman John L. Miller of the school board and Mrs. Miller, Superintendent of schools, Albert L. Barbour and Mrs. Barbour, principal Arthur S. Townsent of the Adams school and Miss Euphrasia Hernan.

The teachers of the Adams and Cranch school who acted as ushers were the misses Carrie Crane, Ellen Burke, Nellie Marsh, Alice Igo, Marie Fegan, Annie Birnie, Elsie Martin, Elsie Turner, Mary Egan, Elizabeth Ross, Jennie F. Griffin, Lucy Page, Eliza Dolan, Beatrice Rothwell, Kathryn Coughlin and Euphrasia Hernan.

The following pupils of the Adams school officiated in the same capacity, Masters Norman Beaton, Everett Marshall, Roy Westland and William Callahan.

Musical selections were rendered during the reception and a most pleasing repertoire, including a number of solos, were given by the Misses Eva and Esther Kellogg, violinist and pianist respectively. Both are members of the New England Conservatory of music and they play in a manner that is a delight to all listeners.

The occasion was graced by the presence of others prominent in public life, outside of those who were formally engaged in the receiving. These included Dr. N. S. Hunting of the school committee and Mrs. Hunting, school committeemen James F. Burke and Mrs. Burke, Arthur Foster, and Arthur W. Newcomb, Councilman James M. Nowland, a former principal of the Adams school, Representative-elect William J. Leslie, Clerk of Court, Lawrence W. Lyons, attorney Edward J. Parker, Robert E. Foy, and many others. Miss Julia Underwood, who last year terminated a career of 49 years of teaching, was present, as was also Galen V. Boyditch, another member of the "old guard."

At the conclusion of the reception, which was held from 8 until 9 o'clock, a complimentary dinner was given to Miss Sheahan. This took place on the upper uoor of the building and was in charge of the teachers of the school. Principal Arthur S. Townsend presided at the exercises and the speakers included Chairman Miller of the school committee and srperintendent Barbour. Mr. Miller paid a high tribute to Miss Sheahan, congratulating her on the completion of such noble work and among his remarks termed Miss Sheahan "the youngest teacher still in the school." Mr. Barbour talked in a similar strain, complimenting Miss Sheahan on her accomplishments, for the loyalty, interest and devotion which she had displayed at all times in behalf of her pupils.

In behalf of the teachers, Miss Euphrasia Hernan, in a few well chosen words, presented Miss Sheahan with a handsome pearl ring. Miss Sheahan was deeply affected by the embarrassing encomiums that had been pronounced upon her, but responded to the remarks of esteem in a most touching manner.

The banquet exercises over, the party repaired to the reception room where an impromptu entetainment took place. The gathering adjourned with all singing in unison, "Should old acquaintance be forgot." During the evening, Miss Sheahan was the recipient of many gifts from former pupils. These included the bouquet of sweet peas which she carried at the reception, the gift of the teachers of the Cranch school, a volume of books from the teachers of the Washington school, a roll pendant of pearls from the teachers of the Willard school, and many others, conspicuous among which was a bouquet of 46 roses contributed by a pupil who was under the tutelage of Miss Sheahan in the early sixties.

This evening, the pupils of the school and the members of the Parents' and Teacher's association of the same, will assemble in the school hall to draw up such resolutions as will fittingly commemorate the teaching service of a worthy instructor.

A peculiar coincidence in the career of Miss Sheahan is that she attended and graduated from the school in which she has been teaching for the past forty-six years.

Q.—Will there be a general resurrection of all who die, both of the just and the unjust? (S. E. M.)

Answer.—The teachings of the Bible are very emphatic on this point of the resurrection of the dead. It is only by twisting words out of their true meaning and transferring them from their real connections, that some have endeavored to explain away the Bible teaching of a general awakening of those who have entered into the great sleep of death. The entire scheme of salvation revealed in the Scriptures rests mainly upon two facts—viz., the condemnation of the entire race to death as the result of the perfect man Aadm's disobedience (Romans v, 12) and the redemption of the entire race from that death sentence as the result of the obedience of the perfect man. Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a "ransom for all" (see Hebrews ii, 9; I Timothy ii, 6; I John ii, 2). In harmony with this teaching of a redemption of all, we find the Lord Jesus declaring that all who are in their graves shall come forth at the voice of the Son of Man, both the evil and the good. (John v, 28, 29.) As the word resurrection signifies "a raising up again," we see that those who are righteous will experience an immediate raising up to life, while those who are evil will be awakened from death "unto" a raising up by judgment or trial (not damnation). All of the disobedient under this trial or judgment, will go into the Second Death, from which there will be no resurrection; while the obedient ones will attain to life everlasting. In respect to the destruction of the wicked under that trial read Acts iii, 19, 21.

Q.—Why were the "Ten Commandments" written upon TWO tables of stone, instead of one or several stones? (W. J. B.)

Answer.—Thos e Ten Commandments which were given to the Jews by the Lord through Moses, as the mediator forthat nation, formed what would properly be termed the "Constitution" of that democratic-theocracy form of government. The remainder of their laws may be said to have been subsidiary or by-laws. This constitution then was divided into two sections. The first section, consisting of four commandments, related to the obligations of the people towards the Lord God, their King. The latter section related to their obligations to one another, and consisted of six commandments. It is believed that the first section of these laws was inscribed on one table of stone; and the other section on a second tablet of stone. This is the only reason that may be assigned for there being but two tables of the Law. Viewed in the light of our twentieth century learning and advancement, how reasonable and just were those laws! They were designed to establish the very conditions for which all noble, true-hearted men and women are intensely longing—"The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man."

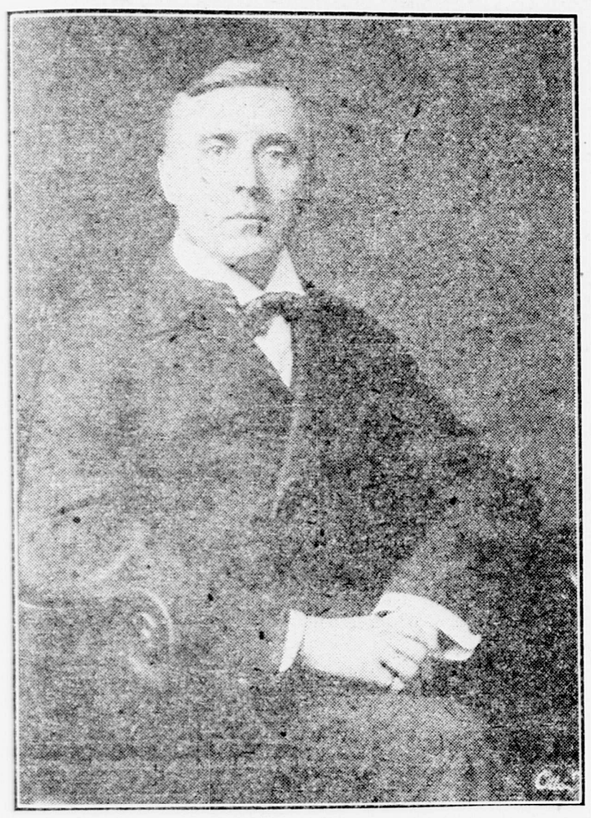
LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

SOTHERN AND MARLOWE

E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will play their annual engagement at the Shubert Theatre, a stay of two weeks only, beginning Monday, Dec. 18 and seats for all of their performances are now on sale at the box office. The reservations of seats by mail for this engagement have been extraordinarily large. Sothern and Marlowe recently appeared for a month at the Manhattan Opera House New York City, and their audiences there are said to have rivalled in size and enthusiasm those that greeted Henry Irving and Ellen Terry during their early American tours. The repertoire for the first week of their engagement in Boston is arranged as follows: Monday night "The Taming of Shrew"; Tuesday night and Saturday matinee, "Macbeth"; Wednesday matinee, "Twelfth Night"; Wednesday night, "Romeo and Juliet"; Thursday night, "The Merchant of Venice"; Friday night, "Hamlet"; Saturday night "As You Like It." There will be the usual splendid pictorial accessories and a thoroughly capable supporting company. Owing to the elaborate nature of the productions the curtain will rise at 2 P. M. and 8 P. M. sharp.



E. H. SOTHERN,
At the Shubert Theatre.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Eugene Walter's dramatization of John Fox's widely read story "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," is the holiday attraction announced for the Boston Theatre. It is the latest as well as one of the most magnificent productions made by Klaw & Erlanger, and since its premiere with Charlotte Walker a few weeks ago it has met with tremendous success, playing to crowded houses wherever it has appeared, especially in Philadelphia, where the production has held the stage at the Broad Street Theatre for the past five weeks playing to capacity audiences nightly. The play shows the brilliant dramatist Eugene Walter at his best and Mr. Walter has followed the scenes as they were laid in the original story by Mr. Fox with fidelity, though he has written a new play rather than confined himself to a dramatization in its strictest sense. Of course Mr. Fox's delightful character June has been emphasized and those who followed the story of her love for the engineer in the book and met with her jealous cousin Dave, the rough yet sincere and affectionate father, Judge Tolliver, the simple and humorous Uncle Billy Bean, the primitive Old Hun with her pipe of clay, the strong and manly Hale and the gentle Berkley will revel in the visualization of the stage characters and the pictures of the mountaineer's household, which are all strikingly impressive by the nobility and breadth of their portrayal. It is a production that will please the most fastidious theatregoer, and Charlotte Walker has lent to the character of Mr. Fox's delightful creature June a romantic touch that brings out all the hidden charms of a girl who, throughout her youth, has revelled in the untainted atmosphere of a primitive mountain home.

EVERYWOMAN.

"Everywoman" is one of the distinct successes of the dramatic year in Boston, and the delighted audiences at the Majestic Theatre bear grateful and willing testimony to the sterling merits of this unique play. At every performance the rapt attention with which the spectators in all parts of the theatre follow the unfolding of the story proves conclusively that "Everywoman" achieves its purpose in instilling a fine moral lesson in the guise of a most interesting and fascinating stage spectacle. "Everywoman" has proved a stimulating and refreshing treat to hundreds of Boston playgoers who are weary of the innocuous horse-play and frothy trash that runs riot at so many theatres that should be devoted to serious and purposeful drama.

One of the chief charms of "Everywoman" as an entertainment is unquestionably the pictorial lavishness of the production. A more splendid succession of alluring stage pictures has not been disclosed in Boston since Sir Henry Irving revealed his wonderful stage transcripts of "Robspierre" and "Dante." Those productions of the great English actor will live in the memory of all who were privileged to see them. "Everywoman" takes rank as a stage spectacle with Irving's last and greatest triumphs as a stage craftsman.

"THE PRINCESS ZIM-ZIM."

The famous theatrical producing firm of Liebler & Co., are sending to Boston a brand new star in a brand new play, which is to open an engagement at Plymouth Theatre, Tuesday evening, Dec. 19. The new play is entitled "The Princess Zim-Zim," and it was written specially for Miss Dorothy Donnelly. It deals with life at Coney Island, and its characters have been chosen by Edward Sheldon, the brilliant young author, from the people who furnish amusement at that noted resort—the snake-charmer, the dancing girl, the shoot the chutes man, the two-headed negress, the Esquimaux belle, the bearded lady, the diving Venus, the incubator man, and the good-natured old bally-hoo, who owns the side-show called "The Turkish Dream." With such unique and interesting material he has woven a drama of great strength. Mr. Sheldon was graduated from Harvard University class 1908, and within the subsequent time he has written "Salvation Nell," "The Nigger," and "The Boss," all of which have proven most successful plays.

Chief in Miss Donnelly's supporting cast is John Barrymore, also descendant from actor families on both his father's and mother's sides. Although yet a young man, Barrymore has, within the past few years, made himself a prime favorite. Mr. Barrymore will be remembered in Boston particularly for his brilliant work in "The Fortune Hunter" during its recent long run here.

"THE WIZARD OF OZ."

Weeks of preparation and rehearsal are promising one of the finest of Mr. Craig's holiday musical productions in "The Wizard of Oz." It will open at the Castle Square on Friday evening, December 22nd, the theatre being closed the first four days of the week in order to give every facility and every possible moment of time to its preparation. It will be given with all the spectacular effects that have made it famous, including the wonderful cyclone, the marvellous poppy field, the sparkling splendor of snow and ice, the loose-limbed scarecrow, the oily jointed tin woodman, the Lunatic, the cowardly Lion, and the Frolicsome heifer. "The Wizard of Oz" also possesses a plot, one of wonderful variety that mingles illusion with humor, music with dancing and gorgeous scenery and costumes with magnificent scenic effects. The story of the little girl who is whirled away on the wings of a Kansas breeze is fanciful enough to include a great deal of comedy, pantomimics, and music of the brightest and lightest jingling type, and there will not be a dull moment in all the three hours of its presentation. For the children and grownups alike it will hold unlimited entertainment. The chorus will have its share in the production and the principals in the cast will include the entire ensemble of Mr. Craig's company. George Hassell will be seen as the scarecrow, Donald Meek as the Tin Woodsman, and there will be excellent roles for all the other players, including Miss Mary Young as the little heroine, Dorothy Gale.

THE PARK THEATRE.

The phenomenally successful engagement of George M. Cohan's great satirical comedy, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," which has been crowding the Park Theatre in Boston to capacity at every performance for the past four months, is soon to terminate. Messrs. Cohan & Harris have announced the last weeks of this record breaking attraction and the prosperous run will positively end Saturday evening, January 6.

The original New York company with Hale Hamilton, the creator of Wallingford on the stage in the title role, William H. Boyd as "Blackie" Daw and Frances Ring as Fanny Jasper the stenographer and typist, will not be seen in any other New England city. This remarkable cast came direct to Boston after a two seasons' run on Broadway and goes to Philadelphia for a long engagement, after which this company will return to New York for the remainder of the season.

In spite of the tremendous patronage which the Cohan play has been accorded by New England playgoers the Philadelphia season already twice postponed can no longer be deferred. The demand for seats for the few remaining performances is even greater than at any time since the opening week at the Park Theatre, early in September. Out-of-town patrons are urgently requested to order their seats by mail as early as possible, on account of the crowds of holiday shoppers who are packing the theatre to capacity at every presentation of this greatest comedy success of the century. There will be a special matinee Christmas Day. Seats may be reserved by mail order for any performance during the remainder of the engagement.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Following the Old Timers' Variety Show, which has been attracting crowded houses to B. F. Keith's for the last week, this manager has arranged one of the strongest programmes of modern vaudeville ever presented at this beautiful playhouse. Practically every act on the list is new to Boston. Homer B. Mason and Marguerite Keeler will appear in Porter Emerson Browne's comedy, "In and Out," said to be one of the funniest comedies ever seen in vaudeville. It deals with a case of mistaken identity and abounds in bright lines and amusing situations. B. A. Rolfe's "Colonial Septette" will appear in a mammoth spectacular production entitled "An Old Fashioned Hallowe'en," in three scenes, introducing Charles Edwards, the celebrated cornet virtuoso and a company of soloists in a novel musical act. This production calls for some of the finest costuming ever seen on the vaudeville stage. Wilbur Mack and Nella Walker, those so-different entertainers, have a new skit called "The Dollar Bills, which serves to introduce this clever duo in several neat songs and dances, and an Oriental novelty is promised in the Great Asahi Troupe, Japanese acrobats and risley experts, including their "human fountain." The Wilson Brothers, German comedians, will present their yoddling specialty; and other features will be the Sayton Tric in a contortionist specialty.

QUINCY A. A. TURNS TABLES ON LYNN TEAM

As was predicted in the Ledger Thursday, Quincy A. A. turned the tables on the Lynn Y. M. C. A. in both basket ball contests played in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy. A large crowd of rooters turned out for the occasion for it was realized by all the local sporting bloods, that two games of the classiest variety had been billed.

The local boys more than made up for the defeat sustained at Lynn, Saturday and the fact that they emerged with a 54 to 18 victory is sufficient to show that they will spare no efforts to acquire the championship of the Greater Boston A. A. A. U. basket ball league.

The second team was victorious over its Lynn opponents by a much larger score than when the two teams met last week.

"Dan" Duggan was the one star of the game, caging 15 baskets from the floor, thereby establishing a record for the league, and performing in a manner rarely witnessed in a basket ball game, especially for one playing in a backfield position. P. Duggan and Kelley also played well, while McKay and Moore excelled for the losers: The summary of the first game:

QUINCY A. A.	LYNN Y. M. C. A.

Score, Quincy A.A. 54 Lynn, Y.M.C.A. 16. Goals from floor, D. Duggan 15. P. Duggan 7. Kelley 2, Hebert, O'Rourke, Boyle, McKay 5, Moore 2, Sutor. Referee McGuiness. Scorer, Buxton. Timer McCue. Time 20m. halves. Attendance 300.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL NOTES.

By Teri Bus

It was a hard game between the Oaks and the Eagles, and the latter deserved the win.

The Fore River Park was in a slippery condition but nevertheless, flashes of brilliant football were seen.

The Eagles were minus Carruthers and "Dan" McDonald, the vacancies being filled by Dunlop and "Jack" McDonald.

Dunlop played well. He is a very hard worker, and at the same time has speed and can control the ball in brilliant style. We will see more of him.

The Oaks are certainly a dashing team, but there is too much of the "devil" in the composition of it. They would do well to lay aside a little of their rushing tactics and follow the game in combination.

Riely of the Oaks, hero of many fights, certainly left nothing pleasant behind him on Saturday. He would do a justice to the Oaks if he were now to retire from the game. Old age and football don't go hand in hand.

There was one man who donned a green jersey who stood out prominent for his side—that was M. Sullivan. He certainly played a fine game, and he showed several times that he has the finer points stowed away in his being, but he can produce them when called upon.

Allison played a good game between the uprights for the Oaks, and the two goals scored against him in the first half can hardly be laid to his charge, the third goal, however, was given the Eagles directly through him. He ran out to far to meet the ball, and Moran beat him in the sprint, and scored. Moran has speed and Allison knows that by now.

Boyd played a capital game. He for sure is one of those consistent players. He seldom has an off-day. His tricky plays always delight the spectator, and his stinging shots reach centre just at the right time.

Cannon sent in a hard shot during the second half, the ball struck the bar, and bounced back for Sharples to send well up the field with a long kick. The "greens" all proclaimed it hard luck.

The McGregors made a clear win in their game with Brockton. The game was played in the shoe town, and the score was 3 goals to one.

Bob McDonald certainly had his share in the victory for he was able to register two of the goals, A. Simpson scored the third. The McGregors can rest now pretty well assured of having gained their ambition to be this year's champions of the Boston District League.

A fine game should be played between the Eagles and J & P Coates. The thread makers have not been going too well of late, but somehow, they always manage to put up a hard tussle with the Eagles.

Campbell played his best game this season against the Oaks, while "Jack" McDonald showed that he has still a lot of good football left in him.

Mr. Kerr of Worcester, who refereed the Oaks game against the Eagles did the wise thing when he cut the game to two 35 minute halves. At that it was dark before the game was finished. Mr. Kerr also showed that he has a quick eye for seeing infringements of football rules. He pulled up the "Greens" several times. Good referees are scarce.

The officials of the Eagles say that they have not yet received any definite word about the trip spoken of last week, but still the rumor has it that Fore River Eagles is the team chosen to visit St. Louis on Christmas Day. The Eagles are making other arrangements for that day, however, and I hardly believe that they would take the trip even if they were the successful club chosen.

MAYOR WILL FOLLOW ADAGE.

Thursday night, Mayor Shea gave his bed a surprise when he crawled between the sheets shortly after 5.30. Since he has held the office of the chief executive of city, he has ben somewhat of a night owl, not due to inclination altogether but because the social duties of a Mayor are manifold. By virtue of his office the Mayor immediately becomes the mark upon whom are showered invitations for every dance, as well as about all the social affairs that are held. These in addition to duties of his office, which often oblige him to remain out late have resulted in the hour being late before he retires.

Now that the social duties of the office have begun to relax, he intends to follow the maxim of early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy wealthy and wise.

BRIEFS

The Committee on Licenses of the City Council meets tonight.

Today is the first real rubber day that the shoe store men have had this winter and they will probably make the best of it.

The letter carriers have begun to feel the effects of the approaching holiday and they go out heavily loaded with packages, many of course containing Christmas gifts.

The many friends of Edward Lovejoy, who has been in Grace hospital, Boston, for the past three weeks, will be glad to know that he has so far recovered as to able to return to his home on Upland road.

The Christmas shoppers are getting out and the city looks lively especially afternoons and evenings. All the stores will be open evenings next week and a big trade is anticipated. Shop in the morning and in Quincy if you wish to get good service and just the right gift.

PLEASANT SURPRISE.

When Miss Margaret E. C. Bannon of Pond street, South Braintree, the popular school teacher, returned to her home Thursday afternoon from her labors she was much surprised to behold a set of handsome dining chairs and a beautiful china cabinet of quartered oak which had been left there for her by the expressman. A note attached stated that the gift was from some old Braintree friends whose names were undersigned.

Miss Bannon and family have very recently moved to their new home on Pond street and the furniture came as a most appropriate expression of love and good will. Miss Bannon has hosts of friends who are continually showing their appreciation of her sterling qualities and high ability. She is one of the most efficient and capable of our teachers and possesses a peculiar gift for imparting knowledge.

The names of the donors are: Mrs. Michael Connelly, Mrs. William Cuff, Francis Bannon, Benjamin C. Bannon, Mrs. Thomas Finnegan, Mrs. Jesse Rodgers, Mrs. John Mulcahy, Miss Mary Shay, Miss Clara Shay, Mrs. John Cuff and Miss Alice Connelly.

DEATH CHAIR FOR PHELPS

Court Denies Appeal of Murderer of Deputy Sheriff

Boston, Dec. 15.—Silas N. Phelps has lost his last hope of escaping the electric chair. He yill have the death penalty inflicted on him some time during the first week of 1912 for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Emmett F. Haskins at Munroe Bridge nearly two years ago.

The full bench of the Massachusetts supreme judicial court dismissed the appeal taken by lawyers for Phelps at the time of his death sentence on Oct. 25. Counsel for Phelps did not even appear when the case was called and the appeal was dismissed.

HUNT ITALIAN FOR MURDER OF FOUR

Widow, Her Son and Two Daughters Are Killed

Albany, Dec. 15.—An entire family—Mrs. Mary A. Morner, a widow; her daughters, Edith, aged 20, and Blanche, aged 17, and a son, Arthur, aged 28 years—were murdered on the Morner farm near De Freestville, a hamlet five miles from Albany.

The bodies of the three women were discovered near a cow barn, where they had been so hacked with a hatchet and battered with a bale stick that the murderer had been able to crush all three of them into a small manure pit on one side of the stable.

A searching party found the body of the son with the throat cut and otherwise mutilated, under the barn floor, the boards of which had been ripped up and replaced after the murderer had secreted his victim.

The police are searching for an Italian farm hand known as Ed Dennis, who had been employed by the Morners since last September. Little is known concerning him or the motive for the crime.

GREAT SLIDE OF EARTH

It Results In Suffocation of Two Men In Cranberry Bog

Halifax, Mass., Dec. 15.—A cave-in in the cut being made by the United Cape Cod Cranberry company here resulted in the death by suffocation of two of the employes, Samuel Maki and Samuel Jussila.

The foreman went to a nearby place for planks to brace the sides of the cut, two of the gang of eleven men being left to watch the outside, to guard against any possible sliding of the bank.

A mass of the hill released by a monster stump started to slide, and in a moment the hole was rapidly filling in. The others of the gang, with the exception of the two unfortunate ones, managed to get out of the cut as the stump slid. It struck the braces, causing an entire collapse.

HUGHES MEASURE PASSES

Provides For Eight-Hour Day In United States Contract Work

Washington, Dec. 15.—The house of representatives adopted the Hughes resolution, reported by the committee on labor, to establish the eight-hour day for laborers and mechanics employed on work done by contractors for the United States government.

Representative Murray of Massachusetts argued that the shortening of hours will result in such increased efficiency of labor that no increase of government expenditures will be needed.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 15.—As a result of a loss of $170,000 this year in running the government-owned telephone system, the government announces that the rates will be doubled. The government took over the telephone system three years ago and reduced the rates one-half at that time.

BOMB PLOT IS TOLD TO JURY

Alleged Nation-Wide Conspiracy Is Under Consideration

MILLER TO CONDUCT PROBE

Transcript of Evidence Secured at Indianapolis to Be Sent to Every Federal Jurisdiction Where Dynamiting Jobs Were Done—Explosions Begun Two Years Prior to Employment by McNamaras of McManigal

Indianapolis Dec. 15.—Shortly after the federal grand jury convened Thursday it was learned officially and for the first time, just what scope the dynamiting inquiry will have.

Acting on an order from President Taft, Attorney General Wickersham has instructed the federal authorities here to make a general investigation of the dynamiting plots throughout the United States. District Attorney Miller was placed in charge of the big investigation covering the entire country and embracing every federal jurisdiction in the government.

This was done because the original conspiracy, it is believed, was hatched in the office of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers in Indianapolis.

At the close of the federal investigation in Indianapolis the grand jury for this jurisdictiong will return indictments against those responsible for the alleged conspiracy. Indictments also may be returned against those responsible for the shipment of dynamite from one state to another, which is in violation of the federal statute.

These indictments will be augmented by indictments against those persons responsible for or connected with dynamitings at the French Lick hotel, and other places in the Indiana jurisdiction. This task having been completed by the federal grand jury here transcripts of all evidence will be made. These transcripts will be sent to every federal jurisdiction in the United States where dynamiting jobs were done.

In the various jurisdictions the evidence sent from Indianapolis will be used as the basis of a further local investigation of the "jobs" done in that part. Indictments against those who may have had knowledge or who may have assisted in those local "jobs" may result.

After weeks of preliminary work by government agents in many parts of the country where explosions have occurred, the federal grand jury is ready to begin its investigation of an alleged nation-wide conspiracy by which dynamite, nitroglycerine and other explosives were carried into at least seventeen states.

The list of 100 explosions in structures in seventeen states, erected by firms employing non-union workmen, was furnished to the government by the National Erectors' association.

Beginning with the explosions of structural works in Masaschusetts and Connecticut, in the summer of 1905, it cites the damage done up to Oct. 16, 1911. The explosions began two years prior to the employment by the McNamaras of McManigal, who, according to his confession, blew up his first building in Detroit in June, 1907, "with twenty sticks of dynamite," and they extend into the present year, several months after the arrest of the McNamaras.

There were two explosions in 1905, eight in 1906, six in 1907, twenty-six in 1908, twenty in 1909, twenty-five in 1910 and thirteen in 1911. They occurred in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Utah, Washington and California. Ohio, with twenty, heads the list in the number of explosions, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Indiana and Missouri come next.

poses. Here in Quincy, it was the custom to apply these receipts to the public library.

One of the subjects, into which Mr. McGilvray went in detail, was the naturalization and election laws and this subject was excedingly interesting. While nearly all had a general knowledge of the workings of the election and naturalization laws, there are many things in which the general public is somewhat unfamiliar. For instance he told of a case where a young man born in Canada applied to the registrars for registration.

This young man was by birth an alien. In this case however, the father died and the mother moved to Quincy with her son, while he was still a minor. After coming to Quincy, she again married, this time her husband being an American citizen. This second marriage was contracted while the young man was still under age and the contracting of this second marriage made him an American citizen, and he therefore had a right to vote without going through the formailty of being naturalized.

The many perplexing features of the election law, were explained in such a manner, that all were able to get a better insight into many of the perplexing details of the law, such as the so-called primaries, party designation at caucuses and the various forms, necessary to become a candidate for nomination or for election. This feature of the talk was one in which the audience seemed to be particularly interested and after he had concluded, many asked questions on some of the points which had not been thoroughly understood.

A general discussion of the subject followed, in which many of those present took part.

Councilman Smith also spoke briefly along the same line and also spoke of the reception and banquet which the Copeland club were to tender Mayor Shea Jan. 1.

Before the meeting adjourned, a rising vote of thanks was extended to City Clerk McGilvray, for his interesting and instructive talk.

Refreshments were served after the meeting.

At the next meeting the Overseer of the Poor will give a talk on the duties of his office particularly in relation to the laws governing settlements.

—"Our Work" said Mrs. Belmont Monday to a suffragist audience in New York, "Is to remodel man's thinking powers." She did not exaggerate when she called it "a stupendous undertaking." So beneficent a programme, however, ought not to be confined to one sex.—Springfield Republican.

KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CHRISTMAS FRUIT CAKE.

The longer fruit cake is kept the better it is, provided, of course, it is not kept too long. Fruit cake may be a year old. To keep it pack away in an airtight box and wrap in oiled paper.

A Rich Cake.

This recipe will suit persons who want a large, rich fruit cake. Bake it in a flat crock lined with oiled paper. Take a pound of sugar and a pound of butter. Beat these to a cream. Whip nine eggs to a froth. Sift together a pound of flour, a tablespoonful each of mace, cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg. Add the eggs to the butter and sugar, then beat in the sifted flour and spices and add the fruit, well dredged with flour. The fruit consists of half a pound of finely chopped candied citron, two pounds of currants and two of raisins stoned and chopped. Some persons add a fourth of a cupful of milk or coffee to the cake in mixing it; others prefer three gills of brandy. Bake in a moderate oven.

Economical Fruit Cake.

A less expensive fruit cake may be made as follows: Take one-fourth of a cupful of butter, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, two eggs, half a cupful of milk, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of vanilla, half a cupful of raisins and a quarter of a cupful each of currants and citron. Mix half a teaspoonful each of allspice, cloves, cinnamon and mace. Beat the butter and sugar together, add to them the eggs, well beaten, then the flour, soda and spices, well sifted together. Pour into a pan, the inside of which is lined with oiled paper, and bake in a moderate oven.

Eggless Fruit Cake.

Fruit cake may be made without any eggs at all. Take a pound of seeded raisins chopped fine, two cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of butter, two cupfuls of buttermilk, four cupfuls of flour, a tablespoonful of soda dissolved in a little hot water, cinnamon, mace, nutmeg and allspice to taste. Chopped citron and currants may be added to the cake if wanted. Mix as you would any other fruit cake and bake.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians. Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His vacation of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Van Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

The next morning Sheldon came in from the plantation to breakfast to find the mission ketch Apostle at anchor, her crew swimming two mares and a filly ashore.

"Miss Lackland sent them," said Welshmere, the missionary doctor stepping ashore and shaking hands with him. "There's also a box of sad dies on board. And this letter from her. And the skipper of the Flibberty Gibbet."

The next moment and before he could greet him Oleson stepped from the boat and began.

"She's stolen the Flibberty, Mr. Sheldon. Run clean away with her. She's a wild one. She gave me the fever. Brought it on by shock. And got me drunk as well."

Dr. Welshmere laughed heartily.

"Nevertheless she is not an unmitigated evil, your Miss Lackland. She's sworn three men off their drink or, to the same purpose, shut off their whisky. You know them—Brahms, Curtis and Fowler. She shipped them on the Flibberty Gibbet along with her."

"She's the skipper of the Flibberty now," Oleson broke in. "And she'll wreck her as sure as God didn't make the Solomons."

Dr. Welshmere tried to look shocked, but laughed again.

"She has quite a way with her," he said. "I tried to back out of bringing the horses over. Said I couldn't charge freight, that the Apostle was under a yacht license, that I was going around by Savo and the upper end of Guadalcanar. But it was no use. 'Bother the charge,' said she. 'You take the horses like a good man, and when I float the Martha I'll return the service some day.'"

"And 'bother your orders,' said she to me," Oleson cried. "'I'm your boss now,' said she, 'and you take your orders from me.' 'Look at the load of ivory nuts,' I said. 'Bother them,' said she. 'I'm playin' for something bigger than ivory nuts. We'll dump them overside as soon as we get under way.' What I want to know is she your partner or ain't she? That's what I want to know."

"She is," Sheldon assured him.

"Well, who'd have believed it! I've seen a few unlikely things in these Solomons—rats two feet long, butterflies the commissioner hunts with a shotgun, ear ornaments that would shame the devil and head hunting devils that make the devil look like an angel. I've seen them and got used to them, but this young woman of yours"—

"Miss Lackland is my partner and part owner of Berande," Sheldon interrupted.

"So she said," the irate skipper dashed on. "But she had no papers to show for it. How was I to know? And then she's hired them drunken loafers, three of the worst scoundrels that ever disgraced the Solomons—15 quid a month each—what d'ye think of that? And sailed away with them too! Phew! You might give me a drink. The missionary won't mind. I've been on his teetotal hooker four days now, and I'm perishing."

Dr. Welshmere nodded in reply to Sheldon's look of inquiry, and Viaburi was dispatched for the whisky and siphons.

"It is evident, Captain Oleson," Sheldon remarked to that refreshed mariner, "that Miss Lackland has run away with your boat. Now please give a plain statement of what occurred."

"Right O. Here goes. I'd just come in on the Flibberty. She was on board before I dropped the hook—in that whaleboat of hers with her gang of Tahiti heathens, that big Adamu Adam and the rest. 'Don't drop the anchor, Captain Oleson,' she sang out. 'I want you to get under way for Poonga-Poonga.' I says, 'Excuse me, Miss Lackland,' and yells forward 'Let go!'

"And then we had it out. I didn't believe her. I didn't think you'd take her on as a partner, and I told her as much and wanted proof. She got high and mighty, and I told her I was old enough to be her grandfather and that I wouldn't take gammon from a chit like her. And then I ordered her off the Flibberty. 'Captain Oleson,' she says, sweet as you please, 'I've a few minutes to spare on you, and I've got some good whisky over on the Emily. Come on along. Besides, I want your advice about this wrecking business. Everybody says you're a crackerjack sailorman'—that's what she said—'crackerjack.' And I went in her whaleboat, Adamu Adam steering and looking as solemn as a funeral.

"On the way she told me about the Martha and how she'd bought her and was going to float her. She said she'd chartered the Emily and was sailing as soon as I could get the Flibberty under way. I was to sail direct for Poonga-Poonga and if I couldn't take her word that she was your partner she'd get along without me and the Flibberty. And right there's where she fooled me.

"Down in the Emily's cabin was them three soaks—you know them—Fowler and Curtis and that Brahms chap. 'Have a drink,' says she. I thought they looked surprised when she unlocked the whisky locker and sent a nigger for the glasses and water monkey. But she must have tipped them off unbeknownst to me, and they knew just what to do. 'Excuse me,' she says; 'I'm going on deck a minute.' Now, that minute was half an hour. I hadn't had a drink in ten days.

"Well, anyway, at the end of the half hour down she came again and took a good squint at me. 'That'll do nicely,' I remembered her saying, and with that she took the whisky bottles and hove them overside through the companionway. 'That's the last,' she said to the three soaks, 'till the Martha floats and you're back in Guvutu. It'll be a long time between drinks.' And then she laughed.

"She looked at me and said—not to me, mind you, but to the soaks: 'It's time this worthy man went ashore'—me! Worthy man! 'Fowler,' she said, 'just tell Adamu Adam to man the whaleboat, and while he's taking Captain Oleson ashore have your boat put me on the Flibberty. The three of you sail with me, so pack your dunnage. All hands got me over the side, and it seems to me I went to sleep sitting in the stern sheets and watching that Adamu steer. Then I saw the Flibberty's mainsail hoisting and heard the clank of her chain coming in, and I woke up. 'Here, put me on the Flibberty,' I said to Adamu. 'I put you on the beach,' said he. 'Missie Lackalanna say beach plenty good for you.' And now I've come to find out whether I'm skipper of the Flibberty or that chit of yours with her pirating, heathen boat's crew."

"Never mind, skipper. You can take a vacation on pay." Sheldon spoke with more assurance than he felt. "If Miss Lackland, who is my partner, has seen fit to take charge of the Flibberty Gibbet, why, it is all right. As you will agree, there was no time to be lost if the Martha was to be got off. It is a bad reef, and any considerable sea would knock her bottom out. You settle down here, skipper, and rest up and get the fever out of your bones. When the Flibberty Gibbet comes back you'll take charge again, of course."

AN EXCELLENT SUPPER SERVED

At Sociable of Wollaston Congregational Church

THE PANTOMIME

An excellent supper was served at the sociable of the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday evening by a committee consisting of Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Mrs. William N. Harding, Mrs. Charles Bates, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, Mrs. Whitney, Mrs. James M. Lewis, Mrs. Mandell and Mrs. Walter Jones.

"Wanted-a-wife," a one act pantomime was finely given by a competent cast under the direction of Mrs. N. G. Nickerson.

The story tells of a bachelor who tired of cooking his own meals and darning his socks decides to advertise for a wife.

In response Miss Suffragette calls to fill the position but so disrupts things generally that she is finally escorted to the door.

Miss Society next arrives but with her manners and tastes is utterly unable to bring herself down to the common tasks of housework. Next on the scene comes Miss Erin who is so strenuous in her efforts to clear that the bachelor makes haste to get rid of her.

Miss Hygiene appears, spotlessly gowned but she is so disgusted with the untidiness of the room and so attempts to deodorize everything that she is forced to leave.

Enter Miss Eastside, a sporty, gum-chewing damsel for whom the chief attraction in the room is a highly colored lithograph. Finding gum-chewing to be the only thing she can do well she too is compelled to retire.

Miss Bookworm is so engrossed in heavy books of learning that the housework suffers in proportion and she goes down in disgrace.

In the Widow who next responds with her baby the bachelor thinks he has discovered a treasure but at the first cry of the child she drops housework and the climax comes when the bachelor has to play nurse girl.

At last comes a heavily veiled lady who is a marvel of skill and dexterity in the domestic line. Mr. Bachelor is deeply smitten and proposes only to find when she raises her veil that she is colored.

"Home Sweet Home," was touchingly played and the entertainment closed with a tableau of the cast which included:

Bachelor	Gorham Nickerson
Miss Suffragette	Miss Helen Seavey
Miss Society	Mrs. A. P. Thompson
Miss Erin	Miss Mary Harding
Miss Hygiene	Miss Helen Jones
Miss Eastside	Miss Dorothy Taylor
Miss Bookworm	Miss Ruth Whitney
The Widow	Mrs. Charles L. Seavey
At Last	Mrs. Gorham Nickerson

In connection with the sociable fancy articles were on sale by a committee of the Christian Endeavor society consisting of Mrs. B. D. Ducey, Miss M. K. Morse and Mrs. R. J. Barker.

A candy table was also in operation by members of the Clover class consisting of Madeline Lewis, Gladys Kingman, Ruth Higgins and Hildegarde Ducey. The proceeds will go to some children's charity next summer.

BRIEFS

The Christian Endeavor of the Memorial church, Atlantic, is planning a social for Saturday evening.

Stephen Bennett of Newbury avenue was out Thursday for the first time, having been seriously ill for several weeks.

The subject of the prayer meeting at the Wollaston Methodist church tonight will be Loyalty. Walter Starbins will speak on the subject and Allan Painten will sing a solo. Everybody invited.

The greenhouses of William Patterson the Wollaston florist are well worth a visit from all who are interested in flowers or plants. At the present in their Christmas dress they are beautiful.

WOULD BE A MISTAKE

What Asquith Thinks of Granting Suffrage to Women

London, Dec. 15.—An important deputation of the National Anti-Women's Suffrage society, under the leadership of Lord Curzon of Kedleston, was received by Premier Asquith at his official residence.

The object of the deputation was to secure the prime minister's co-operation in blocking the threatened enfranchisement of women by means of an amendment to the government's forthcoming franchise reform bill, which includes the granting of votes to women.

Mr. Asquith expressed his hearty sympathy with the object of the deputation and agreed with them that to grant the franchise to women "would be a political mistake of a very disastrous kind."

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

In Leon White, who was yesterday elected captain for the 1912 football team, Quincy High will have a player whose qualities for leadership are ideal, and whose command over players, and insight together with his knowledge of all the fine points of the game, should make him an efficient general, one too, who is ably qualified to round out a winning aggregation. It is to be deplored that many schools in electing captains of the various athletic teams, invariably determine upon a man who is popular, who is in other words, a good fellow." Such seems to be a mistake, for in taking such a course of action, the best players are often times left out of consideration and the team is deprived of the many advantages it might gain, were the elections based on a standpoint of efficiency.

White, however, is a player of the first-class order, and though he had the misfortune to break his ankle this year, in all the games in which he did participate, there was to be found no co-worker of his who was more consistent or more solicitous of the welfare of the eleven, and for that reason we hope to see a most formidable contingent developed at the local High school next year under his leadership.

Speaking of football, calls to mind that a reception to the members of the High school eleven takes place this evening in the school hall. Besides the usually good time which takes place, the different players will be awarded their "Q" for the work of the season.

That we are coming in for our full share in the different sporting departments will be demonstrated this evening when "Napoleon" Grignon, a familiar figure of this city, tries conclusions in a checker match iwth George H. Waterman at the Wells Memorial. "Nap" is a widely known checker player and has frequently displayed his ability in this line.

FOR CHARTER CONTROL PLAN

Wickersham's Suggestion For Dealing With Trusts

A NEW EXECUTIVE BUREAU

Washington, Dec. 15.—Pursuing President Taft's recommendation that an executive bureau be created to supervise corporations chartered under a federal incorporation act, Attorney General Wickersham, in his annual report submitted to congress, suggests that the bureau of corporations be raised to that dignity, even in the absence of the proposed federal incorporation statute.

This branch of the department of commerce and labor, the attorney general urges, should be brought into closer relation with his department. He adds that it might well be "availed of as the nucleus for an administrative board under whose supervision consolidations or mergers for lawful purposes might be formed."

In enforcing the Sherman anti-trust law, the attorney general points out, the department of justice and the courts are confronted by economic, rather than legal problems, when it comes to working out methods of disintegration after a corporation has been declared an illegal combination.

The department enlisted the assistance of the bureau of corporations in the dissolution of the tobacco trust, and it would be of great value to the legal branch of the government, Wickersham says, if the functions of the bureau should be so enlarged that it could be called upon officially to make investigations and report its conclusions with respect to plans for the voluntary or enforced disintegration of monopolistic combinations.

In a comprehensive review of the anti-trust prosecutions, the attorney general shows that the seventeen anti-trust civil suits pending at the beginning of the last fiscal year were augmented by six additional actions, while the eleven criminal prosecutions under the same statute were increased by twenty-three more prosecutions during the last fiscal year.

Eight civil suits and a similar number of criminal trials were brought to conclusion during the year. In four of the civil prosecutions judgments were rendered in favor of the United States, while three were lost and one was discontinued. Four criminal convictions were secured and four cases were either quashed or discontinued.

The suits now pending are those against the powder trust, the "night rider" cases, the United States Steel corporation, the cotton corner, the alleged towing monopoly, the beef packers, the South Pacific merger, the naval stores suit, the bathtub trust, the lumber trust, the milk trust, the wall paper combination, the sugar trust, the trans-Atlantic steamship pool, the magazine trust, the shoe machinery trust, the combination of coal roads, the elevator suit in Oklahoma, and the kindling-wood trust.

Forty-six prosecutions for illegal discriminations and rebates were instituted against railroads during the year. The attorney general urges the amendment of the twenty-eight-hour law governing the railroad transportation of live stock by imposing an imprisonment penalty for its violation.

TOO MANY ACCIDENTS SAYS OFFICIAL

"We have too many automobile accidents on our highways and too much recklessness," said Col. William D. Sohier of the Massachusetts Highway Commission yesterday.

The reign of recklessness that has seized upon so many of the motorists on Massachusetts highways during the past ten days has aroused both the public and state and city officials.

The police are more alert and the Highway commission is now doubling all of the suspension of license penalties, in an effort to curb some of these violations of the law of the road.

Col. Sohier, a man who has made a long and thorough-going study of automobile laws and regulations, and one who has amassed an enormous quantity of statistics concerning automobile accidents and their causes, admits that conditions are not as they should be and offers some reasons for the existing state of affairs, gives some suggestions and some statistics showing that progress is being made toward the suppression of recklessness, both by the commission and by the automobilists themselves.

—Somehow these "clean-up" days in which various cities are enthusiastically indulging are remindful of the young woman who, seeing a hotel bath-room for the first time, wrote home that she "could hardly wait until Saturday night so that she could take a bath."—New Bedford Standard.

ATHLETIC MEET RESULTS.

Over 100 enthusiastic lovers of athletics, witnessed one of the best meets ever held in the local Y. M. C. A. 'gym" Thursday evening.

The events were all closely contested and in the three standing broad jumps, nine jumps apiece were necessary, before the winner could be determined. Philip Wood, broke the association record in the spring board high jump, by leaping 6 feet, 10 inches. He was close pressed by H. Trask and Wallace Kemp, who jumped 6 feet, 8 inches and 6 feet, 9 inches, respectively.

Summary of events:

6 Potato Race—First, Wallace Kemp (Sr.) time 22 2-4 second; second, George Shirley 4 feet handicap.)

Running Spring Board High Jump—First, Philip Wood (1 inch) 6 feet, 11 inches; second F. Porter (10 inches) 6 feet, 11 inches.

12 Pound Shot Put—First, Thomas Djerf (6 feet) 38 feet, 4 inches; second, Fred Croucher (4 feet) 36 feet, 10 inches.

3 Standing Broad Jumps—First John Wilson (2 feet) 30 feet, 4 inches; second, R. Favorite (4 feet) 30 feet, 3 inches.

440 Yard Race—First, Henry Trask (5 yards) 56 seconds; second, S. Dineen (8 yards) 56 2-5 seconds.

The wrestling match, was evidently the most popular event of the evening, if we can judge fromthe applause. Paul Skevakis was allowed 20 minutes in which to throw John Burns. Skevakis weighed in at 152 pounds and Burns 129 pounds. For thirteen minutes the men struggled back and forth without either of them going to the mat. Neither wrestler seemed capable of getting a hold on the other which would give an advantage. At last Burns secured a half-nelson and hip-lock on Skevakis and pinned him to the mat. After a few minutes of strenuous resistance by the under man, Burns put his whole weight down and Skevakis gave up. Referee Fabyan awarded the silver watch fob to Burns.

CITIZENS OF HOUGHS NECK STILL TALKING SEPARATION

Many From Important Section of Quincy Attend Big Meeting In Its Favor

Unanimous Vote In Opposition To Licenses

Nearly two hundred men interested in the question of having Houghs Neck divorced from Quincy, met in Pandora Hotel, Friday evening, and heard numerous arguments advanced in favor of the proposition. A number of petitions have already been drawn up and a long list of signatures have already been attached to them. These petitions will be presented to the legislative committee, before whom the matter will be brought. Representative-elect Walter E. Piper was numbered among those present.

The gathering was presided over by Captain Oliver G. Fosdick, who, in his opening remarks, refuted the rumor that had been going about, to the effect that many of the Houghs Neck residents were desirous of establishing a separate township, in the hope that the securing of the same might result in the obtaining of liquor license. To support his contention that such a rumor was false and unwarranted, the chairman asked those present who were in favor of license for Houghs Neck, to stand up. No one arose. He then asked for those who were opposed and almost immediately every one was on his feet.

The principal speaker of the evening was called upon for the opening address. He was Charles F. Gettemy, chief of the State Bureau of Statistics and Labor. In opening his remarks Mr. Gettemy said "It would be gross impropriety for me, to directly, or by inference take any part in the discussion as this merits of having Houghs Neck established as a township." He made no reference at all to the township question, but gave a very instructive and interesting discourse, which lasted for over an hour, on the matter of financing a town and the various things that would have to be met, in case Houghs Neck did become a town. He told how the various departments should be conducted and entered into a lengthy discussion on the various methods of procedure to be adopted by township. He presented numerous statistics bearing upon the same and gave a complete account of all important matters, devolving upon the different town officials. He was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks and was tendered a rising vote of thanks.

Matthew Connors, one of the prime movers of the project to have Houghs Neck separated from Quincy, stated that the popular beach resort had been receiving ignominious treatment at the hands of the city of Quincy. He cited that Houghs Neck payed $40,000 in taxes, annually, but that a fair return for that amount was not forthcoming from Quincy. He maintained that outside of Sea street, there were but few accepted streets and that these streets, especially, were in a most deplorable condition.

He made a comparison of Houghs Neck, with other towns, covering a similar expanse of territory and adduced inferences where other towns enjoyed a lower tax rate and were favored with greater improvements. Towns, too, whose valuation did not exceed that of Houghs Neck. Mr Connors placed the valuation of Houghs Neck at $1,700,000. He did not think that it was being justly treated in the matter of improvements and contended that the people of that section would progress to better advantage, in the event of a township being established. He then went into detail of the protection which was given the Houghs Neck residents at the present time.

He said that while the policeing was good, it was not adequate. In like manner, he took up the other departments of necessary protection and endeavored to show where many of the present inefficiencies would be dispelled, if Houghs Neck became a separate town. To prove this contention of the statement that the Neck was not receiving the suitable treatment, Mr. Connors asserted that last year he consulted with the proper City officials and offered to allow the public the use of the lavatories at the steamboat wharf, on the stipulation that the City of Quincy would furnish the water, free of charge. He said the proposition was agreed to and that much favorable comment was in evidence when the action was brought about. Mr. Connors stated that he thought nothing more of the matter, until he was presented with a bill of $30 for the use of water. He then entered a complaint to the same officials and informed them that they had violated their agreement. No satisfaction could be obtained and Mr. Connors was told that he would have to pay the bill.

He made a comparison of Houghs

PRETTY GIRLS GOOD MUSIC AND DANCING

Made the Annual Party Friday Night of Walkover Girls

UNUSUALLY CHARMING

Alpha Hall presented a spectacle of unusual charm Friday evening, the occasion being the first annual dance of the Walkover Girls, all of whom are connected with factory number 9, of the Walkover Shoe establishment in South Boston. A number of the members of the club are local girls and besides the attraction, which the dance was bound to afford from a local standpoint, the presence of friends of the other members, who came from Dorchester, South Boston, Jamaica Plain, Forest Hills, Neponset and Weymouth, caused the popular dancing hall to become taxed to its utmost and at the same time, prove the mecca for fully two hundred couples.

The music for the affair was furnished by Carey's five picce orchestra and a repertoire was in order from 8 until 9 o'clock, followed by dancing, which was enjoyed till midnight. Twenty numbers constituted the program and the lovers of dancing were highly pleased with the event, which was prounced by all to have been a most successful one.

Miss May Harrison was in charge of the floor. She was assisted by Miss Lucy DeAngelis and the following aids, the Misses Agnes Smollett, Agnes Robertson, Louise Skinner, Emma Colletti, Julia Falvey, Sarah Mullen, May Neagle and Jennie Robertson.

GOODS FORFEITED.

There was no claimant in court this morning when the cases of the commonwealth against the liquors and gaming implements seized by the police in the sensational raid at the rooms of the Quincy Associates a few weeks ago, nor of the liquors seized from the Boston & Quincy express company at the same time. The court ordered the gaming implements and liquors forfeited to the commonwealth.

WILL DRAW UP SET OF RESOLUTIONS

A number of the former pupils of Miss Eliza C. Sheahan, who has just rounded out a teaching career of 46 years, and who was tendered a reception this week in observance of the occasion, was held in the Adams school assembly hall, Friday evening. The gathering was presided over by Robert E. Foy, the well known grocer.

After a short discussion on various matters, plans were taken to formulate a set of resolutions, which will be presented at the next meeting to the venerable teacher, who is about to retire from active work.

The meeting takes place on the evening of January 2nd.

REGULAR MEETING OF COUNCIL

The last regular meeting of the City Council of 1911, will be held on Monday evening, and as there are a number of important matters to come up for action the meeting will be an important one. One of these matters will probably be the order relative to the widening of Hancock street, which is now before the Finance Committee and will doubtless be reported upon at this meeting. As noted above, this will be the last regular meeting but the possibilities are that an adjourned meeting will be held during the coming week.

RESIDENT MANAGER.

News comes from Washington of the appointment of Warren Edwards formerly of Quincy as resident manager of the Middaugh & Shannon Co., Inc., the largest building company in the District of Columbia.

—Wishing to close the Portsmouth navy yard, Sec. Meyer has also designs against the Brooklyn yard. The second naval power, this country's docking facilities are inferior to those of France and Germany now, and vastly inferior to Great Britain's. The secretary is strongly in favor of fewer navy yards and many more battleships. Where would he dock them?—Boston Record.

BEAUTY OF NORWAY SHOWN

At Interesting Lecture Given In First Church Chapel

BY HON. H. D. PIERCE

An exceedingly interesting lecture on Norway and its beautiful scenery, was given at the First church chapel, Friday evening, by Hon. Herbert H. D. Pierce. The lecture, which was given under the auspices of the Quincy Historical society, was well attended and the audience was well repaid for venturing out on such a stormy evening. Brooks Adams, president of the historical society presided and introduced the speaker.

The lecture was illustrated with many stereopticon views, several of which were in colors, bringing out the beautiful scenes, true to life.

The speaker took his hearers through Norway by different routes, describing minutely the many villages through which the tourists were taken. He also showed the people their habits and customs. He described in detail the beautiful scenery with which this country abounds.

At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks was extended to the speaker for his very enjoyable lecture.

Our Business Is Increasing Every Day

The ever increasing and well-deserved patronage of our food mart is mainly due to the fact that we at all times sell standard quality pure groceries and meats at prices that are as low or lower than any other store in the city. Then again, the spic and span cleanliness for which this grocery and market of ours is noted wins many friends. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

An exchange says if you must abbreviate Christmas do it thusly $mas. That is probably what it means to many.

The McNamaras won't tell what they know about the dynamite jobs. Any one smart enough to commit murder has a loyal friend there.

Many cities are competing for the national conventions. There is a widespread desire to take an influential part in the conventions by howling in the galleries.

If the president would give a carpet sweeper to every congressman who should read all his messages, some of the newer statesmen would perhaps accept the offer.

There is much opposition to arbitration on the ground of national honor, it having been settled long ago that the way to settle a dispute honorably is to create a new lot of widows and orphans.

Presidents have frequently had trouble in getting the indorsement of their own state, because they bucked the machine too hard. Mr. Taft's difficulties in Ohio do not proceed from this source.

We have never been enthusiastic about Woman Suffrage, but considering the slap the Los Angeles women gave the Socialist ticket, they were perhaps justified in letting the kids run loose for an hour while they went to the polls.

HOUGHS NECK.

The residents of Houghs Neck at the town meeting, Friday evening, stamped as untrue, by a rising vote the assertion that separation is desired in order to obtain licenses. Undoubtedly the citizens of the Neck are sincere and in earnest regarding the question but as we see it, it is only one that has been devised in order to get needed improvements.

Going it alone would be expensive and we dare to say unsatisfactory in the end. It must be taken into consideration that the city of Quincy is in a state of tremendous developments all sections suffering more or less for many things needed. A few years, a short time, will adjust matters financially and Houghs Neck, with all other parts, will come in for a share.

At present what is needed by the powers that be, is loyalty and the cooperation that means appreciation for things done well under trying conditions.

CHRISTMAS AND THE POOR.

"Poverty" writes us asking "How shall I give my wife the embroidered sofa pillow that she wants for Christmas, when I have neither cash nor credit?"

To this the more obvious reply is, that if "Poverty" has neither cash nor credit, he would much better put any money he may be able to scrape up, into a good square meal for his family, which is probably hungry, than into luxuries like sofa pillows.

And yet, are the poor to be denied all display of sentiment? Is the man who can barely support his family wasting his substance and entitled to the rebuke of the charity visitor, if he spends 25 cents for a tiny tree, and a dollar for a few trinkets for the wife and children?

After all, the poor need the glamor of sentiment even more than any one else, to cover up the sordid grind of a losing battle.

The majority of our people are so comfortable that no family in our neighborhood ought to lack on Christmas day either for a good dinner, or for such little gifts and finery as will put a song into the heart of the wife and dance steps into the feet of the children. Let us all look over our own neighborhood, and try to help any one who may be heartless and hopeless on the day that should bring joy to all.

Q.—Does the life which man has received from God differ from that of the lower animals? (QUIZ.)

Answer.—We read in the Bible that —"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed (Hebrew naphach—inflated blew) into his nostrils the breath (neshamah) of lives (caiyah)." (Genesis ii, 7.) All flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl and of cattle and of beasts, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man: all in whose nostrils was the breath (neshamah) of life (calyah) of all that was in the dry land died." (Genesis vii, 21, 22.) These first two occurrences of the word neshamah in the Bible are abundantly sufficient to prove man and the lower animals have the same kind of life and breath. The theory that the distinction between man and beast consisted in a different spirit of life, a different kind of life, and that at death the one went up and the other down seems to have been very old amongst the world's philosophers; for we find Solomon, the wise man, querying. "Who knoweth (who can prove) that the spirit (ruach—spirit of life) of man goeth upward and that the spirit (ruach—spirit of life) of the beast goeth downward to the earth?" (Ecclesiastes iii, 19-21.) Solomon's own understanding he gives just previously saying, "That which befalleth the sons of men (death) befalleth beasts; even one (the same) thing befalleth them: as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea they have all one breath (ruach—spirit of life, breath of life); so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast"—in this respect, in the matter of having a different kind of life. They die alike, except that there is a Divine purpose respecting man, which in due time provided a ransom, and will in due time provide the deliverance promised from the power of death by a resurrection of the being, the soul.

CAMPAIGNING FOR MORE BUSINESS.

In spite of the difficulties of landing new industries, aggressive cities and towns are making more and more effort to get new manufacturing plants. A simple newspaper item that Smith is thinking of locating a new branch of his manufacturing business, orthat young Jones is to start out for himeslf, brings a perfect flood of inquiries from eagle eyed boards if trade.

Many of these propisitions come from prorfessional rounders, who stay in one place only as long as they get tax exemptions, and free rent. Under such conditions men with money are slow to invest their dollars.

At the same time, other cities are getting substantial new enterprises, and their population figures are jumping ahead. As a man will never get much beyond day wages unless he takes some chances, so a community will stand still if it refuses to invest money except on certainties.

When a town does land a sizable new industry permanently, the increase of population brings about a growth in retail trade and real estate values that will wipe out many previous losses. The cities where this growth have been those in which the entire business community has turned into help young men get a foot hold. ailures and mistakes were made, but a few worthless shares of stick look trifling when population growth has doubled the value of your real estate or business.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL.

In planning to make your children's Christmas happy, do not forget the little ones at the Quincy Day Nursery. The managers wish to give them the usual tree and party to which the mothers are invited, their one entertainment of the year and it needs the generous assistance of all. Contributions of money or new toys for the tree or a rocking horse for the playroom will be gratefully received by Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth, president or Mrs. Clarence Burgin treasurer.

INDIA'S NEW CAPITOL

King and Queen Participate In Laying of the Corner Stone

Delhi, Dec. 16.—King-Emperor George and Queen-Empress Mary laid the first stone of the new capitol of India, which, as was proclaimed after the durbar, is to be Delhi. There was a brilliant assemblage of ruling princes, governors and state officials. The foundation stone simply bore the date 15-12-11.

Their majesties both are enjoying splendid health in spite of the great fatigue they have undergone during the long ceremonies of the durbar.

Aged Woman's Terrible Fate

Boylston, Mass., Dec. 16.—Helpless from a fall down some cellar stairs, Mrs. Eden Williams, 65, was slowly burned to death here.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES AND JOTTINGS

A Regular Saturday Feature of the Quincy Daily Ledger

When a man does things, everyone likes to know how he does them. Such a man is W. H. Ridgway of Coatsville, Pa.

In speaking to college men recently he said: "There is one thing I want you young college men to remember as long as you live. It is this:

Whenever you observe a group of men ordering in the drinks, swilling down beer, trading chimney-stores, spitting out the profanity, be very sure that these men are rarely or never "Big Business."

Big business is nearly always "Real Religion."

Recently in taking a trip to New England speaking at schools and colleges he spoke substantially as follows:—

"You poor talked-to-sleep fellows, I pity you. Indeed I do: but you need not be bothered with me very long. My stout will consists of but three points; a preface, two propositions and a game you all can play."

THE PREFACE

The other day one of the big Atlantic liners had its hundreds of peaceful passengers thrown into great excitement by the startling cry of "man overboard!" One poor fellow who got crazy drank in the liners grog-shop and drowned himself at sea attracted more attention than the one or two thousand sensible people who let the stuff alone and kept sober and attended to their own business.

"So in the business world. The good men attract so little attention in the world that the Big Business is almost all in the hands of goodly men. Those fellows who are seen playing with the Devil are not the "Big Bosses." I am going to prove this. But to begin with I want you to assent to two propositions.

THE TWO PROPOSITIONS.

First:—Any concern that can afford to pay as much as $4000.00 for a single full-page advertisement for a single time in a big magazine, and also put it in a whole lot of other magazines, must do a tremendous big business to afford so much for publicity.

Second:—The man who can swing a business of this sort is certainly no Miss Nancy milk-sop or a man with one foot in the grave, you'd-better-be-good-for-you're-going -to -die Shadow, but a full-blooded up-to-date specimen of American manhood.

I see you all agree to these axioms.

NOW HERE'S THE GAME.

I challenge any of you, either the professors on the platform, or you students down in the audience, to name me a single one of these Big Businesses, outside of Rum and Tobacco, that I cannot tell you what kind of religious work the head of it is engaged in. As soon as you catch me I will sit down and you can go home. It is now up to you and you can end the game whenever you like. So crack ahead, I'm ready.

Yes George every fellow was awake by this time."

And so the game was begun and the following are some of the names proposed and the answers which Mr. Ridgway mad. He proved his point.

Heinz 57 varieties, Pres. Penn. Sunday School Assn. Ivory Soap, Mr. Proctor has given $500,000.00 to Princeton and his partner Mr. Gamble has just given a large sum to the International Committee for missionary work. 'Huyler's yelled a kid. Mr. Huyler was a leading Methodist and for many years President of the old Jerry McAuley Mission in New York City. And so until someone sprung Gillette Safety Razor. Here Mr. Ridgway was stuck.

The moral is this: Big Business, and in fact Most Business, i sin the hands of Religious Men.

Five or six young men from the Quincy Association have begun work in the Association this year, as a result of work done by Mr. Gay and Lester H. Clee, former secretaries of the local Association. Suitemaster is with the Hartford Association as Assistant Boy's Secretary. Bond went to Lawrence to be Office Secretary to Mr. Gay. Blanchard is with the local Association. Robertson is at Middlebury college preparing for the work. Gumb is at Brown for the same purpose.

The real work of the Association is to influence men's lives for good. In fact its real work is to develop an all-round man. This is what the Quincy Association is endeavoring each day to accomplish. In a city so often considered a "Home" city, people are sometimes apt to forget the real need that exists. For instance, at the present time in the building, occupying rooms in the Dormitory, are some fifteen or twenty young men away from home. These men are subject to a tmptation that the young man living at home has no idea of. This, to-day, is one of the most practical sides of the work. An influence is brought to bear upon them they can find no where else. In a recent talk in Boston, Mr. Farnsworth, Secretary of the 23rd street Association in New York City, told of their plan for keeping track of their men, of whom there are some two hundred. They know when they come into the Building and in what condition. Were they in regular rooming or boarding places, this would of course not be true.

The Dormitory Club in the Quincy Association is going to be an added help in this direction.

MASTER CHARLES T. KELLEY.

Funeral services for Master Charles T. Kelley, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Kelley of Standish avenue were held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home, the Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra rector of St. Chrysostom's church officiating. The Misses Jessie and Edna Fowler beautifully rendered "Abide with Me" and "My faith looks up to Thee." There was a profusion of beautiful flowers which were banked back of and around the little white casket.

The Famous Rayo Lamp
The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.
The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.
There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.
Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."
The Rayo is made of solid brass, with handsome nickel finish—an ornament anywhere.

PASSES BURNING STEAMER

Ocean Tragedy is Reported by the Scout Cruiser Chester

Boston, Dec. 16.—The scout cruiser Chester, which reached Boston yesterday from Tripoli via Malta and Gibraltar, passed the tank steamer Chesapeake of London on fire at sea Dec. 10.

There were no signs of life on her decks and her boats had disappeared, so after standing by for several hours the Chester continued on her course for Boston.

The lookout on the Chester sighted the burning steamer at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and at sundown the cruiser got close to her. Flames were pouring from the steamer's ventilators and her decks were awash. Whether she had been flooded by her crew before they left her or she had sprung a leak is not known.

A Speedy Cure for

Constipation, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver Complaints, Tired Feeling, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bad Complexion, Nervousness and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

"Bloodine Liver Pills" act gently, yet thoroughly upon the bowels, liver, stomach and digestive organs. The pills, in old and chronic cases of constipation and indigestion, act at once, without griping, nor do they leave any unpleasant after-effects, nor form a constant habit of purging, produced by other cathartic remedies.

"Bloodine Liver Pills" restore the deranged and torpid liver to its normal condition and healthful action. Remove and prevent constipation by securing a natural and regular operation of the bowels, and relieve those unpleasant symptoms which attend a diseased or morbid condition of the liver, stomach and bowels. To assist in attaining this end, the following suggestions are offered.

REMARKS. Everyone who uses pills for their action on the liver, should know that large doses rarely prove as satisfactory as small ones. Large doses simply purge and pass out of the system, usually leaving the bowels constipated, and seldom removing the cause of the trouble, or improve the general health. On the other hand, small doses develop the alterative effect of the medicine, do not irritate or constipate the bowels, but gently stimulate the liver and prevent the accumulation of bile by directing its flow into the proper channels. Therefore it is advisable to commence by taking not over one or two pills at bedtime and increase dose as necessary.

PORTLAND, ME.

GENTS:—I find your "Bloodine Liver Pills" the most effective pill I ever used. They cause no griping or constipative after effect as most liver pills do.

Yours truly,
MRS. AMADA RICHARDSON.

HOUGHS NECK MEETING

Neck with Winthrop and adduced inferences of similar conditions. He claimed that Houghs Neck, as a separate township, could maintain all its officials at an annual salary expenditure of $2500. He claimed that the salary for the various means of protection for the city of Quincy amounted to $25,000, but that Houghs Neck did not receive its fair share from that amount.

Launching forth into a pathetic strain, the presiding officers, told of the two children who were blown off the bridge at Rock Island, while returning home from school, one cold day last winter, adding that it was almost a miracle that they escaped death. These conditions were greatly deplored by him and he hoped that they would be soon alleviated.

James E. Wall, the democratic candidate for Mayor at the last election, was called and in speaking upon the topic under consideration, stated that he would rather be a selectman in the Houghs Neck township, than Mayor of Quincy under the present condition. Alluding to his mayoralty candidacy, he said that he would not ask for a recount of the votes, but instead would rest till next year, when he will produce a campaign of a most lively nature. He spoke of the conditions of the streets and asserted that never, to his knowledge, had even the accepted streets been duly regarded in the matter of care.

Neil J. Regan attempted to puncture the belief which exists in the city of Quincy, to the effect that Houghs Neck is a charitable institution, and concluded by saying that rather is Quincy indebted to Houghs Neck for the revenue received in the treasury. He said that Houghs Neck received comparatively nothing in return for the amount of taxes which it gave to Quincy.

Daniel J. Maloney, one of the live wires of the Neck, refuted many of the arguments that had been advanced contrary to the welfare of Houghs Neck. He said that many people in Quincy considered the residents as a band of "ignoramuses." To dispel this belief, he cited the instance of the Atherton Hough schoolhouse fight. He said on that momentous occasion the people of Houghs Neck were pitted against the wisdom and intelligence of the City Council. He said that the "City fathers" were about to have the schoolhouse site selected over on Sea street, in a place which was practically a swamp, nothing more than a marshy hollow. The people of Houghs Neck resented this proposition and as a result were successful in obtaining the present site, which he considered a most ideal one from every point of view, and which was acknowledged to have been the best situation by those who were at first strenuously opposed to it.

Mr. Maloney was a little more conservative in his remarks than the other speakers. He claimed that the amount for police and fire protection, scavenger work and other details, amounted to $20,000, a little more than half the amount derived from Houghs Neck in taxes. He said that Quincy was heavily plunging in debt and that Houghs Neck was sinking with it. The only way to remedy this was to establish a separate township.

John P. Moses, another ceaseless agitator of the movement, said that a tremendous debt was rapidly accruing. He stated that in 1909 the City Council appropriated $50,000 for water, and the following year $75,000. He failed to see the purpose of those expenditures and added that he also failed to see the advantages that were forthcoming from them. He said that the annual maintenance of Houghs Neck, as a town, would cost, $27,120, as opposed to $40,000 which were paid out in taxes. He said that at Rock Island, during the last six years, 158 houses had been built, and asserted that outside of a water pipe, no improvements were in evidence. There were no lights, the streets were poor and the facilities on the whole were inadequate. He cited an instance where a resident of that section went to the City officials and asked for $100. The seeker was asked the reason for the same. He added that the man who sold him his house had informed him that the City of Quincy would pay the money for blasting purposes, whenever needed, in placing pipes or mains. The inquirer was blankly informed that he had better go to the man who sold him the house and try to obtain the amount desired from him.

William H. Cavanaugh was the last speaker. He said that he was the owner of considerable property in Quincy Centre, Norfolk Downs, and Houghs Neck, having held possession of the same for about 25 years. He said that the assessed valuation of the Quincy and Norfolk Downs property had not increased at all, but added that the assessed valuation of the Houghs Neck property had increased 400 percent. He considered Houghs Neck to be a most desirable place in which to live and a place which gave evidence of making rapid strides. He said that if a township be established, he will reside in it and become a voter but concluded by saying that unless Houghs Neck is set aside from Quincy, he will sell his property and move elsewhere.

GET-TOGETHER CLUB HOLDS INDOOR PICNIC

Ball Game, Tennis and Races a Feature

A JOLLY EVENING

The Men's Get-Together club indoor picnic of Memorial church Wednesday evening was a grand success.

The ball game between those over 40 and those under 40 was one of the chief features. W. F. Blake was captain of the over 40 team. Lyndon T. Gurney was pitcher and puzzled the younger set by his old time curve. It was evident to all that at some time he must have been a star pitcher as few could bat his pitching. W. F. Cummings was catcher for the seniors and by his appearance it was hot work, as he was out of practice. Mr. Henry Hallet was the star batter of the team and scored several home runs. Mr. B. F. Thomas as short stop, being so tall, did not let a ball go over his head. Mr. Wm. Buckley played first base, and with Mr. Chas. Newcombe on second and Mr. Samuel Philbrook on third and Mr. Chas. A. Hadlock in the field the men showed that they had not forgotten how to work the bases. However the under parties beat the seniors 26 to 14. The juniors were captained by Mr. Fred Burditt and by his quiet manner outwitted the seniors especially in field work.

Councilmen Jenkins and Sodergren were fast players for the junior team, and showed that they could play ball as well as politics.

The one serious dispute of the game which umpire Rev. T. W. Davison had to settle was when Mr. W. N. Ware who fell and slid for the base and had both feet off the floor at one time, which according to the rules of indoor baseball puts a man out. But in Mr. Ware's case an exception was made to the rule.

Messrs. Goddard, Housted, Melloch, Johnson, Houston and Northrop were hard batters and swift runners. These with the buisness arguments of H. B. Wells wholly outwitted the seniors and gave the juniors the big score.

Another feature of the evening was tennis. In this Mr. Percival Hall had an easy victory over the unexperienced minister, but the pastor won over Mr. George Deans and Councilman Jenkins.

Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Foster, and Mrs. Deans entertained in the ten pen tables, while Mr. Percival Hall was champion ring thrower.

The clothespin races were won by Mr. Fred Burditt and Mrs. Melloch.

The lunch which was supposed to be simple consisted of ham, egg, chicken, lettuce, and peanut butter sandwiches, also cake, cookies, olives, stuffed dates and apples.

After lunch all had a free ride on the merry-go-round, which concluded the program of the evening.

All who were present hoped to have the Get-To-Gether Club continued.

The club has no dues or officers, and charges no admission to its meetings. Those who attend automatically become members. The meeting this week was planned by W. F. Blake, and Fred Burditt. A vote of thanks was given to those men for their work.

Newsy and Snoring Suburbanite Make Amusing Compact—Telephone Appeals to Jap Gentleman who "Needles One Bade"—Unusaul Registration of Women Voters for School Board Election—Critic Compares Cambridge Bridge Towers to Antique Sugar Shakers.

A group of commuters who daily ride between Boston and a suburb about 25 miles out are still chuckling over an incident of recent occurrence. The ubiquitous train boy had made his noisy way for about the fifth time through the smoking car, shouting his changeless tune of "Evening papers! This week's Life out today! All the evening papers! Take 'em!" An elderly gentleman who for the third time had been startled out of a comfortable nap growled irascibly, "Here, how many have you got? Seven papers and two Life? I'll buy 'em if you'll keep out of this car for the rest of the trip." The bargain was sealed and the old gentleman retired to slumber once more while the boy seated himself at the end ofthe car. Presently another commuter called the boy and animated urging and scheming was seen to be under way, during which time a quarter changed hands and the commuter reached up and abstracted the papers and magazines from the rack over the sleeping man's head and handed them to the boy. The latter shook his head dubiously, started toward the old gentleman, lost his courage, went back and started once more, pulling his coat collar around his ears and hunching his shoulders. Just as he reached the seat where the sleeping passenger snored sweetly he sung out once more his "Evening papers! This week's Life out today! All the evening—" The sleeper jumped violently and the boy flung his papers into the nearest seat and fled from the car. The curtain had best be dropped at this point, although streaks of thick blue atmosphere may even penetrate through the cracks.

A telephone engineer at a dinner amused a Boston girl by showing her a copy of a letter purporting to be written by a Japanese located somewhere to the south of the New England states. This oriental gentleman's communication to the district telephone company is well worth quoting: ".... In this country where I live at a man having them put up for peples and the peples pays for them in the falls of the year. I want to know does you that. Please write me a personal letter and tell me all about this as I am anxious to own me a telegraph sure. I think they are so useful and therefore I am a farming man and certaine needle one bade .... I want one that foth up the side of the house and one to sit at my desk and I want enough wire to go exten 3 miles and also nobs that they wrape the wire around with. How many nobs would it take for 3 mile. Dear sir, I have tole you all what I needle. Please send me a bill of this what all this corest. I would like to becamed agent for you after I gets me a telegraph. I have sever friends who I know would be glad to hear of your name. ...." It is not stated whether the prospective purchaser became a solicitor for the company, but at any rate his letter is carefully preserved and brought forth on dark days to furnish a ray of sunshine.

The long contended statement that women would vote for the school committee if they had a candidate whom they felt to be a leader and who would prove herself an impelling force in school matters to the good of the community is being proved incontestably this fall. The campaign of Mrs. Richard Y. FitzGerald for nomination and election to the Boston school committee has aroused women in all classes and occupations to rally to her standards and go forth and register for the purpose of casting a vote in her favor at the coming election. Many who have never previously thought it of any use to vote for the school committee have put their self consciousness in their pockets and sallied bravely up to the Registration desk at the City Registration office, and in a perfectly-accustomed-to-it manner gone through with the necessary preliminaries to casting their votes in January. Whether they will all have equal courage in running the gauntlet at the polling booths remains to be seen but there is a great deal of enthusiasm this year over the possibility of Mrs. FitzGerald's nomination. In her the wealthy and working classes alike feel confidence, and her effective and capable management of a number of responsible positions in Boston and New York, give assurance that she would carry excellent ideas and sound common sense and honesty to the school commitee at a time when the demand for a woman on the board is becoming constantly more clamorous. But whteher or not Mrs. FitzGerald is even nominated the fact remains that hundreds of Boston women have been stirred to their responsibilities in school government matters through her activities and have responded creditably.

Beautiful Boston appears less so to some critics. A disgruntled Hubbite, resident now in Europe, recently visited his native city after an absence of eight years. His comments on our generally accepted "improvements" and beautifications are scathing and merciless. For example:

"O ye City Fathers." Why did ye not make a beautiful, broad boulevard behind Beacon street, with a magnificent sweeping curve round behind Brimmer street? Then a handsome balustrade of granite with broad steps going down to the water at short intervals. Instead of which you have merely widened a little the Beacon street alley-way, and made at the intersection of your cheap iron rail fence a homopathic curve; I should say, the highest dilution of a curve that it is possible to make.——The interior of the Opera House seemed large and comfortable, is somewhat dull in coloring, and its exterior goes hand in hand with Symphony Hall. Words fail, however, to express how terrible to me is the Phillips Brooks monument! Why should he have standing behind him such an unutterably sad and gigantic Christ bearing a gigantic cross and looking very much displeased with Phillips Brooks, Boston's idol? It is too bad. Why should not Christ and the cross be removed and Phillips Brooks placed a little further back in his niche, to stand alone, adored by all?

"I forgot the new Cambridge Bridge with its four antique sugar-shakers; all very well were they at least twice their size, to be in proportion with the massiveness of the rest of the bridge."

We simple minded provincials had thought our new bridge and esplanade at least beyond reproach, but apparently they are quite hopelessly mundane.

REPUBLIC IS SET UP

Revolutionaries Choose Sun Yat Sen as President of China

Shanghai, Dec. 16.—As a result of an important conference of the revolutionary leaders a republican government has been established and was proclaimed today with Dr. Sun Yat Sen as president and Nankin as the capital.

It was also decided that as no prospects of peace are forthcoming, and that unless Yuan Shi Kai abandons his ideas of a monarchy, the revolutionaries will urgently continue their preparations for an attack on Pekin.

The new officials proceeded to Nankin this morning to take up their posts.

CRAZY MAN SOUGHT MISS ELKINS' HAND

Chicago Inventor Arrested as He Calls at Her Home

Washington, Dec. 16.—That Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the late senator from West Virginia, and at one time reported betrothed to the Duke of the Abruzzi of the Italian royal family, has for the last two years been harrassed by the missives of an unwelcome suitor, came to light when Samuel B. McHenry, a Chicago inventor, was committed to the government hospital for the insane on complaint of Miss Elkins.

It developed that McHenry, who is about 45, was arrested at the door of the Elkins residence. He had come from Chicago, he said, to ask for Miss Elkins' hand. He sent his card to the heiress and a servant telephoned for the police.

Of the 200 letters written to Miss Elkins by McHenry most begin with "My Darling Guardian Angel."

Anty Drudge Tells Why Mary Doesn't Object to a Big Wash.

Father—"Just look at the condition of the kids' clothes! Where do you suppose they pick up the dirt? You'll have Mary making an awful kick about the heavy wash. Why I'll bet she has to do up a dozen dresses every week for the babies?"

Anty Drudge—"More than that, son-in-law. I suppose it's nearer two dozen. But so long as she has Fels-Naptha soap on washday, Mary will never say a word."

Every mother knows what a lot of fun the baby gets out of crawling about the floor and making its tiny self just as dirty as a little pig.

But every mother has looked with alarm at the array of baby clothes to be washed on Monday morning.

And every one has seen with despair how the delicate little garments are cooked to pieces in the destructive washboiler.

But all that was before the Fels-Naptha wash-way became known.

The Fels-Naptha way means that baby's soiled clothes are cleansed quickly in cool or lukewarm water without the roasting fire, summer or winter—without the seething suds, without the terrific back-breaking rub, rub, rub.

What's the result? Why—

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selea calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Googomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

CHAPTER XVI.

"PLEASE DON'T BE ANGRY WITH ME."

AFTER Dr. Welshmere and the Apostle departed and Captain Oleson had turned in for a sleep in a veranda hammock Sheldon opened Joan's letter:

Dear Mr. Sheldon—Please forgive me for stealing the Flibberty Gibbet. I simply had to. The Martha means everything to us. Think of it, only £55 for her, $275! If I don't save her, I know I shall be able to pay all expenses out of her gear which the natives will not have carried off. And if I do save her it is the haul of a lifetime. And if I don't save her I'll fill the Emily and the Flibberty Gibbet with recruits. Recruits are needed right now on Berande more than anything else.

And please, please don't be angry with me. You said I shouldn't go recruiting on the Flibberty, and I won't. I'll go on the Emily.

I bought two cows this afternoon. That trader at Nogi died of fever, and I bought them from his partner—Sam Willis his name—who agrees to deliver them, most likely by the Minerva next time she is down that way. Berande has been long enough on tinned milk.

And Dr. Welshmere has agreed to get me some orange and lime trees from the mission station at Ulava. He will deliver them the next trip of the Apostle. If the Sydney steamer arrives before I get back plant the sweet corn she will bring between the young trees on the high bank of the Balesuna. The current is eating in against that bank, and you should do something to save it.

I have ordered some fig trees and loquats, too, from Sydney. Dr. Welshmere will bring some mango seeds. They are big trees and require plenty of room.

The Martha is registered 110 tons. She is the biggest schooner in the Solomons and the best. I saw a little of her lines and guess the rest. She will sail like a witch. If she hasn't filled with water her engine will be all right. The reason she went ashore was because it was not working. The engineer had disconnected the feed pipes to clean out the rust. Poor business unless at anchor or with plenty of sea room.

Plant all the trees in the compound even if you have to clean out the palms later on.

And don't plant the sweet corn all at once. Let a few days elapse between plantings. JOAN LACKLAND.

He fingered the letter, lingering over it and scrutinizing the writing in a way that was not his wont. How characteristic, was his thought, as he studied the boyish scrawl—clear to read, painfully clear, but none the less boyish.

He looked long at the name. Joan Lackland—just an assemblage of letters, of commonplace letters, but an assemblage that generated a subtle heady magic. It crept into his brain and twined and twisted his mental processes until all that constituted him at that moment went out in love to that scrawled signature. Joan Lackland! Each time he looked at it there arose visions of her in a myriad moods and guises, coming in out of the flying smother of the gale that had wrecked her schooner, launching a whaleboat to go a-fishing, running dripping from the sea with streaming hair and clinging garments to the fresh water shower, frightening fourscore cannibals with an empty chlorodyne bottle, juvenilely rattling on about romance and venture, bright eyed, her face flushed and eager with enthusiasm. Joan Lackland! He mused over the cryptic wonder of it till the secrets of love were made clear and he felt a keen sympathy for lovers who carved their names on trees or wrote them on the beach sands of the sea.

Then he came back to reality, and his face hardened. Even then she was on the wild coast of Malaita and at Poonga-Poonga, of all villainous and dangerous portions the worst, peopled with a teeming population of head hunters, robbers and murderers. For the instant he entertained the rash thought of calling his boat's crew and starting immediately in a whaleboat for Poonga-Poonga. But the next instant the idea was dismissed. What could he do if he did go? First she would resent it. Next she would laugh at him and call him a silly.

There was much in her willful conduct that caused him to wince in the heart of him. He was appalled by the thought of her shoulder to shoulder with the drunken rabble of traders and beach combers at Guvutu. It was bad enough for a clean, fastidious man, but for a young woman, a girl at that, it was awful. The theft of the Flibberty Gibbet was merely amusing, though the means by which the theft had been effected gave him hurt. Yet he found consolation in the fact that the task of making Oleson drunk had been turned over to the three scoundrels. And next and swiftly came the vision of her, alone with those same three scoundrels, on the Emily, sailing out to sea from Guvutu in the twilight with darkness coming on. Then came visions of Adamu Adam and Noa Noah and all her brawny Tahitian following, and his anxiety faded away, being replaced by irritation that she should have been capable of such wildness of conduct. And the irritation was still on him as he got up and went inside to stare at the hook on the wall and to wish that her Stetson hat and revolver belt were hanging from it.

Several quiet weeks slipped by. The steamer from Sydney, the Kammambo, broke the quietude of Berande for an hour while landing mail, supplies and the trees and seeds Joan had ordered. The Minerva, bound for Cape Marsh, brought the two cows from Nogi. And the Apostle, hurrying back to Tulagi to connect with the Sydney steamer, sent a boat ashore with the orange and lime trees from Ulava. And these several weeks marked a period of perfect weather.

Then came the long expected nor'wester. For eight days it raged, lulling at times to short durations of calm, then shifting a point or two and raging with renewed violence.

It was in the good weather that followed one of the house boys ran him down with the news that the Martha, the Flibberty Gibbet and the Emily were heading in for the anchorage.

Coming into the compound from the rear, Sheldon saw everything at once—first, a glimpse at the sea, where the Martha floated huge alongside the cutter and the ketch which had rescued her; and next, the ground in front of the veranda steps, where a great crowd of fresh caught cannibals stood at attention. From the fact that each was attired in a new, snow white lavalava, Sheldon knew that they were recruits. Part way up the steps one of them was just backing down into the crowd, while another, called out by name, was coming up. It was Joan's voice that had called him, and Sheldon reined in his horse and watched. She sat at the head of the steps, behind a table, between Munster and his white mate, the three of them checking long lists, Joan asking the questions and writing the answers in the big, red covered, Berande labor journal.

CAMBRIDGE WIN OVER LOCAL PATTERN MAKERS.

The Quincy members of the Pattern Makers bowling league obtained a close victory over their Cambridge opponents at the Hub alleys, last evening. Lee was high man for a single string, with a mark of 104. He was also high man for the sum total and was easily the star of the game.

SPORTING NOTES.

"Nedzo" Bennett, the fistic pride of the West Quincy district will try conclusions this evening with "Tommy" Carey, in connection with the B. A. A. bouts. Both men are aggressive boxers of the same type and both have accredited themselves in fine style in the past. Bennett has been doing some hard training during the past month and his many local followers look to him to secure a win over the Boston artist this evening.

The presentation of a watch fob to Coach Arthur Staff at the High school reception, attests to the esteem and popularly in which the former Brockton star athlete is held as well as to his efficiency in the coaching department.

A basket ball game of the high class order is billed for this evening in St. Mary's Hall, where The Cuningham Gymm and Quincy A. A. combinations come together for the second time this season. Any one who saw the last performances need be told nothing further of what is to be expected. As both are exceptionally fast contingencies, a record breaking crowd should be in attendance.

ATHLETES HONORED

At Annual Social Given In High School

THE LUCKY ONES

The annual reception to the members of the Quincy High school football squad, an event which always proves to be one of the most important social functions of the student body, took place last evening in the High school assembly hall, and was attended by fully one hundred couples including students, graduates, and friends. The hall itself had been prettily decorated for the occasion and resembled a football field, with goal posts erected at either end. A conspicious feature of the affair was the presence of two footballs, one placed at each goal post, the one bearing the inscription, Quincy 6, and the other Brockton 0, indicative of the result of the Brockton High-Quincy contest, considered to be the most important game of the season, inasmuch as Brockton High is considered the greatest rival of the local players.

The evening was spent in a most pleasing manner and the event was pronounced to have been the most successful reception ever held. The chaperons, all members of the teaching staff, included Miss Louisa R. Holt, Miss Mollie G. Brown, and Miss Bertha M. Kirmayer. Punch was served throughout the reception, and after an instrumental concert, dancing was in order till eleven o'clock. During the evening the presentation of the letters was in order and each one of the following players were given a "Q", which was attached to his coat by Miss Wanita Metherall, who had been selected to act in this honorable capacity: Captain Herbert Johnson, Everett Andrew, Roswell Bill, Edwin Brown, Maurice Blackmur, Leslie Chapman, Richard Crane, George Finlay, Phillip Halvosa, Jr., Richard Larkin, Charles McDonald ,Ambrose O'Down, Arvin Page, Samuel Prout, Curtis Southwick, Henry Trask, captain elect Leon White, Henry Trask and Clifton Young. Each player was accorded great applause and an overwhelming demonstration took place in the hall when Captain Johnson and Captain-elect White., each in his successive turn, as he stepped forward for his letter.

In behalf of the football squad, headmaster James D. Howlett, in a few well chosen words, presented Coach Staff with a handsome watch fob. Mr. Staff was deeply affected by the token of esteem and responded in a most appreciative tone in accepting the gift. His remarks were greeted with deafening applause. The music for the party was furnished by the Wollaston orchestra.

The committee in charge included the Misses Eleanor Whittemore, Ethel Hatfield, Mildred Sayward, Marion Rand, Edna Sanborn, Margaret Hunt, Elizabeth Howard and Teresa Lunt.

The ushers were Starrett White, Edwin Brown and Fred Sutermister.

BASKET BALL TONIGHT.

Three great games are scheduled in the Y. M. C. A. league for this evening. Cornell and Dartmouth, neither of which has been defeated. Penn and Brown, and Michigan and Columbia.

Michigan and Columbia are both teams in the 2nd division, having lost all of their games to date, and their captains are both out for 'blood" tonight. Each team has been outfitted with new suits and will present a fine appearance when they come on the floor.

Michigan has adopted the light blue body with a 6 in. buff stripe around the chest, and Columbia has a white jersey, with a 3 in. light blue band, diagonally across the chest from shoulder to waist.

Cornell will appear in crimson jerseys, with a 6 inch white band across the chest. The suits for Dartmouth have not yet arrived.

Penn's jerseys are navy blue, with a 6 inch crimson band around chest. These new uniforms will make the games much more interesting for both players and spectators, as it will now be possible to distinguish the players.

First game at 8 o'clock.

SUPPORT OF LEE FACTION

Question as to Who Will Receive It In Indiana

REPUBLICANS IN BAD TANGLE

State Offers No Other Candidate If Against Taft, as Predicted by Chairman, Though Roosevelt Appears to Be Regarded Favorably—Will Be Concerted Action to Send Uninstructed Delegation

Indianapolis, Dec. 16.—The assertion of State Chairman Lee in Washington that President Taft cannot carry Indiana in the next campaign left only one question to be answered, and that is whom the adherents of the Lee faction will support in Indiana for the presidential nomination.

Along this line the closest political friends of Lee said, after news of his statement had come from Washington, that Roosevelt would be the strongest candidate in the state. Immediately on the giving out of the statement by Lee at Washington it was presumed that an anti-Taft organization would be formed in Indiana. Those who are closest to Lee make the statement that there is no sentiment in Indiana for La Follette.

Lee declared at Washington that he had sent out hundreds of letters to Republican workers in Indiana and had found no real sympathy for Taft. It is known that Lee also, when he was investigating, took cognizance of the Roosevelt sentiment.

Those who work with Lee in politics say there is a strong sentiment among the farmers for Roosevelt and that the Republicans believe that Taft has done pretty well in dealing with international problems but that he has shown little discretion in dealing with home problems.

Republican co-workers of Lee say that his statement in regard to Taft was made without malice and that he made it because he realized that conditions were such that Taft could not carry the state.

Friends of Lee were asked whether they did not think it was rather bad political policy for Lee to come out in the open and speak of the probable inability of the Republicans to carry Indiana. They replied that at that he was doing no worse than Taft had done in a speech at Chicago.

When the state committee was reorganized two years ago Lee was placed in his present position by the Beveridge element and naturally since Lee made his statement at Washington there has been much curiosity as to just how Beveridge himself feels on the question.

It is generally accepted that no matter what the friends of Beveridge may say about his attitude toward the political situation, all of the Beveridge element will be out opposing Taft, and this will mean a concerted action to send an uninstructed delegation to the national Republican convention, the hope being that the delegation will find the opportunity to go to Roosevelt when his boom is sprung in the convention hall. Of course the object of the anti-Beveridge element will be to get a delegation instructed to vote for Taft for renomination.

At all events the statement made by Lee that Taft cannot carry Indiana, and the counter statements made by Harry S. B. Kealing of Indianapolis, that Taft would be the strong candidate in Indiana, shows that all attempts to smooth out the factional differences of the Republicans in Indiana have failed.

TRUST MEAT IS BARRED

Great Britain Will Not Accept It For Army or Navy

London, Dec. 16.—The British government has decided to exclude all the American meat packers against whom prosecutions have been instituted in the United States from tendering for contracts for the supply of meats to the British army and navy, pending the settlement of the suit.

The decision of the government is due to the opposition of labor and advanced Radical members of parliament to the American trusts. The contracts given out by the war office which had hitherto been secured by American firms are now expected to go to Argentina meat packers.

SNEAK THIEF MADE AWAY WITH CIGARS

Some sneak thief, while waiting in Hearn's drug store Saturday afternoon, helped himself to one of the boxes of cigars with which the show window was decorated. As usual the thief selected the most expensive. It was a bold thing to do, especially in such a public place, as a number of people are on the sidewalk in front of the windows at all times.

City Physician Dr. Henry C. Hallowell and Miss Lucy M. Hallowell, clerk to the School Committee, have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of their sister, Miss Susan Maria Hallowell, professor emertius of botany in Wellesley college, died on Friday evening at the home of Professor Mary E. CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

PASTORS AND CHOIRMASTERS.

Programs for Christmas music must reach the Ledger office not later than noon Thursday, Dec. 21, to insure publication in this paper, Friday and Saturday.

With five Democratic aldermen Somerville is no longer "the banner Republican city of the commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

No, that's a fact. The honor now surely belongs to our own city of Quincy.

Ledger advertisers report a good Christmas trade notwithstanding the unusual weather of the month and this week are anticipating a rush. Although the slogan to "shop early" has been heeded and put into practice this year, still there are many who have not yet filled their lists. Look over the Ledger ads and do not delay longer for the good things are being snapped up.

BACKWARD PUPILS.

Recommendations of an excellent nature have been prepared by the Education Conference of Boston—1915, and will be presented to the superintendent of schools for his consideration. Anything, anywhere, looking to a lessing of the 'misfits" in schools, is interesting. The following are especially good, we think.

1. That in the elementary schools extra teachers be appointed to help pupils individually or in small groups, who may be temporarily behind their classes.

2. That a plan be adopted for the progressive diminution in the number of pupils per teacher in the elementary schools.

3. That the plan of having special and ungraded calsses in the elementary schools be extended.

4. That a special "extra year" be established, to be strongly vocational, and to be given in some building removed, if possible, from the scene of the pupils' former activities.

Vocational training is taking hold in earnest in all sections of the country. It is a good thing and undoubtedly will be here to stay when once tried out.

RED CROSS SEALS.

FOR FAMILY USE.

"Harold," Mrs. Thompson began, somewhat thoughtfully, "I've been thinking a lot about you lately."

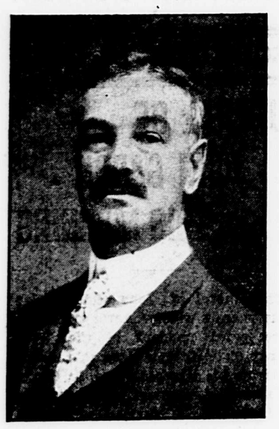
"Something nice?" Mr. Thompson questioned, with hopeful inflection.

"Do you know," Mrs. Thompson went on, quite ignoring her husband's bid for flattery, "that since we have lived here in the country, and you have gone back and forth to the city every day, you have seen absolutely nothing of the children?"

"I don't see how that can be helped," replied Mr. Thompson. "When I leave in the morning they are not up and when I come back in the evening they're in bed."

"Yes," assented Mrs. Thompson, "that is so, but you might at least send them a souvenir post card now and then."—Youth's Companion.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!



To Charles H. Penniman, belongs the credit of being the first to establish a taxicab service in Quincy. The name of Penniman has long been a familiar one with the thousands of daily patrons to the Quincy depot, for it was 35 years ago that he first begun to operate a public carriage from this station, and he has continued in the business ever since. As the demand of the public increased, so did he increase his service, until now few railroad stations have better public carriage service than that afforded the patrons of the Quincy station by Mr. Penniman.

Born in Quincy, on the anniversary of the birth of the first President of these United States, Feb. 22, 1860, he has, with the exception of one year, always made his home in town and city of Quincy. He is a direct descendant of Major Stephen Penniman, of revolutionary fame, whose ancester came from England on the good ship Lion in 1631, and whose sister Lydia married John Eliot, known in history as the Indian Apostle.

After obtaining his education in the public schools of Quincy, he was for a time employed in a local grocery. In Feb. 1877 his father, the late Stephen Penniman, purchased the depot carriage line of Loring Shaw and started Charles in the business he has since followed.

Sometime later, he, with his father, added the livery stable business to their enterprise, opening their first stable on Washington street, on the site now occupied by the Electric Express depot. From there they moved to the French stable, near the depot and later to the rear of the Greenleaf block, where the stable is nowlocated.

It has always been the aim of Mr. Penniman to keep his depot service, up to date in every particular and it was with that end in view that in 1909 he added a public taxicab to his depot service. This service immediately came into pop lar favor and so great was the demand for the car that later in the same year a second car was added.

Then came the automobile service, which also struck a popular chord, and to meet the demand, touring cars were added, so that today the service includes 7 and 5 passenger touring cars and a taxicab, all of which are in charge of experienced and careful drivers, and are in almost constant demand.

Aside from this class of service, Mr. Penniman conducts a boarding stable, for horses, in the rear of the Greenleaf block, so that his business can be said to be one of the solid firms of the city.

Mr. Penniman never aspired to public office, but is affiliated with several organizations including the Granite City club and Quincy lodge of Elks.

ALFRED SOUTHWORTH.

Alfred Southworth passed away Sunday evening at his home 157 River street, Braintree. Over a year ago he suffered a shock and has not been able to continue his labors since that time. He improved so that he was able to be out and take short walks but gradually failed and since Thanksgiving day has remained in bed.

For five years from 1894 to 1899 he was post master of Braintree, succeeding the late N. R. Proctor who besides being post master kept a general store. The office was fourth class and remained so until one year after Mr. Southworth was appointed by President Cleveland.

In 1899 M. Alonzo Minchin, a relative, was appointed and during his years the office changed to second class when connected with the Quincy post office, and later became first class as a sub-station of Boston.

For fifteen or more years Mr. Southworth was agent for Richard Long and cared for Long's block and several tenment houses, but since his illness has been unable to assume business cares.

Mr. Southworth and wife were active in the Universalist church and when the Universalists and Unitarians consolidated and erected the beautiful All Souls' church they continued their activities there. Besides a devoted wife he leaves two sons H. Ernest and Clarence E. Southworth.

HOUGHS NECK.

Up from the Neck in the Captain's wake
Came Mathew and Moses and "Faithful Dan"
And Niel, singing the song "Its all my own."
The promoter bunch with their little plan
To make Hoeghs Neck do an "up lift" stunt,
Taxes not more than three dollars a thousand,
Macadamed roads with "Nickel-plated electrics," Granolithic walks and best of all,
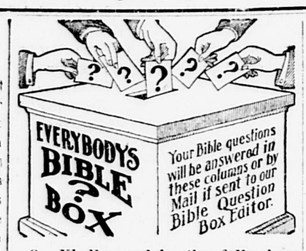
A high, High School built on top of the old one.
Up they came for the State House headed,
And there in that awesome edifice,
They told their tale and sang their song,
And back again they jogged along.
And Matt looked at John, and said with a smile,
"I guess that will hold them for a while."
Meaning of course if you do not know,
That Matt was sore on that old, old score,
Of the steam boat tax and water bill.
And John you know wants a chance to sell,
Of course at a profit as his name will tell.
And Neil with Socialistic germs,
Has filled poor Dan so he squirms, and squirms,
And there they are, the Captain a fine old chap,
But given to painting on empty air,
Mind pictures he calls them, just beware.
And Matt as honest as you could ask,
In his convictions as he states them.
But John with all his high finance
Has made the statement others heard him,
That if the town isn't really born,
He will not feel at all forlorn,
But thinks that Quincy will sit up and take notice,
But the way I look at it all "by Heck"
Town or City we'll get it in the Neck.

☞Bread is the staff of life. PRATT'S BREAD nourishes body and brain.



Q.—Kindly explain the following: —"But the fearful and the unbelieving and the abominable and murderers and whoremongers and idolaters and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death."—Revelation xxi, 8. (O. M. C.)

Answer.—The illustrations used in the Book of Revelation are the most forceful to be found anywhere in the English language. Can we conceive of a more sweeping statement than that contained in this verse as representing the final cleaning up of all that is objectionable and contrary to the high and holy things that make for joy and peace and happiness? Just as refuse is gathered and cast into the fire and destroyed, so it is here represented that all of the incorrigibly wicked and depraved will be destroyed in the "second death." The first death was the Adamic death, which passed upon all as the result of Adam's disobedience. Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man; and every man, therefore, is to be delivered from that first death at the time of the second coming of Christ, then started over the "Highway of Holiness" for eternal life. Those who resist the influence of Divine grace and fail to develop the disposition of righteousness will die the Second Death.

WAINWRIGHT IS RETIRED

Meyer Regrets Loss of Services of Aid For Naval Operations

Washington, Dec. 18.—Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright, aid for operations, was placed on the retired list Sunday, having reached the age limit of 62 years.

Secretary Meyer said he regretted that he had been unable to prevail upon Wainwright to continue in that office until the end of the fiscal year and intimated that he would ask congress to modify the law so as to permit the retention in active service of officers exceptionally qualified and in physical condition to serve in the discretion of the president or the secretary of the navy.

As it is, Wainwright will be kept near the secretary until July 1 next as a member of the general board.

MASSACRES IN ANATOLIA

Thirty-Five Hundred Armenians Reported Slain by Turks

London, Dec. 18.—Horrifying details of a massacre of Armenian Christians by Turks in Anatolia were received here in letters sent to the Armenian Relief society. They state that more than 3500 have been slaughtered, the victims including men, women and children.

Three Armenian priests who refused to accept the Mohammedan faith were tortured to death before the eyes of 300 of their followers, being hacked to pieces bit by bit while their flocks, themselves doomed to death, knelt in prayer.

The three priests chanted hymns until the pain became too great for human endurance. Two of them became insane and threw themselves upon the soldiers' bayonets, while the third made a dash for liberty and was shot to death.

BREWER IS RELEASED

Woman Suspect In Army Dynamite Plot Also Is Freed

Junction City, Kan., Dec. 18.—With the release of Rev. C. M. Brewer of Olustee, Okla., proceedings in the Fort Riley dynamiting case seem to have come to a sudden end. The military authorities say that the release of Brewer and of Mrs. Anna Jordan is a severe setback.

Private Michael Quirk, who confessed to the dynamiting, and the other five members of his company arrested, are still being held at the post. The belief that Quirk's confession was made merely that his long solitary confinement might be terminated gains ground here.

Friends of Brewer and Mrs. Jordan do not believe the charges against them will be pressed, although it is maintained that new warrants will be issued at once.

POLICE MAY HAVE MURDERER OF FOUR

Supposed Slayer of Morners Caught at North Adams

North Adams, Mass., Dec. 18.—An Italian, whose description tallies with that of Edward Donato, the farm hand sought as the possible murderer of four members of the Morner family in De Freestville, N. Y., last Tuesday was arrested here. Awaiting the arrival of police officers from Albany, the Italian is locked up.

With the exception of his cap, which is of corduroy, the man exactly fits the description of Donato sent out by the Albany police. He appeared almost exhausted, apparently from the effects of a very long walk.

Upon being questioned by the police the suspect said that he had walked from Mechanicsville, N. Y. Although admitting that he had been in Troy, N. Y., recently, he denied that he was in Albany. During the questioning he is said to have made several conflicting statements.

OPENING GUN OF INSURGENTS

PINCHOT IS FOR LA FOLLETTE

Names Wisconsin Senator as Leader and Says Renomination of Taft Is Impossible—Bass and Other Speakers Not Naming Progressive Candidate For President—Keynote of Campaign Sounded by Pinchot

Boston, Dec. 18.—The first real break in the Republican party of Massachusetts took place in Tremont Temple when Republican progressives assembled in tremendous numbers to hear and cheer Governor Bass of New Hampshire, former Congressman Record of New Jersey and Gifford Pinchot of Washington, Mr. Roosevelt's chief forester, the man who "got" Ballinger and the leader of the La Follette boom for president.

Mr. Pinchot named Robert M. La Follette as his "leader," and was mightily cheered for so doing. Bass was more cautious. He had come down from New Hampshire, he said, not to name candidates for the presidency, but to tell the progressives of Massachusetts all about the big fight started in 1906 by Winston Churchill, and to bid them go and do likewise.

Mr. Record confined himself to a declaration of the progressive creed and never mentioned an individual.

Pinchot's frankness came as a great surprise to the young men of Massachusetts who had come into the open to call themselves progressives and to dare the wrath of Senators Lodge and Crane and all they stand for in politics. When old guard scouts scented a La Follette movement behind the first formal announcement of the great meeting the young men in charge hurriedly pleaded not guilty, and said something that sounded like principles, not men.

Mr. Pinchot had been very well received by an audience as big as any that ever gathered in the Temple to hear Lodge. In three minutes he learned that the rank and file of Boston Republicans approve of his entire record in public life, stand with him on the Alaskan question and agree with him in everything else. So that, when Pinchot got ready to let the cat out of the bag, there was no gasping and no disapproval. He said:

"The progressive movement, like every other great movement, must have a leader. I realize that this meeting is not called in the interest of any candidate, but I should be concealing my own convictions if I failed to express myself on this point. Since the developments of recent months have made impossible the renomination of Mr. Taft, the country has been turning rapidly and rightly to that pioneer among progressives, a constructive statesman, full of courage and common sense, Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin."

Suppression of special privileges, the reduction of the power of corporate interests and a Republican party free from machine leaders were the keynotes of the meeting.

FARMERS' PREFERENCES

Republicans Want La Follette and Democrats Favor Wilson

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 18.—Governor Wilson of New Jersey is the favorite for the Democratic nomination for the presidency among those rural dwellers who have expressed an opinion through a plebiscite conducted by a farm periodical published here.

According to results given out last night, based on replies from more than 4000 readers of the periodical throughout the United States, 57 percent of the vote was returned for Wilson, 19 percent for Champ Clark, 8 percent for Governor Harmon of Ohio and 16 percent scattering.

La Follette received 65 percent of the vote for the Republican nomination, Taft 25 percent and Roosevelt 10 percent.

ASKS TOWN TO SETTLE

Damages Claimed by Man Who Caught Cold In Old Lockup

Providence, Dec. 18.—Clarence Allen of North Attleboro, Mass., has put in a claim against the town for $2 damages because he caught cold while languishing in the old condemned lockup awaiting arraignment on a charge of minor importance. He says it cost him that much to get rid of the cold after he paid his fine and went home.

In his petition Allen asserts that the lockup has been condemned by a state inspector of jails, and that, therefore, the town was liable for any illness which might be contracted therein.

Misused County Funds

Jersey City, Dec. 18.—Stephen M. Egan, county treasurer of Hudson county, was found guilty of misuse of the county funds. The verdict was a blow to the defendants and his friends as they had expected an acquittal or at worst a disagreement.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Annouucements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Rev. Calvin Stebbins of Framingham who occupied the pulpit Sunday morning took his text from the 12th, chapter of Jeremiah, 5th verse, and his subject was the "Struggle for Life." Character building is our work here and high ideals and steadfast aims for perfection will make individuals strong to stand firm when adversity comes; individuals of fine and firm character make national stability.

Hope, trust and a joyous outlook upon life are three foundations upon which to safely build character, but the building must be done conscientiously and painstakingly by one's self—there is no royal road to moral soundness.

"The story ofthe race Moves on slowly," declared the preacher "but it is a progressive story, kindling the hearts of men to hope for large ideals and to trust in their own ability to find dignity and truth in life."

"How the other half lives," was the topic of a very instructive lecture by the national secretary of the Social Band Public Service of the American Unitarian Association. The vestry was filled to its capacity. The next lecture will be given January 21 by William Ware Locke of Boston on "The New Americans."

The constantly increasing attendance in the Kindergarten department of our Sunday school shows that many mothers appreciate the opportunity offered to bring their children to church withthem and have them attend the Kindergarten down stairs, while the mothers themselves attend divine service upstairs. All children, whether they belong to our parish or not are cordially welcomed.

A public meeting of the Massachusetts Convention of Congregational ministers, was held in Channing hall, Boston, this morning, Rev. J. Edgar Park of West Newton spoke on "The Pilgrim Theology and Modern Thought," and Prof. Francis G. Peabody of Harvard on "The Pilgrim Spirit and Modern Life." This meeting is held annually on the Monday nearest to Forefathers' Day and is attended by Trinitarians and Unitarians alike not in the interest of amalgamation, but of co-operation and mutual understanding. Nearly all the churches founded by the Pilgrims are in the Unitarian Fellowship.

The Unitarian Sunday School Union of Greater Boston holds its monthly meeting in Bulfinch Place church this evening. Social hour from 5 to 6. Supper 6 to 7. Addresses from 7 to 8.30. This promises to be one of the best meetings of the season. Charles H. Johnson our much esteemed townsman is president of the Union and the right man in the rirght place.

The regular meeting of the Wollaston Young People's Social society will be held in the vestry Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The evening's entertainment will take the form of a Christmas party.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers' meeting will be omitted this week. Their Christmas gifts tothe church are a Church Bulletin and a Church-Seal, both of which are greatly appreciated by church members.

The Christmas meeting of the Women's Alliance is held Wednesday at 2.30 P. M. There will be music by a quartet of women's voices and solos by Mrs. Folette. Miss H. E. Turner will speak informally of her travels abroad last year.

Our church and congregation are cordially invited to a reception to be given to the Rev. and Mrs. Edward A. Chase in the Congregational church, Wednesday evening from 8 to 10.

The Friendly Service Committee of the Young People's religious Union ask for clothing and toys to be given to the needy ones in Boston. Contributions should be sent to Mr. Rollins 341 Highland avenue, or Lucien Thayer, 60 Willow street.

Anyone wishing to give memorial flowers for the pulpit on any Sunday is kindly requested to so notify Mrs. William E. Rowe, 132 Winthrop avenue.

The annual contribution to meet the expenses of the Sunday School Christmas festival will be taken at the mroning service Sunday. In case you should be prevented to attend divine service, send your contribution either to Walter J. Wellington, treasurer, or Frank A. Page, superintendent of the Sunday school.

At the Christmas service Sunday morning there will be special music appropriate for the day. The church quartet, Miss Abby Penley, soprano; Mrs. Royal Turner, alto; Irving L. Shaw, tenor, W. Bates, bass, will be assisted by Miss Marion Moorhouse, the well known violoncellist of Wollaston, who has only recently returned from a year's study abroad.

There will be a communion service on Christmas Sunday at twelve o'clock.

The annual Christmas festival of the Sunday school will be celebrated Saturday evening. Members of the school and friends are requested to be at the church promptly at half past six. A play and other good things will be given in the vestry. We hope no one feels himself or herself beyond getting inspiration from the happiness and good-will of this Christmas meeting. Come, every one come, and bring with you a useful gift to go to some perhaps otherwise presentless child among Boston's needy ones.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Splendid singing by the choir marked the morning service at 10.30 at which time the Rector preached an excelelnt sermon to a large congregatioon. Vespers at 7.30 was also well attended, the increasing number each week proving the popularity of this service.

Hon. Robert M. Washburn will speak on "The Massachusetss Legislature at this evening's meeting of the men's club. It is an open night so bring your friends and pack the parish house.

Election of officers for the Galahad brotherhood will take place is arranging for a Laymen's supper to be given in the parish house, January 2.

Saturday evening next at 7 oclock will be held the annual Christmas festival. The carol service with an address will be followed by illumination of the tree and distribution of candy and presents to the Junior and Primary members of the Sunday school. A cordial invitation is extended to all especially for older persons who delight in the joy of the children.

WASHINGON STREET CONGREGATIONAL.

Taking his text from Roman 8.28, "Work together for good," the pastor in the morning preached an exceptionally interesting sermon to a large congregation. The discourse made a profound impression. An additional feature of the service was a sweet solo by Miss Elenor Crane.

The usual praise service in the evening was also well attended. The pastor preached from Matthew 1:21. "His Name shall be called Jesus."

Of particular interest was the meeting of the Men's club at 6.45. The attendance grows weekly and it is assured that the organization will become an important aid in the extention of church work in this section

There will be the usual midweek service, Friday, at 7.30.

Saturday evening at 6.30 will be given the Children's Christmas festival. Young and old alike are cordialy invited to the entertainment which will be enlivened by good music, a Christmas tree and everything dear to the little ones at this joyous season of Yuletide.

Special services will be held in the church next Sunday with a musical program in the afternoon.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Rev. Joseph Walther preached Sunday morning on "Jesus Christ the Soul's true City of Refuge." And in the evening, continuing his series of services on "Men who did things,' on the subject "The man who despaired."

Good audiences were present at both services in spite of the inclement weather.

The Sunday school was well attended. There being 297 present. The exercises in the men's department were especially interesting. Members of the orchestra assisted in the praise service. Hon. Theophilus King of Quincy gave a magnificent address on "Assets and Liabilities" which was very impressive. Fifty eight men were present in the Walther class.

The Junior Endeavor society met as usual at 3.30 with Miss Ethel M. Campbell in charge. There was a good attendance .

"Missions in the West Indies" was the subject considered at the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6 oclock in the chapel.

Miss Gertrude Barbour was in charge. At the close of the evening service the Christmas chorus met for rehearsal under the direction of Amos D. Albee. This chorus promises to do good work Sunday morning and evening. This evening at 7.45 the Walther Men's class will hold their monthly social in the chapel. Rev. W. F. Armstrong of India will give an address on "Why I believe the Bible After Forty-two Years of Service in the Foreign Mission Field." This social is open to all the men of community as well as to the men of the church and congregation. Refreshments will be served.

Tuesday evening at 7.45 a college prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Porter 109 Taylor street. Rev. Joseph Walther will lead. Subject: "The Bible."

Wednesday afternoon at three the Woman's Foreign Missionary society will meet with Mrs. P. S. Dresser, 18 South Central avenue. Subject to be considered "Corea." The meeting will be led by Mrs. H. L. Wilson.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel. Subject: "The Birth of Jesus." This subject will continue our meditations on the "Life and Character of Jesus."

Saturday evening at seven o'clock in the chapel will occur the Christmas tree festivities of the Sunday school. The exercises will be very interesting and all friends are cordially invited to be present. Great preparations are being made for next Sunday. In addition to a concert by the members of the Sunday school which will take the place of the usual morning service there will be several selections by an ordchestra and by a choir of more than thirty voices under the leadership of A. D. Albee. This choir will sing at the evening service also when the pastor will preach a Christmas sermon. All are invited to these services.

FIRST CHURCH.

The pulpit of the First church, was occupied Sunday morning by Rev. Carl G. Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Mr. Horst's prayer at the sevice was profound and moved the congregation. He referred to the past history of the church and the present pastor, Rev. Mr. Butler.

His sermon upon the topic of "Inuence," was a masterpiece, his touching allusion to the influence of a mother upon the life of her children, stirring the hearts of his hearers.

It is hoped to make the Chistmas Sunday, one long to be remembered by the people of the church. Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, one of the foremost and ablest preachers of the denomination will conduct the service at 10.30 and the vespers at 4 o'clock, when a special musical program will be conducted by William Weston.

The Sunday school will have a special Christmas service in the church on Saturday at 6 o'clock with an address by Rev. Mr. Hudson. This will be followed by the annual Christmas party in the chapel at 7 o'clock.

Delegates from the Sunday school will attend the Christmas meeting of the Boston Sunday School union this evening at the Bulfinch place church, leaving Quincy at 5.06.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

There was an early celebration of the Communion at 8 A. M., followed by Services at the usual hours, all of which were well attended.

Thursday of this week is St. Thomas' Day. The hour of service will be at ten o'clock in the morning instead of seven as heretofore. It is hoped that the later hour may extend to a greater number the possibility of availing themselves of the privilege of attending a half hour's quiet service on Saints' Days.

Business of an important nature will occupy the Men's club, this evening. As a two-thirds vote of the membership is necessary in some matters, a large attendance is desired.

Plans for the new parish house have been approved and provide at minumum cost a thoroughly adequate and useful Parish House, the need of which is generally felt. The next meeting of the Building Committee will be on Tuesday evening.

The Sunday school carol service and Christmas Tree will be held Saturday at 6 o'clock in the church. Following the tree there will be a party for upper grades in the Parish rooms.

WHIM OF A WOMAN

It Cost Her Her Life In the Wreck of a Submarine.

DROWNED WITH HER FIANCE.

Story of a Pathetic Episode That Was Intertwined With the Tragic Loss With All on Board of the French Torpedo Boat Pluviose.

Underlying the tragedy of the loss of the French submarine torpedo boat Pluviose with twenty-seven lives when she was sunk in the bottom of the English channel by a collision with a surface steamship on May 25, 1910, was a piteous episode, involving the death of a beautiful and brilliant young Frenchwoman.

The French government suppressed the story so thoroughly that to this day the name of the young woman is not known save to those in paramount authority in the navy, but American naval officers say the fact of the happening has become known to other naval men all over the world.

The Pluviose and a sister submarine had gone out from the navy yard at Calais about 1 o'clock in the afternoon for a series of maneuvers. She was about two miles from shore and was disporting in a series of dives and risings to the surface. The feat known as "porpoising" was being accomplished with great skill, the submarine being entirely responsive to every turn of a directing wheel in her machinery. The act of "porpoising" is an imitation of the action of the porpoise in its leaps above water and prompt disappearance immediately afterward. In the submarine the maneuver is made for the purpose of scouting, the boat being brought toward the surface sufficiently for its periscope to protrude out of water, when the officer below is enabled to make a general circular survey of the water above him. Then the boat dives out of sight. In case of war she would have sighted her enemy and be enabled to proceed closely to a battleship or cruiser and discharge torpedoes directly at her foe.

In the act of thus coming to the surface the Pluviose came up directly under the channel steamship Pas de Calais. The keel of the Calais struck the submarine and tore a huge hole in her upper casement, a rent fifteen feet long and two feet wide. Into this the water rushed. The submarine staggered along with her hull just showing above the surface, her engines disabled, her crew unable to do anything to check the inrush of water. And she went down.

She had a crew of twenty-seven men. Commandant Pras was the senior officer. There were two other officers. Which one of these three it was whose sweetheart was aboard is not definitely known to the American naval officers, but they declare there is no doubt of the fact.

One of the three officers listened to the pleadings of his fiancee that she be allowed to make a trip in the submarine with him and share with him the peril that his duty so often required him to brave. He must have had a consultation with his brother officers and got their consent to wink at it, for the regulations of the French navy strictly forbid women to make any trips in submarine boats. Perhaps the very fact that it was forbidden, that if she succeeded in making a journey to the bottom of the sea in a submarine she would have enjoyed an experience the like of which no other Frenchwoman might claim, actuated her. But, whatever the conditions that brought it about, the young officer did escort her secretly aboard the Pluviose.

She wore a long oilskin coat and sou'wester hat belonging to her sweetheart, which sufficiently disguised her sex to admit of her going aboard without being challenged by any of the sentries patrolling the quay where the Pluviose lay tethered on the day that she was to make her fatal trip. And the girl, smiling over her triumph, climbed down the ladder into the little gasoline filled room and heard the orders given for the battening down of all the hatches, the firm screwing into places of these coverings and then, perhaps fascinatedly, watched the dial indicator as it told how the Pluviose was sinking deeper and deeper into the sea.

Divers who went down after the Pluviose was sunk, carrying below steel cables with which ineffectual attempts were made with huge derricks above to bring the Pluviose to the surface, reported that they heard rappings in the interior of the submarine. In any event, when, days later, the Pluviose was raised and tugged into shallow water, none that had been aboard of her was alive. She had filled completely with water. As she was raised the water poured from the great gash that had been cut in her steel casement by the Channel steamship.

Once in shallow water it was the work of only a little while to remove the covering of the conning tower. In that tower they found the young officer. And dead in his arms, with her own arms tightly clasped around his neck and her young face resting against his breast, they found the young woman.—New York World.

Diplomatic.

She (coldly)—I hardly know how to receive your proposal. You know I am worth a million, of course! Jack (diplomatically)—Yes—worth a million other girls. She (rapturously)—Oh, Jack!

It is a miserable thing to live in suspense; it is the life of a spider.—Swift.

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 18.—John E. Murphy, caretaker of the Republican headquarters in ward 1 during the last state election and a prominent polttical worker, was adjudged guilty by Judge Milliken upon both counts, the complaint brought against him charging that he had purchased a vote and had conspired to influence a voter illegally at the last election, Nov. 7.

He was sentenced to six months in the house of correction on each count, a total sentence of one year. Murphy immediately appealed and was held in bonds of $1000 for the superior court. He furnished sureties.

London, Dec. 18.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt, former husband of Elsie French of Newport, R. I., was married to Mrs. Margaret E. McKim, daughter of Captain Isaac E. Emerson of Baltimore, at Reigate, Surrey, Sunday.

The marriage occurred before a registrar. The witnesses were J. D. Langton, Miss Ethel McCormack, Roy C. Gaffar and Walter W. Ware.

For more than a year the rumors that Mrs. McKim and Vanderbilt were to be married were current in New York, Newport and Baltimore, and among the friends of the couple abroad. Every time Mrs. McKim was asked about this rumor she denied it, admitting, however, that Vanderbilt was a very good friend.

RYAN OUT OF TOBACCO

Disposes of Stock Valued at $17,167,000 to the Morgan Banks

New York, Dec. 18.—Thomas F. Ryan let it be known among his personal friends in Wall street that he would retire absolutely from the tobacco business as rapidly as reorganizations of the subsidiary companies of the American Tobacco company would permit.

He has disposed of his holdings of American Tobacco, amounting to 33,334 shares and worth at least $17,167,000, to bankers who are identified with the Morgan group of financiers. There is no evidence that Morgan & Co. have taken any of the stocks, but the street believes the firm to be interested in the deal, perhaps as bankers only.

$70,000 IN OLD BUSTLE

Here Woman Who Distrusted Banks Hid Her Money

Bolgdon Mills, Me., Dec. 18.—The 70,000 in greenbacks which was found in a bustle that was worn for years by Mrs. Mary Fassett, who died suddenly at her home in this town a few days ago, are so worn and faded that they are to be sent to Washington for redemption. None of them is of a more recent issue than 1886. Mrs. Fassett distrusted modern banking methods and always wore the bustle when outside her home.

In a search of her house after her death relatives found about $7000 hidden about the house in a hundred different places. One of the searchers picked up the bustle and was about to throw it away when his attention was attracted by a rustling of paper. Her three heirs have engaged separate counsel.

BRITISH INSURANCE BILL

Receives Endorsement of King as Parliament Is Prorogued

London, Dec. 18.—The fight for home rule for Ireland will open in February. Parliament has been prorogued until the middle of that moath. The government will introduce its home rule bill as soon as parliament reconvenes.

In his speech proroguing parliament, read to lords and commons, the king expressed his approval of the national insurance bill, which he believes will induce thrift and self-reliance and do much toward relieving the hardships of the poor.

The speech made plain that King George will sign the national insurance bill, which has already passed parliament, upon his arrival from India.

—Superintendent Maloney of the Milton post office has made plans to handle the heavy Christmas mail with less hardships for the clerks and carriers than has been the case in other years. Beginning next Friday the office force will be supplemented by an extra clerk, and for the delivery Christmas morning each of the seven carriers will be supplied with a horse and wagon. Some of the men will have to work Sunday but they will be given extra time off later.

CRUISER HOME FROM TRIPOLI

Lt. Com. Abele Tells Interesting Things About Trip Abroad

FIGHTING AT CLOSE RANGE

Lieutenant Commander Clarence A. Abele, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Abele of Adams street, this city, executive officer of the Chester which came into port at Boston Friday had some interesting things to say regarding the visit of the cruiser to the city of Tripoli and the opportunity thus afforded to see at close range the fighting between the Italian and Turkish-Arab forces.

"We had a splendid opportunity," said Lieutenant Commander Abele, "to witness some of the fighting. Our ship was anchored so that we could look up the end of one of the Italian trenches which extended from the beach out around the inland side of the city. The Turks and Arabs, dressed in their respective uniforms or costumes, were in the groves of palm trees. During the day that we spent there the Turk-Arab forces seemed to have the better of the early fighting, probably because of the shelter afforded by the trees. Later the Italians succeeded in getting a gunboat and torpedo boat destroyer close enough inshore so that they could shell the position of the Turks and Arabs and it did not take long to drive the latter's field pieces and infantry farther back. Now and then we would see a shell splash in the water of the harbor, coming from the field pieces under the trees, but the shells did no damage. Our men, of course, crowded the rigging and decks to watch the fighting.

"The city has, I believe, about sixty thousand inhabitants and of these some eight or nine thousand are Turks; the others are Arabs or tribesmen such as Fezans. Many of the Turkish officers left for Malta on the first steamer—a German boat, I believe—with many refugees. They had no sleeping accommodations in most instances and nearly all were obliged to sit up all the way. As to the reports of cruel treatment of these refugees. I heard of nothing. Neither did I find that there were being committed any such atrocities as had been reported from Tripoli against both sides. War, of course, is a terrible thing in itself, without adding to it.

"It was the opinion of Consul Wood that while the Italians were making progress they are likely to require a long, long time to conquer the enemy."

Russia Enters Protest Against the Sulzer Resolution

CREATES A TENSE SITUATION

Diplomatic Relations With United States May Be Severed If Senate Refuses to Modify Document Abrogating Treaty of 1832, Which Was Passed by House—Comes Up For Action In Upper Branch Today

Washington, Dec. 18.—A protest by Russia against the abrogation of the treaty of 1832 with that country in the form proposed by the Sulzer resolution, overwhelmingly adopted in the house of representatives, was followed by the declaration of senate leaders that, in modified terms, a resolution declaring the treaty at an end would be adopted by the senate before adjournment of that body today.

Some senators go so far as to say that the Sulzer resolution, containing various recitals said to be objectionable to the St. Petersburg government, will be adopted without amendment, but the consensus of the senate is that that body will strip the resolution of everything but a declaration of abrogation. The point upon which all seem to agree is that the senate will act today regardless of any protests that may be made and regardless of the negotiations that have been in progress between Washington and the Russian capital.

It is reported in Washington that if the senate should adopt the house resolution, which baldly declares that Russia has violated her treaty pledges, the Russian ambassador, George Bakhmeteff, will ask for his passports and quit the country.

Although the incident has been carefully guarded, it has become known that at a meeting at the White House Ambassador Bakhmeteff expressed both to President Taft and Secretary of State Knox the view by St. Petersburg that the language of the Sulzer resolution was objectionable. The meeting was a long and earnest one. It was followed by a second conference between Taft and Knox. This in turn was followed by yet another one at the state department betweeen Knox and the Russian ambassador.

News of the Russian stand quickly spread through the city and created a decided sensation, especially at the Capitol. There were a number of hurriedly called consultations.

Chairman Sulzer of the house committee on foreign relations said there was nothing in his resolution which could be construed as an insult to "sensitive Russia" and urged the senate to adopt it without modification.

The first stir over possible international complications soon was followed by another thrill when six members of the cabinet were summoned to the White House for a special meeting. Officially it was said that the cabinet had been called in council to pass finally upon President Taft's message dealing with departmental affairs. The meeting lasted more than three hours.

President Taft sent for several of the senate leaders and placed the matter before them. He is said to have urged that the resolution of abrogation be modified. The president, it is said, has not given up hope that the negotiations undertaken some time ago with the St. Petersburg government will be successful.

Republican leaders in the senate told the president that there was no hope of postponing action in the upped branch of congress. Senator Culberson of Texas, Democrat, will lead the effort today for the adoption of his resolution, which is a counterpart of the house document. Republican leaders are trying to get together on a substitute which they hope will be accepted.

Indications are that a resolution, agreed to by both houses, will be in the hands of President Taft not later than Wednesday. There is no thought that the president will veto the resolution in its final form.

Boston Jews Take Action

Boston, Dec. 18.—More than 3000 Jews crowded Faneuil hall last night, while 3000 more, unable to get in, waited outside, eager to add their voice to the unanimous vote that the treaty with Russia be abrogated unless that country changes its attitude towards traveling American citizens of the Hebrew faith.

The meeting was tense and earnest throughout. Every one of the speakers talked with a fervor that meant a single purpose. Each was heard with an attention that meant serious thought and an appreciation of the magnitude of the question.

Big Order For Steel Pipe

Calgary, N. W. T., Dec. 18.—The largest order for steel pipe ever placed in the world, it is believed, has been let by a local firm. It has ordered from the United States Steel corporation 300 miles of pipe at a cost of about $3,000,000 to carry natural gas from Bow island to Calgary.

M'NAMARA PLANNED MANY EXPLOSIONS

Were to Come Off Simultaneously, Says McManigal

Indianapolis, Dec. 18.—John J. McNamara had planned to employ more men in his dynamiting activities so that simultaneous explosions could be executed in all parts of the country, according to the statement in the confession of Ortie E. McManigal, on which the federal grand jury deliberated. According to McManigal John J. McNamara said to him:

"I want to get six or eight good fellows. I am going to station them around the country and I am going to have explosions come off simultaneously, so that they will wonder how the fellow could be in all the cities at once. That ought to make them sit up and take notice."

The grand jury also inquired into the relation between the $1000 paid monthly to John J. McNamara by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers for "organizing purposes" and the fees given to McManigal.

Mrs. F. Curtis, 18 Quarry St., Quincy, Mass., says! "We used Doan's Kidney Pills in our family with good results and in 1908 publicly endorsed them. At the present time I am pleased to confirm that statement. A member of my family was in bad shape from kidney complaint. He used plasters and several well-known remedies, but did not improve until he began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, which were obtained at Cox's Drug Store. They effected a cure in two weeks and restored him to better health than he had enjoyed for years. SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon Islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His inclination of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Jon Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew in his schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere bride.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Olsson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him, to save the Martha.

"What name?" she demanded of the black man on the steps.

"Tagari," came the answer, accompanied by a grin and a rolling of curious eyes; for it was the first white man's house the black had ever seen.

The black stepped down, and another mounted to take his place. But Tagari just before he reached the bottom step caught sight of Sheldon. It was the first horse the fellow had ever seen, and he let out a frightened screech and dashed madly up the steps. At the same moment the great mass of blacks surged away panic stricken from Sheldon's vicinity. The grinning house boys shouted encouragement and explanation, and the stampede was checked, the new caught head hunters huddling closely together and staring dubiously at the fearful monster.

"Hello!" Joan called out. "What do you mean by frightening all my boys? Come on up."

"What do you think of them?" she asked, when they had shaken hands. "And what do you think of her?" with a wave of the hand toward the Martha. "I thought you'd deserted the plantation and that I might as well go ahead and get the men into barracks. Aren't they beauties? Do you see that one with the split nose? He's the only man who doesn't hail from the Poonga-Poonga coast, and they said the Poonga-Poonga natives wouldn't recruit. Just look at them and congratulate me. They're men, every last one of them. I have such a long story I don't know where to begin, and I won't begin anyway till we're through with this and until you have told me that you are not angry with me.

"Ogu, what place belong you?" she went on with her catechism.

But Ogu was a bushman, lacking knowledge of the almost universal beche de mer English, and half a dozen of his fellows wrangled to explain.

"There are only two or three more," Joan said to Sheldon, "and then we're done. But you haven't told me that you are not angry."

Sheldon looked into her clear eyes as she favored him with a direct, untroubled gaze that threatened, he knew from experience, to turn teasingly defiant on an instant's notice. And as he looked at her, it came to him that he had never half anticipated the gladness her return would bring to him.

"I was angry," he said deliberately. "I am still angry, very angry"—he noted the glint of defiance in her eyes and thrilled—"but I forgave, and I now forgive all over again. Though I still insist"—

"That I should have a guardian," she interrupted. "But that day will never come. Thank goodness, I'm of legal age and able to transact business in my own right. And, speaking of business, how do you like my forceful American methods?"

"Mr. Raff, from what I hear, doesn't take kindly to them," he temporized, "and you've certainly set the dry bones rattling for many a day. But what I want to know is, if other American women are as successful in business ventures?"

"Luck, 'most all luck," she disclaimed modestly, though her eyes lighted with sudden pleasure, and he knew her boy's vanity had been touched by his trifle of tempered praise.

"Luck be blowed!" broke out the long mate, Sparrowhawk, his face shining with admiration. "It was hard work, that's what it was. We earned our pay. She worked us till we dropped, and we were down with fever half the time. So was she, for that matter, only she wouldn't stay down, and she wouldn't let us stay down. My word, she's a slave driver. An' the Lord lumme, the way she made love to old Kina-Kina!"

"He was older than Telepasse and dirtier," she assured Sheldon, "and I am sure much wickeder. Now I must run and wash up. Did the Sydney orders arrive?"

"Yours are in your quarters," Sheldon said. "Harry, for breakfast is waiting. Let me have your hat and belt. Do, please, allow me. There's only one hook for them, and I know where it is."

She gave him a quick scrutiny that was almost womanlike, then sighed with relief as she unbuckled the heavy belt and passed it to him.

"I doubt if I ever want to see another revolver," she complained. "That one has worn a hole in me, I'm sure. I never dreamed I could get so weary of one."

Sheldon watched her to the foot of the steps, where she turned and called back:

"My, I can't tell you how good it is to be home again!"

"And Burnett said, 'Well, I'll be d——d! I beg your pardon, Miss Lackland, but you have wantonly broken the recruiting laws and you know it,'" Captain Munster narrated as they sat over their whisky, waiting for Joan to come back. "And says she to him, 'Mr. Burnett, can you show me any law against taking the passengers off a vessel that's on a reef?' What could Burnett do? He passed the whole hundred and fifty, though the Emily was only licensed for forty and the Flibberty Gibbet for thirty-five."

"But I don't understand," Sheldon said.

"This is the way she worked it. When the Martha was floated we had to beach her right away at the head of the bay, and whilst repairs were going on, a new rudder being made, sails bent, gear recovered from the niggers, and so forth, Miss Lackland borrows Sparrowhawk to run the Flibberty along with Curtis, lends me Brahms to take Sparrowhawk's place and starts both craft off recruiting. My word, the niggers came easy. It was virgin ground. Since the Scottish Chiefs no recruiter had ever even tried to work the coast. When we filled up we came back to see how the Martha was progressing."

"And thinking we was going home with our recruits," Sparrowhawk slipped in. "Lord lumme, that Miss Lackland ain't never satisfied. 'I'll take 'em on the Martha,' says she, 'and you can go back and fill up again.'"

"But I told her it couldn't be done," Munster went on. "I told her the Martha hadn't a license for recruiting. 'Oh,' she said, 'it can't be done, eh?' and she stood and thought a few minutes."

"And I'd seen her think before," cried Sparrowhawk, "and I knew at wunst that the thing was as good as done."

INFIDELS WILL BE SWEPT AWAY

War, Famine and Pestilence Predicted by Sandford

PREACHES A RECORD SERMON

Talks, Prays and Sings For Nearly Ten Hours Without Once Leaving Pulpit at Shiloh, Most of His Audience Remaining Until Benediction Is Pronounced—Says He Has North America by Hair of the Head

Durham, Me., Dec. 18.—For nearly ten hours Sunday Rev. Frank W. Sandford, the leader of the Holy Ghost and Us society, who today is to appear in the United States district court at Portland for sentence on a charge of having been responsible for the death of six of his followers, stood in the pulpit at Shiloh talking, preaching and praying.

Of the 600 odd men, women and children who make up this strange religious colony hardly one was absent from the services, some even being brought in from the hospital on stretchers.

Outside the day was gray and dreary. The hilltop was white with snow and flakes of white fell intermittently, only to be followed by drizzling rain. Inside the temple, where the followers of this man, who, nineteen years ago yesterday, penniless and alone, set out to evangelize the world, were saying their goodbys, the atmosphere was equally as cheerless.

"Hell itself cannot hurt me," Sandford declared in referring to possible banishment. "God has done so much for me that nothing hurts."

The service started at 9 o'clock in the morning. It was 6:41 last evening when Sandford pronounced the benediction. Many of the people stayed through it all without dinner or supper, and not once did Sandford or his elders leave the platform.

Taking the entire book of Revelations for his text, the preacher called upon two of his leaders, Elders McKenzie and Hoad, to take turns at the reading. As one or the other would complete a passage, Sandford would launch forth into a sermon, then pause while another verse or chapter was read. Frequently he would fall upon his knees and pray or call upon the audience to sing while Hastings and Wakeman played upon the Golden Harps. One of the favorite hymns with the gathering was "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

In the course of his remarks Sandford predicted war, famine and pestilence. "War, war, war, from the Atlantic to the Pacific," he declared to be in sight. "God will sweep the earth of infidels by war, famine and pestilence," was one of his predictions?

At another time the preacher predicted the early coming of Christ. "You will not have many years before you will see the Son of God come, I promise you," he said. "I shall have perfect peace when that day comes. I have the keys to death and hell in my hands.

"I've got North America by the hair of the head," the speaker exclaimed, and declared that "if I go down, North America will go with me. I'll be a man of God wherever I go, and I'll turn this old world upside down no matter where I go. I never had North America so much in my charge as I have since I stood before the bar in Portland."

The Shilohite leader predicted that one day soon the Shiloh denomination would enfold the entire world, having survived all other denominations. But that, he said, would take some time.

After nearly ten hours of exhortation, prayer and song, the gathering was ordered forward and on its knees by the leader, and then, accompanied by the harpists, closed the picturesque day with a burst of song. "Just as I Am, Without One Plea," "Lord That We Fear and Love" and "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," were the most popular with the emotional leader, whose voice was clear among the hundreds that participated in the volume of what he said was "Thanksgiving." The impressive meeting was closed with a solemn benediction from the leader.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOT GRIDDLECAKES.

BREAKFAST on Christmas morning should be a simple affair. A little fruit, chipped beef, eggs or fried fish with some kind of nice biscuit or griddlecakes will be greatly appreciated.

The making of the griddlecakes need not be much of a task to the housewife for, with all members of the family at home, there should be plenty of willing hands to attend to baking the cakes.

If the batter from which the griddlecakes are made is sufficiently light there should be no fear of indigestion from the eating of the hot cakes on Christmas morning when every one is likely to have plenty of exercise and the dinner is almost sure to be a late affair.

Some Rules to Follow.

When baking these breakfast cakes always be sure that the griddle is hot when you begin. See also that it is well greased.

Butter, lard or beef fat applied to the griddle with a clean rag will keep the cakes from sticking. Hold the rag on the end of a fork when you use it.

If bubbles start up in the batter as soon as the cakes are dropped on the griddle, then the fire is too hot. Move the griddle back on the range, where it will receive a little less heat.

If the bubbles do not appear for a long time and the top of the cakes become hard and leathery then you have not enough fire under the griddle. Stir it up. The cakes should be a nice golden brown when done. Each side should be thoroughly baked before turning. A double baking will make them tough.

What to Bake.

Batter Cakes.—Here is a recipe so simple that the youthful cooks of the family may be allowed to try it. Use four cups of flour, a teaspoonful of baking soda, a teaspoonful of salt, two well beaten eggs, and four cups of sour milk. Sift flour and soda together, then stir into these the sour milk and eggs. Beat well and bake on a well greased griddle.

Flannel Cakes.—Take one pint of flour, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one and a half teaspoonful of baking powder. Sift these together. Add one well beaten egg and one and a half cupfuls of milk. Mix to a smooth thick batter and bake on a hot griddle.

Buckwheat Cakes.—Take a pint and a half of tepid water and to it add four tablespoonfuls of bakers' yeast, if you can get it, or as much compressed yeast as will make a loaf of bread. Pour this into a bowl, add a little salt and then stir in as much buckwheat flour as will make a thick batter. After beating, cover and set in a warm place to rise. In the morning add three tablespoonfuls of molasses, a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in about three tablespoonfuls of milk. Beat the ingriedients together and bake on a well heated griddle.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

MEMORIAL ATLANTIC.

The Christian Endeavor social of Memorial church Saturday evening proved an enjoyable affair. In one of the games Guy Aldridge won a prize for modeling a wreath out of gum and Miss Ruth French for guessing advertisements. Other games were played after which refreshments were served and then the young people filed into the adjoining room where a Christmas tree stood in full decoration.

The Organ fund received another lift when the Monday Evening club voted to turn over to that object the money in its treasury amounting to forty-six dollars.

The Sunday school is to give a concert Sunday evening under the direction of Mrs. Lyndon Gurney. The senior chorus will sing.

SECOND TEAM LOSES CLOSE GAME.

Although the members of the second team of the local association entered the Milton basket ball court in anything but the best of condition, still, it was only after a most gruelling struggle, that the Cunningham Gym second combination, was able to emerge with an 11 to 10 victory. The game itself was marked by many interesting and spectacular features contributed by players on both sides, and so closely was it played throughout that it demanded the full attention of every one present.

Manning the star forward of the local team, besides having his head done up in bandages, was suffering from a sore knee, and was thereby prevented from displaying his usual form. Jenkins was injured during the game, and only his remarkable courage permitted him to remain in the lineup to the end. The local players made rapid strides towards the end of the game and the Milton spectators began to assume an anxious attitude when Manning hurled the ball through the loop hole on two successive occasions.

The team play was greatly effective and had not the whistle been blown for the end the endurance of the local boys would have enabled them to annex another victory. As it was, the game was lost on fouls, the Read brothers obtaining no fewer than five. The fair and impartial treatment accorded both teams by referee Hoyt, was highly commended by those inattendance. For the home team, the Reid brothers and Hern played well, while Manning and M. Chapman excelled for the local aggregation. The summary:

QUINCY IN NEW DISTRICT

Leaves Tenth To Become Part of the 14th

COMMITTEE NEARLY FINISHED

The special committee of the legislature on the redistricting of the state into sixteen congressional districts, has practically completed its work. Under the recent census the state is entitled to sixteen representatives in congress, instead of fourteen. This made it necessary to redistrict the state.

By the plan as now laid out, the three banner Democratic districts, the 9th, 10th and 11th, are all in the limits of the city of Boston. Quincy and Milton, which were in the Tenth district, will be in the Fourteenth district, the one now represented by Congressman Robert O. Harris.

Under the new plan Congresman Harris will have a new district to get acquainted with, for from him the committee has taken much territory to constitute what is called a New Bedford-Cape district. To make it the committee has taken from the present 13th district Dukes and Nantucket Counties. Acushnet, Dartmouth, Fairhaven and New Bedford in Bristol County and Marion, Mattapoisett and Rochester in Plymouth County.

The rest of the district is made up of all Barnstable County and these towns from the present 14th District; Cohasset in Norfolk County, Bridgewater, Carver, Duxbury, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Hull, Kingston, Lakeville, Marshfield, Middleboro, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, Rockland, Scituate and Wareham in Plymouth County.

The reconstruction of Congressman Greene's district, and the carving out of the new New Bedford-Cape District, leaves Congressman Harris with but a remnant of his present, the 14th District. Of his present territory, he retains only his home town of East Bridgewater, Brockton, Abington, Hingham, West Bridgewater, and Whitman, with a total population of only 30,184.

To pad the district out, Quincy, with a population of 32,642, and Milton, with a population of 7924, are taken from the 10th district, Hyde Park (Ward 26 of Boston,) Weymouth, Holbrook, Avon, Foxbury, Sharon, Stoughton, Canton, Norwood, Westwood, Dedham, Braintree, Randolph, Medfield and Walpole, rom Congressman Weeks' district. This tentative plan, if carried out, will give Congressman Harris a district of just about 210,000 in population.

The cities and towns that will comprise the new Fourteenth district under the new order of things will be as follows:

NORFOLK COUNTY.

Avon	Norwood
Braintree	QUINCY
Canton	Randolph
Dedham	Sharon
Foxboro	Stoughton
Holbrook	Walpole.
Medfield	Westwood
Milton	Weymouth

PLYMOUTH COUNTY.

Abington	Hingham
BROCKTON	West Bridgewate
East Bridgewater	Whitman

SUFFOLK COUNTY.

WHIST AND POOL SCORES.

The third in the series of whist and pool tournaments, between the members of Quincy and Ave Maria councils, Knights of Columbus, was held Saturday night at the rooms of Quincy council. The result of Saturday's games were Pool, West Quincy 284, Quincy 223, Whist, Quincy 186, West Quincy 113.

Once upon a time an American taunted an Englishman. "How can you endure to be taxed to support your idle nobility?" exclaimed the American warmly.

Then the American paid $10 a ton for his coal in order that the directors of the trust might procure dukes and things for sons in law.

This fable teaches that there are almost as many ways of paying taxes as of dodging the same.—Detroit Journal.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

"Nedzo" Bennett, the fistic pride of the West Quincy district, and a member of the Quincy A. A. defeated "Tom" Carey in a special catch as catch can bout in connection with the B. A. A. tournament, held Saturday evening.

The bout resolved into a warm contest and in the first round, things did not look very favorable for the local boxer. Carey was very aggressive at this period and succeeded in putting Bennett to his knees and in getting in a number of jolts and jaw hooks.

But a decided turn was noticeable in the second round. The Quincy artist lost no time in getting back at his opponent and landing several effective blows on the face and jaws of his opponent. The result was, that Bennett rendered Carey completely helpless and the bout had to be called at the finish of the second round. Bennett had put in some great training for the event and his energies were certainly well spent He is now in the pink of condition and from his performance, should bear watching in his future bouts.

The strong St. Alphonsus quintet will be the next attraction for the Quincy A. A. team in St. Mary's hall The game is scheduled to take place Thursday evening, and as both teams are of an even calibre, a large attendance of fans should be present.

The records of the various meets held this fall and the standing of the different amateur runners, show Franz Marceau, the former star Quincy High miler, to be well up among the leaders. He is the seventh man on the list, having a total of 37 points to his credit. He has won five first prizes and four second prizes .

Edwin Brown has been appointed assistant manager of the Quincy High football team for next season.

QUINCY WINS FROM MILTON.

The senior basket ball team of the Quincy A. A. added another glorious victory to its list Saturday evening when it sent the formidable Cunningham Gym quintet down to a 43 to 31 defeat in the gymnasium of the Milton association. The game was witnessed by fully three hundred spectators and the exhibitions of the first teams, added to the close and exciting contest furnished by the second teams of both associations, caused those present to acknowledge having been treated to basket ball playing of the extraordinary variety.

Powell, the star all round athlete of the Milton association, held down the pivot position for his team mates and accredited himself in a splendid manner, as can readily be seen from the fact that he caged eight baskets from the floor and secured a goal from foul. He was the conspicuous star of the game, although he was closely pressed by "Patsy" Duggan who made seven baskets in a sensational manner. Boyle played a fine game and displayed, throughout, his best form of the season.

Kelly was injured in the second half of the game and was forced to retire in favor of Hobart, who gave a good account of himself during his short stay in the game. The team work of the Quincy forwards was highly noticeable, O'Rourke, coming in at all times for his full share of efficient work. The summary:

EAGLES WIN AGAIN.

The long postponed game in the New England league, between the Fore River Eagles and J. and P. Coates, took place Saturday. The ground, despite the recent heavy rains was in fair order. Coates travelled with a broken team, and were able to pick up three substitutes, but played throughout the game with ten men. The Eagles, in like fashion, were minus Rennie and Sharples. At 3.15 the Eagles started and play went to Coates' ground. Ward with a good kick, sent the leather back, and Hudson got possession. Aldridge kicked out. The corner kick was well given, but Rockley sent down the field with a pretty kick. Jack McDonald pulled up Pendelton who passed out to Scott, and in turn Rockley had a fine try for goal. Hendry saved. The kick out found touch close to the visitors' goal where Ward Cleverly beat McDonald, and for a short interval the play remained at mid-field, Carruthers sent in a nice cross the ball coming to Moran, but he shot over the bar. The kick by Hendry was well returned and in an instant Pendleton and Colman were back to the Eagle goal, but Moran sent them right about and play travelled from goal to goal. Moran had a try for points, but the ball rolled over the bar. A free kick was awarded the Eagles, the ball landed in front of goal. A melee followed, and Hudson scored the first goal of the game. Coates took play well up the field and pressed hard, until Melville gave relief. "Dan" McDonald raised the hopes of the Eagles' supporters with a brilliant run and with no one to pass but the goal keeper, he let drive but the shot went wild. Hallon sent his forward down the field in grand style until they were stopped by Carruthers, who sent in to touch. Campbell by a long kick sent the Eagles to the threadmakers' goal, but Carruthers sent in a poor shot. Jones in clearing sent the ball over the line for corner kick. Burns cleared in fine style and Ward had a fine run. The visitors were playing a splendid game and a plucky one, even with a man short, and truly the odd as well as luck wereagainst them. Half time whistle blew with Coates playing close to Fore River goal.

After an interval of two minutes, Coates resumed the pressure, until Boyd relieved, "Jack" McDonald sent in a fine kick, and "Dan" McDonald, who had followed the ball sent in a fine pass, and Elliot saw the ball safe in the net for the second goal. Ward was prominent as resuming with clever feeding ahead, but the forwards could not finish, due greatly to the hustling tactics of the home defence. Boyd had a fine run, and how Harrison managed to miss an open goal, with Jones on the ground, was astonishing. The visitors took up matters again, but their play was characterised by a sort of indecision and jerkiness, the forwards not moving too smoothly. Relief was only brought to the Eagles when Coleman kicked over. Carruthers had sent across three danger-spelling centres, before one was taken advantage of by Harrison, who without much effort, succeeded in putting in the third goal of the game. Carruthers, after a fine run by Elliot, sent in a fine shot, but Jones saved in dandy style. A corner kick was given the Eagles, but Ward started on a great run, and this was the best of the play, but before he could part with the ball he slipped and fell. A foul by Boyd, brought the visitors again to within scoring distance, but Pendleton sent out of play. Campbell started a fine combined run, he passed to Boyd and he sent across to Carruthers but unfortunately he was given off side. A series of free kicks followed and once again the visitors attacked the Eagles' nest, but McDonald sent them back, and immediately after "Jack" McDonald fouled and a kick was given in a dangerous position. But McDonald retrieved and sent the ball down the field in fine fashion, but Ward and Burns blocked, and an instant later Burns missed and Jones was called up to repel a vicious attack by the Eagles. After three attempts to score, Jones was somewhat lucky in sending the ball well up the field, but Harvey again sent them back. Try as they would, the visitors could not get beyond the backs and McDonald and his partner were playing a splendid game. Pendleton made a great bid for goal with a grand shot. The whistle sounded time, leaving Fore River winners by 3 goals to 0.

The best of the visitors were Ward, Hallam and Pendleton, while for the Eagles, Moran, Campbell, and Harrison played a great game. The most conspicuous man on the field was "Dan" McDonald. eH is quick and clever, but maybe a wee bit too hasty at goal when a "good thing" was on.

BASKET BALL RESULTS.

In one of the fastest and hardest games of the season, Dartmouth downed Cornell Saturday night by a score of 24 to 22. Both teams scored freely and this fact added much to the enjoyment of the game from the spectators' viewpoint. Capt. Trask of Dartmouth, as usual was the high score man, with a record of 5 goals from the floor. He was closely followed by Ernie Pletch, however, who was the dark horse of the evening for he succeeded in getting away from his man often enough to score four baskets. His work really won the game for his team, for the score was at all times close. Estey led the losers with four baskets to his credit, most of which were long distance shots. Esteys' work as a guard was much superior to that in his former position of forward and he will undoubtedly be a fixture in his new place.

Second Game.

The game between Penn and Brown was the roughest and poorest played of the evening. Both teams "covered" so closely that ties for baskets were few and far between, although "Billy" Childs, Captain of Brown had plenty of chances to score. The popular leader of the Brown team must have lost his "shooting eye," for he only caged one goal during the evening. Frank Tirrell also had a bad night, for he only secuerd one goal. Pinel was the best man for Penn with 3 goals to his credit while R. Corthell got 3 for Brown.

Third Game.

The Michigan-Columbia game was up to all expectations, for it was fast and furious from the blow of the whistle. Capt. McArdle of Michigan was the bright and shining star of this contest, for he scored 5 goals from the floor and also did the bulk of the passing and covering. K. Woods guarding of Johnnie Wilson was also very good, for he succeeded in holding the Columbia leader down to one goal.

Porter was the best scorer for Columbia, with 3 goals. This forward would undoubtedly succeeded in scoring many more baskets if he could have secured the ball, but the backs of his team could only throw the ball about half-way up the floor. Allstein, the center of the losers, must have thought he was playing foot ball from the way he dove for the ball on several occasions. Herbert Lavey and Verner Johnson furnished much amusement for the spectattors by their actions in endeavoring to capture ball in one play in second half. Neither one ofthem could pick the ball up and it seemed that they were trying to play "soccer" instead of basket ball.

Only three teams are now left in undefeated class in the Y. M. C. A. league for Dartmouth succeeded in downing Cornell in one of the fastest and hardest games thus far played. Harvard, Army and Dartmouth now lead the league followed closely by Penn, Tech and Cornell, who have each lost one game. Then Michigan and Yale come with one victory and two defeats followed by Columbia, Brown, Navy and Carlisle.

His Thoughtful Wife.

"I hate to boast," said a Cleveland lawyer, "but my wife is one of the most economical women in the world. The other day she told me she needed a new suit. I said she ought to have it, by all means, but asked her not to spend a big bunch of money without letting me know about it. Well, the next day she said: 'The tailor said he couldn't make that suit for less than $150. I thought it was too much, but told him to go ahead.'

"'Well, I suppose it is all right,' I said, 'but why didn't you consult me first?'

"'Why, dearie, I didn't want to spend car fare for two visits.'

"I tell you, it's these little economies that count, eh?"—Cleveland Press.

AN ARDENT SUPPORTER OF THE BIBLE

Rev. W. F. Armstrong Addresses Walther Men's Class

PRES. HARDY PRESIDED

The bible found an ardent supporter of its every word, line and verse in Rev. W. F. Armstrong of India who delivered an address at the monthly social of the Walther Men's class on Monday evening entitled "Why I believe the Bible after forty-two years of service in the foreign mission field."

President Hardy presided and the speaker was introduced by Rev. Thomas S. Barbour who spoke of the speaker's work among the tribes of the east and of his intimate knowledge of their religions.

Prefacing his remarks with a brief sketch of the oriental religions Mr. Armstrong said he was concerned at the report that the friends at home did not count as much on the Bible as formerly.

"Don't take away our armor," said the speaker. Some say that after all the Bible is only a book and that Christ is everything. How long will we have Christ after the Bible goes.

In enumerating some of the reasons he believed in the Bible he emphasized the fact that the Bible was one complete book. It was 1600 years in the making, from Moses to John. No individual man could have written it but the same purpose and character is seen throughout.

The speaker discredited the idea that the Bible was Jewish folk law. There are but two alternatives left. First that the Devil made it and that cannot be so, for it tells of his machinations and his doom.

Individual man, the Jewish people, the Devil, God. The first three have been refuted. I can think of no fifth alternative.

It has been bruited about that the Bible is faulty. This can be proved by outside testimony and I would say if it were found tripping in the things that could be tested I would be wary in trusting it. It will bear investigation however.

In support of this, Mr. Armstrong told of many cases where the Bible had been thought faulty, had later been proven exactly correct by later discoveries in science and history.

The speaker praised the variety of

MUSICAL PROGRAM

The last meeting of the year for the members of Quincy Chapter, No. 88, Order of Eastern Star, took place Monday evening in Electa Hall and was largely attended. After the business program was concluded, the remainder of the evening was given over to enjoyment, in the form of a social entertainment furnished under the direction of a committee of the members taken into the chapter during the year, headed by William Tarbox as chairman.

An invitation to be present was forwarded to President Taft, who through his secretary, sent a communication expressive of his regret at being unable to attend. This letter was read by Mr. Tarbox at the beginning of the program. Piano duets were rendered by Miss Clara Call and Miss Mildred Crowley. Master Sydney Ros, soloist at Christ Church, received many encores for his singing and rendered "Peace at Rest" and "Jerusalem" in a manner indicative of professional talent. The readings of Mrs. Isabelle Davis were also highly appreciated.

After a repast, consisting of ice-cream, coffee, cake and sandwiches had been partaken of, dancing was enjoyed till a late hour.

CRYSTAL WEDDING.

In observance of their 15th wedding anniversary, a number of friends invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Prime of Beacon street, Quincy Point, Monday evening, and spent the evening in a most enjoyable manner. The married couple were the recipients of many presents the majority of which were of crystal, indicative of the 15 years' wedlock through which Mr. and Mrs. Prime have passed.

Friends were present from various places and the musical program was furnished by a number of those who were in attendance. Miss Margaret Provost assisted on the piano, while Miss Alice Pinel did the honors with the violin. The gathering broke up late in the evening after a most gala event.

11 GRANITE STREET

Quincy, Mass.

LAST REGULAR MEETING OF THE YEAR PROVED TO BE ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT. MANY MEASURES PASSED INCLUDING INCREASE IN SALARIES OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH

Special Committee Appointed To Consider Changes In City Charter Makes Report

The meeting of the City Council, Monday evening, was the last regular meeting of the year and in fact one of the most important, from the fact that some of the most important measures acted upon by the present Council, were passed. These included the raising of the salary of the Mayor from $1,000 a year to $2,500 a year and the appropriating of $38,000 for the widening of Hancock street, between Granite and the junction of School and Elm streets to a uniform width of 65 feet. The money for thsi improvement is borrowed under the special act of the legislature of 1899, which allows the city to borrow money outside of the debt limit for street improvements. The loan extends over a period of ten years. This amount, however, is only sufficient to take the land necessary for the widening and an additional appropriation of $25,000 will be required later to do the construction work.

At one time it was proposed to do this work under the act authorizing the assesment of betterments on the abutters, but after due consideration by the Street Committee, it was decided not to do it in that way.

Other important matters disposed of, was the increasing the salary of the members of the Board of Health and the appropriation of $2,600 to purchase the land upon which the portable stone crusher is now located.

Councilman Sodergren was the only absent member.

Several of the new Councilmen were present in the audience. They included Councilmen-elect Hobbs, Gauthier, Ross, Barker and Cunningham.

JURORS.

A venire was received for the drawing of Jurors for the January term of the Superior Court. The Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Nowland, drew the following according to law: Joseph H. Vogel, Joseph D. Kennedy, Walter H. Ripley, James Reardon, John T. Thomas, Josiah A. Fenno.

A communication was received from Fred F. and Edith A. Green relative to the awards made for the taking of land for the widening of Hancock street. The communication spoke of the inequality of the awards and the writer felt that due consideration had not been given. Placed on file.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief of Police, asking for a transfer of $198.46 from Pay of Men to Miscellaneous. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Branch offered an order making the transfer, which was adopted.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from Chief Engineer, asking ing for a transfer of $150 from Horse keeping to Miscellaneous. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Cherrington offered an order making the transfer, which was adopted.

Several applications for minor licenses were received and referred.

An application for a junk collector's license from Israel Sternberg, was received, under suspension of the rules, and later in the evening, Councilman Richards offered an order granting the license, which was adopted.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order granting a minor license which was adopted.

The Finance Committee reported no legislation necessary on the order, offering a reward for the arrest of Asair Hadad. Accepted.

MOVERS' ORDINANCE.

The Committee on Ordinances reported ought to pass on the ordinance relative to furniture movers. The ordinance provides that all persons moving personal effects from one place to another, shall notify the police department within three days of the names of the parties moved, the place moved from and the place moved to, as well as to the character of the goods moved. The ordinance is aimed at persons who obtain credit at stores, or who purchase furniture on the instalment plan and who neglecting to settle their obligations, like the Arabs of old, fold their tents and quietly steal away. Ordered to a second reading.

The Ordinance Committee, reported reference to the next City Council, on the order amending the Building Ordinance. Report accepted.

The Ordinance Committee reported ought not to pass on the order amending the street ordinance relative to the removal of snow. Report accepted.

LEGACIES.

The Finance Committee reported reference to the next City Council on the following matters.

From Mayor, relative to Metropolitan assessments.

From School Committee, approving school hall plans.

$6,000 for pleasure drive, Merrymount park.

$1,500 for athletic field, Merrymount park.

$49,000 for auto fire apparatus.

ASSESSORS' SALARY.

Ought to pass on order amending salary of Assessors. Read and laid on the table.

TRANSFER.

Ought to pass on order transferring $330 to state and military aid. Passed.

HIGHWAY TRANSFER.

Ought to pass on order transferring receipts of $1,200 to Miscellaneous Highways from Permanent Sidewalks. Order rejected 21 voting in the negative.

SCHOOL TRANSFER.

Ought to pass on order making transfers in school appropriations. Order passed.

TAX REFUND.

Ought to pass on order refunding Margaret Flanagan $10 taxes. Adopted.

BOARD OF HEALTH SALARY.

Ought to pass on order amending salary of Board of Health. Order passed.

MAYOR'S SALARY.

The Finance and Ordinance Committee reported ought to pass on the order increasing the salary of the Mayor from $1,000 to $2,500 a year.

Councilman Leslie moved to amend by making the salary $2,000 a year. He said many cities paid more and some less than Quincy. The duties of the office were increasing, yet he thought that $2,000 was all the city could afford.

The amendment was lost on a rising vote of 6 yes and 14 no.

The order was then passed to be ordained, 16 voting yes and 6 no.

Those to vote in the negative were: Branch, Campbell, Craig, Gardner, Leslie, Richards—6.

ASSESSORS' ORDINANCE.

The Committee on Finance and Ordinances, reported an amendment to the order amending the Assessors' Ordinance. This order provided that the Chairman of the board shall be in the office during the business hours of every business day of the year. The amendment provides that in event of his absence, one of the assistant assessors shall be in the office. Amendment accepted and ordered to a second reading.

HANCOCK STREET.

The Finance Committee reported a slight amendment to the order widening Hancock street. The amendment simply corrects the names of the owners of parcels of land abutting.

Report accepted. Amendments accepted, order read and the rules suspended.

Councilman Richards said there were certain features of the order that needed careful consideration. We should not pass the order, until we know that it is right. It was hardly necessary to push it through at this time of the year. If we are going to create a hardship on the abutters, it should be carefully considered.

Councilman Nowland moved reference to the next City Council. In support of this motion, he said that it seemed that the city was paying too much for some of the property taken, especially the Jones property. There was too much discrepancy.

Councilman Gardner said that the matter had been gone over carefully. The next Council will not be in better condition to handle than we. Values in land are constantly going up and as new buildings were contemplated on some of the lots, it meant more money, if delayed.

It is the unanimous opinion of the Committee that this was the time to settle it.

Councilman Sandberg said that he did not quite agree with some of the awards, especially that made to the Welch estate.

Councilman Ericson said that in the case of the Jones estate, there were some buildings on this property that should be moved, but were too old. This property is now paying an income of $1,000 a year and when we take the buildings, this will be cut off.

Councilman Smith complimented the committee on the manner in which the awards were made. The method used by the commitee was a most sensible one. They got experts, who know values better than we do. As far as we know, only one party objects to the awards. He has given us some figures on a sheet, but we do not know, if they are right.

Councilman Bailey said the work could never be done as cheap as now. He doubted if a proposition of this kind could be put through without some objectors. He believed that the experts who had passed upon it, were well qualified to say what the land was worth. The only safe and sane course was to accept the awards made by the committee.

Councilman Richards asked the chairman of the Street committee, if the experts gave any good reason for the diversion of opinions.

Councilman Gardner replied that the experts went into the matter thoroughly and explained how they had arrived at their conclusions.

LET US DINE AND BE MERRY

Rumors of Banquets and Banquets to Be, Fill the Air

FIRST NEXT SATURDAY

Lots of banquets are in the air to take place between now and early in the new year. The first, it is said, will be Saturday night when the administrative officers of the present administration, will have a banquet at one of the Boston hotels, with Mayor Shea as the guest of the evening.

On Monday, January 1, the Copeland club of West Quincy, will give a banquet to Mayor Shea at St. Mary's hall.

On Tuesday, January 1, the present and new City Councils and department officials, will hold the annual inauguration banquet in Boston, probably at Young's hotel.

Then it is in the air that the Republican City Committee and Republican candidates elected at the recent election are planning for a banquet.

IMPROVEMENTS AT STATION

Patrons of the Quincy depot will be glad to learn that the railroad company have this week placed a matron in charge of the ladies' room and a night watchman on duty at the station.

"Musie," said the barber, "is one of my hobbies. You have heard, no doubt, that one or two famous tenors were barbers in the early stages of their careers?"

"'M—yes," replied the customer, "I have heard something of the kind."

"It is quite true; and I myself have done my share for musical art. I do not wear the laurel myself, but I have helped place it on the brows of other men,"

"Are you a singing teacher?"

"No, sir; but I have compounded a hair tonic that eclipses every other on the market."—Washington Star.

WILL SPEAK ABOUT POPULAR GOVERNMENT

Speaker Walker To Attend Meeting of Men's Club

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S CHURCH

An important business meeting was held by the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's Parish at the parish rooms Monday evening. In the absence of President Vibert, T. L. A. Musgrave, the vice president was in the chair.

Plans for the new parish house were discussed and J. A. Severance reported for the building committee. Each member agreed to pledge five dollars toward the building fund.

Great plans are underway for a minstrel show to be given early in the new year by the club and which they hope to make a tremendous success.

It was voted to add to the entertainment committee by the appointment of three members by the chair, the enlarged committee to report more fully on the show at the next meeting.

Speaker Walker of the Masschusetts Legislature will prove a great drawing card at the next meeting of the club on January first when he will speak on "The present movement toward popular government."

An invitation has been extended to the Men's clubs of Wollaston and Quincy to be present at this meeting and a large attendance is expected.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

PASTORS AND CHOIRMASTERS.

Programs for Christmas music must reach the Ledger office not later than noon Thursday, Dec. 21, to insure publication in this paper, Friday and Saturday.

All kinds of trouble in getting any one to make the steam roller go this winter, in spite of all the machinists there are in this country.

The Indian Durbar must have been quite a show, but not much compared with the Improved Order of Red Men working the third degree.

About now a presidential candidate realizes that he should have begun straightening out his record years before he got into long trousers.

The New York peace meeting was broken up by a riot. It is getting so that a good peace advocate needs to be prepared to administer some round thrashings.

The students at Stanford university have deposited only a dollar with the postal savings bank, and it is suspected that they had to shove some of their school books into hock to get that.

Will the eight travelling governors be satisfied with flapjacks and maple syrup after they get home, or will they demand that their wives reproduce the cooking of the Great White Way?

Politicians who desire to be delegates to the national conventions should not waste time studying up the history of political parties or of candidates, but should go out in the back yard nights and practise prolonged hollering.

Remember these are lively times at the post office, the clerks are surely earning their money at this season of the year. Anything to make their burden easier will be appreciated. For one thing address everything plainly and fully and not keep clerks and carriers guessing because of an illegible or mistaken form of addressing.

THE VOTE DODGERS.

Hon. Robert M. Washburn has filed a bill with the clerk of the House, which, if passed, will send a shiver down the backs of that portion of citizens who do a lot of kicking and nagging about public officials but on election day do not even take thetrouble to go out and vote.

The bill provides, "that the name of any voter who fails to vote at the primary election shall be posted upon a list to be kept in the same way as the voting lists are now kept and posted by the city and town clerks the lists to be displayed as publicly as the voting list. If any voter neglects or fails to vote at a caucus or primary for two consecutive years, his name shall be dropped from the voting list, and he shall not again be allowed to vote until he has registered and been qualified in the same way as if he had never been a voter of this Commonwealth."

That sounds splendid and would not only bring out the vote, but would place the responsibility for office holders on all citizens, instead of the sometimes small percentage that takes the trouble to go to the polls.

MARRIAGE IN HASTE.

After Jan. 1, 1912, haste in getting married will be impossible for at that time the new law goes into effect whereby any couple intending to get married must wait five days after they have applied to the town clerk before they can receive the necessary license.

Says an exchange:

"Reverend gentlemen, justices of the peace, etc., will have to be on the alert also. They must become sure that the application for the license is five days old.

"This law is a step in the right direction. Haste in entering the married state is always questionable. Love at first sight is not always to be relied on."

OPENING OF CONGRESS.

When the new member lands at the Washington terminal for the first time, he has a sub-conscious expectation that he will be pointed out on the street as a national figure. He must feel a chill of disillusion when he is met only by raucus voiced cab drivers and newsboys.

Initiated into his duties, he gets lost in the capitol, turns up in Statuary hall or subterranean rooms filled with packing cases, and has to be identified by the door keeper before he can take his seat.

He first begins to realize his insignificance when he bobs up with a "Mr. Speaker," full of some subject affecting his constituents, only to be informed that Mr. Brown has the floor, when Mr. Brown had not done the first thing to seek the speaker's attention.

When he finally gets the speaker's eye, and prepares to open the flood gates of his eloquence, some congressional sophomore secures from him the right to rise for information, and inquires if the gentleman is a member of this body. The laugh that follows this hazing of the freshman ruins his flimsy structure of oratory.

This year the new members have had four months of it already, and have learned that politically and socially they have about as much influence as a government clerk. As too many of our states send a constant rotation of inexperienced men to the national legislature, the new congressman is nearly as transient a figure as the tourist.

To the man living at a distance, from Washington, the first day's session, with the reception of the president's message, seems a historic occasion. On the scene it is not more impressive than a revivalist camp meeting. The clerk making mince meat of the periods of the presidential message, the hasty exit of the members to the smoking roim and barber shop, the small sons of congressmen who sit on their fathers' knees or play horse on the revolving chairs, the white coated negro barber at the door exchanging jokes with statesmen—all these scenes shock old world observers used to the trappings of form and ceremony.

STOCK AND BOND ISSUES.

The unanimous report of the securities commission against giving the Interstate-Commerce Commission full power over the issue of railroad securities, will probably prevent any law to that effect passing Congress at this session.

So good an authority as Thomas F. Ryan once said that prior to 1885, 95 per cent of the railroad stocks in this country were simply water. The roads were paid for by bonds. When you bought stock, you paid cash for the hopes of the promoters.

As some one has put it, "You form a corporation, create stock on the basis of the earnings hoped for, and you get the public tied up. Still you have the bother of holding the string yourself. But as soon as this stock is sold to the general investing public, the public holds the string by which it is itself tied up."

Since the time of which Mr. Ryan speaks, public sentiment has compelled a great change in general practice. As the commission points out, nearly all the states now require new stock to be based on capital actually paid in. The really vital issue is as to whether these laws are actually enforced.

The way the states formerly got railroads built was much like buying furniture on the instalment plan of borrowing money of a loan shark.

It worked like this. A railroad would be so capitalized that nearly all the stock was water. The country soon grew up about it, and frequently dividends of 15 per cent or more would be earned.

The road would pay six or seven per cent, which would seem fair, and the public would be satisfied. Actually under cover of the maintenance account, a large balance would be going into the improvement of the property, so that finally the water would be turned into solid value. Only through high rates could this be done and through these high rates many roads have been paid for by the public and presented to the owners.

Of course capital won't build new roads when it can get six per cent in good stock investments. The opopportunity for a higher profit must be given. But let no legislature or railroad commission make the mistake of thinking that the first or the second offer that comes from Wall street is the most favorable that will be made.

You need the Ledger every day.

CITY COUNCIL

Some of the abutters came before the committee and asked to be heard and they were invited in to the meeting.

Councilman Craig said that he did not agree with some of figures made by the experts.

Councilman Campbell asked some questions about the figures, using one of the sheets that had been prepared by Mr. Green.

Councilman Gardner said that the individual figures of the experts were in safe hands and that those figures given, he did not know if correct or not, as they had not been taken from the expert's figures.

The motion of Councilman Nowland to refer to the next Council was lost.

Councilman Nowland and Leslie started to further argue the question, but were ruled out of order by the Chairman, under the rule 11, that no member shall speak more than twice on a question under debate, without permission of the Council.

The order was then passed, to be ordained, by roll call, 16 voting yes and 5 no as follows:

Yes—Bailey, Bolster, Boyd, Branch, Bryant, Cherrington, Duffy, Ericson, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Parlee, Ross, Sandberg, Smith, Studley—16.

No—Campbell, Jenkins, Leslie, Nowland, Richards—5.

Absent—Sodergren.

CHARTER REVISION.

The special committee appointed to consider what changes, if any, are necessary in the City Charter, reported recommending that the Mayor be authorized to petition the Legislature to so amend the City Charter to provide.

That the City Council shall consist of nine members, one from each ward to be elected annually, and three at large, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, and thereafter one member at large for three years.

That the members of the City Council shall receive an annual salary of $250 each.

That the Mayor shall be a member, ex-officio, of the School Committee, without the power to vote.

That the Mayor shall be elected for a term of two years.

That the Mayor shall be Chairman, ex-officio of the City Council without power to vote.

In the event of any bill embodying these amendments being enacted by the Legislature, the same shall not become operative until accepted by a majority of the legal voters of the City of Quincy.

Councilman Richards was about to offer a minority report on the matter, when Councilman Sandberg being recognized, moved to lay on the table. Motion voted.

Councilman Cherrington moved to take the report from the table. Motion lost on a rising vote of 8 yes and 12 no.

PORTABLE STONE CRUSHER.

The order appropriating $2,600 for the purchase of land for the portable stone crusher was taken from the table.

Councilman Nowland moved reference to the next Council. Motion lost, on a rising vote of 7 yes and 13 no.

After some discussion, the order was passed by roll call 16 voting yes and 5 no. Those voting in the negative were: Councilman Branch, Jenkins, Leslie, Nowland, Sandberg.

On motion of Councilman Smith it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be until Friday evening.

Voted to adjourn at 9.05.

Q.—Why did the Apostle Paul forbid women to teach in the church? Was he a "woman-hater"? (J. F. R.)

Answer.—It would be impossible to present a more beautiful picture as showing the proper relationship between the man and the woman than that presented to us in the words of this same Apostle as expressed in the 5th chapter of Ephesians. He says, "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head ofthe wief, even as Christ is the Head of the Church; * * * therefore as the Church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in all things. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it. * * * So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies." Surely the one who gave such kind and loving advice as this was not a "woman-hater." The Apostle elsewhere says, "I would have you know that he Head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the Head of Christ is God." All right-thinking people recognize that without some head in any community or organization there would be more or less confusion and lack of harmony. The Lord in His infinite wisdom arranged that the man should be the head of the family. And does not all nature teach that he is the best adapted for this position? The Lord did not leave this matter of headship optional with the parties concerned, but stated that the woman was to be a "help-meet." As man is the head of the woman, so Christ is the Head of the Church. This was to be represented in the Church organization. As the woman would be in subjectionto the man, so the Church was to be in subjection to Christ.

RED CROSS SEALS.

THE HEIRS OF ALL THE EARTH.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

From street and square, from hill and glen,
Of this vast world beyond my door,
I hear the tread of marching men.
The patient armies of the poor.

The halo of the city's lamps
Hangs a vast torchlight in the air,
I watch it through the evening damps;
The masters of the world are there.

Not ermine clad, nor clothed in state,
Their title deeds not yet made plain;
But walking early, toiling late,
The heirs of all the earth remain.

Some day by laws as fixed and fair
As guide the planets in their sweep,
The children of each outcast heir.
The harvest fruits of time shall reap.

The peasant's brain shall yet be wise
The untamed pulse beat calm and still,
The blind shall see, the lowly rise,
And work in peace time's wondrous will.

Some day without a trumpet's call,
This news shall o'er the earth be blown;
The heritage comes back to all;
The myriad monarchs take their own.

TREATY WILL BE ANNULLED

Taft Announces That Step Has Already Been Taken

SPECIAL MESSAGE TO SENATE

Recites That Guild Has Instructed Russian Government of Intentions of United States—Action Endorsed by Foreign Relations Committee, Which Agrees Upon a Much Modified Sulzer Resolution

Washington, Dec. 19.—In a special message to the senate, President Taft advised that body that on Dec. 15 he instructed Curtis Guild, American ambassador at St. Petersburg, to inform the Russian government of our desire to abrogate the existing treaty of 1832. This instruction was carried out by Guild on Dec. 17. The president's communication is addressed to the senate alone.

The senate committee on foreign affairs recommended that the senate act with the house in carrying out the abrogation of the pact. Under the notice to Russia and under the terms of the treaty itself the abrogation will be effective Jan. 1, 1913.

Immediately after the president's message had been read, Senator Lodge presented the resolution agreed upon by the foreign relations committee and offered it as a substitute for the Sulzer resolution passed by the house.

The Lodge resolution recited that President Taft had caused to be presented to the imperial Russian government notice that the treaty would be abrogated. The resolution approved this action and concluded:

"Therefore, Be it resolved by the senate and house of representatives that the notice given by the President of the United States to the empire of Russia to terminate the said treaty is hereby adopted and ratified."

After the message and the resolution had been read, Senator Heyburn moved that the further consideration of the matter be in executive session. He declared that it was proposed to cancel a contract of great commercial interest to the United States, involving a trade of many millions of dollars, and he thought it should be seriously considered and at length. Owing to his objection to consideration of the resolution and under the rules of the senate it went over until today.

The president's message told of the instruction which the president had caused the secretary of state to transmit to the American ambassador in St. Petersburg and then recited the condition of article 12 of the existing treaty under which either government may terminate the same. Then followed the official communication, which Guild transmitted to the imperial government.

It says that under instructions from the United States government and in pursuance of conversations held by the secretary of state with the Russian ambassador in Washington that he has the honor to give the imperial Russian government the official notification as contemplated by article 12 of the treaty whereby the operation of said treaty may be terminated.

It then goes on to call the attention of the Russian government to the fact that it has been long recognized by both governments that the existing treaty is now no longer responsive to conditions and the relations between the two countries which have been constantly growing in importance.

It expresses the desire for the continuance of the friendly relations between the two governments and says that the ambassador is instructed to communicate the desire of the United States government to negotiate a new and modern treaty of commerce and navigation upon a basis more responsive to the needs of the two countries, and it also expresses the desire of the American government to make the outcome of the proposed negotiations contribute more to the strength and cordiality of the friendly relations between the two countries.

Notice Served by Guild

St. Petersburg, Dec. 19.—American Ambassador Guild, acting under instructions from the President of the United States, notified Foreign Minister Sazonoff yesterday that the treaty of 1832 between the United States and Russia would be abrogated on Jan. 1, 1913, in accordance with provision made by article 12.

The notification, it is added, was given with full right, and tactfully made no mention of motives underlying the abrogation of the treaty, which leaves full latitude for conducting new negotiations, with the controversial factor eliminated.

ART IN ICE.

Wonderful Palace That Was Built by Czarina Anna of Russia.

The use of ice for architectural purposes is an art that has been carried to a high state of perfection in northern countries, and some almost incredible feats have been accomplished in this curious branch of industry.

Probably the most remarkable building constructed wholly of ice was the palace built on the Neva by Czarina Anne of Russia in 1739. The first attempt to construct this building was unsuccessful, as the slabs of ice were too thin and the building collapsed in the first thaw. Subsequently large blocks of ice were cut and squared with great care and laid on one another by skillful masons, who cemented the joints with water, which immediately froze. The building when completed was fifty-six feet long, seventeen and a half broad and twenty-one high. It was of but one story. The facade contained a door surmounted by an ornamental pediment and six windows, the frames and panes of which were all of ice. An elaborate balustrade, adorned with statues, ran along the top of the facade, and another balustrade surrounded the building at the level of the ground. The side entrances to the inclosure were flanked with pillars supporting urns, the latter containing orange trees, whose branches, leaves and flowers were all of ice. Hollow pyramids of ice on each side of the building contained lights by night. The grounds were further adorned with a life size figure of an elephant, with his mahout on his back. A stream of water was thrown from the elephant's trunk by day and a flame of naphtha by night.

A tent of ice contained a hot bath, in which persons actually bathed. There were also several cannons and mortars of ice, which were loaded with bullets of ice and iron and discharged.

The interior of the building was completely furnished with tables, chairs, statues, looking glasses, a clock, a complete tea service, etc., all made of ice and painted to imitate the real objects. A bedchamber contained a state bed with curtains, a dressing table with a mirror, pillows, bedclothes, slippers and nightcaps, all made of ice. There were ice candles, burning naphtha and, most wonderful of all, an ice fireplace containing burning ice logs—i. e., blocks of ice smeared with naphtha and then kindled.—Scientific American.

The Doctor's Fee.

There came a letup in the rush of patients, and the doctor opened two small envelopes lying on his desk.

"It's all right," he said. "I wasn't sure. Without offending I couldn't open the envelopes in the presence of the persons who gave them to me. They contain the fees left by two Englishmen who called close on each other's heels. English etiquette is rather embarrassing for a physician who is used to patients who hand over their money with the denomination right on top. American fashion. In England it would be considered an insult to give a physician his fee unwrapped. You can't insult an American physician that way, but newcomers credit him with an excess of sensibility and give him a good many uneasy moments wondering if he hasn't been underpaid."—New York Sun.

"Port of Boston" Dinner Held At Hotel Somerset

BOOM BOSTON COMMERCE

So enthusiastic was the meeting that it was midnight before the 600 members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, stopped celebrating, at the Port of Boston dinner given at the Hotel Somerset, Monday evening.

To help in the celebration, Calvin Tomkins, commissioner of docks and ferries, came over from New York, and his standing in the business world was summed up by President Smith when he introduced the man from the metropolis, saying: "He is a master mind in harbor development." With Mr. Tomkins, as next assistants to celebrate in Boston's glory, were B. F. Cresson, first deputy commissioner of docks and ferries of New York; R. A. C. Smith, member of the commision to investigate port conditions and pier extensions in New York harbor, and Henry B. Seaman, consulting engineer of New York.

President Smith, Mayor Fitzgerald and Chairman Hugh Bancroft all struck important keynotes for the development of Boston's port business in their speeches. Gov. Foss was the only speaker scheduled who did not appear. Mayor Gaynor of New York, who was invited, but who found it impossible to attend, sent a message of regret through Commissioner Tomkins, who said that New York's chief executive hoped for an opportunity in the near future to enjoy Boston's hospitality. Each speaker urged the necessity for the support of the port directors by the business interests and people of the city, and President Smith offered the full support of the chamber.

On the platform in the banquet hall sat an array of representatives of big commercial interests which has seldom been equalled at any dinner in Boston in recent years. There was Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven road; Charles Francis Adams, 2d president of the Boston Real Estate Exchange; John J. Martin, president of the Masachusetts Real Estate Exchange; the Boston port directors in addition to the chairman, including Admiral Francis T. Bowles, William F. Fitzgerald, George E. Smith and Joseph A. Conry; Elwyn G. Preston, chairman of the chamber's committee on foreign trade; Representative Charles H. Brown, father of the port of Boston bill; Jerome Jones, chairman of the committee on maritime affairs of the chairman of the chamber's committee on metropolitan improvements; James H. Hustis, third vice-president of the Boston & Albany railroad, the invited guests from New York and officials from the chamber of commerce.

A representative body of men from Quincy were in attendance, including C. F. Adams, 2d, L. D. Baker, Adm. F. T. Bowles, Frank Fessenden Crane, Geo. W. Holden, E. G. Hultman, H L. Kincaide, F. B. Rice, H. L. Rice, Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone, J. S. Swingle.

SURPRISE PARTY TENDERED TO NEWLYWEDS

Mr. and Mrs. John J. King, of 38 Bradford street, who were recently united in marriage were pleasantly surprised Monday evening by twelve of Mr. King's gentlemen friends, who called to pay their regards and to present him with a wedding gift in the shape of a substantial purse. Mrs. King assisted her husband in welcoming the guests and then retired, leaving the party in possession of the house. The evening proved one of rare enjoyment with games, music, and refreshments.

The feature of the evening, however, was the presentation to Jack of the purse. This pleasant duty fell upon John F. Walsh, the president of the club, who in a burst of oratory told how sorry the club was to lose one of its bachelor members, yet they bore him no ill will. He desired to compliment Jack on the excellent choice he had made in the selection of a life partner, and he wished both he and Mrs. King all kinds of good luck. Lapsing into a personal strain he said that he had sometimes thought of matrimony himself, but just when such an event would take place, he was not prepared to say, but after seeing how happily John was situated, he could not tell how soon something might happen to him and some of the other members of the club.

In accepting the gift, Mr. King thanked the members heartily both for himself and for Mrs. King and in closing urged the Governor and his friends to go and do likewise.

RECEIVES LETTER OF INQUIRY

Mayor Shea received the following letter of inquiry this morning: To the First Selectman of Quincy:

As I am very much in need of evidence (for personal purposes) of the whereabouts of one Charles Conlon, formerly of Boston, I appeal to you for advice. The last heard from, he was working on a farm in Quincy, Mass., but has not been seen or heard from by any of his friends for more than twenty-five years and of course has been considered dead. But the law calls for proof of his whereabouts whether living or dead. So if you will try to inform me as best you can I will gladly pay all the expense. Possibly the tax collector of the town may know something of the case. If he is dead the undertaker might give information.

Said Conlon was of Irish decent short, thick set and at the time of his leaving home was about thirty-five or forty years old.

He was married in 1865 to Miss Hattie A. Hill of Lewiston, Maine. Any information concerning him would be thankfully received. Please answer this as soon as possible and if you cannot give me any information, please advise me what course to pursue to find out. This is not intended in the least to trouble him whatever. It is simply to be used to get a pension for his wife who is still living. Hoping to hear from this soon I remain

Yours Respectfully,

MRS. BASSET'S SQUASH PIE.

(Mrs. Hepsey Basset speaks).

Wal—howdy do, Mis' Robbins; how're all your folks today? This is pretty tryin' weather for us old folks, but I manage to get along middlin' well—for me. I've been sort o' scart, though, about your ma—she's lookin' real peaked this summer—just the sort to wilt right down under a hot spell like this.

You don't mean to tell me that she's goin' with you over to the Ta'nton Cattle Show next week! I call that dretful resky—her in such feeble health too.

Wal—yes—a cattle show is a dretful interesting place, certain sure. We all on us went over to it last year, but I ain't been before since—why, I don't know when—it must have been the year that Lyddy fell down the suller stairs. You see, she was plannin' to plant some dahlia roots, an'—

Huh—Oh! who went over? Why all our folks, and sister Sally and her folks, an' Hiram John an' his folks, and Sarah Bell Ann—she ain't got no folks, but it's all her own fault, because John Henry Allen, he—

Oh, yes, it was a family party, sure enough—Si Bartlett, he fixed up seats for us in his old milk-wagon, and took us over. Land, I felt as if I was goin' to school again in that old school-wagon t' pa used to run. I sort of expected Hime and Benny to get to picking at each other, the way they used to, or to go to throwin' spit-balls at Sarah Ann an' me, or to put their feet in the dinner kittle and spoil the squash pie. An' that would ha' been a loss sure enough, as it turned out, though, land knows, I never thought of such a thing when I put it in. What! hain't you never heard tell about my squash pie 't I took for our dinner over to Cattle Show? Mercy me! Why, I thought everybody in two counties had heard about that. Folks seem to be such awful hands for talk nowadays.

Wal, as I was tellin' you, Si's horses they went along pretty smart, though they ain't so handsome as they might be—not by a long shot—won't never be hung for their looks—though, for that matter, neither will Si; them Bartletts' faces always did look like the edge of the State Maine—way it's down on the map. I s'pose, though that ain't neither here nor there, seeing that the p'int is that we got to Cattle Show good and early, afore they'd gin out any of their prizes or Reward o' Merit cards.

Wal, the men folks all went off 'long o' Si to see about puttin' the horses up somewhere, and so we women folks started right off t'see the women's work. I always do like to see what lookin' things some women will have the face to bring to a fair, and put on show for all the other women to see. This time, though, there was some real good-looking things, though some others on 'em did make you sick as if you was goin' round P'int Judy in a schooner. Wal the first thing my eyes lit onto was a great blazin' bedquilt. It was handsome, I will give in. It must have took sights and sights of gumption, as well as yallar cloth, to figure that out, and it must 'a' made the stars in the heaven above feel meachin' to look down on it. Why, there isn't one on 'em could hold a candle to it!

Wal, as I was a-sayin', I was lookin' at that bedquilt and tryin' to take the pattern of it off so't I could make one like it for our best bedroom, when up stepped Hetty, and punched me in the side, a good, strong punch, and says she: "Ma, do come over here an' look at these squash pies a-settin' up for prizes. Land," says she, "why, I wouldn't send such pies as them out to feed the hogs with They'd say: "Give us a squash, and we could do better than that ourselves.' " Wal, with that, I went over to see them pies, though I did hate to leave that star bedquilt— and, lowsy me—they was a sickly lookin' set. "Wal," says I, "Hetty May,, I do presoom to say that that pie I brought over for our dinner is enough sight better-lookin' than any of these, if your pa has kicked the kittle round all the way from 'Sone there." With that, up stepped a dapper-lookin' young feller that was walkin' around sort of lookin' out for things. "Excuse me, marm," says he, takin' off his hat with a great flourish of trumpets, "but I overhearn what you just said, and if you've got any better-lookin' pie than these 'ere along with you, you'd better bring it in," says he, "for the judges are just gettin' round to set on these pies."

"I brought that pie for our dinner," says I," and I don't know as 'twould improve it any to be set on by several men. It was all I could do to keep pa from trompin' all over it as we came along this morning."

The young feller laffed, and said he guessed they wouldn't hurt it any but I felt sort er dubersome; Hetty May, though—she kep a-nudgin' me and a-sayin', "Do, ma, do! say, ma, do"—till finally, ruther than be drove clean out of my seventeen senses, I give in. "Wal—all right," sez I. "You run and git it, Hetty May, an' 'f t' ain't all stove to finders a-flouncin' around in that kittle, you can bring it to the man and with that I walked off, real unconcerned, to look at the pickles and jells. I wa'n't goin' tc have that feller think I was set up any by puttin' my squash pie in Ta'nton Cattle Show.

Bimeby, Hetty May came running' up to me all nerved up. "It's in, ma, it's in," sez she, "an' it ain't spoiled a mite, an' it looks real han'some." "Wal," sez I, cool as a cowcumber, "I guess it looks full as well as these Ta'nton pies. Let's go and look at the garden sass." Over by the cabbage-heads we run across the rest o' the folks, an' I ain't the one to say there was anythin' cur'us in that. Then we went around and saw all the rest of the things, and the men folks got so sorter intrusted in some hoss racin' that it was along quite late when we got round to go and eat our vittles. On our way to the wagon, Si sorter hung back with the women folks, and sez he: "I'm in hopes you've brought one of them squash pies of yourn, Hepsey; I've got a hole in me as big as a woodchck, an' seems to me one of them would taste real good." I was goin' to sort of pass it off, but Hetty May spoke right up: "Ma put it in the show," sez she. I could' a' slapped her with a good will. Wal, you ought to have heard the howdydo—all the men folks turned round and pitched in—they was a good rod ahead, but trust men folks fo hearin' when you're talkin' about vittles an' sich. Land, you'd have thought I was goin' to starve 'em to death and that I hadn't brought a single other thing to eat but that pie.

Wal—the upshot on it was that I finally give in an' promised to go back and take my pie out, providin' them Judges hadn't set on it and made it more squash'n it set out to be. So back we all trailed—Hetty May hated to like a dog, but I made her, for I felt as if she got us into all this fuss—I leadin' off an' the men folks taggin' on behind, to see that I didn't back out when I got there. I wanted to stop a minute when we got to that blazin' star quilt, but the men folks wouldn't hear of it; you'd a' thought they were about to starve right in their tracks. An' so we got to the row o' pies, an' there, right in the middle of 'em all, set my pie, marked full and plain "Mrs. Hepsey Basset, 'Sonet, First Prize." You could 'a knocked me down with a feather, I was that beat, and Hetty May she looked for all the world as if she'd been made a queen, or President of our Sewing Circle. Even Sam yelled out: "Bully for you ma! Bully for you," and I could see that all the folks was impressed. So I turned around sort o' majestic like, I sez with a grain o' sarcasm: "Wal, I guess you won't get that pie for your dinner this time, after all your traipsin." They didn't say nothin', but the men folks turned around pretty sudden an' traveled off towards the sheds. I sorter waited a minute just to see how my name looked with "First Prize" tacked on to it, an' just then up stepped that same young feller, smilin' as a basket o' chips, an' sez he: "The judges didn't seem to spile your pie very much, did they. Of course they had to take one piece out to sample it."

"Wal," sez I, "I don't know as they did, and I don't know as they did not. I can't reely blame 'em for takin' a small piece out for a sample, though if they was my men folks they wouldn't have stopped off short of the whole thing. Why—they're out there now, mad as hornets to think they can't have that pie for dinner. You'd think they couldn't relish any other vittles at all." At that he sorter laffed, and looked at Hetty May, an' then walked off and talked to another man that was standin' near by.

I took Hetty May by the arm and walked her across to the bedquilts, for she's real sharp at takin' patterns, Hetty May is. We hadn't been there mor'n two minutes when I felt somebody a-touchin' my arm, an' land sakes of there wa'nt that same spruce young feller again—smiliner than ever—ef so could be—an' with my pie in his hand. He made a regular dancin'-school bow, an' stuck out that pie towards me, an' sez he: "It seems a great pity that nobody should enjoy this delicious pie," sez he, "an if you're in a great hurry to go, why I guess we can oblige you by lettin' you take your pie just a little early." An' then he made another great bow, and handed me over a spick and span new two-dollar bill, an' sez he: "I'm real proud to present the prize to you, Mrs. Basset."

At first I scarcely sensed it, but then I grabbed Hetty May by the arm an' marched her off to where our folks was. I wished afterwards I'd a-asked the young feller to come too—he was so polite—but I was so flustered I didn't think.

Wal—at any rate, there sot the men, around the wagon, gloomy as anything, gittin' ready to eat baked beans and vittles the other women had brought. You'd orter seen Sam laff: "Wal—if it don't take ma," he sez. "First—she takes the prize, and then she makes 'em give her the pie back for dinner. That is the beater-ee!"

"It ain't hurt it any," sez I—an' I guess it wasn't, by the way those men fell to on it an' cleaned up every crumb.

Then Si tackled up, and we started for home, but not before all of us women folks had been down to the village an' laid out that whole two-dollar bill on good yaller caliker. An' Hetty May an' me, we pieced a bedquilt this winter that was far beyond that Ta'nton one as that was ahead of the stars in the firmament above, as Scripter says. You step right up to the north chamber an' take a look at it; but don't mention it round, for it's to be in Hetty May's settin' out—trossoo, they call it—when she marries that Ta'nton feller—come Thanksgivin', an' I ain't only just told two or three to the sewin, circle an' Deacon Blodgett's wife, an' A'nt Sophie Pierce, an' one or two others.

It's a dead secret. Step right this way.—Winifed Arnold in Everybody's.

Dancing In Washington's Days.

It was a dancing age. None was too old or too dignified to join in the pastime. We have it on the authority of General Greene that on one occasion Washington danced for three hours without once sitting down. Patrick Henry would close the doors of his office to betake himself to dancing or fiddling, and Jefferson dearly loved to "rosin" his bow for a merry jig. The story is told of him that once when away from home he received news of the burning of his father's house. "Did you save any of my books?" he asked of the slave who brought him the tidings. "No, massa," answered the negro, "but we saved the fiddle."—Maud Wilder Goodwin in "The Colonial Cavalier."

Street Through a Church.

One of the best known instances of churches with streets through them is that of St. John the Baptist's church in Bristol, England. The church is situated right over the ancient gateway into the city on the Avon, and the towering spire, standing high above the neighboring houses and streets, is a remarkable sight as one surveys it from the roadway below.

—Meanwhile union labor need not hang its head. Its duty is clear and straight. Let it have no commerce with violence or the agents of violence, but confine its efforts to questions purely of better wages, more reasoable hours and improved working conditions. Then as its strength grows so will its dignity and power increase and its usefulness broaden.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

STATE OFFERS $2000 REWARD

County Adds $1000 For Capture of Morner Slayer

GOVERNOR DIX IS DISTURBED

Will Do All In His Power to Cause Arrest of Person Who Killed Family of Four Not Far From State Capitol—Finger Prints Hunted by Expert In State Prison Department—Vain Hunt For Clothing of Suspect

Albany, Dec. 19.—Governor Dix issued a proclamation offering a reward of $2000 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who murdered Mrs. Mary A. Morner and her three children, Edith, Blanche and Arthur, at De Freetsville last Tuesday. The Rensselaer county officials have offered $1000 for the apprehension of the murderer.

"I feel very keenly," said the governor, last night, "that such an atrocious crime—the murder of an entire family—could be committed so near the capitol, and am anxious to do all in my power to accomplish the apprehension of the murderer. For that reason I have issued a proclamation offering a reward of $2000 for the arrest and conviction of the slayer.

"I would offer a larger reward if it were in my power, but I have been advised by Attorney General Carmody that $2000 is the maximum amount that can be offered."

The authorities of Rensselaer county are making a more minute search of the Morner farm and barns in the hope of discovering the working clothes of Edward Donato, the Italian farm hand for whom they are hunting in connection with the murder. Some persons even ventured the opinion that the body of the man will be found.

At the request of the local authorities, William T. Powers, a finger-print expert in the state prison department, continued his search for tell-tale finger-prints that may aid in solving the mystery. A number of such prints in blood were found on a post in the barn.

Officers ripped up the floors of the Morner barn in the hope of finding the missing Donato, but without result. In a woodshed near the barn the searchers found a back comb which had belonged to one of the murdered girls. A soft brown felt hat and a pair of overalls, on which were spots resembling blood stains, also were found. They are said to have been worn by the Italian.

Suspect Charged With Vagrancy

North Adams, Mass., Dec. 19.—The Italian who was taken into custody here on suspicion that he might be the murderer of the Morner family at De Freetsville, N. Y., was brought into the district court and held for a continued hearing on a technical charge of vagrancy.

Since his detention, the suspect has given three different names to the police, and what few statements he has made have been conflicting, the officers say.

The local officers express the belief that if the man is not the De Freetsville fugitive, he probably is wanted by the police of some other place. He answers, in general, the description of Edward Donato.

REFORM BANK SYSTEM

MacVeagh Also Advocates Scientific Tariff Legislation

Washington, Dec. 19.—Appeals for the immediate reform of the country's banking and currency system and scientific tariff legislation, based upon entirely new reasons—the practical experiences of the customs service—stand out prominently in the annual report of Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, submitted to congress.

The secretary foresees, according to the estimates of experts, a surplus in the treasury at the end of the fiscal year 1913 of about $29,000,000, exclusive of expenditures on the Panama canal. Including the estimated canal disbursements, however, the treasury will face a deficit of approximately $18,000,000.

The total estimates of expenditures for next year, exclusive of the Panama canal and the postal service, payable from postal revenue, are $637,920,803. The estimates of receipts available for the general fund are $667,000,000.

The estimates for the construction of the Panama canal during the next year are $47,263,760, making a grand total of estimated expenditures of $685,184,563.

VALUES ARE INCREASED

But Production of Farm Crops Was Lowered During Past Year

Washington, Dec. 19.—With decreases in the production of the eleven important farm crops, not including cotton, the total value of these crops this year reached the total of $3,769,562,000, according to the final estimate announced by the department of agriculture. This is an increase of almost $190,000,000 over their value last year.

The department's final estimate of production differs considerably from its preliminary estimate made in November because of a revision of the acreage based upon the census bureau's figures, which became available since that time.

GIRLS PENNED IN AT WAIST FACTORY FIRE

Witness Tells How One Tugged at Door Knob In Vain

New York, Dec. 19.—The prosecution of Harris and Blanck, proprietors of the Triangle Waist company, who are on trial charged with manslaughter for the death of Margaret Schwartz, one of the 147 victims of the fire in their factory last March, has rested.

Kate Alterman, who was an employe of the waist company at the time of the fire, was an important witness for the state. She testified about the locked door on the ninth floor and how she saw Margaret tugging at the door knob in vain.

"My God, the door is locked," the witness said she heard Margaret exclaim. "The last I saw of her she was on her knees and her hair and dress were burning."

The witness' account of the fire was not shaken by cross-examination.

RESPONSIBLE FOR DAMAGES

City Must Settle For Property Destroyed During Riots

Washington, Dec. 19.—The constitutionality of the Illinois statute to indemnify the owners of the property from damages occasioned by mobs or riots was upheld by the supreme court of the United States. Several cases brought under this law are said to be pending in the Illinois state courts, involving claims for damages aggregating many millions of dollars.

During a strike in Chicago a six-story building owned by Frank Sturges was attacked. Under the mob law, Sturges recovered from the city three-fourths of the damage sustained. The city then appealed to the supreme court of the United States on the ground that the law was unconstitutional.

Judge Lurton, in announcing the decision, said that the tendency of the statute was to uphold the majesty of the law.

REWARD FOR SERVICES

Cobb and Jennings Blossom Out as Baseball Magnates

Providence, Dec. 19.—The two Detroit men who are, with Yawkey and Navin, part owners of the Providence baseball club are, it is reported on excellent authority, none other than Tyrus Cobb, the outfielder of the Tigers, and Hugh Jennings, manager of the Tigers.

The act permitting these two men, the greatest powers on the Tiger team, to get a share of the stock in the local team is a kind of reward for their services to the Tigers, one as a player, and the other as a manager. Withholding their names from the public was probably done to prevent any possiblity of jealousy on the part of the other Detroit players because of the favors shown these two.

Indianapolis, Dec. 19.—Irene Hermann, a bookkeeper, and Grace Kaylor, a stenographer, who were employed by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, when John J. McNamara was arrested last April, were taken before the federal grand jury, which is investigating the dynamite conspiracy.

Miss Kaylor was relied upon as being able to tell who had been frequenters at the Iron Workers' headquarters just before the arrest of John J. McNamara, and Miss Hermann was asked about the records of McNamara's finances for several years prior to his arrest.

Another woman whose identity the authorities wished to keep secret who overheard bargaining for a wagon in which McManigal confessed to have hauled 100 quarts of nitro-glycerine from Albany, Ind., to Muncie, in August, 1910, was a witness.

London, Dec. 19.—Alfred W. Carpenter, proprietor and manager of the Charing Cross bank, who was arrested on April 25 last on a charge of obtaining money through fraud and false pretences, was found guilty and sentenced to a term of two years' imprisonment.

The Charing Cross bank, a private institution, failed on Oct. 17, 1910. Its headquarters were in London, but it had forty country branches. The deposits amounted to about $5,000,000 and the entire liabilities were estimated to reach a total of $12,500,000.

CALLING VENIRE IN THE RICHESON CASE

Two Hundred and Fifty Talesmen Are Wanted

Boston, Dec. 19.—An important step toward the trial of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson for the murder of Avis Linnell took place when Clerk Manning of the superior criminal court, acting under instructions from Chief Justice Aiken, made out the regulation precept calling for a venire of talesmen.

The precept called for the summonsing of 250 citizens of Suffolk who are to report at the courthouse on the morning of Jan. 15, the day set for the trial of Richeson.

The enrollment of so large a number of traverse jurors indicates every precaution will be taken in selecting the twelve men in whose hands will rest the fate of Richeson, once they are sworn.

Rapid City, S. D., Dec. 19.—With the finding of a perfectly petrified ham, imbedded in the soil of Big Foot trail, near the point where it crosses White river, the battle of Wounded Knee, twenty years ago, is recalled. The ham is in a state of perfect preservation, the rind, fat meat and bone, all being distinctly shown.

It is supposed to have dropped out of one of the wagons of General Carr's commissary department of the Seventh cavalry when he was pursuing Big Foot, the Cheyenne chief, who caused the Wounded Knee fight.

the Bible with its history, biography, epics, lyrics and oratory. Its very size shows wisdom. Its translatability into other tongues was dwelt upon.

Of specific prophecies of Christ's advent there are 333 in the Old Testament and it was finished four centuries and translated into Greek two and a half centuries before the coming of Christ. Is this or not a thing of God?

Some people speak of science as the Bible's weak place. This is not so. It is one of the strong points. Instances of scientific truth that have lain unrecognized in the Bible until our present day were mentioned. The scientific correctness of the Bible was vouched for by the speaker.

Speaking of the number seven as one which marked the Bible from cover to cover Mr. Armstrong gave in closing an inspiring plea to his audience to believe in God the one Author of nature and the book of nature.

The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Joseph Walther. Following the lecture refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. In charge were the entertainment committee consisting of Kendall F. Harriman, William F. Chase, J. Arthur Jewell, William Waring.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogony and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into town. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Huff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon tacitly accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Jon Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew in her schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Olson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Munster lighted his cigarette and resumed:

"'You see that spit,' she says to me, 'with the little ripple breaking around it? There's a current sets right across it and on it, and it will set you nicely around. Then I'll rescue your recruits and sail away—simple, ain't it?' says she." Munster continued. "'You hang up one tide,' says she; 'the next is the big high water. Then you hedge

"I DOUBT IF I EVER WANT TO SEE ANOTHER REVOLVER."

off and go after more recruits. There's no law against recruiting when you're empty.' 'But there is against starving 'em,' I said. 'You know there ain't any kai-kai to speak of aboard of us and there ain't a crumb on the Martha.'

"'Don't let the kai-kai worry you, Captain Munster,' says she. 'If I can find grub for eighty-four mouths on the Martha, the two of you can do as much by your two vessels. Now go ahead and get aground before a steady breeze comes up and spoils the maneuver. I'll send my boats the moment you strike.'"

"And we went and did it." Sparrowhawk said solemnly and then emitted a series of chuckling noises. "Miss Lackland transferred the recruits, and the trick was done."

CHAPTER XVII.

AN OFFER OF MARRIAGE.

"BUT where was she during the nor'wester?" Sheldon asked.

"At Langa-Langa. Ran up there as it was coming on and laid there the whole week and traded for grub with the niggers. When we got to Tulagi there she was waiting for us and scrapping with Burnett. I tell you, Mr. Sheldon, she's a wonder, that girl, a perfect wonder."

Munster refilled his glass, and while Sheldon glanced across at Joan's house, anxious for her coming, Sparrowhawk took up the tale.

"Gritty! She's the grittiest thing, man or woman, that ever blew into the Solomons. You should have seen Poonga-Poonga the morning we arrived—Sniders popping on the beach and in the mangroves, war drums booming in the bush and signal smokes raising everywhere. 'It's all up,' says Captain Munster. 'Up your granny,' she says to him," Sparrowhawk went on. "'Why, we haven't arrived yet, much less got started. Wait till the anchor's down before you get afraid.'"

"That's what she said to me," Munster proclaimed. "And of course it made me mad, so that I didn't care what happened. We tried to send a boat ashore for a powwow, but it was fired upon. 'What we want,' says Miss Lackland, 'is a hostage. I'm going ashore tonight to fetch Kina-Kina himself on board, and I'm not asking who's game to go with me, for I've got every man's work arranged for him. I'm taking my sailors with me and one white man.' 'Of course I'm that white man,' I said, for by that time I was mad. 'Of course you're not,' says she. 'You'll have charge of the covering boat. Curtis stands by the landing boat. Fowler goes with me. Brahms takes charge of the Flibberty and Sparrowhawk of the Emily. And we start at 1 o'clock.'

"My word, it was a tough job lying there in the covering boat. I never thought doing nothing could be such hard work. We stopped about fifty fathoms off and watched the other boat go in.

"Of course there was a row. It had to come, and I knew it, but it startled me just the same. I never heard such screeching and yelling in my life. The niggers must have just dived for the bush without looking to see what was up, while her Tahitians let loose, shooting in the air and yelling to hurry 'em on. And then I heard them coming through the mangroves and an oar strike on a gunwale and Miss Lackland laugh, and I knew everything was all right. We pulled on board without a shot being fired. And there was old Kina-Kina himself, being hoisted over the rail, shivering and chattering like an ape. The rest was easy. Kina-Kina's word was law, and he was scared to death. And we kept him on board issuing proclamations all the time we were in Poonga-Poonga.

"It was a good move, too, in other ways. She made Kina-Kina order his people to return all the gear they'd stripped from the Martha. She—here she comes now."

It was with a shock of surprise that Sheldon greeted her appearance. The ready made clothes from Sydney had transformed her. A simple skirt and shirt waist of some sort of wash goods set off her trim figure with a hint of elegant womanhood that was new to him. Brown slippers peeped out as she crossed the compound, and he once caught a glimpse to the ankle of brown openwork stockings. Somehow she had been made many times the woman by these mere extraneous trappings.

"I've opened up a new field," she said as she began pouring the coffee. "Old Kina-Kina will never forget me, I'm sure, and I can recruit there whenever I want. I saw Morgan at Guvutu. He's willing to contract for a thousand boys at 40 shillings per head. Did I tell you that I'd taken out a recruiting license for the Martha? I did, and the Martha can sign eighty boys every trip."

Sheldon smiled a trifle bitterly to himself. The wonderful woman who had tripped across the compound in her Sydney clothes was gone, and he was listening to the boy come back again.

* * * * * * *

"Well," Joan said, with a sigh, "I've shown you hustling American methods that succeed and get somewhere, and here you are beginning your muddling again."

Joan stood beside Sheldon and sighed as she watched the Martha beating out to sea, old Kinross, brought over from Savo, in command.

"My, but she is a witch! Look at her eating up the water, and there's no wind to speak of. Honestly, if I'd dreamed of the chance waiting for me at Guvutu when I bought her for less than $300 I'd never have gone partners with you. And in that case I'd be sailing her right now."

The justice of her contention came abruptly home to Sheldon.

"You make me feel like a big man who has robbed a small child of a lollypop," he said, with sudden contrition.

"And the small child is crying for it."

She looked at him, and he noted that her lip was slightly trembling and that her eyes were moist.

"But the small child won't cry any more for it," she was saying. "This is the last sob. But some day I'm going to sail the Martha again. I know it. I know it."

CAUSED DEATH OF SIX PERSONS

Sandford Is Sentenced on First Count of Indictments

TO PRISON FOR TEN YEARS

Holy Ghost and Us Leader Makes No Comment on Disposition of His Case Except to Say That He Received Intimation From God What to Expect—Mental Condition May Be Looked Into at Atlanta

Portland, Me., Dec. 19.—Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us society in the town of Durham and recognized by his followers as Elijah II., was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta by Judge Hale in the United States district court.

He was sentenced on the first of six counts of an indictment on which he was convicted for causing the death of six of his followers by neglect in failing to provide the necessities of life on the recently completed seventeen months' cruise along the shores of three continents for the purpose of offering up prayer for the salvation of the inhabitants. The other five counts were continued without sentence on motion of United States district attorney Whitehouse.

Attended by Rev. Charles E. Holland, the "Moses" of the cult, who now assumes the active leadership that for eighteen years has been held by Sandford; Captain Perry, the master mariner of the Kingdom, and one of the society's elders, Sandford entered the bailiff's room, where he received several visitors. He had no comment to make on the sentence imposed, although it was evident he was pleased at the continuance of the other five counts.

Interest had been heightened by reports that federal investigators had been at Shiloh in the guise of converts to watch Sandford and report his mental condition, and that he might be sent by the court to some institution for examination.

If a move of this nature is made, it will be by the federal authorities after Sandford reaches the federal penitentiary at Atlanta. Then, if his acts warrant, it is possible that he may be placed for a time in the federal insane hospital at Washington.

The maximum sentence that might have been given was ten years' imprisonment or $10,000 fine, or both, on each count.

Later Sandford admitted that the sentence was about what he had expected and said he had received an intimation from God yesterday morning of what to expect.

In company with two convicted postoffice robbers Sandford left for Atlanta last night to enter upon his term in the federal penitentiary. The party was in charge of four United states deputy marshals. Sandford will enter the gates of the prison late Wednesday afternoon, if his train is not delayed by the Christmas travel

BLACK HAND TACTICS

Man Who Tried Them on New York Postmaster Goes to Prison

New York, Dec. 19.—For having written letters to Postmaster Morgan threatening his life and demanding $200, William B. Pettus was sentenced to four years' imprisonment in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

Pettus entered a plea of guilty to charges of attempted extortion and using the mails for improper purposes. He had previously served a term for counterfeiting and told the court that he liked prison fare and wrote the letters to secure free board and lodging.

BILL ON MINIMUM PAY

Commission to Present Measure to the Bay State Legislature

Boston, Dec. 19.—It has become known that the Massachusetts minimum wage commission has definitely decided to present to the next legislature a bill which shall provide that no employer in the state shal pay a woman or child less than a certain wage per week.

The minimum wage will, of course, differ in different industries, and to provide for this the bill now proposed, which has already been printed, has rather an extensive plan.

The Kitchen Cupboard

HOMEMADE CREAM CANDIES.

HOMEMADE candies for the Christmas stocking may be made with little trouble if what is known as confectioners' sugar is used. The cream, which is prepared as follows, is the basis for several kinds of candy:

The Important Process.

Plain Cream.—Making the cream is the most important part of this candy process. Take the white of an egg, place it in an enameled saucepan, add an equal amount of cold water, a few drops of vanilla, and mix these together. Sift the sugar, and then stirring, add it gradually to the egg and water. The paste must be made stiff enough to roll out or to mold into balls.

By substituting lemon, cherry, strawberry, orange, pineapple or peppermint for the vanilla when flavoring the cream different kinds of candies may be made. Simple vegetable colors, like beet, carrot or spinach juices are much better to use than many of the coloring preparations sold for the purpose.

Delicious Nut Candies.

Walnut Creams. — To make these mold some of the cream on a marble slab or sheet of glass and form small balls of it. Press on each side of the balls a half of an English walnut kernel. Set aside on a plate to harden.

Almond Creams.—Shell and remove the skins from some almonds. Roll each nut in a layer of the cream.

Cocoanut Balls.—For cocoanut balls take some shredded cocoanut, mix it with the cream, kneading the cocoanut and sugar together. Then form into balls, which may be rolled in the shredded cocoanut.

Fruit Creams.

Orange Creams.—Use the grated rind of an orange to color the candy. Flavor it with the juice. Roll out this cream with a rolling pin and cut into fancy shapes. On the top of each piece put a bit of candied orange.

Date Creams.—The stone should be taken from nice fresh dates and the fruit stuffed with cream, flavored with vanilla. Fig creams may be made in the same way.

RAILROAD DESERVES MUCH CREDIT

The management of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R., deserve the thanks of the travelling public, who use the Quincy depot for the efforts they are making to rid the depot of dranks and other objectionable persons who use it as a loafing place. For a long time, it has been a source of great annoyance to passengers, to find dranks curled up on the seats, young hoodlums, loafing about the depot, smoking and using language that was of an objectionable nature.

Recently, the railroad has placed a special railroad officer on duty at the station and as a result several have been placed under arrest and brought into court, where fines averaging $15 have been imposed. The officer is doing good work and it is the kind of work that will have good results, for $15 does not grow on every bush these days and the hoodlum element will soon learn that it is better for them to find some other place to while away the time than at the depot.

As noted elsewhere, the railroad management has also placed a matron in charge of the ladies' room and a night watchman on duty.

ALL REJOICE WHEN GAS IS TURNED ON

With the turning of a lever in the works of the new Old Colony Gas Company in East Braintree at 5.12 Monday evening, gas was distributed throughout the towns of Braintree, Weymouth, Rockland, Whitman and Abington. It was the first time that any of these towns had enjoyed the privileges of gas and the occasion was made a notable one by the officials of the gas company.

At the big plant in East Braintree were gathered representatives of the towns involved and also town officials from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

The gas was turned on by E. M. Farnsworth, president of the company, and when the machinery in the big distributing station was set in motion three cheers for the company were called for by Alfred W. Donovan, president of the State Board of Trade, and were given heartily by the big crowd.

After inspecting the works, the guests were escorted to the upper floor of the office building, where a banquet was served.

President Farnsworth announced that the company had made Mr. Goeltz its superintendent with full authority.

Penn Very Much a Londoner.

William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, was born on Tower Hill on Oct. 14, 1644, was christened in All Hallows church, became a student of Lincoln's Inn, and then, joining the Quakers, he abandoned the law and preached along with George Fox in a meeting house off Lombard street. He once occupied a house in Norfolk street, Strand, chosen on account of its closeness to the river, which facilitated escape from duns, and he was imprisoned both at Newgate and in the Fleet. So Penn was, after all, very much a Londoner.—London Standard.

THE KITTENS' ADVENTURE.

There were once four kittens named Topsy, Flopsy, Sallykins and Sue. Topsy was black, Flopsy was white, Sallykins was yellow, and Sue was gray, and they were all just as good as gold. One morning their mother said to them: "I am going out shopping. You be good kittens and don't go outside the basket." And she pushed the cover down over the basket and left them by themselves.

While they were asleep and as good as gold who should come by but the farmer's son, who, seeing a basket with a cover to it, thought, "How comfortable that would be for me to take fishing with me to bring home my fish in!" So he picked it up and carried it off to the woods with him, with the kittens still fast asleep inside. There he set it down on a sunny bank and began fishing. Before long he caught a speckled trout, which he took off the hook and threw into the basket.

Now, if you were a kitten and had gone to sleep in a peaceful basket as your mother had told you to and some one threw a live, cold, flapping trout in shouldn't you be scared? Well Topsy and Flopsy and Sallykins and Sue were scared, you can imagine, and out of the basket they jumped, one after another, and ran away as fast as they could in all directions. The farmer's son was much astonished when he found that the basket he had brought with him belonged to the kittens, and so he ran after them and tried to catch them and bring them back home, where they belonged. The harder he ran the more frightened the kittens became, and they scampered and dodged and hid behind the tree trunks and among the dried leaves till the farmer's son got discouraged and went back to his fishing.

With soft little mews they called to each other till they were all together again.

At first they thought they would try to find their way home, but after wandering a little way in every direction they gave up the task as hopeless.

"We shall never be able to find our way out," said Topsy.

"Let's build a house to live in," said Sue.

That seemed to be the only thing to be done, and so they selected a pile of dried leaves in the shade of a great oak and scooped out a hollow in them, which made a comfortable nest, in which they all cuddled down and fell fast asleep and dreamed they were home in their own basket again.

When the mother cat came home from her shopping and found not only the kittens but the basket gone she was a much distressed cat. She could understand why the kittens should run away, but not the basket, and she immediately set out to find them. She ran all over the barn, calling. Then she ran to the house, but she got no answer there. She went up the road and down the road without success. At last she took the path through the woods, and there on a sunny bank by the side of the trout stream she saw the basket. She ran to it and threw back the cover. But what was her disgust to find inside instead of four nice warm kittens half a dozen horrid cold trout. Although she was fond of fish as a rule, she was not at all glad to see them this time. However, she reflected that if the basket was here the kittens could not be far off, and so she set about exploring the woods with renewed energy. Before long she came upon a black kitten and a white kitten and a yellow kitten and a gray kitten fast asleep in a pile of dried leaves.

Then she led them back through the woods to where the basket lay. The farmer's boy when he saw the cat with the string of kittens after her understood that they were the rightful owners of the basket, and so he took the fish out, and the cat and the four kittens all jumped in. Then he tied the fish together with a string and carried them with one hand and took the basket in the other, and in this way he brought them all home again.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The Coliseum will be the scene of the second annual indoor meet of the Italian American A. C., New Year's night. The committee in charge is using every effort to make the occasion a gala one from every standpoint, and as a number of star performers will be seen in action, the affair should prove a great drawing card for all the local sporting bloods.

There will be match races between William J. Hackett and J. J. Cook of the Brookline Gymnasium, and also between Peter Corriveau of East Bridgewater and Frank Bruce of West Quincy. All of the above mentioned have accredited themselves with honors in the past, and therefore some closely contested races should be in order.

In addition to these, the one mile relay championship of Quincy will be decided when Quincy High, Quincy Y. M. C. A., Quincy A. A. and St. Mary's teams come together.

The entries for these events close December 30th with Frank Bruce, 61 Canal street. Here is a fine opportunity for all promising runners to test their capacity.

Harkins, a well known local boy, was awarded his letters, at the banquet tendered to the members of the St. John's "Prep" football squad, yesterday at Danvers. Harkins has all the qualifications of a good football player, and although this was his first attempt on the gridiron, he succeeded in commanding a most enviable reputation.

A roller skating race of the first class order is scheduled for this evening in the Coliseum.

The project of having Quincy High favored in the future with an enclosed athletic field, came in for its due share of publicity in the morning papers. It was argued that the showing of the teams during the past two years has been sufficient to warrant the granting of a new athletic field.

This movement was started a year ago and it now seems as if something definite should be done in the matter. The plan is certainly a good one and one worthy of immediate attention.

It has been noticeable that those high schools that do possess inclosed fields, have been far more successful especially from a financial standpoint. There is sufficient property in the vicinity of the school for a fine athletic field, and the opportunity is especially good at the present time to undertake the action desired.

The strong St. Alphonsus combination will be the next team to face the Quincy A. A. basket ball five in St. Mary's hall. The game is carded for next Thursday evening and as the relative strength of both teams is too well known to require any further announcement, it is safe to say that a record breaking crowd will be on hand for the event.

MILTON PLAYERS REBEL.

In consequence of a revolt among the members of the Milton High School Basketball team, that school will not be represented in that sport this winter unless some means is found to motify the mutineers. It was stated last night that the schedule arranged for the season had been cancelled and that practice work had been discontinued.

The rebellion is an aftermath of the final football game at Natick on Thanksgiving day morning. Most of the basketball players were members of the football team, and it was the understanding among the players that the receipts of the Natick game were to be applied to the purchase of sweaters for the team.

After the game, at which a goodly sum was netted, the proposition was put up to the school committee, who promptly turned it down, on the ground that, as sweaters could not be given to all the athletic teams, it would be unfair to discriminate in favor of the football team.

Therupon the players held a conference and decided to refuse to go out for the basketball team.

A Cruet Stand.

Several villagers were discussing a departed sister, who had been given to good deeds, but was rather too fond of dispensing sharp spoken advice.

"She was an excellent woman," said the deceased lady's pastor. "She was constantly in the homes of the poor and afflicted. In fact, she was the salt of the earth."

"She was more than that," remarked a villager. "She was the vinegar, the pepper and the mustard as well. She was a perfect cruet stand of virtues."—London Tit-Bits.

Miss Elizabeth Newcomb Died At Her Home In Lowell

LIVED HERE MANY YEARS

Miss Elizabeth Newcomb, a native of Quincy and for many years a resident of this city, passed away at her home in Lowell, Sunday, and the funeral services were observed Tuesday afternoon from Saint Ann's Episcopal church. A large number of relatives and friends were present and the services were very impressive. Miss Newcomb was the daughter of the late Captain James and Mrs. Caroline Newcomb and resided in that part of Quincy known as the Point. An ardent lover of children, she exhibited excellent tact and diplomacy in her dealings with them and possessed wonderful powers of government. She held many positions of trust, where she displayed great executive ability, and for the last twelve years she was at the head of the orphan school connected with and supported by Saint Ann's church. Of a sunny and affectionate disposition she won the hearts of the little ones entrusted to her care. The deceased is survived by an only sister, Mrs. Susannah Young, to whom her many friends extend their sympathy in her bereavement. Her nieces are Mrs Young's daughters, Carrie and Elsie, Mrs. Lucy A. Mitchell of Newbury avenue, Atlantic, Misses Annie and Lizzie Newcomb and two nephews, John A. Newcomb of Bigelow street and John Shaw of Orleans. The cousins of the deceased are Mrs. Clara L. Brown, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, Mrs. Lucy B. Waterman and Miss Ida M. Newcomb.

Having passed many happy summer vacations in Orleans, Miss Newcomb selected a quiet, sequestered spot in the cemetery of that beautiful town which overlooks the ocean for her final resting place.

A devoted sister, a loving and affectionate aunt, a true and faithful friend, the remembrance of her will ever remain a sacred memory.

WIDENING OF HANCOCK ST.

Order Reached Mayor Tuesday And Was Promptly Signed

NOT UNDER BETTERMENT ACT

The order for the widening of Hancock street which was passed by the City Council, Monday evening, reached the Mayor Tuesday afternoon and was promptly signed by His Honor. It is now a law. As stated in previous issues, the widening makes the street a uniform width of 65 feet between the Ledger office and Williams corner, so called. The widening is largely on the east side although a narrow strip is taken from the estate of John Hall and the Real Estate Trust to straighten the west line.

Under the order passed, it is not proposed to do the work of widening at once, as the order only contemplates the taking of the land at the present time. This will prevent the erection of any buildings on any of the land, should any have been contemplated.

Under the order, abutters will have thirty days after notification, in which to move buildings, stone walls, trees, fences, etc. It is probable however, that they will not be called upon to do so for some time as yet.

It will be news to many of the abutters, to know that the order passed Monday night, was not under the betterment act, which was the only objection made to the proposition either at the public hearings or before the committee. The loan is extended over a period of ten years, $4,000 coming due in each year for the first nine years and $2,000 in the tenth year.

SCHOOLMASTERS' ANNUAL BANQUET HELD IN BOSTON

The December meeting of the Quincy Schoolmaster's club and the annual banquet was held Tuesday evening at the Quincy House, Boston, and proved to be a most enjoyable occasion. Albert L. Barber, Superintendent of Schools presided at the after dinner exercises. The speaker of the evening was Dr. Charles W. Parmenter, headmaster of the Mechanics Arts High school Boston who spoke on the subject "Observations on education in Europe and America." It was an able address and much enjoyed.

☞The crowd cannot get by the attractions of the H. L. Kincaide & Co. stores, either going or coming, and the clerks are more than busy showing the big line of home furnishings carried on the four floors of their salesrooms. Good furniture, reasonable prices, and satisfaction guaranteed make quick sales.

UNION CLUB'S FIRST MEETING

Was Held In New Church And Attended By Many

JAMES A. BURNS SPEAKS

The first meeting of the Park and Downs Union club in the new church took place Tuesday evening, the members greatly appreciating the commodiousness and comfort of their new quarters.

As an innovation a supper was served, with chicken forming the piece de resistance by a committee consisting of Mrs. Charles Richardson, Mrs. Albert R. Muir, Mrs. A. V. Bissett, Mrs. H. B. Letson, Mrs. Geo. Baxter, Mrs. L. I. Mosman and Miss Marion Brown.

Ladies and friends of the members were present and enjoyed an entertaining stereopticon lecture on the "Development and Growth of the Cunard Line" by James A. Burns, travelling passenger agent of the company.

Many beautiful views were shown and the audience enjoyed the ready humor of the speaker in his description of steamship travel.

In his opening remarks Mr. Burns laid emphasis upon the fact that during the three-quarters of a century the company had existed it had not sacrificed the life of a single passenger through negligence.

The history of steamships, from the thousand-ton Brittania of the early days carrying a passenger list of 100 down to the 33 thousand-ton Nauretania who carries three thousand passengers, was given in a manner interesting and instructive by the speaker.

At the time of the Brittania 14 days and 8 hours were consumed in crossing from England to the United States while today the record time is 4 days, 10 hours and 41 minutes with an average speed of 30 miles an hour.

A peep at the mammoth floating hotels was afforded by the many clear and artistic views of the company's ships. The passengers were shown at play with the games of shuttle board and other marine pastimes.

Foreign views were thrown upon the screen including many beautiful scenes in the British Isles among which were views of Queenstown, Cork, the "rocky road to Dublin," the River Stratford and others of a like nature.

Boston as the original port of entry on this side was mentioned and Fishguard the new port of the company across the water was described in detail.

The coming to port of a great ocean liner was graphically told in closing. The welcome approach of the pilot boat, the coming of the port physician, the going into quarantine, the examinations of the customs and health officials and the final dispersion of the multitude of passengers to all portions of the continent.

Estes orchestra played intermittenly during the supper and at the request of the speaker "America" was sung, at the close of the address, by those present, Miss Henrietta C. Gramm presiding at the piano.

CLERGYMAN'S MOTHER DEAD AT WEYMOUTH

Mrs. Mary A. Hyde, mother of Rev. William Hyde, of the Weymouth Episcopal church and well known in Quincy, passed away this morning at her home in Weymouth, aged 76 years. Mrs. Hyde was the widow of William Hyde and was born in Givion, Scotland. She leaves two sons Rev. William Hyde of Weymouth and Rev. Thomas A. Hyde of Brooklyn, N. Y. and three daughters Agnes, Elizabeth, and Mary. Funeral services will be held from Christ church, Quincy, Saturday morning. Archbishop Babcock will officiate.

300 FRIENDS SURPRISED GEO. SHORTLE

Popular Young Man Tendered Party In Electa Hall

FRIENDS FROM MANY PLACES

About three hundred of his friends assembled in Electa hall, Tuesday evening and tendered a surprise party to George A. Shortle, one of the most popular young men in the West Quincy district. The affair took the form of a dancing party and was arranged by the members of the Nonpareil club of which Mr. Shortle himself is a member.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Kennedy's five piece orchestra and dancing began at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Shortle little realized what was going on until nearly nine o'clock, when one of his friends invited him to the dance. He accepted the invitation and had no sooner entered the hall than he was given a great ovation.

He was then presented with a handsome gold stick pin and a pair of cuff links in a very neat presentation speech made by one of the honorary members of the club. Mr. Shortle was deeply touched by the tokens of esteem showered upon him, yet maintained sufficient confidence to respond in a fitting manner.

Various clubs were represented at the gathering, including the Mohawk A. C., the Wellington A. C. of Weymouth, the Orient A. A., the Adams A. A., the Harmony Associates, the Hardy A. C., the Bryant A. C., the Delta Girls, the Neponset Wanderers and the Quincy A. A.

During the evening an exhibition waltz was given by John Houseberger and Miss Flossie Drysdale. The Cornitas quartet, composed of Charles Knight, Henry Burke, Jacob Silva and Louis Ross rendered a number of songs, in a manner that brought forth great applause.

Delegations of friends were present from Roxbury, Dorchester, Weymouth, Braintree, South Boston and Brockton. Among those present were:

Refreshments were seved during the evening, and dancing continued until midnight. The committee on arrangements included John G. Rooney, Perry E. Galvin, Richard G. Roche, Sherman D. Hayden, Allan A. Eaton and Charles E. Johnson.

HOOPER WAS GOOD GUESSER

Many Unique Games At Christmas Party of Woll. Social

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

A Christmas party was the form of entertainment provided by the Wollaston Social society in the Unitarian vestry Tuesday evening and a jolly good time it proved.

The acting out of charades with appropriate costumes and scenery took up the first part of the evening and proved a laugh provoker for those present. Especially noteworthy was the histronic ability of Councilman-elect Charles E. Barker.

With the president Irving L. Shaw as master of ceremonies the fun went on apace. A blackboard was produced and various members tried their hand at drawing adjuncts of the Christmas tree, the others being allowed to guess.

Miss Gladys Howe received the first prize, a packet of calling cards and envelopes, having 15 out of 16 correct. Clifton H. Baker received a touching memento for the booby prize in the shape of a minature donkey.

A Christmas stocking filled with candy was brought forward, each member being asked to estimate the number of pieces contained. J. Harry Hooper struck the exact number with his guess of 438 and received the stocking.

Refreshments were served and the evening closed with selections by the club quartet, assisted by a large number of those present. At the business meeting a committee was appointed for the club vaudeville to be given in the spring the same to consist of Irving L. Shaw, Clifton H. Baker, Axel Nelson, Roy C. Baker and Jesse I. Litchfield.

The executive committee composed of Irving L. Shaw, Mrs. Paul E. Brodbeck, Mrs. Roy C. Baker, Mrs. B. F. Bowles and Mrs. Irving L. Shaw were responsible for the good time of Tuesday evening.

MODERN THEATRE TO BE BUILT

RICHESON TRIES TO COMMIT SUICIDE

The Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, whose trial for the murder of Avis Linnell is to begin on January 15, attempted to kill himself by cutting himself with a piece of tin early today in the Charles street jail.

The clergyman was seriously injured before he was discovered. He is in the hands of surgeons, and the outcome is doubtful.

The attendants at the jail heard the clergyman's cries of pain about 3 A. M. They went to the cell and found him in great agony. He had gashed himself with a sharp, jagged piece of tin which had been fashioned into a sort of knife.

The doctor of the prison was hurriedly called. He saw at once that the prisoner was in a serious condition. Other doctors were sent for and reached the jail in the early morning hours, rolling up to the prison in taxis and carriages and causing the excitement in the jail to increase.

Finally four doctors had the man in charge and it was decided that an operation was necessary. Richeson was put under the influence of an

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

PASTORS AND CHOIRMASTERS.

Programs for Christmas music must reach the Ledger office not later than noon Thursday, Dec. 21, to insure publication in this paper, Friday and Saturday.

For a period of several weeks before Christmas a large force of recruits assembles in Sunday school and studies with enthusiasm the doings of Habakkuk and Melchiesedek.

The complaint is made that President Taft's message was not properly listened to. The congressmen may have been having their hair cut so they could appear in Washington society.

Sam Gompers says the labor unions need no house cleaning. There is an impression, however, that a little chloride of lime around the sink drain would make things smell better.

Santa Claus has to take so much time now fixing himself up with asbestos whiskers and other modern improvements, that he may not get around to make the usual number of gifts.

Wall street note: The Lone Forks, Ark. Blatter having printed an editorial headed "Be Honest," the bears seized the opportunity to make a concerted attack on the market, and prices crumbled rapidly.

The Powers clearly feel that when Mr. Shuster was permitted to go to Persia and put funds in the treasury, instead of taking them out and putting them in his own pocket, a dangerous precedent was created.

The complaint is frequently made thatthere are no ruins in this country to attract tourists. But most of our graft ridden cities are putting up buildings that promise to supply this demand in a few years.

Any man who ever got up on a summer night to slap a mosquito can understand the trouble Italy is having with those slippery Arabs, with the difference that it costs Italy $2,500,000 a day.

The United States is said to be the only country that does not limit the amount of explosives that can be discharged in a mine. Our legislators don't believe in doing any work that can be laid off on Divine Providence.

SALARY INCREASES.

Notwithstanding the desire to economize in the expenses necessary for running city affairs, a desire that, of course, is correct, the action of the City Council in raising, substantially, the salary of the chief executive is to be commended. Out of all reason is the present renumeration for the vast amount of work and worry incident to the office and the amount of time taken in its proper fulfillment.

The voters of this section, taken as a whole, are not cheap men, and if the office of the Mayor of a city of this size is not worth the new salary ordered, it is worth nothing. Proper services in public places should be rewarded with a suitable wage.

We are sure we voice the sentiment of the community in saying that the city fathers are to be congratulated.

THE CITY CHARTER.

Changes of an important nature in the City Charter are suggested by the special committee of City Council appointed to look into the matter.

Large bodies are always unwieldy and from their size often hamper proper deliberations. With that in view it is suggested that the Council be reduced in size and to consist of 9 members who will be on the city's payroll to the extent of $250 annually. This with the matter of having the Mayor elected for two years are the matters that will require the most consideration. No one could doubt the advisability of the other two suggestions which provide for the Executive becoming an ex-officio member of the school committee and City Council, without having a vote.

At any rate should the amendments be enacted by the Legislature the proviso is made that they shall not become operative until accepted by a majority of the legal voters of Quincy.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN.

In these days of up-to-date training it is to be regretted that among the dozen and one unnecessary things which the modern girl is taught, some deep-thinking person has not added to the list that most necessary thing for a girl to learn, the art of silence.

Silence is a tremendous power in this day of talkative members of the fair sex. Besides it is infinitely nice to have some depth which every passing acquaintance has not sounded. The girl who confides to you the story of her past flirtations and the secret hope her heart is set upon, the second day of your acquaintance, will soon bore you, if she does not actually disgust you.

Says an exchange, "there is no subject in the world that cannot be discussed with propriety with the right person and under the right conditions. But few girls seem to posses the eye of discrimination for these two facts. On the contrary, they frequently seem rather to pride themselves on discussing the wrong subject with the wrong person."

THE PHILOSOPHY OF TOYS.

The Christmas toy giving season is annually the occasion of much fine spun argument among our moralists concerning the influence of toys.

A few years ago it was seriously argued that the prevalence of the Teddy bear was destroying the maternal instinct among girls. To this it might be replied, that as wicked nurses and heartless parents long held the child heart in terror by threats that the bears would eat them up, so a social service was rendered when the youngsters were persuaded to look at the bear as a friend. This may be regarded as particularly true, now that a cultivation of antipathy for bears is no longer necessary for the survival of the race.

An American Rabbi some years ago tried to persuade the Nuremburg toy makers to give up making tin soldiers, which he felt tended to love of militarism. However, admiration of soldier life is a disease every boy catches, and it may be useful to get it over early like the measles.

The serious misfortune of Toyland is that so many parents of small means feel that they must buy expensive toys to make the children happy. After all it is the simple toy that lasts. In a few days the $5 mechanical steam boat will be in the junk barrel, while the boy will be playing with his 25 cent cart. And the doll the little girl takes to bed is not the French creation that winks and smiles, but ugly old Hannah, the home made darling of rags.

WHO GETS THE REST.

"The consumer pays a dollar for food, the farmer gets less than 50 cents for it. Who gets the rest?"

The foregoing very pertinent question is asked by James Wilson in his annual report as secretary of agriculture.

The hated middleman, that bogey of both producer and consumer, no doubt. And yet the middleman must render an important service, or he would not have held his own so well in modern commerce.

The middleman makes a place for himself because of the modern tendency toward specialization. He is a specialist on distribution. The farmer would get more for his potatoes by selling direct to the Consumer. But heretofore he has felt that time he saved by working through a middleman counted him more than the extra profit from the direct sale to the Consumer.

And in the same way, groups of people anywhere can buy food products cheaper by clubbing together and buying direct. But ifthey count their time worth much, it is cheaper to buy through the middleman.

American farmers, however, have been too slow to adopt those co-operative methods for sale of products which have enabled foreign farmers to get higher prices and sell to the Consumer for less.

THE BETHLEHEM STAR.

By ALOYSIUS COLL.

The Bethlehem star, the guiding star
Of old Judea's night—
Has it become a faded scar
Across the orient night,
The guess of science and the guess
Of critic, seer and sage?
Has it the dimmer grown or less
For change of clime and age?

Star of the east—it is not set,
Though science scout the sky,
Tis burning in the heaven yet
As bright and sure and high
As when the shepherds saw it flame
Over old Bethlehem
And followed it until it came
And showed a Christ to them.

It is not set, the Bethlehem star,
But hovers full and clear
Where'er the babe and cradle are
And parents watching near,
Where'er the angel lips of love
Bring tidings of great joy,
Where'er a mother bends above
Her darling firstborn boy.

WHERE'ER THE BABE AND CRADLE ARE AND PARENTS WATCHING NEAR.

The Bethlehem star—each mother sees
Its holy promise light,
Believing each its destinies
Her darling's in the night,
Believing each the little star
Is set above her son
To light her mother hopes that are
And shine when hers are done.

Mary in Bethlehem outcast
Is Mother Mary still
And lives the Mary of the past
On Scotland's heathered hill;
Are Mary's of the time of God
And Egypt, Rome and Spain,
Are Mary's of the time of God
And watch the star again.

The Bethlehem star, the guiding star
That hovers full and clear
Wherever babe and cradle are
And parents watching near,
Wherever cherub lips of love
Bring tidings of great joy,
Where'er a mother bends above
Her darling firstborn boy.

ACCORDING TO TEDDY.

I'M thist a little Teddy Bear
And cannot make a noise,
And so I never try to scare
The tiny girls and boys.
And that is why they love me so—
I'm thist so tame and kind, you know.

NOW, if I were a real bear,
With great big growls inside,
To hug me children wouldn't dare—
I guess they'd run and hide.
Though me they squeeze with all their might,
I can't hug them too very tight.

ESCAPED INJURY WHEN AUTO BACKED

The Globe says:

Much excitement was aroused, at the corner of Boylston and Gloucester streets Tuesday morning when a large touring car, owned and operated by Charles P. Baker of Wollaston, backed through the broad fence and dropped about six feet into the train yard of the Boston & Albany Railroad.

It is thought that Mr. Baker, in attempting to turn the car around, became confused and threw on the reverse lever instead of the forward one. Fortunately, neither Mr. Baker nor the car were much the worse for the accident.

Santa Claus And His Flying Machine

IT was the night before Christmas, and it may have been because Marjorie's papa had been reading an article about a man who had a wonderful flying machine that all these strange things happened. Marjorie was sitting in the big easy chair in the corner, where the light from the lamp did not hurt her eyes and where she could listen for any sound of Santa Claus' reindeer on the snow outside when suddenly she felt the chair move. Then it was whirled around and out of the door into the street. Marjorie wondered what had happened, but Annabel, her biggest doll, who was in the chair with her, spoke up and said: "Don't be afraid. We are going to see Santa Claus. He's met with an accident. Didn't you know?"

A WILD RIDE.

"Indeed I did not," answered Marjorie.

"Yes," replied Annabel, "I just got a wireless telegram asking me to come up to Castle Christmas. I was one of their favorite guests last year, and they would think it strange if I didn't call to offer sympathy. So, you see, as you were in the chair I just had to take you with me."

After what seemed a long time the chair came to a tall white building that looked as if it might have been built of great blocks of loaf sugar. It stood on top of a snow covered hill.

A cunning little brownie in buttons and a red and green uniform like holly opened the door for them.

"Mrs. Santa Claus says for you to please step right upstairs. They're expecting you," said the brownie.

When they reached the second floor a hearty voice called out, "Step right in!" and another voice said: "Now, be calm, Santa! You know, my dear, that you must not excite yourself."

In the center of the room stood a huge white bed. In the bed lay Santa Claus with covers to his chin. Mrs. Santa was bending over him with a cup and spoon.

A VERY SICK SANTA.

"It's his medicine time," she said, nodding to the doll and Marjorie. Santa made a very wry face.

After the medicine was down Mrs. Santa turned to the newcomers and said: "We've been waiting for you. The doctor says Santa must stay in bed for a month. He's sprained his ankle."

"Monkeying with that new flying machine young Chris coaxed me to buy in place of the reindeer," grumbled Santa. "Plague take it, I never had any trouble like this when I depended on Thunder and Blitzen and the rest of my dear old team."

"Well, Marjorie," said Mrs. Santa, "we thought you might be willing to take the gifts around for Mr. Santa this Christmas, seeing that he can't go himself. I don't want to let Chris go up in that horrid—I mean we—um—can't spare Christopher at present. I thought you might enjoy a ride in a flying machine. With a couple of brownies to run down the chimneys with the toys you can manage very well. The brownies do finely with some one to look after them, but they don't do to send out alone."

"Wife, I don't like this idea of the flying machine. Why can't Marjorie take out the reindeer? Maybe they are not so fast, but they are quite safe."

"Very well; I'll ring for the reindeer," agreed Mrs. Santa, touching a bell. Buttons came hurrying into the room.

"Harness the Christmas reindeer to the biggest sleigh and have all the toys put in it. This young lady will take them out for Santa Claus this Christmas."

Buttons looked dismayed. "I'm sorry, ma'am, but it's too late. Young Mr. Christopher, ma'am, had them toys all loaded into the new flying machine and he's just started off with them himself."

Mrs. Santa shrieked and fainted. Santa Claus jumped up and yelled, all the little brownies came rushing in and there was such confusion that Marjorie never could remember how she got away, but the next thing she knew she was opening her eyes in the big chair in the corner with Annabel clasped in her arm and mother saying:

"Come, dear; it's time to go to bed. Santa Claus will be around pretty soon."

INDIVIDUAL PROBATION WATCHERS.

In Atlanta, Ga., they are to try the plan of "adult probation." It is to have 100 assistant probation officers, each one charged with looking after some probationer—as long as they hold out, presumably. Drunkenness, desertion of the family and other "social diseases" are to be guarded against by this volunteer corps. We can imagine that the probation officers of this stamp are in for more or less lively times. If there is anything that will cheer up a probationer and make him happy it is to know that his "shadow" is rambling about the city at all hours, perhaps trying hard to catch him napping so as to prove what a good probation man the amateur detective is. We can see possibilities of some of the probation officers of this stamp getting occasionally kicked out of homes and dropped down back stairways. A man will stand for the regular probation officer because the latter is part of the government system in many places, and because he often is a very kindly and helpful citizen. The same man, however, would hardly be pleased at being chased about by an amateur Sherlock Holmes trying to get a chance to "tell tales" on him and get him in jail. There is also a question as to the value from any point of view of the sort of man who would be willing to devote much of his time to chasing about and spying on the victims of misfortune and police activity.—Brockton Enterprise.

Jury bribing should cease, or the lawyers will find it difficult to acquire their usual liberal slice.

Anty Drudge Invited to Take an Automobile Ride.

Miss Spic-a-span (joyfully)—"Hello, Anty Drudge! Come take a ride with me!"

Anty Drudge—"My! An automobile! How extravagant."

Miss Spic-a-span—"No. I earned this with my painting. And I do all my own housework. This is washday, but I was through by 12 o'clock. That Fels-Naptha you told me of is like sunshine on a rainy day. Why, the hanging out is the hardest part of my washing."

If time is money, Fels-Naptha will save you money and lots of it every washday.

Perhaps you don't consider your time is worth money. But your coal is, and your clothes are, and you certainly value your health.

Fels-Naptha saves your coal or other fuel because it cleanses your clothes in cool or lukewarm water, with no need for a hot fire to heat water or boil your clothes, either in summer or winter.

It saves your clothes because there is no boiling to weaken their fibre and no hard rubbing to wear holes in them.

It saves your health because it takes all the back-breaking work out of washday and removes the danger of catching cold from overheated room or steaming suds.

Aren't these things worth saving?

If you think so, get Fels-Naptha and use it according to directions on the red and green wrapper.

HISTORY OF LONG LOST RING

Writer Solves Mystery. Ring Found Near Elk Club

BY BENJAMIN JOHNSON

Some weeks ago the Ledger published a short item, stating that Benjamin Johnson had found a 22 karat gold ring in front of the Elks club on Foster street, while some digging was being done. The ring from its appearance had been buried some time and on the inside was the following inscription, "S. K. Willard, died August 1725."

A writer in the Sunday Globe, solves the mystery of the ring in the following interesting article.

Who was the owner or who was the donor? Could the police, the Pinkerton Agency or Burns solve this mystery of two centuries and unveil the past.

To one familiar with old New England families the solution would be easy. Two initials were not frequent in the early 18th century, and S. and K. would suggest Samuel and Katherine if it had been a wedding ring.

Let us consult the old gossip of that period in Boston, whose diary rivals that of Pepy's information about his neighbors. We refer to Judge Sam Sewall, who died in 1792, and whose diary covers half a century of Boston life.

Under date of Aug. 1, 1725, the mystery is solved. "Lord's Day, Aug. 1, about 10 m. Mrs. Katherine Willard dyes. Is much lamented." The bearers at the funeral were Mr. Davenport, Col. Fitch, Col. Winthrop, Mr. Treasurer Allen, Mr. Samuel Sewall, Mr. Jacob Wendell. The editors of the dairy note that she was the wife of Josiah Willard, the secretary of the Province for many years, and that her maiden name was Allen, probably a relative, perhaps a sister of Jeremiah Allen, treasurer of the Province, one of the pallbearers and a son of Rev. James Allen of Boston. A visit to the Suffolk Probate discloses the will of Josiah Willard, who died in 1756.

He speaks in it of property left his daughter Katherine by her grandmother, Marianna Lynde. The Lyndes were one of the most prominent families in Boston at that date. Samuel Lynde was a prosperous merchant and in the accounts of the family is given a wife, Mary, who died in 1697.

But when his will is unearthed, proved at his death in 1721, he speaks of his wife, Marianna. A search of the vital records of Boston discloses the marriage by Mr. Sam Willard, March 21, 1700 of "Samuel Lynde & Mary Anna Alen."

In the same records, Oct. 24, 1715, is the marriage by Rev. Mr. Eben Pemberton of Capt. Josiah Willard and Mrs. Katherine Allen. Mistress at that day was a prefix to a maiden's name as well as that of a married woman. Marianna Lynde, in the records of the Old South Church, sells one-half a pew belonging "to her former husband, Dr. Daniel Allen."

Here, then, we have the parents of Katherine (Allen) Willard, who died in 1725, and under date of 15 Dec. 1682, we find in the vital records of Boston, the birth of Catherine, daughter of Daniel and Marianna Allen. In another old diary her death is given in 1725, and her age as 35, but women in those days as now undervalued their longevity. After the success achieved let us investigate her parents' history.

We find that genealogists of the past note that Dr. Daniel Allen was a noted Boston physician and that the maiden name of his wife was unknown. The widow Marianna Lynde in her will in 1727 speaks of her son Eleazer Allen of the Carolinas, her grandchildren William, Daniel and Katherine Willard, and her sister, Hannah Bendall.

Now the Bendalls were well known in Boston. Edward Bendall had Bendall's Cove, or Dock, afterward the Town Dock, now Dock square. His children were as much noted for their names as he was for his possessions. They were Freegrace, Reform, Hopedfor, Moremercy and Restore. Freegrace Bendall married Alice Lyell, and they were drowned in 1676 in the harbor, coming from noodles Island, now East Boston.

They left eight children, of whom the town records say "five were too small to shift for themselves." There were among them Pitford, Moremercy, Freegrace, Scarlett and Marianna. Dr. Daniel Allen married in 1679 Marianna Bendall. He died in 1693, leaving an estate of about $15,000 to his widow during her widowhood and for the education of his children. Attempts to solve the parentage of Dr. Daniel is unsuccessful till we find a deed in the Suffolk Registry, dated 1681, in which Daniel Allin of Boston, chirurgeon, with free and full consent of his wife Marianna, sell land in Dedham formerly the estate of his late father, Rev. Mr. John Allin, granted him by the town of Dedham.

Rev. John Allin was baptized at Colby, Norfolk, Eng., in 1597, was a graduate of Cains College, England, and became minister at Wrentham, Eng., and was driven by religious persecution to New England in 1637. He married as a second wife, Catherine, widow of Gov. Thomas Dudley, her second husband.

Rev. John Allin by his wife Catherine, had with other children, Daniel born, Aug. 5, 1656, who graduated from Harvard in 1675 and was the Boston physician and father of Mrs. Katherine (Allen) Willard, who died Aug. 1, 1725, and half-brother of Gov. Joseph Dudley. Bearers at the funeral call received rings without doubt. Jacob Wendell's family intermarried with the Quincy, and it was perhaps on a visit to that part of Braintree now Quincy the ring was lost, and the wear and tear of time and the chemical action of the earth effaced M. R. and left S. K. Willard to puzzle the finder in after years.

It is surprising how many nice gifts for Christmas can be found at a drug store and our popular druggist C. C. Hearn on the busy corner has an unusually choice array this year.

You need the Ledger every day.

Q.—Kindly explain the significance of the word "eternal" in the following verse of Scripture. "Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them in like manner,......* are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of ETERNAL fire."—Jude 7. (R. M. B.)

Answer.—The cities of the plain, because of their corruption and degradation, were destroyed by "eternal fire," or to express the matter in modern language, they suffered the vengeance of lasting destruction. The word "eternal" is from the Greek aionian and signifies lasting or "to the age." The destruction that came upon those cities was certainly a lasting one. The inhabitants of those cities, however, were not eternally destroyed, for the Savior, more than two thousand years afterwards, declared of some of the cities of His day and of His own people, the Jews, that, had the mighty works which had been performed in their cities been done in Sodom and Gomorrha, they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes; and therefore, it would be more tolerable for them in the day of judgment than for the people of His day. (Matthew xi, 20-24.) The lesson for the Lord's people is, that having been fully enlightened concerning Divine grace, if then they were to pursue an evil course, it would mean that these would suffer the vengeance of "everlasting destruction (not eternal torment) from the presence of the Lord."—II Thessalonians i, 9.

RED CROSS SEALS.

Few people have any conception of the magnitude of the Red Cross Christmas Seal Campaign. The following figures will show what a gigantic movement this is. Already 85,000,000 seals have been printed, and practically that entire number distributed to agents. Probably 15,000,000 more will be needed. Advertising circulars, posters, cards, etc., to the number of several million have also been distributed. It is estimated that the army of paid and volunteer workers engaged in selling the seals will number over 100,000. The advertising and publicity donated to the campaign will amount to several hundred thousand dollars. Every effort is being put forth to sell 100,000,000 seals, or about one for every man, woman, and child in the United States.

FACES DEATH WITH SMILES

Old Age Proves Too Much For John Bigelow

WAS AUTHOR AND DIPLOMAT

New York, Dec. 20.—The funeral of John Bigelow, the venerable diplomat and author, who died at his home here, will be held at St. George's Episcopal church, this city, and the body will be taken for burial to Highland Falls, where Bigelow will lie beside his wife, who died nearly thirty years ago.

On Saturday Bigelow suffered a return of an ailment incident to advanced age, which laid him low last June at his summer home in Highland Falls. For more than two days he suffered intense pain, but eight or ten hours before death came a partial paralysis of the senses and for several hours he lay smiling at those about him, but unable to speak.

At the bedside were two of his four children, Major Bigelow and Miss Gacce Bigelow, and his granddaughter, Miss Charlotte Harding.

Although 94, Bigelow had displayed almost to the day of his death amazing vitality and mental keenness. He had kept thoroughly abreast of current events and recently taken part in many public functions.

John Bigelow, "America's grand old man," was born in Malden, N. Y., on Nov. 25, 1817. Every year of his life was filled with action. When asked at one time what he considered his favorite word, he replied: "Work."

A conspicuous figure in the anti-slavery contest, a convincing journalist, minister to France throughout the troubious times of the Civil war, friend and biographer of Tilden, president of the board of libraries, litterateur, man of the world; his career was one always of unfailing service to his country and the world in general.

SAVE A LITTLE CHRISTMAS CHEER.

Christmas time's a-comin', an' you better get in line.
Look a bit more cheery as you give the countersign.
Make your hand clasp warmer an' your smile a bit more bright.
When you celebrate on Christmas don't you want to do it right?
Jes' go in to make things lively until everybody's glad.
Jes' go on an' scatter sunshine. Don't be gloomy-like and sad.
Make everybody happy—jes' as happy as can be—
But don't hang all your presents on the Christmas tree.

Save a little cheerfulness to scatter through the year.
Save a few kind words to say, such as dry the tear.
Save kind deeds to do when chance comes by an' by.
You can use a little Christmas if you have it next July.
Jes' show your friends you love 'em by the thoughtful gifts you give.
Let the warmth of your sincerity touch all with whom you live
Till the grown folks chatter childlike in their pleasure and their glee,
But don't hang all your presents on the Christmas tree.

—Lewis E. Thayer.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

PEAS ARE ALWAYS POPULAR.

PEAS are one of the most useful foods we have, for in their canned form they are ready for all emergencies and are one of the few vegetables that taste about as well in the preserved form as when fresh.

They are useful for Christmas dinner because they can be used as a garnish if necessary and in placing peas on the bill of fare there is no danger that any Christmas guests will pass them by. They are eaten by almost every one.

In buying peas it is best to pay a little more and get the best quality from a reliable dealer. Beware of overgreen peas, for they are likely to have been tinted with some unwholesome coloring matter.

Cooking Peas.

French Peas.—Put a quart of peas in a saucepan with half a dozen little onions. Add two ounces of butter, a pinch of salt and a dessertspoonful of sugar that have been worked well together, and drop in a little parsley. Pour a glass of water over the peas, and cook them over a slow fire with the lid on. When ready to serve if the moisture has not evaporated it must be reduced over a quick fire. Then draw the pan to the side of the stove and drop in two ounces of butter, shaking the peas about till they are covered with it. The parsley should be removed as soon as the peas are cooked, but the onions are served with the dish if they are liked, as they should be reduced to a pulp by the time the peas are tender.

Green Peas Plain.—Drain and rinse a can of green peas, put into saucepan with half a cupful of boiling water, season with salt and pepper and heat through. Serve around a veal cutlet.

A Simple Soup.

Cream of Pea Soup.—Take a quart of soup stock, six tablespoonfuls of dried green peas which have been reduced to a powder, three tablespoonfuls of butter, a tablespoonful each of finely chopped onion and parsley, with salt and pepper to taste. Put the stock over fire, and when it boils add the onions and the green pea soup powder, which has been mixed with a cupful of cold water. Stir a few minutes, add the salt, pepper, butter and parsley. Boil one minute. Serve with croutons.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation, though desperately ill, overawes and controls 300 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee sails with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Goposs and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Jon Hix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Olsson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

In reply, and quite without premeditation, his hand went out to hers, covering it as it lay on the railing. But he knew beyond the shadow of a doubt that it was the boy that returned the pressure he gave, the boy sorrowing over the lost toy. The thought chilled him.

"Never mind," he said. "You can go sailing on the Martha any time you please—recruiting on Malaita if you want to."

It was a great concession he was making, and he felt that he did it against his better judgment. Her reception of it was a surprise to him.

"With old Kinross in command?" she queried. "No, thank you. He'd drive me to suicide. I couldn't stand his handling of her. I'll never step on the Martha again unless it is to take charge of her. I'm a sailor, like my father, and he could never bear to see a vessel mishandled."

An hour later, just as they were riding out of the compound, Sheldon glanced at her sharply and noted her face mottling, even as he looked, and turning orange and green.

"It's the fever," she said. "I'll have to turn back."

By the time they were in the compound she was shivering and shaking, and he had to help her from her horse.

"Funny, isn't it?" she said, with chattering teeth. "Like seasickness—not serious, but horribly miserable while it lasts. I'm going to bed. Send Ton Noah and Viaburi to me. Tell Orndri to make hot water. I'll be out of my head in fifteen minutes. But I'll be all right by evening. Short and sharp is the way it takes me."

Sheldon obeyed her instructions, rushed hot water bottles along to her and then sat on the veranda glancing across the compound to the grass house. Yes, he decided, the contention of every white man in the islands was right—the Solomons was no place for a woman.

He clapped his hands and Lalapern came running.

"Here, you," he ordered; "go along barracks, bring 'm black fella Mary, plenty too much, altogether."

A few minutes later the dozen black women of Berande were ranged before him. He looked them over critically, finally selecting one that was young, comely as such creatures went, and whose body bore no signs of skin disease.

"What name, you," he demanded. "Sanguli?"

"Me Mahua," was the answer.

"All right, you fella Mahua. You finish cook along boys. You stop along white Mary. All the time you stop along. You savvee?"

"Me savee," she grunted and obeyed his gesture to go to the grass house immediately.

"What name?" he asked Viaburi, who had just come out of the grass house.

"Big fella sick," was the answer. "White fella Mary talk 'm too much allee time. Allee time talk 'm big fella schooner."

Sheldon nodded. He understood. It was the loss of the Martha that had brought on the fever. He lighted a cigarette, and in the curling smoke of it caught visions of his English mother and wondered if she would understand how her son could love a woman who cried because she could not be skipper of a schooner in the cannibal isles.

* * * * * * *

The most patient man in the world is prone to impatience in love, and Sheldon was in love.

But how to approach her? He divined the fanatical love of freedom in her, the deep seated antipathy for restraint of any sort. No man could ever put his arm around her and win her. She would flutter away like a frightened bird. Approach by contact—that, he realized, was the one thing he must never do. His hand clasp must be what it had always been—the hand clasp of hearty friendship, and nothing more. And then, one morning, quite fortuitously the opportunity came.

"My dearest wish is the success of Berande," Joan had just said apropos of a discussion about the cheapening of freights on copra to market.

"Do you mind if I tell you the dearest wish of my heart?" he promptly returned. "I long for it. I dream about it. It is my dearest desire. It is for you some day when you are ready to be my wife."

She started back from him as if she had been stung. Her face went white on the instant, not from maidenly embarrassment, but from the anger which he could see flaming in her eyes.

"This taking for granted! This when I am ready!" she cried passionately. "Listen to me, Mr. Sheldon. I like you very well, though you are slow and a muddler, but I want you to understand once and for all that I did not come to the Solomons to get married. Getting married is not making my way in the world. It may do for some women, but not for me, thank you. When I sit down to talk over the freight on copra I don't care to have proposals of marriage sandwiched in. Besides—besides"—

Her voice broke for the moment, and when she went on there was a note of appeal in it that well nigh convicted him to himself of being a brute.

"Don't you see? It spoils everything. It makes the whole situation impossible—and—and I so loved our partnership and was proud of it. Don't you see? I can't go on being your partner if you make love to me. And I was so happy!"

Tears of disappointment were in her eyes, and she caught a swift sob in her throat.

"I warned you," he said gravely. "Such unusual situations between men and women cannot endure. I told you so at the beginning."

"Oh, yes; it is quite clear to me what you did. You took good care to warn me against every other man in the Solomons except yourself."

(To be Continued.)

How Toy Fairies Make Christmas Gifts

"COME; hurry up, my dears. Our friend St. Nicholas will soon be here to look over our latest Christmas toys. And you know what a busy man he is, never having a moment to spare this time of year."

So spoke the queen of cloud fairies to her many subjects.

Now, maybe you children do not know that these cloud fairies live up at the north pole in the clouds that are always full of snow. But always having lived there they never feel the cold and enjoy a frolic each morning on the great icebergs, to which they come down in sleighs drawn by reindeer. Cloud fairies, so it is said, make all the Christmas gifts Santa Claus gives to the little ones each Christmas eve.

The season had been a busy one for the cloud fairies, for they had done their best to make up games and design toys that they might have many nice new ones for Santa Claus. He was to visit them any minute, the reason the queen had for begging her subjects to hurry with the work in hand.

"Yes, dear queen," answered a girl fairy, dancing on the silver edge of a cloud; "I have all the dolls on the south end of the rainbow, where his greatness St. Nicholas of All Lands may view them without a moment's delay."

"And I have all the drums, bugles, horns, fifes and other musical toys placed to great advantage on the north end of the rainbow," said a gay fairy, flapping his wings as he sat on the point of a stray starlet that had got tangled in the clouds.

Just as the fairies ceased speaking there came through the frosty air the sound of sleighbells and the tooting of a bugle.

"Ah, there he is now!" cried the queen. "Let's all go to greet him."

In rushed four beautiful reindeer drawing a sleigh in which was seated

SANTA BOWING BEFORE THE QUEEN.

Santa Claus. With a bound old Santa was on a cloud, bowing low before the queen and kissing her hand.

Then he gathered a dozen or more fairies in his arm and hugged them as a great bear would hug its cubs. He laughed so loudly and so merrily that the icebergs began to melt.

"Now," he cried joyously, "show me what you have made for my hosts of earth children. You know this time of year brings me millions of letters, and I must hurry to my postoffice and run through my mail."

After looking at the Christmas toys Santa Claus said he was more than pleased. Then, giving his order for 10,000 bags full of the beautiful things, he told the queen that he must go.

"But before I go," he said, "I must beg you to be prompt in filling my order. There can be no delay on Christmas, you know, my dear queen. That would mean to break the heart of some of my little ones, and that would never, never do. So farewell till earth's sundown on Christmas eve. I'll be here myself to get my toys."

After kissing again the queen's hand the jolly old saint sprang into his sleigh, blew his bugle and was away on a breeze.

TO THE NORTHERN LIGHTS.

As two fairies stood watching him one said to the other, "For one reason only would I be an earth child."

"And what is that reason, pray?" asked the fairy.

"That I might be in one of those houses on the earth and see old Santa Claus come down one of those chimneys with his pack on his back and then to watch him fill the family stockings with toys and bonbons. I'm sure it would be quite a treat."

"Oh, but it happens only once a year," replied the other fairy. "You'd get good and lonesome during the long waits between two Christmases, I'm thinking. But, come; let's fly over and play in the northern lights. They are very bright tonight."

"Don't be gone long," called the queen after them, "for you know there are 10,000 bags of toys to make for the earth children's Christmas day."

A PLEA FOR THE POOR AT CHRISTMAS.

DO you know of any homes in your neighborhood where Santa Claus never comes? Is there a sick father, a father out of work, a widowed mother, an old and indigent person?

Charity, it has been said, begins at home, but it shouldn't stay there. It should go out into the highways and byways. Especially is this true of Christmas charity, which should be the highest kind of Christian charity.

Your children will have toys and sweetmeats in abundance. Perhaps they will have more than is good for them. It will make you happy to look into their joyous faces on Christmas morning when they inspect the treasures left for them by Santa Claus. But there is a sort of happiness even more to be desired than this. It is that which comes from remembering the poor at Christmas.

Think of the little ones and the sick and aged who will have no Santa Claus this year unless you become their Santa Claus. A very little gift to one who otherwise would receive none looms large in the eyes of the recipient. Surely you can make somebody outside your own family and circle happy this Christmas.

One of the wisest of the old sayings is this: "It is better to give than to receive." This proverb embodies and exemplifies the Christmas spirit, which is the Christian spirit reduced to the concrete.

Remember the poor this Christmas.

Results Are the Same.

"But if you don't believe in Santa Claus how do you expect him to bring you Christmas presents?" asked Tommy's uncle.

"Huh!" replied Tommy. "Believin' hasn't anything to do with it. I don't believe in ghosts, but I'm afraid of them just the same."

PRESIDENT HAS SOLID BACKING

Senate Unanimously Agrees to Notification to Russia

ABROGATES TREATY OF 1832

All-Day Debate Over Russian Discrimination Against Jews of America Followed by Adoption of Lodge Resolution, Which Omits Declaration That Treaty Has Been Violated —Closely Follows Sulzer Resolution

Washington, Dec. 20.—Following speeches containing the most bitter condemnation of Russia for its ignoring the rights of American citizens of Jewish faith, though they present American passports, the senate last night formally ratified President Taft's notification to Russia of the termination of the treaty of 1832. The vote was unanimous.

The Lodge joint resolution, reported by the foreign relations committee as a substitute for the Sulzer resolution that passed the house 300 to 1, was adopted after an all-day debate. The house today is expected to agree to the senate measure.

The senate measure was adopted at 7:19 p. m. It was introduced for the committee by Lodge as the measure couched in the language most satisfactory to the Washington administration, which sought to avoid giving offense to the St. Petersburg government.

The final action came after two substitutes had been voted down. It was the climax of a notable proceeding in the chamber which guards jealousy its traditional powers to make and break treaties.

All through the symposium of views, to which many senators contributed throughout the day, however, there were citations of historical instances of treaty terminations by executive act. The senate was held in session until a late hour, on the urgent plea of Lodge that, to secure action before the Christmas holiday recess Thursday, it was necessary that the senate should act at once.

Every senator who spoke voiced his advocacy of congressional action to meet the Russian discrimination. They were unanimous for the termination of the treaty, but showed a wide divergency of views as to the manner in which that end should be accomplished.

The most conspicuous opposition to the senate resolution developed when Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska offered a substitute resolution eliminating the question of race as a clause for discrimination and omitting the charge that Russia had violated the terms of the treaty. Nine senators voted for it.

Senator Newlands offered a substitute dovetailing the Hitchcock and Lodge resolutions, but this was voted down without division.

Then came the final vote on the Lodge resolution. The roll was called, but there was no division. Seventy-two votes were cast, and all of them were favorable to the measure. It therefore was declared adopted and was started on its way to the house.

The Lodge resolution, dopted by the senate, practically follows the form of the protested Sulzer resolution, passed by the house, but eliminates references considered objectionable to the Rusisan government.

These references in the Sulzer resolution declared in plain terms that Russia had repeatedly violated the commercial treaty of 1832, thereby rendering it invalid and useless.

Russia took offense at the declaration that it had violated its "pact," and in offering his resolution to the senate, Lodge couched it in formal, diplomatic language, enlarged on changed conditions in both countries which render the treaty obsolete, and omitted all reference to violations by either party to the contract. This resolution folowed closely the text of the formal notice sent by President Taft to the Russian foreign office.

Representative Sulzer previously had stated he had no objection to the elimination of the objectionable portions of his resolution.

The provisions of the treaty of 1832, over which the contest has arisen, include a clause that inhabitants of either country "shall be at liberty to sojourn and reside in all parts whatsoever of said territories, in order to attend to their affairs, and shall enjoy the same security and protection as natives of the country wherein they reside, on condition of their submitting to the laws and ordinances there prevailing."

With the senate's action the Russian situation has assumed a quieter phase so far as the executive branch of the government is concerned.

Press dispatches from St. Petersburg indicate that an answer has been handed to Ambassador Guild, and the contents of the Russian note, as outlined in the dispatches, are perhaps somewhat disappointing in that they convey no response to the direct statement by Secretary Knox that America stands ready to open negotiations immediately for a new treaty.

FINAL CHAPTER IN CLUB RAID

Man Heavily Fined In Local Court This Morning

PERMIT REVOKED

The final chapter in the cases that grew out of the raid at the rooms of the Quincy Associates, was closed in the district court this morning when the complaints against Mark J. Myatt were disposed of. There were three against Myatt, viz. keeping and exposing liquor for sale; violation of the express law by delivering liquor to others than for whom it was marked and delivering liquor knowing the same was to be used for illegal purposes.

J. J. McAnarney, represented the government and Frank A. Tirrell the defendant. When the cases were called this morning the defendant retracted his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty. A fine of $100 was then imposed on each complaint. This is one of the largest fines ever imposed in the Quincy court.

As a result of the raid a sum of nearly $1,000 was involved. Of this amount, the sum of $500 has been paid into the court by Myatt and the men found present at the time of the raid and the liquors and furniture forfeited to the Commonwealth amounted to over $300.

Under the law relative to the issuing of permits for the transportation of liquor, a conviction for violation of the law revokes the permit granted by the City Council, without further action by the Council.

EXAMINING BOOKS OF IRON WORKERS

Probers Want Dynamiters Who Preceded McManigal

Indianapolis, Dec. 20.—The intention of the government to find out who, if anybody, assisted the McNamaras in plotting explosions before Ortie McManigal appeared on the scene as a regular employed dynamiter, was made evident when more employes of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers were called before the grand jury.

McManigal, according to his confession, did not go into the dynamiting business for J. J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the association, until July, 1907, but more than a dozen explosions, all directed against structures erected by firms employing non-union men, took place in the two years previous to that time.

McNamara's employes, armed with records dating back to 1905, were before the investigators. Their presence was in connection with the tracing of the movements of men whose identities have not yet been made public.

CUT DUTIES ON WOOL

This Will Be the Message of President to Congress

Washington, Dec. 20.—President Taft summoned his cabinet together to review for the last time the president's recommendation for the revision of schedule K. The tariff board has completed its report and has laid it before the president. It is on this report that the message will be based and the indications now are that a substantial reduction in the tariff on wool, both the raw product and the manufactured article, will be urged.

President Taft expects to submit this message to congress today together with a summary of the tariff board's investigation. The full report will be submitted, but probably not until after the holidays.

Wealthy Man a Suicide

anaesthetic and the operation performed early today.

Drs. Brough, Ames, Sargeant and Lothrop were in attendance on the patient and performed the operation. Richeson was not removed from the jail. The operation was performed in the hospital section.

The officials of the jail saw that the case was serious. They immediately started to get in touch with the attorneys who represent Richeson. They got William A. Morse on the telephone.

At first there was a disposition to keep the attempt at suicide secret. But one of the men who was released from the jail and who was conversant with the facts told about it. Then corroboration came quickly, as it was deemed inadvisable to attempt to shroud such an act or cover it up.

What Richeson said as to his motive for the attempt was not learned, if he said anything.

What effect it will have on his trial, if he recovers, is another thing tha the lawyers and the district attorney's office have not taken into consideration.

JOHN ADAMS COURT.

Fifty members of Court John Adams, F. of A., and several members from Courts John Ericson and Roger Wolcott, including the Court John Adams degree staff, journeyed to Weymouth Tuesday evening and performed initiatory work on a number of candidates for Court Monatiquot No. 150.

The trip was made by special car which left Quincy Centre at 6.55 returning from Weymouth at 11.45.

The degree staff received many compliments for the excellent manner in which the degree work was performed.

Refreshments were served by Court Monatiquot and a very enoyable evening was spent with songs and stories.

Court John Adams meets on Friday, Dec. 22 in Clan MacGregor hall to nominate and elect officers.

ASSOCIATION ENTERTAINS IN ITS NEW HOME

Many Enjoy Festivities of Montclair Improvement Society

SOME NOTABLE SPEECHES

The grand "jollification" and smoker of the Montclair Improvement Association in their new headquarters on Pope street called a large number of city officials, past, present and future to that section of the city Wednesday evening.

The affair was one of the largest Montclair has seen and was held on account of the prosperity of the section in general and particularly because of the twelve new street lights which have been awarded that district and which it was expected would be in commission at the time of this meeting.

A brief business session was held in which routine matters were disposed of in short order, the major portion being referred to the next meeting. President Frederick J. Kessler presided.

William B. Nichols of the Citizens' Gas Light company was the first speaker and said that probably the question uppermost in their minds was what the gas company would do and when they would do it. He promised mains the coming season as soon as the permits passed the City Council and the ground was fit.

Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone received an ovation upon being introduced.

"I think when you read my inaugural," he said, "you will see that I believe in meetings of this kind. Years back improvement associations flourished and the districts in which they were situated were well taken care of. I see that it is going to do something for this district."

Quincy covers a big area with a small population and a low valuation. Your plan should be to find just what you do want before you start. By this you can accomplish far more than by any haphazard way.

The association should work as a unit. They should bury differences and get what is best for the district and expand. This development should not be at the expense of the other districts but with proper planning you will probably have as good a district as there is in Quincy.

There are great chances for factories in your outlying locations while in this vicinity may be built up a fine residential section. I want to cooperate with the people of Montclair in every way possible.

You must take into consideration the financial condition of the city and plan to go ahead in the right way as a unit. When streets are first laid out see that they are properly treed so that the district may not only be a good place to live in but also one of beauty.

I have not looked into the needs of this district as yet but shall depend upon the members of this society and of the community and will do the best I can to help Montclair.

Representative Louis F. R. Langelier responded in a happy vein telling in a humorous way of an accident that befell him and congratulate ing the association on its record in the short time it had existed.

Hhen I moved to Quincy Montclair wasn't heard of but recently I saw a brakeman minus a forefinger and was told told he had worn it down pointing out the beauties of Montclair.

The story was told of the hired man who came near carrying away the Montclair station mistaking it for a hen coop. In line with this the speaker brought home the suggestion for better service in keeping the station open outside of holidays and cold weather.

Mr. Langelier endorsed the setting out of trees. He was father of the order introduced for setting out trees when new streets were laid. Advising them to hang together and wishing them all kinds of success the speaker closed.

Councilman William J. Leslie, the incoming representative in the House from this district spoke of the energetic class of men that were doing not only Montclair a benefit but the city at large by their local improvements.

Improvement associations are good things. He hoped to see one in Wollaston. In the Council a Councilman has to have something behind him if he wants to get things.

In the Squantum Improvement association, Montclair has a rival that is hustling to get things. Montclair must get busy to keep up with them if not pass them.

He pointed to Wollaston for an example of what trees had done. It behooved them to plant them as quickly as they can. Mr. Leslie mentioned the proposed electric car line and extended his thanks for the support given him at the recent election.

In conclusion he advised the members to stick together and be a unit expressing the wish to see them flourish.

Ex-Representative Rednor P. Coombs spoke briefly saying the present quarters looked like progress. He told of Montclair at the time he went to school when it was practically a farm. With the new schoolhouse and improvement in the streets there has come about a change that is a revelation.

PERMANENT COMMISSION

For Metropolitan District Endorsed By Mayor of Boston

DOES NOT LIKE VETO POWER

Mayor Fitzgerald sent to the members of the Metropolitan Plan Commission yesterday a communication in which he declared that he considered their suggestions for a bill in relation to the establishment of a permanent Metropolitan Plan Commission and found much to commend.

The Mayor objected to the veto power given by the proposed bill to cities and towns.

The Mayor's communication follows:

"I have considered your statement of suggestions for a bill and find much to commend in it. The proposition that local autonomy should be preserved, while a central authority is established and the power granted to your proposed new commission to make recommendations to the Legislature, are features upon which there will be general agreement.

"As to the composition of the board, consisting of five members, two appointed by the Mayor and three by the Governor, this seems to me to be entirely equitable.

"The apportionment of the expense, so that the State will always pay 10 percent, the locality benefited never more than 65 percent and the remainder of the Metropolitan District at least 25 percent is, of course, arbitrary, but not inflexible, as the apportionment commission, which I understand is entirely distinct from the planning commission, has the right to vary the proportions to be borne relatively by the city or town benefited and the remainder of the district.

"As Mayor of Boston I do not think the city is unjustly treated in your scheme. Boston would perhaps average two-fifths of the Metropolitan assessment and one-third of the State assessment, making about 13 percent in all which this city would contribute toward the improvement outside. In the case of local improvements the share of Boston would be not more than 68 percent. At present a very large proportion of the Metropolitan improvements are outside of the city and Boston now pays 40, 60 and even 80 percent of their cost.

"It has seemed to me that the absolute veto which a city or town would enjoy on the improvements within the borders might in some instances block important Metropolitan Improvements and make it necessary to apply to the General Court for special legislation. A great Metropolitan highway, for example, might be stopped at the edge of a particular city or town which did not feel disposed to incur its share of the local expense. I would suggest that, if possible, some compromise be reached which would provide for such cases.

"It has also occurred to me that your commission might select typical improvements, such as those that were recommended in the report of the Metropolitan Improvement Commission, and work out roughly the relative cost and a general method for carrying them into effect, under the authority of the new commission proposed in your statement. Such illustrations would make the whole matter more vivid and concrete and might be useful in winning to your measure the support which it must have if it is to find its way into legislation for the coming year.

"I desire to thank you for your courtesy in submitting this sketch to me and to congratulate you upon the extremely careful and at the same time progressive plan which you have outlined."

NARROW ESCAPE FOR CITY CLERK C. J. McGILVRAY

Came Near Being Victim of Stray Bullet This Morning

WEST QUINCY EXCITED

A wave of excitement ran through West Quincy this morning, when a rumor was circulated that an attempt had been made on the life of Charles J. McGilvray, City Clerk, at his home 118 Willard street.

For a time the greatest exritement reigned. Officer Hinchin, a Sherlock Holmes of the Police department was informed and was quickly on the job. It was not long before he had cleared the atmosphere and traced the shooting to a bullet from a 22 calibre rifle in the hands of a young Italian boy on California avenue.

The genial City Clerk usually arises a little after 7 o'clock, but this morning he overslept and to this he probably owes his escape from being hit by a stray bullet.

In telling of the affair, after arriving at his office in City Hall, the City Clerk said that while meditating on the fact that it was time to get up, he suddenly heard a splintering sound and the next minute a bullet flew across the room and struck the wall. This deflected the bullet and it fell flattened onto the bed.

Investigation showed that the bullet had first gone through one of the leaves of a blind, thence through a screen, then the window pane and across the room. Had Mr. McGilvray arisen at his usual hour, he would probably have been standing directly in the path of the bullet and might have suffered serious results, as its course was toward a clothes closet near the bed.

There was considerable excitement in the house for a time, especially on the part of Mr. McGilvray's mother and it took considerable persuasion to convince her that it was an accident.

As stated above, Officer Jerry Hinchon was notified and was not long in tracing the course of the bullet. It seems that Mr. McGilvray occupies a room in the rear of the house toward California avenue and, Jerry immediately concluded that the bullet must have come from that locality.

Further investigation disclosed the fact, that a 17 year old Italian boy had gone out early with a 22 calibre rifle and was shooting sparrows, also at a target and he was very much surprised to learn that one of his shots had gone astray. It was clearly a case of accident and no prosecutions will follow.

Just the same however, it would be just as well to make these people who own rifles, know that a bullet from one of them, carries a great distance and that the shooting of them becomes a source of danger unless great care is exercised. In this case, the distance from where the shot was fired to Mr. McGilvrays house, was all of 500 feet, yet the bullet travelled this distance and as noted above passed through a blind, window screen pane of glass and across the room striking the wood work with sufficient force to flatten it.

There have been numerous complaints, from different parts of the city of late, of stray rifle bullets that have been flying about and the only wonder is that some one has not been injured, if not killed. A case in hand recently occurred in Roxbury, where a stray bullet struck a man, driving a team in one of the streets and killed him. In this case it was found that the shot was fired by a young man practising with a rifle.

When the City Clerk arrived at his office in City Hall this morning and told his story, he was congratulated on his narrow escape.

—There's nothing like taking time by the forelock, says the Somerville Journal. The Portsmouth Herald is already talking about a big celebration in 1923, in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Portsmouth.

BADE FAREWELL TO FRIENDS

Many Bid Adieu To Rev. and Mrs. Chase At Wollaston

WILL LIVE IN BEVERLY

At a large farewell reception held in the vestries of the Wollaston Congregational church Wednesday evening. Rev. and Mrs. Edward A. Chase bade farewell to their many friends and parishioners.

In the receiving line were Rev. and Mrs. Edward A. Chase, Deacon and Mrs. Smith B. Harrington and Rev. and Mrs. Rufus B. Tobey.

The many friends attending from outside the parish attested to the numerous friendships that had been made and the broad lines upon which his pastorate had been conducted.

Many old parishioners who were unable to be present sent letters expressing regret and among those attending was Mrs. George Dickey, a former member of the church, coming from Maine in order to participate.

The clergy were well represented among those present being: Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church, Rev. and Mrs. Carl G. Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian, Rev. and Mrs. Wesley Wiggin of the Wollaston Methodist and Rev. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church,

B. H. Bain on behalf of the Men's club presented Mr. Chase with a sum of money as a token of their regard. For the ladies Mrs. A. A. Lincoln presented Mrs. Chase with a purse of gold in appreciation of her helpfulness and ministrations in the parish.

Both the pastor and his wife responded feelingly, saying in effect that they did not mean to entirely cut loose from Wollaston but would strive to continue the many friendships they had made.

A large corps of ushers headed by Charlie L. Seavey assisted. They included Amos T. Leavitt, Herbert T. Whitman, Dr. E. R. Johnson, George H. Murray, B. H. Baine and Charles A. Campbell.

Attractive decorations of palms and ropes of evergreen were in evidence.

During the evening instrumental selections by Miss Louise Thatcher at the piano and Miss Walker with the violin.

Presiding at the refreshment tables were Mrs. Charles L. Seavey, Mrs. E. R. Johnson and Mrs. Theodore DuPlessis who served punch and Mrs. William Sayward and Mrs. Herbert T. Whitman who poured tea and cocoa.

They were assisted by a bevy of young ladies headed by Miss Edith Chapman and consisting of Miss Helen Jones, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Eleanor Jones, Miss Dorothy Sayward, Miss Lucille Smalley, Miss Helen Farwell, Miss Marion Farwell, Miss Ruby Bates, Miss Helen Heavey, Miss Dorothy Taylor, Miss Carolyn Lewis and Miss Elsie Moulton.

Serving as the reception committee were Mrs. Mary T. Taylor, Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Mrs. W. H. Brazee and Mrs. A. A. Lincoln.

Rev. Mr. Chase leaves the Wollaston Congregational church on January 1 to become pastor of the Washington Street Congregational church of Beverly. He has held his pastorate in Wollaston for twelve years and is dean of the Wollaston ministers.

Mr. Chase will occupy the pulpit for the last time on next Sunday when he will preside at the morning and vespers services. He will not preach a farewell sermon.

No successor has been decided upon as yet but the committee headed by Charles F. West will supply the pulpit from Sunday to Sunday until a permanent pastor is called.

This afternoon an ecclesiastical council meets in the church to ratify the action taken regarding Mr. Chase's resignation and to adopt resolutions.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

NOTICE

Christmas Day

MONDAY, DEC. 25th, Christmas Day, the edition of the Ledger will be omitted. Tuesday The Ledger will contain an account of the observances of the day.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

PASTORS AND CHOIRMASTERS.

Programs for Christmas music must reach the Ledger office not later than noon Thursday, Dec. 21, to insure publication in this paper, Friday and Saturday.

Shady Bend, Kan., wants to change its name on account of the recent tarring party, but tar always was shady.

With the dynamite jury convening at Indianapolis, we are prepared to give some evidence as to what the Small Boy let off July 4.

If you must do your shopping the night before Christmas, don't ask the salespeople to deliver a lecture on the goods. Shut your eyes, pay down your money, grab and run.

While Russia won't let the American Jew revisit his old peasant home, the latter is fairly well consoled by the fact that he has a comfortable farm over here called Manhattan Island.

Many citizens showtheir familiarity with the principle of the conservation of forces, by giving their wives for a Christmas present something they would soon have to buy anyway for household use.

In view of the tense diplomatic situation in Europe, we hope no small boy will discharge any rocks at a neighbor's cat on the back yard fence for there is no telling what might follow such an act of aggression.

The House passed a $75,000,000 Pension bill, expecting the Senate to pigeon hole it. This is an easy way to acquire a reputation with your constituents for generosity, without it costing the tax payers a cent.

A Brockton, Mass., pastor has issued Ten Commandments for women, of which the first is, 'Thou shall not marry for revenue only." It is generally admitted, however, that revenue is necessary to encourage infant industries.

Many of those most strongly opposed to the change in the system of the N. E. Telephone Co., are now its most enthusiastic advocates. After several months' trial it is found much more satisfactory to users all along the line and none changing over to the new system could be induced to go back to the old way. The service is better, the divided ring especially appreciated and strange to say it is much cheaper for the average subscriber, for with the reasonable charge for service, the tolls which are now extra do not amount to as much as the old rates used to. Each day there are new converts and it will not be long before every one will be on the new sytem and the old way a thing of the past and forgotten. Improvements often meet opposition at first.

THE CHRISTMAS GROUCH.

One man puts it this way:—

"It's worse than the funeral of a representative citizen. Up at our house the family's been out of sorts two weeks, buying things and mailing things, trying not to forget anyone that they ought to send to, or give presents that are too cheap or too expensive. And the children are all sore at what they did get or didn't get."

He went on to say that he took particular pains last year to get his small boy a fine new pair of rubber boots, picking out the best quality that could be had. The boy threw them down with a gesture of disgust. He argued that he was entitled to rubber boots as a part of his clothing, and that working them off on him for Christmas was just cheating him of all his rights, title and interest in Santa Claus.

One man, in being asked what Christmas meant to him, said "It's the day when you get what you don't want, and when you give people a lot of things that probably they don't want."

These friends evidently have gone out on the war path in search of happiness. The American is a very determined creature. Few things within human reach escape him. He can tunnel the mountains and bridge the rivers. Can such a flimsy fairy of the night as happiness, often attained by some child of the darkest slums, escape one of our business and society comquering men and women?

But happiness can not be seized by the hair and dragged off by human muscle. Its airy feet are beyond any human overtaking. Don't expect she will hunt you up as you are cramming your head with business facts in your office or house keeping fineries in your drawing rooms. Leave home and office, and go out to others. After you have once forgotten yourself in the lives of others, when you return home you will find happiness smiling on you from your own threshold.

A countless host of men and women have learned this Christmas lesson and will put it in practice on this Christmas-tide. If you can not get into your automobile and distribute flour and sugar to the poor, just try how much pleasure you can give some lonely old couple merely by sending them as post card!

THE NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

The Republicans have selected Chicago for their convention city and the Democrats are about making their choice. Keen interest is felt in the competition of hotel keepers for the chance of feeding the delegates. The question of more business like conditions for the making of these fateful decisions, however, is an incidental that causes little comment.

It has been customary for many years to hold national conventions in large barns that would be admirable for the purposes of a state wide agricultural fair.

Some prudent and cautious persons seem to think that convention should be as formerly a deliberative body, and that the meeting should be held in a small hall where the delegates could hear each other talk.

While it will be admitted that this is desirable, still a small hall would give no opportunity for the display of one of the most weighty arguments that ever came before a national convention. It must be manifest to all intelligent men, that a candidate whose rooters in the galleries can howl but a beggarly half hour, must possess ability to deal with difficult problems of state craft much inferior to a candidate whose supporters can howl a good generous hour.

Public speaking and cart-tail campaigns have become so essential a part of the work of a presidential candidate, that one might prepare quite an argument on the desirability of making presidential aspirants test out the volume, and endurance of their voices. Manifestly a man whose lungs could rise over the dull roar of this great assemblage, which is like a thousand spindles, would have important qualification for a presidential candidate.

Thus one might express such reasons as exist for the methods of our picturesque conventions, seething with human emotion. Still some of us fussy people are not quite satisfied. The choice of candidates is just as important as the election. When we appoint delegates to do the selecting for us, we have never given authority to the galleries to try to sway the vote by display of enthusiasm. Nor did we mean to confer power on skilful manipulators, who in the difficulty of conducting discussion, fill the convention body with adroitly circulated rumors, which often stampede delegations and determine the outcome.

☞A square inch of good-will for a cent—a Christmas seal.

INCREASING DIVIDENDS.

With 5,500 policyholders and more than $2,000,000 of insurance in force, Savings Bank Life Insurance is proving the soundness and efficiency of its methods by declaring increasing dividends to its policyholders.

Dividends have just been declared by the Insurance Departments of the Whitman Savings Bank, Whitman; and the People's Savings Bank, Brockton.

The dividends on the monthly premium policies, at the end of the first year, amount to 8 1-3 per cent; and in the fourth year reach 16 2-3 per cent. This is the equivalent of two full monthly premiums.

The dividends on the annual premium policies have been largely increased over those declared a year ago, and now average from 9 to 14 per cent of the yearly premium on the straight life policies; from 8 to 9 per cent on the 20 payment life policies; and from 6 1-2 to 8 1-2 per cent on the 20-year endowment policies.

These dividends have been declared by the Banks only after a careful and conservative safeguarding of the business of the Insurance Departments. The full legal reserve, as required by law, has been set aside on all policies, and besides, a surplus is maintained in each Bank amounting to over 20 per cent of the legal reserve.

The growing interest in this movement on the part of the Savings Banks is shown by the fact that three Savings Banks now have Insurance Departments and that thirteen other Savings Banks have become public agencies for Savings Bank Life Insurance.

STATE REPUBLICAN CLUB.

TONS OF DINNERS.

Twenty-one tons of Christmas dinners will be distributed by the Salvation Army in the auditorium at the People's Palace Boston, Christmas day, says the Boston Globe.

There will be given out 12,000 dinners, in 1400 baskets weighing 30 pounds apiece.

Already contracts have been made with local wholesale firms to supply the eatables for the baskets, and now the Salvation Army expects the public will contribute the money to pay the bills. Thus far contributions have come in slowly, it was stated last evening, probably on account of the weather.

The expense of feeding 12,000 persons and of giving toys to between 4000 and 5000 children will be between $6500 and $7000, and officials of the Salvation Army said last night that they were anxious that the public should contribute generously for the next few days.

The organization has a corps of relief workers in the congested districts locating families to whom baskets will be sent Christmas Day. Most of the people who will be aided, it is announced, will be families of wage-earners out of work.

You need the Ledger every day.

AN AUTUMN IDYL.

S. E. Arnold.

A rustic scene; Peaceful the waning day
Through the bright leaves the gentle breezes play,
Across the meadow stroll two loving friends—
Stoop to pick mosses where the river bends,
A startling crash comes from the bushes near
Quickens their steps and roused sudden fear.
Look! through the opening in the branches green
An angry cow with head erect is seen
No time to choose an easy path for feet
For fly they must, nor dare the foe to meet
One refuge offer on a rock which stands
Well in the pool within the swampy lands
They reached the quiet haven but to find
The furious cow still to the chase inclined
No safety here. The vicious beast—Oh look!
Is charging on them through the reeds and brook.
Were ever damsels in such direful plight?
No outside help can reach, no sturdy knight
Can hear their frenzied cry. Alas! we know
"Who would be free themselves must strike the blow"
They gird themselves anew in desperate hope—
Glance down the rock and mark its oozy slope,
Essay the pool, its slippery rocks betray—
One helpless victim in its water lay
The beast another angry challenge makes
Paws the moist ground and neighboring echoes wakes,
Shall these two women of a noble breed
Weakly submit and let a bovine lead?
Perish the thought! the soul of seventy six
Stirs the red blood, the laggard conscience pricks,
Up and away! over the sloping hill
Over the wall, and dropping there, lie still Till panting heart and trembling limbs regain
The strength to take them to the shady lane
Which leads to home and friends and sure release
From every threatening for a blissful peace,

MORAL.

Beware of pastures green or meadow gay
Where o'er the grass such crazy cattle stray,
Still more beware trusting the treacherous rock
Which offered refuge all your hopes to mock
So now, good people, you may laugh or frown
Turn out the lights and ring the curtain down.

An Explanation.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began the village handy man, advancing to the front of the stage whereon the Christmas entertainment was about to be given, "I am requested to ask your kind indulgence for certain peculiarities which you will doubtless observe during the course of the performance. We rehearsed the cantata in the parlor of the Stonedpher residence, using gestures to indicate that Santa Claus was approaching from the north, and now, when we get here to the op'ry house we find that the only available winder for the patron saint of the Christmastide to come in through in order to slip into the back side of the chimbley, which we had made for this purpose, and, after rattling his sleigh bells on the inside for an appropriate spell, emerge from the open fireplace in front, is on the south side of the building, and the manager of the hall absolutely refuses to permit us to cut a hole in the north side. So I am afraid that in the excitement of the acting some of us are liable to forget ourselves and get our gestures mixed.

"I also wish to state that, while we are offering a prize of $1 to the boy or girl who correctly guesses the identity of the gentleman impersonating Santa Claus, we mean while his festal makeup is still on him, should he ketch fire and burn his whiskers off, the prize offer will be withdrawn. Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you."

TOM P. MORGAN.

Just Before Christmas,

All bad boys who attend Sunday school are just as good as they can be just before Christmas because of the Sunday school Christmas tree.

☞The good work done in the printing department of the Daily Ledger office is becoming widely known and every day calls come for some fine job of printing. A specialty has been made for several years of fancy book printing and a great many club books were put through this fall, the latest being one just completed for the Arlington Woman's club. This seemed a long distance to come but the club had already had the book printed in Boston and the workmanship was such that after receiving them they were not distributed and the Ledger print was appealed to with most satisfactory results.

Santa Claus Found In the Heart

"THREE whole silver dollars apiece!" said Margy to the boy as they sat in the corner of the garret where the nut pile had been and gazed at their hard earned wealth. "It's like having money instead of nuts fall off the trees. How shall we ever spend it?"

"Spend it?" said the boy with a grand air. "Spend it? Why, that's easy. My! I could spend it if all the nuts we picked up and sold were dollars. It takes a heap of money to buy Christmas gifts."

"Uncle Tom said he would take us to the city, so father and mother needn't know a thing," said Margy.

True to his word, Uncle Tom happened in that very evening and said in a careless way to father:

"I'm going to town tomorrow, and if the children would like a trip I'll take them."

So, dressed in their best, with the precious money held tight in their purses, they went to the city with Uncle Tom.

WINDOWS FULL OF GIFTS.

What a day that was! Every shop window seemed full of gifts that would be just right for some one on the list. Two happy children went home that night and sneaked up the back stairs with their bundles. Later they stowed them away in an old chest of drawers in the garret, safe from the eyes of the curious.

And father and mother never made a guess as to all the whispering that went on. Nor did they notice that the children were fairly bulging with secrets. Perhaps they were busy with a few on their own account.

Christmas eve came. The boy said carelessly:

"Mother, why don't you and father hang up your stockings too?"

So four stockings were hung to the cover of the sitting room table—no, five, if you could call the baby's tiny sock a stocking.

When father had fallen asleep over his paper and mother was in the kitchen planning things Margy and the boy stole in with their gifts and poked them into the biggest stockings, and, oh, yes, Margy put a bundle in the boy's stocking, and the boy put one in Margy's, and then they stole out again and were off to bed so's not to have to wait so long for morning.

The boy's eyes popped open about 5 o'clock of the dark morning, and he woke the whole house shouting "Merry Christmas!"

Every one hustled into clothes and swallowed breakfast. Then they went into the sitting room together, and father shouted and danced like a schoolboy when he found a cup and saucer that would hold a pint of coffee, to say nothing of the motto "Love the Giver" in gilt letters and a lavish decoration of rosebuds on its outside.

FATHER SHOUTED AND DANCED.

How mother laughed and kissed both the children when she found in her stocking a great apple that proved to be a pincushion and a lovely Japanese fan with red, blue and green ladies painted on it!

It is not necessary to tell what the children did and said when the boy found a cocker spaniel puppy tied to his leg of the table and Margy opened a basket and found a sleepy Angora kitten blinking at her.

When every package was untied and the "ohs" and "ahs" were all used up, when mother had decked the mantel with her pincushion and fan and father had declared that never—no, never—again would he drink coffee out of any common little everyday cup, the boy and Margy sat on the hearth rug fondling their new pets, and the boy said:

"I wouldn't go back to the old kind of Christmas for anything. Then it was just Santa Claus that did everything. Now it's the spirit of Santa Claus in me and you and father and mother and everybody. It's like having a whole family of Santa Clauses."

"We'll earn our Christmas money every year after this, won't we, brother?" asked Margy.

And the boy replied, "You bet we will!"

"I'm going to begin to save and think of ways of earning money right off," declared Margy.

"Same here," responded the boy.

Kansas Women Will Raise $100,000 Without Assistance of Men

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 21.—The Kansas women who want full voting privileges are not going to ask husbands, fathers or brothers or sweethearts to "cough up" for the campaign expenses. The women are going to earn their own campaign funds, and while each woman will be assessed for her share, she will be urged not to ask her husband or any male member of her family or any man friends for money to pay the assessment.

The women are waging a war for the full ballot, and the 1911 legislature submitted the proposition of allowing women equal rights to the people at the election in 1912.

It has been estimated that the women will need close to $100,000, possibly more, for their campaign this year, and they are raising the money as needed.

Career of New York "Millionaire Kid" Receives a Check

New York, Dec. 21.—The career of Edward Ripinski, whom Broadway got to know as the "millionaire kid," made an abrupt pause when Ripinski was arrested on a charge of forgery.

The police say that the youth, who is only 23 years old, obtained at least $12,000 from the big tea company for which he worked by signing the firm's name to checks payable to "James Wilson" and then cashing them.

The firm discovered the alleged forgery a week after Ripinski left its employ.

—It is early to begin thinking about coal for winter of 1912-13—for many of us the present state of the bin is a matter of sufficient concern. Yet John Markle, the independent coal operator of Jedd, Pa., is no doubt sincere in warning householders to lay in a big supply before April 1 when he expects a strike in the anthracite region as a result of the expiration of the wage agreement made in 1902 by the mediation Roosevelt commission. But Theodore Roosevelt we still have with us; if he has saved us once the case is not hopeless. Why not make him a plenipotentiary commission to preserve the peace he gave us.—Milford Gazette.

MONTCLAIR ASSOCIATION

The men were sticking out for a purpose which was good homes, good street, and improvements. They were here to stay. They wanted improvements and were willing to pay for them. They were justified in asking for them and if he could help them in any way he would always be with them.

The next speaker was introduced by President Kessler as an author as well as a politician. He had written three volumes and nearly completed a fourth. Their title was: "Non partisan." He introduced Mayor Shea amid loud applause.

"I am as strong a non-partisan as ever," said the Mayor. "Don't forget that this isn't a Republican city and the humble voter will take it away from them if they don't do the thing right. He will watch and if the job isn't done right will rise up and take it away again."

Mayor Shea hoped the next incumbent wouldn't attempt to do business under the Republican standard. He should not be a Democrat or Republican but should represent all the citizens of Quincy.

The days are gone by when we say we are elected as a Republican or Democrat. It needs no Republican or Democrat to spend the little money of the city.

The only platform should be an honest government and a fair return for the money spent. A Republican can do just as good a day's work as a Democrat and a Democrat as good a one as a Republican.

He advised the association to keep politics out and when they came to City Hall to come as citizens and taxpayers. He had done fairly by Montclair the last three or four years and the slight differences of opinion over the schoolhouse had been forgotten

The school had been built according to the plans and specifications We should recollect that we do no appropriate money for schools in Quincy in the manner of some other localities. If we get all that we pay for that is all we should expect.

The Mayor mentioned the various improvements in the district and the boulevard to the school house. Squantum street ought to go through to the Milton line.

Thespeaker characterized Councilman Parlee as one of the best members ofthe City Council saying that the city would lose by not having him the coming year.

He advised the association not to take it too hard if they did not get all they wanted at once. If all the requests were granted three times the amount of money available would be required. Be fair. Talk it over and if affairs are shown you in their true light be reasonable.

Arthur W. Newcombe brought the greetings of the school committee saying that they had endeavored to meet the school requirements of Montclair for sometime to come and when they needed additional room they should have it.

He aulogized John Wilson the first owner of the land who sacrificed an easy life in England to work for a struggling church in Boston with a thatch roof and mud floors.

He thought the Wilson school a good suggestion but you have a good name now. You are taking up his work and the school board is ever willing to help.

Ralph W. Hobbs, introduced as an ex and future councilman, spoke of party ties but said that whether it was Republican or Democratic the work was done for absolutely the best interests of the entire city and if the association kept on pulling together they certainly would get all they ought to get.

He spoke of the Squantum association as a first class set that were willing to get together and pull together. He hoped there would be children enough to fill the school up and that soon we would need a larger one. In closing he wished all a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

John R. Richards was introduced as an active member and war horse of the city council. He had one or two suggestions to endorse. One was elimination of politics in bodies of men before the council.

This association should co-operate with that of Ward Four in regard to the missing link over Granite avenue. If this is assured there may be an opportunity of connecting Granite avenue with Hancock street.

They should not expect all the improvements from the city government, but should also look to the public service corporations. They should get as much as they could get at as reasonable cost.

Ex-Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., introduced himself as a member of the down and outs. He discussed party and non partisan politics mentioning the different light in which Chairman Hatfield regarded conditions in Newton and Quincy.

He advised moderation in the criticism of the way in which their district was treated. It would be found each of the outlying districts was used as well as the other.

Councilman Cherrington gave credit to George Woodward for securing the Montclair school house lot. The association quarters were praised and the opinion given that the Squantum road should be of wide measurement all the way down to Squantum.

Ex-Councilman Moir expressed his pleasure at being present and kept all in good humor with his witty remarks. He praised the work and told of the forming of the association.

Councilman elect Sodergren gave the advice that the association put itself on record regarding every measure which is coming before the city council. Members should be kept posted.

Councilman-elect Cunningham expressed the idea that it would be a lean year and that the demands should be modest. They should get along with the least possible this year as the Mayor elect would probably have hard sledding to make the amount available to fit the coming year.

Herbert G. Beeman as prospective councilman promised he would do all he could to help the section justly and fairly.

President James E. Wall of the Houghs Neck associates told of the improvements his organization had secured in that locality. The city of Quincy was threatened with the loss of a part of their real estate at the present time. He left a circular explaining the proposed separation.

The people of Houghs Neck were progressive and some of the smartest men of Quincy live there. It has some of the best brains of the city. He closed with the plea that all the improvement societies work in union for the common good.

President S. B. Little of the Ward Four Improvement association spoke at length on conditions in West Quincy. He praised Councilman Smith, and asked co-operation on the missing link question. He spoke against the proposed change in the city charter of the number of councilmen and told of the advantages secured through united effort.

As the hour was growing late the last two speakers: M. B. Tuttle of the Norfolk Downs Improvement association and William N. Kenyon, president of the Squantum Improvement association waived their privilege.

Following the appointment of Messrs Byrne, Taylor and Parlee as a committee to confer with Ward Four regarding the missing link those present adjourned for refreshments.

A pleasing concert by the Lord family was enjoyed while a collation was served consisting of chicken salad, rolls, frozen pudding, country club and other ices and demi tasse.

It was served in excellent style under the direction of Edward Morgan chef of the Wollaston Glee club and regular caterer of the association.

The committee in charge of entertainment consisted of Joseph P. McCabe, Frank Byrine and Stephen Brown.

Since its organization three years ago the Montclair Improvement association has advanced by leaps and bounds and at present includes nearly all of the residents of the immediate vicinity.

Its results show what can be done by united effort and will end in making the section one of the most flourishing and attractive in Quincy.

It has just completed a community house of ample size and of modern equipment which it owns free and clear.

Its officers are:

President—Frederick J. Kessler.
Secretary—Frank Byrne.
Financial Secretary—Peter Dillon.
Treasurer—Edward F. Parlee.

Presented to Leaders of Contending Forces In China

Shanghai, Dec. 21.—The identical note from the foreign powers comprising the United States, Great Britain, Japan, Germany, France and Russia, was presented to the representatives of the imperial Chinese government and the revolutionaries by the consular corps.

Tang Shao Yi expressed gratitude on behalf of the imperial Chinese government at the interest taken in the situation by the six powers.

From Tang Shao Yi's residence the consuls proceeded to the headquarters of Wu Ting Fang, the revolutionary leader, where much the same ceremony took place. Replying after the note had been presented by the consuls in the order of seniority, Wu Ting Fang said no peace could be permanent unless it was based upon the highest justice.

"Battle of Lake Erie" Mutilated by Vandals at Capitol

Washington, Dec. 21.—Vandals got into the Capitol and mutilated "The Battle of Lake Erie," the largest canvas of the collection of paintings which adorn the walls of the corridors and stairways. A strip two feet long and three inches wide was cut from the lower left-hand corner of the painting, where the artist had shown a great deal of detail. The strip was found upon the floor. It can be replaced.

The picture, which is on one of the walls of the east stairway leading to the senate gallery, was painted in 1873 by W. H. Powell. It shows Commodore Perry transferring his flag at the crucial moment in the gallant fight in Put-in-Bay.

BRIEFS

As one city official figures it out, he must attend over $8 worth of banquets between now and early in the new year. That is going some.

This is the busy week for the expressmen. All of them are doing a rushing business and teams from Boston retail stores are seen in the city every day delivering many packages.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gerrior of Braintree have gone to Nova Scotia for the winter. Mr. Gerrior is a brother of John and Dan Gerrior of Valley street. They will be missed by many friends.

Rev. Charles P. Marshall, pastor of the Washington street Congregational chuch, will conduct the devotional exercises at the inauguration day ceremonies. Mayor-elect Stone is an attendant at that church.

Miss Dorothy Forbes of Milton, who is prominently identified with settlement work, took 500 children to a Boston theatre this afternoon as a Christmas gift to them Ten chaperons were provided, one for each 50 children

The weather this morning looked as though snow shovels would be in style before night. It was also noticed that the proprietors of stores which sell rubbers were smiling. This is taken as a sign that a storm is near at hand.

The Republican City Committee has appointed a committee to consider the matter of holding a banquet the middle of January. No date for the affair has been fixed, but it will probably be held on the evening the committee of 1912 meets for organization.

As the regular conclave of Quincy commandery, Knights Templar, falls on Christmas night, the time for the conclave has been changed to 10.30 in the morning. At 11.30 a special conclave will be held for the purpose of the Christmas observance.

The second meeting of the Pythian whist club was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Stockford, 110 Hollis avenue, last week, Friday evening. A pleasant evening being passed. Mrs. Harry H. Hill and Mrs. Cook received the souvenirs of the evening.

Superintendent Hammond, of the post office, has put on some extra carriers to take care of the usual Christmas rush of mail. The uniformed letter carries resemble Santa Claus with their heavy loads of packages, conveying Christmas gifts from out of town friends.

There was never a time when there was to be a change of Mayors, that there was less being said as to the make up of the new official family, than there is this year. There have been some rumors, but no one seems to know much about it. Mayor Stone is keeping his own Council well.

Q.—Reading in the Gospel of Matthew xi, 20-24, the Savior's words—"That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the Day of judgment than forthee"—the cities of His day, what shall we understand by these words—that Sodom and Gomorrha are to have a second chance in the judgment day? (A. W. C.)

Answer.—In Ezekiel xvi, 47-52, the Lord through the Prophet distinctly informed Israel that her iniquities were much greater than those of Sodom and Gomorrha. Then in verses 60-63 the Lord tells Israel that the days will come when He will bless the nation in spite of all her iniquities, although He would bring severe punishments upon that people for the sins that had been committed. From these Scriptures and many others it is clearly indicated that in the day of judgment it will be "tolerable" for the nation it will be cluding the cities of the time of our Lord, but it will be "more tolerable" for Sodom and Gomorrha because they had not sinned against so much light. As stated in the twenty-first verse, "they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes" had they had a fair trial or judgment. Therefore, their trial or judgment for eternal life will be in "the day of judgment." This will not constitute a "second chance" as they never had a full, fair trial. See Romans xi, 25-28; Acts xv, 14-18; xvii, 31.

Q.—Does the principle of life vary in the different kinds of creatures that possess it, or are there various kinds of life? (J. A.)

Answer.—The principle of life is always the same though its manifestations are varied. These indications of life depend entirely upon the kind of organism upon which it exercises its influence. Just as light is invisible and emanates from one general source; so with this mysterious force we call life. As the rays of light are reflected from different objects in different ways; so this energizing influence is manifested in the different forms of animal organism. The same sunlight shining upon a diamond, upon a brick, and upon various kinds of glass, produces strikingly different effects. The light is the same, but the objects upon which it shines differ in their capacity to receive and to transmit it. So with life: it all flows from the one exhaustless Fountain. The oyster has life, but its organism is such that it cannot make use of such life, just as the brick cannot reflect much of the light of the sun. So with each of the higher manifestations of life, in beast, fish and fowl. Like the various kinds of glass under sunlight, so these various creatures show forth differently the various organic powers they possess, when life animates their organisms.

RED CROSS SEALS.

Every seal that is sold is a real bullet in the fight against tuberculosis. These seals last year helped to support thousands of needy tuberculosis patients and to give them a chance for life. They provided for many visiting nurses, whose hundreds of thousands visits brought instruction and cheer to numerous patients. They helped maintain dispensaries in dozens of cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific, where many thousands of consumptive patients received treatment, aid and advice. They provided the means to purchase millions of copies of circulars pamphlets and other literature, with which the public has been educated about tuberculosis. They have established and helped to maintain more than 40 open air schools for the children who needed open air treatment. These are just a few of the ways in which the $300,000 received last year was expended. This year a million dollars is needed. Surely anyone can help by buying at least ten seals.

MESSAGE ON SCHEDULE K

President Calls For Lower Duties on Wool Imports

PRESENT RATES CRITICIZED

Found In Some Instances to Be Prohibitive, but Industry In General Is on Competitive Basis—Unscoured Wool Principal Source of Trouble—Tariff Board Comes In For Praise From Chief Executive

Washington, Dec. 21.—A reduction of the duties on many classes of wool and wool manufactures is recommended by President Taft in a special message to congress transmitting the long-awaited report of the tariff board on schedule K of the Payne tariff act. The board makes no recommendations, but points out what changes are desirable.

In nearly all classes of the schedule the board's experts report the majority of the rates of duty prohibitory and condemn the systems of levying them. The report points the way to two great changes in the present system of levying duties upon raw wool and finished cloth. It would assess duty on scoured wool—not wool and grease combined—and suggests a graduated scale of ad valorem rate on cloth.

The report is divided into two sections—viz., raw wool, yarn and cloth. They are taken up in the order in which they come in production and manufacture. On raw wool the board finds the present system of levying duty bad, and the duties higher than the difference in cost of production in the United States as compared with the cost abroad. The method of levying duty is condemned because it charges for grease as well as for wool, and operates to keep out of this country the heavy shrinking woolens.

On tops, from which yarn is made, the present rate of duty is found to be prohibitory. It costs 80 percent more in the United States to convert tops into yarn than it does anywhere else. On yarn, from which cloth is woven, the present rate of duty is found to be prohibitory, because it keeps out all except the finer grades.

On cloth the present rate of duty is pronounced prohibitory on heavyweight, cheap and medium-grade cloths, principally because of the specific compensatory duty which fixes a certain charge per pound before the ad valorem rate begins. It costs 100 percent more to make cloth from yarn in the United States than it does in England or France.

The present system of fixing the same ad valorem rates of duty on different grades of fabric is condemned as unfair. The board holds that a fair solution would be the adoption of a graduated scale under which the ad valorem rate properly assessed on goods of low value should then increase progressively, according to slight increments of value, up to whatever maximum rate should be fixed.

The board's figures would seem to show that the "prohibitory duties" do not affect the American consumer so much as would be inferred by the use of those words, for while the duties on sixteen samples of foreign cloth selected by the board average 184 percent the actual excess of the domestic price over the foreign price was found to be 67 percent as the result of domestic competition. "At the present time the industry in general is on a competitive basis," says the report.

The cost of a suit of clothes from the back of a sheep to the back of a man is computed in the report, and the profits which accrue in the process are traced to their sources. For purposes of computation the board takes a suit of clothes retailing at $23 and wholesaling at $16.50. This is said to represent fairly the suit of clothes worn by the average American.

The farmer receives for the wool in such a suit $2.23 and his profit is 68 cents; the manufacturer of cloth receives for his product $4.78 and his profit is 23 cents; the wholesale dealer receives for his product $16.50 and his profit is $2.18; the retail dealer receives $23 and his profit is $7.50. The figures are aggregate.

President Taft calls attention to these points and urges that a revision of the schedule be proceeded with at once. He characterizes the report of the tariff board as the most complete and exhaustive statement of a difficult and complicated subject ever presented to a legislative body.

He declares it a monument to the thoroughness, industry, impartiality and accuracy of the men engaged in its making. He also dwells with emphasis upon the fact that the report is a unanimous one, and asserts the belief that it will convince all of the wisdom of making the tariff board permanent.

Neither the president nor the board proposes definite rates of duty, Mr. Taft holding that the functions of the board merely is to present findings of fact on which rates of duty may be fairly determined.

A DIPLOMATIC CHRISTMAS GIFT.

"NOW, if I only knew what to send Cousin Clara I'd be all through with my shopping," declared Mrs. Grimshaw. "I know what I'd like to send her. What she needs most of all is a good sized check."

"Then why not make out one and send it along? That's a good idea," responded her husband.

"Why, John, you know it wouldn't do at all. It would hurt her feelings so she'd never get over it. She's such a proud girl."

"Ridiculous!" expostulated Mr. Grimshaw. "How could it hurt her feelings? We know she's struggling along to educate herself, and she knows we know it. That's no disgrace. She also knows that we have more money than we know what to do with. Just write out a check for $500 and be done with it."

"I wish I dared," returned Mrs. Grimshaw. "But you don't know Clara as well as I do. It would be just like her to send the check right back. I wouldn't offend her for the world. She's really a fine girl, but she has just that little streak of false pride."

"How would it be to send her something handsome, say a sealskin sack or something like that?" suggested Grimshaw.

"It wouldn't do at all. A girl in her position must dress harmoniously. When she wears one thing that's expensive she must get other things to match or she looks dowdy."

"It's a foolish way to look at it, but maybe you're right," answered her husband. "It's a hard problem, but leave it to me. I'll try to figure out something."

On his way to the office Grimshaw taxed his wits with the question of Cousin Clara's present, and when he returned home he hunted up his wife and told her he had solved it, whereupon he ceremoniously fished from his pocket a large jewel case and opened it, revealing a beautiful diamond brooch.

GRIMSHAW OPENED THE ENVELOPE NONCHALANTLY AND READ.

Mrs. Grimshaw held up her hands in unmixed delight. "Perfectly stunning!" she exclaimed. "Oh, you dear thing! It's the most beautiful cluster I ever saw. But Christmas isn't here yet. Why didn't you wait?"

"My dear child," returned her husband fondly, "this brooch is not for you. If you want one like it you may have it, but this one is for Cousin Clara."

"John, how silly! It wouldn't do at all. We talked that all out this morning. It's absurd. What, in the name of goodness, would a girl in her position do with a thing of that sort?"

"It's just the thing," said he.

"Nonsense."

"Never mind. I have an idea. I've thought it all out very carefully, and I'm sure it's the only thing to do."

Three days after Christmas the Grimshaws were still sitting at the breakfast table when the morning mail arrived.

Mrs. Grimshaw shuffled the envelopes hurriedly. "Most all thank you letters," she explained. "Oh, here's one from Cousin Clara," she declared, picking out one of the envelopes and tossing it to her husband. "You open it. I'm afraid."

Grimshaw opened the envelope nonchalantly and read:

"Dear Cousin Mary and Uncle John—The diamond brooch is perfectly lovely. I am tickled almost to death. You couldn't have pleased me more, and I am very, very grateful. I am getting along fine with my work. Philadelphia is a good place for study; it's so quiet. I hope to run over and see you all very soon. Thank you again. Your loving cousin,

"CLARA."

"There! What did I tell you?" demanded Grimshaw.

"That doesn't mean anything," protested Mrs. Grimshaw. "It's just an ordinary thank you letter like all the rest."

"Of course it means something. Every word of it is sincere."

"Then she's more foolish than I thought," continued Mrs. Grimshaw. "Here's another letter with a Philadelphia postmark. I don't know any one else there. I wonder who it could be."

She opened and read:

"Mrs. John Grimshaw, New York:

"Dear Madam—Although you don't know me, I deem it my duty to call your attention to a most unheard of piece of ingratitude. I happen to know that on Christmas you sent your cousin, Miss Clara Parker, a very handsome diamond brooch. I also happen to know that on the day after Christmas she took the brooch and pawned it for the sum of $500. I have known Clara for a long time, and we have been good friends, but I never thought she would do such a dreadful thing as that.

"I do not care to be known in the matter, and therefore I will not sign my name. Yours truly, FAIR PLAY."

Mrs. Grimshaw frowned. "What did I tell you?" she demanded. "Of course she didn't want that brooch, but still I don't think she should have pawned it and especially for such a small sum. It must be worth twice that."

"Congratulate your diplomatic husband, my dear," returned Grimshaw blandly. "My plan worked out to a nicety. I knew there was a way to get money to a poor but proud girl without hurting her feelings."

"It's mighty expensive diplomacy."

"Not at all. All I have to do now is to find some way of getting hold of that pawn ticket, redeem the brooch, and the transaction is closed."—Ellis O. Jones in Judge.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COOKING CHESTNUTS.

CHESTNUTS are nutritious, and they are improved by cooking. In Europe steamed chestnuts are eaten with salt or with milk. Candied chestnuts are known as marron glace. In Italy the nuts are much esteemed as a food, being popular in the form of a cake called necci. Dried chestnuts may be ground to a flour and used in making various cakes. In this country they are most popular in the making of sauces and for stuffing poultry.

Sauce For Poultry.

Chestnut Stuffing.—Roast a quart of the large chestnuts. Remove the shells and mash in a bowl. Take half the chestnuts, mix with a cupful of dried breadcrumbs and season with salt, butter and a little pepper. Stuff the fowl with these chestnuts and when it is roasted make a dressing by covering the remaining chestnuts with the gravy which should be thinned with hot water until it measures about a pint. Place on the fire and stir until the gravy and chestnuts boil. Season to taste. Thicken with flour.

Chestnuts and Sausages.—Another poultry dressing is thus prepared: Roast a pint of chestnuts, peel and let them simmer in milk for half an hour. Then mash them. Mince an onion and a tablespoonful of celery, also the liver of the fowl. Add these to the chestnuts, together with half a cupful of cracker crumbs, a tablespoonful of melted butter, the juice of half a lemon and a well beaten egg. Stuff the poultry with this.

A Foreign Dish.

Italian Chestnuts.—If you would eat chestnuts as they like them in Italy try this recipe. Use about two pounds of the nuts. Shell and blanch. Cut four red onions into slices and simmer in about three tablespoonfuls of olive oil, taking care that the onion does not turn brown.

Salt the chestnuts and then pour in the olive oil and a little soup stock. The chestnuts must cook in the stock until they are tender. Peel, core and slice three apples and add to the nuts. Let the entire mixture cook until the apples are done.

A Chestnut Pudding.

Nesselrode Pudding.—Shell and peel about twenty large chestnuts. Boil the nuts until tender, then press through a sieve. Make a custard, using a pint of rich milk or cream, the yolks of six eggs and sugar to sweeten. Stir over the fire, add the chestnuts and a quarter pound each of seeded raisins and cleaned currants. Cook until thickened. Take from the fire, cool, then add a pint of whipped and sweetened cream flavored to taste. Beat well together and freeze.

ACKNOWLEDGE IT

Quincy Has to Bow to the Inevitable Scores of Endorsements Prove it.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this.

J. Fortin, Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness present and if I did a hard day's work, I was bothered by Lameness and soreness across my back. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, for such complaints and I got a box and began their use according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure to recommend this remedy on several occasions." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

On July 26, 1911, Mr. Fortin was interviewed and he said: "I willingly verily my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. You may continue to use my reference, as the relief this remedy brought me has been permanent."

ADVENTURE

By JACK LONDON

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Huff save Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

It was a blow in the face to Sheldon. He smarted with the truth of it, and at the same time he smarted with what he was convinced was the injustice of it. A gleam of triumph that flickered in her eye because of the hit she had made decided him.

"It is not so one sided as you seem to think it is," he began. "I was doing very nicely on Berande before you came. I did not want you to stay. I wasn't in love with you then. I wanted you to go to Sydney, to go back to Hawaii. But you insisted on staying. You virtually"—

He paused for a softer word than the one that had risen to his lips, and she took it away from him.

"Forced myself on you—that's what you meant to say," she cried, the flags of battle painting her cheeks. "Go ahead. Don't mind my feelings."

"All right. I won't," he said decisively, realizing that the discussion was in danger of becoming a vituperative, schoolboy argument. "You have insisted on being considered as a man. Consistency would demand that you talk like a man and like a man listen to man talk. And listen you shall. It is not your fait that this unpleasantness has arisen. I do not blame you for anything—remember that—and for the same reason you should not blame me for anything.

"You can't help being yourself. You can't help being a very desirable creature so far as I am concerned. You have made me want you. You didn't intend to; you didn't try to. You were so made, that is all. And I was so made that I was ripe to want you. But I can't help being myself. I can't by an effort of will cease from wanting you any more than you by an effort of will can make yourself undesirable to me."

"Oh, this desire, this want, want, want!" she broke in rebelliously. "I am not quite a fool. I understand some things. I really think it would be a good idea for me to marry Noa Noah or Adamu Adam or Lalaperu there or any black boy. Then I could give him orders and keep him penned away from me and men like you would leave me alone and not talk marriage and 'I want, I want.'"

Sheldon laughed in spite of himself and far from any genuine impulse to laugh.

"You are positively soulless," he said savagely.

"Because I've a soul that doesn't yearn for a man for master?" she took up the gauge. "Very well, then, I am soulless, and what are you going to do about it?"

"I am going to ask you why you look like a woman? Why you have the form of a woman, the lips of a woman, the wonderful hair of a woman? And I am going to answer because you are a woman, though the woman in you is asleep and that some day the woman will wake up."

"Heaven forbid!" she cried in such sudden and genuine dismay as to make him laugh and to bring a smile to her own lips against herself.

"I've got some more to say to you," Sheldon pursued. "I did try to protect you from every other man in the Solomons and from yourself as well. As for me, I didn't dream that danger lay in that quarter. So I failed to protect you from myself. I failed to protect you at all. You went your own wilful way just as though I didn't exist—wrecking schooners, recruiting on Malaita and sailing schooners, one lone, unprotected girl in the company of some of the worst scoundrels in the Solomons. I love you for that too. I love you for all of you, just as you are."

She made a moue of distaste and raised a hand protestingly.

"Don't," he said. "You have no right to recoil from the mention of my love for you. Remember, this is a man talk. From the point of view of the talk, you are a man. The woman in you is only incidental, accidental and irrelevant. You've got to listen to the bald statement of fact, strange though it is, that I love you. You are better off and safer on Berande, in spite of the fact that I love you, than anywhere else in the Solomons. But I want you, as a final item of man talk, to remember from time to time that I love you and that it will be the dearest day of my life when you consent to marry me. I want you to think of it sometimes. And now we won't talk about it any more. As between men, there's my hand."

He held out his hand. She hesitated, then gripped it heartily and smiled through her tears.

"I wish"— she faltered. "I wish, instead of that black Mary, you'd given me somebody to swear for me."

And with this enigmatic utterance she turned away.

CHAPTER XVIII.

CONTRABAND.

SHELDON did not mention the subject again, nor did his conduct change from what it had always been. There was nothing of the pining lover, nor of the lover at all, in his demeanor. Nor was there any awkwardness between them. They were as frank and friendly in their relations as ever.

The labor situation in Berande was improving. The Martha had carried away fifty of the blacks whose time was up, and they had been among the worst on the plantation—five year men recruited by Johnny Be-blowed, men who had gone through the old days of terrorism when the original owners of Berande had been driven away. The few recruits, being broken in under the new regime, gave better promise. Joan had joined with Sheldon from the start in the program that they must be gripped with a strong hand.

"I think it would be a good idea to put all the gangs at work close to the house this afternoon," she announced one day at breakfast. "I've cleaned up the house, and you ought to clean up the barracks. There is too much stealing going on."

Joan and Sheldon, both armed, went through the barracks, house by house, the boss boys assisting.

A wealth of loot was recovered. There were fully a dozen cane knives, big hacking weapons, with razor edges, capable of decapitating a man at a stroke, but most astonishing was the quantity of ammunition—cartridges for Lee Metfords, for Winchesters and Marlins, for revolvers from 32 caliber to 45. Shotgun cartridges. Joan's two boxes of 38 cartridges of prodigious lore for the ancient Sniders of Malaita, flasks of black powder, sticks of dynamite, yards of fuse and boxes of detonators. But the great find was in the house occupied by Gogoomy and five Port Adams recruits. The fact that the boxes yielded nothing excited Sheldon's suspicions, and he gave orders to dig up the earthen floor.

Santa Claus And the Big Stocking

AWAKE AT NIGHT.

POLLY had a small bed close to that in which her father and mother slept, and, although she was nearly always asleep in it by 9 o'clock, the light from a street lamp which slyly slipped in at a curtained window could have told you that upon this particular night she was wide awake long after 11 o'clock and that her brown eyes had been open ever since the lights in the room had been put out. She lay very still, however, because she had something to do which, although she was good and truthful, for some reason she did not wish her parents to know.

Just after the little clock on the mantel had struck 12 Polly rose halfway in bed and listened. She could hear her father and mother breathing, and a mouse was gnawing somewhere near the dressing case.

She was afraid of the mouse, but she was too much in earnest to let even a mouse stop her. So she thrust her hand softly under the pillow and pulled forth what, had the light been turned up and had you been in the room, you would have seen at once was a large black stocking filled with a number of things which bulged it out in the funniest way.

With this in her hand she climbed carefully out of bed and glided across the carpeted floor like a wee ghost which had forgotten and stayed out too late. The bedroom opened with folding doors into a sitting room, at one end of which was a mantel, where on all the Christmas eves that Polly could remember her stocking and her mother's had been hung. Polly had many times asked her father to hang his stocking there, too, but he said that the leg of his stocking was too small to hold the large presents he wanted, and, besides, it was only children like her mamma who hung up their stockings for Santa Claus, not grown people like himself. Polly felt her way to this mantel and leaned the big black stocking against its side.

She turned and ran back and climbed into her bed. The mouse was still. To tell the truth, it was far more timid than Polly and had heard her first noiseless footfall and was crouched in the bureau drawer, fearing the worst. In a few moments Polly was asleep, and the ray of the street lamp fell across her quiet little hand.

Polly slept on Christmas morning later than any other child in the great city, and when her father, who had risen before she had awakened, passed the Christmas mantel he saw the big black stocking where she had left it. As he had helped to hang up the other stockings the night before this one seemed so strange to him that he looked into its contents. The very first thing he found was a letter:

Dear Santa Claus—This is little Polly. Last Crismas and Crismas before you hav given me so meny things and I hav never given you anything. Take these dollys and blocks and picher books for your little girl I like them but you can hav them I want too giv you a kiss sum time how are your rain dears good by with mery Crismas and happy New Year from your dear litel Polly. Pleas exkews mistaiks from litel Polly Joy to al. .

Polly's father took the big black stocking with all the toys which it contained and hid it where Polly will never find it, there to keep until Santa Claus comes to claim it and the darling letter.

When Polly awoke and ran to the Christmas mantel in her flannel nightdress he was there to watch, and when he saw that the first glance of her dear brown eyes was for a big black stocking which was gone he put his arms around her and hugged her very tight and said "Merry Christmas, little Polly!" so earnestly that she fancied he was sad.

She put her face close to his and stroked his cheek with her hand, and then her mother came, and altogether they had a merry morning with the gifts which Santa Claus had brought. But Polly said never a word about the big black stocking. That was a secret between her and Santa Claus.

RATE QUESTION CAUSES STRIFE

Commerce Court Attacked by Interstate Commission

REGULATION BOUND TO FAIL

Washington, Dec. 21.—Sharp issue is taken by the interstate commerce commission with the commerce court in the twenty-fifth annual report of the commission transmitted to congress.

The issue is made principally upon what are known as the "trans-continental rate cases," involving freight rates from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast terminals and to intermediate points. Existing rates of the trans-continental lines from eastern points to inter-Rocky mountain cities are materially higher than to Pacific coast terminals. The interstate commerce commission directed, by order, that a relation of rates should be established between the Pacific coast and points or origin in five zones, into which the United States was divided.

The effect of the order was to reduce rates to inter-Rocky mountain cities and prevent the railroads from exacting from shippers the Pacific coast rate plus the local rate from Pacific coast terminals to the intermediate points. The orders of the commission, on application of the trans-continental carriers, were enjoined by the commerce court, and the matter has been carried on appeal to the United States supreme court.

While the commission recognizes the full effect of water competition upon the rail rates, it says "we have the frank admission of the railroad managers that they have subsidized or bought some of the steamship lines and terrorized others until they can make the boast that the effect of the sea has been 'neutralized.'

"We feel strongly that water competition, even when the widest reasonable latitude is given to the effect of market competition, cannot by any possibility justify a higher rate from Omaha to Reno than from Omaha to San Francisco; from St. Paul to Spokane than from St. Paul to Seattle."

The commission holds the fixing of reasonable rates to be a legislative function, not subject to review by the courts. Congress, it is maintained, has delegated that power to the commission, and the intimation is clear that the courts, in the opinion of the commission, has no power to review such rates as may have been established through the orders of the commission in the trans-continental cases.

Arguments are set forth to show that under the ruling of the commerce court the intent of congress in extending the powers of the commission has been thrown to the ground, and it is intimated in no uncertain terms that efficient regulation of railroad rates and the power to prevent discriminations is at stake.

These cases, it is declared, are among the most important ever raised, and the commission declares:

"A railroad policy of rate making must certainly be subject to the limitations of the law, or else there is no law. To say that the railroads may, to any extent they please, carry out a policy of blanketing the country for the benefit of the farther and not the nearer points is to say that a railroad may, without restraint, effect a ruinous discrimination, and give no justification save its own determination or whim." If this ruling holds, the argument concludes, "there can be no regulation of rates in this country."

Hall, appeared before the new board of harbor control this morning, at the hearing on the petition of Commissioner Bainbridge for authority to build a public landing in Quincy Bay at Houghs Neck There was no opposition to the petition.

The situation was explained by the two representatives of the city, after which the matter was taken under advisement by the Board, who will probably grant the petition. This means that the landing will be in readiness for use next season.

Charge of Government In Suit Against Watch Case Company

Philadelphia, Dec. 21.—The federal government filed in the United States circuit court a suit against the Keystone Watch Case company, a Pennsylvania corporation, declaring it an unlawful combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, and asking that it be restrained from carrying on an alleged monopoly in the manufacture and sale of watch cases.

The government declares that the company now "manufactures and sells 80 percent of all watch cases manufactured and sold in the United States" and that it is the "intent and purpose of the defendant that the company shall monopolize the remainder of the trade and commerce."

Russell R. Tripp, of Washington street is home from Bridgeport, Conn. for Christmas.

Miss Mary L. Martin, of Euclid avenue, will spend Christmas with her parents at Portland, Maine.

A special meeting of the members of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum will be held tonight in the club rooms.

Sherman Hayden, of Elm street, has been granted a leave of absence from the Training Ship Ranger on account of illness.

The annual election of officers for local 52, of Bricklayers, Plasters and Masons, will take place this evening in Electa Hall.

The last meeting of the year for the members of the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, will be held in the club rooms this evening.

Still the banquets come. Now it is announced that the Old Settlers club, composed of Swedish residents, are to hold its annual banquet at Electa hall on the evening of Dec. 29.

Mayor-elect Stone, who has been the president of the Quincy Board of Trade for several years, will probably decline a reelection, as his duties in the Mayors office will require all of his spare time.

Delcevare King was one of the speakers at the banquet of "Ye Honorable Boarde," held in Franklin hall, Salem, Thursday evening. Mr. King spoke in commendation of the recent no-license victory in Salem.

The annual visitation of Frank J. Condon D. D. G. E. R. of North Attleborough and suits to Quincy lodge of Elks, will be held next Tuesday evening at Alpha hall. A banquet will follow the business of the evening. A grand time is looked for.

Telegrams were received this morning announcing the death of Mrs. Mary A. Mitten Wednesday night at the home of her son in Amherst, Mass. SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

In the St. Alphonsus A. A. basket ball team, the Quincy A. A. players will meet their toughest proposition of the season, tonight in St. Mary's Hall.

The local players were defeated by the strong St. Joseph's five Wednesday evening, and this defeat has stimulated them to such a degree that no efofrts will be spared to annex a victory over the formidable Roxbury players. Any one who goes to the West Quincy hall this evening is sure to be treated to a first class game.

The management of the Quincy A. A. is trying to arrange a match between "Young" Carlson and the winner of the Fallon Reagan bout, cared for this evening at the American A. C. It is expected that the bout will be billed as the drawing card for the next tournament to be held in St. Mary's hall, by the local association.

Rockland High will be the first basket ball team to try sonclusions with the Quincy High five. The game will not take place until the latter part of January, according to the present arrangement of the schedule.

A number of students at the High school are desirous of having a hockey team represent them, but it seems that the athletic management is averse to having such a team. Hockey is a great outdoor sport and serious consideration should be given the proposition by those in charge of athletics at Quincy High. The greater the representation in the various branches the greater the chance of gaining athletic prestige.

Judging from the manner in which the entries are coming in, there is no doubt but that the second annual indoor meet of the Italian American A. C., to take place i the Coliseum on New Year's night will be the mecca of attraction for hundreds of sporting bloods. Some great runners will be seen in action and the list is an exceptionally good one.

A roller skating race of the high class variety is billed for this evening at the Coliseum.

COOK—COLLETTE.

At a quiet house wedding Wednesday evening at the home of her parents Miss June Savory Collette of Wayland street, Wollaston, became the bride of Elwin Lord Cook of Prospect street, Atlantic.

The ceremony was performed at 6.30 by Rev. Wesley Wiggin of the Wollaston Methodist church and was attended only by the immediate relatives.

The marriage took place under a canopy of everygreen and holly from which a large bell was suspended. An interested spectator was young Robert Cook, age 10 weeks, who surveyed the scene from the arms of his mother Mrs. Arthur Cook, sister-in-law of the groom.

The bride was charming in white silk and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. She was given away by her father Harry A. Collette.

She was attended by her sister Miss Beulah W. Colette gowned in yellow china silk and carrying a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Daniel Manning of Atlantic, an intimate friend of the groom acted as best man.

A largely attended reception followed from 7.30 until 9.30 at which guests were present from Needham, Somerville, South Braintree, Quincy, Melrose, Malden, Maplewood, Charlestown, Neponset, Medford, South Carver and other places.

As ushers were Arthur Cook, twin brother of the groom and William N. Ferguson brother-in-law of the bride. Music was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

Both young people are well known in the vicinity and attend the Wollaston Methodist church where the bride is a member of the Royal Daughters and the groom of the Wiggin Bible class.

Mr. Cook is the son of Robert Cook of Prospect street, Atlantic, and is engaged in business at Dorchester. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Collett.

After a honeymoon spent in northern Massachusetts the couple will make their home with the bride's parents at 19 Wayland street, Wollaston, for the winter where they will be at home to their friends after the new year.

POLAR CAP MELTS AWAY

Martian Phenomena Quite Different From That of the Earth

Flagstaff, Ariz., Dec. 21.—Observations at the Lowell observatory have shown that the polar cap of Mars, which has been melting slowly for months, has at last practically disappeared, a mere diamond point alone representing it.

The date of this interesting event was what corresponds to Sept. 8 on the earth. We are prevented from having any similar phenomena on the earth, owing to the extensive permanent ice about our poles, the ground never being bare and that preventing what theory shows should take place and which Mars actually exhibits.

REAR ADMIRAL RODGERS

PROMINENT AT SANTIAGO

Rear Admiral Rodgers, Eminent In Navy, Goes on Retired List

Washington, Dec. 21.—Following closely upon the retirement of Rear Admiral Wainwright came that of another of the shining lights of the battle of Santiago—Rear Admiral Raymond P. Rodgers, who served on the battleship Iowa in the Spanish war.

He was practically the father of the naval intelligence office, and he has had many important commands at sea. His last duty was on the naval general board. Like that of Wainwright, this retirement causes no promotion, as Rodgers was an extra number, being advanced in rank for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle.

SET SPRING GUN FOR CHICKEN THIEVES

One Is Killed, and Farmer Pays $300 For Manslaughter

Dedham, Mass., Dec. 21.—Henry A Sharp of Norfolk pleaded guilty to the charge of manslaughter in the Norfolk county superior court, and was fined $300, which he paid.

The charge against Sharp was the killing of Niccla B'Orsi, an Italian chicken thief, on Oct. 7, by means of a spring gun set in a chicken house.

Sharp is an extensive poultry farmer. For some weeks previous to the setting of the gun he had missed a large number of fowl each week. He suspected the Italian laborers, who lived in a nearby settlement, and published a warning that he was going to set a spring gun in each of his hen houses. The first night that the gun was set B'Orsi attempted to enter one of the houses and was shot. He died a few hours later at a hospital.

Sharp filed a plea of guilty on the advice of the district attorney, who asked Judge Quinn to show all possible clemency toward the defendant.

"I am sorry that I must fine you at all," said Quinn.

MILTON WILL HAVE TEAM.

The Milton School Committee had a special meeting Wednesday with Capt. O'Heron of the football team and Capt. Daniel O'Connell of the basketball team as its guests, and the sweater situation was discussed. The committee told the two captains that they were a trifle hasty in voting to disband the basket-ball team, without consulting C. L. Curtis, the headmaster.

Capt. O'Heron and O'Connell were also told that the School Committee on Nov. 16 voted to award the members of the football team sweaters in recognition of their work, but the vote was not made public. The captains then told the committee that they were given to understand that they would not receive sweaters.

Headmaster C. L. Curtis had 16 players measured this afternoon for sweaters, these being the boys to whom were awarded letters. They are Capt. Frank O'Heron, Daniel O'Connell, Irving Carson, Gerald Poole, Gus Axel, John Adams, Seth Tucker, Roger Thayer, Leon Sprague, George Chandler, Malcolm Carder, Andrew Crafts, Paul Mather, Robert Leary, H. Walsh and Theodore McWhirck.

Today the members of the basketball team who threatened to disband because of the failure of the school to award sweaters, will make an apology to Mr. Curtis because of their action. The basket-ball schedule will be played and the candidates will undoubtedly be called together by Capt. O'Connell during the Christmas holidays in the Cunningham Gymnasium.

TOO STRONG FOR BATES.

Although Bates' team rolled the first string in fine style, the failure to maintain the same pace, caused it to suffer defeat at the hands of the team captained by Morris. The game was played at the Granite street alleys and was one of the series of the Makaria Bowling league.

The highest single string, 95, was made by Rutch, of the losing combination. Richard Jones had the highest sum total for the three string his mark being set at 260. While both these bowlers were the stars of the game, the work of Bates' team was more consistent. The summary:

Jackal Broth.

There are parts of Morocco, we are told by a French visitor, where jackal broth is highly esteeemed as a table delicacy. A friendly sheik dissented vehemently when it was intimated that as jackals fed on carrion the broth must have a horrible flavor. "It is only a question of knowing how to prepare it," he said. "You put the jackal, skin and all, for two hours into a vessel of boiling water, then transfer it to another vessel. This process is repeated three times. After ten hours' boiling in five different waters, the carrion flavor disappears and the broth is delicious."—London Chronicle.

QUINCY IS DOWNED BY ST. JOSEPHS

The St. Joseph T. A. S. basket ball team won its fifth straight game in the Greater Boston A. A. U. League Wednesday night, when they lowered the colors of the fast local team

Only one game separated the two teams for the leadership and the prospects of a fast game drew a crowd that filled the hall. The game between the second teams was a hollow win for the visitors.

People who went to see the leadership settled saw one of the fastest and also hardest games that has been played in the league so far. The game was somewhat rough, due to the aggressive blocking by the different men, of which both teams were guilty.

The first half was a complete covering game and very few goals were scored, though Quincy missed enough shots at the goal in this period to put the game on ice. The second period was a repetition of the first, with Maguire of the winners starring, one of his goals being made from the tapoff.

H. Chapman starred in the second game and landed 6 goals from the floor, while Bill Manning of the visitors, although he only played one-half, was in every scrimmage and landed two clever shots. The summaries:

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Received Earnest Consideration At Committee Meeting

ON THURSDAY NIGHT

The special committee on vocational training for boys, met in the school committee rooms Thursday evening. All members of the committee were present with the exception of Mr. Marr and Mr. Couch. There was also present a room full of interested citizens, among whom were Deputy Commissioner Charles H. Prosser, Agent Murray and business agent Allen of the State Board of Education. Others present were James Duncan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Granite Cutters' union, Councilman elect Gillett, Councilman Bailey and President Diack of the Granite Manufacturers' association..

The Fitchburg half time system was explained by Mr. Fosdick of the Fitchburg Engine Co., of that city and by Principal Hunter of the school.

This plan takes care of the boys about to enter industries and gives them training in the shop and school side. The iron working, wood working foundry and textile industries in that city co-operate with the school system on a half time basis. Boys at conclusion have good trades and have earned $500.

The committee in its report will touch on all plans of the system, the prevocational training for the grades, the evening continuation course and the part time schools for boys about to enter industries.

Superintendent Barbour, has been notified by the State Board of Education, that the evening drawing course had been approved as an industrial evening school and one half the expense would be assumed by the state. This news is especially pleasing, as the School Committee has just voted to extend the term to 20 nights, in response to a petition from the pupils of the course.

XMAS PARTY AT WOLLASTON SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Christmas party of the Wollaston Congregational Sunday school held in the vestries Thursday evenevening was greatly enjoyed by young and old.

Under the direction of Charles A. Randall, superintendent of the school a program of music and readings formed the program.

A large chorus of children in charge of David H. Goodspeed and accompanied on the piano by Miss Louise Thatcher sang a group of Christmas carols very sweetly.

Miss Clara Bennett gave several readings which were loudly applauded by all and appealed especially to the children. Among the selections were: "Mintie's Christmas" and "Jest 'Fore Christmas."

Numerous games followed in which the children heartily joined and refreshments closed a pleasant evening. Gifts were brought by the children that will be sent to the Quincy Day Nursery and other worthy institutions.

In charge of the party was a committee consisting of: Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Helen Jones, Mrs. B. D. Ducey, David H. Goodspeed and Fred Hamel.

This afternoon beginning at two o'clock a party for younger children is being held in the vestries.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Flararty and James McGovern of Weymouth and John Malloy of Quincy were fined $5 each for drunkenness.

Thomas McKenzie was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

COUNCIL MEETING TONIGHT

Session This Evening Will Be Last For 1911

MATTERS FOR CONSIDERATION

The adjourned meeting of the City Council tonight will probably be the last of the City Council of 1911. There are one or two matters in the calendar that will come up for final action. Chief among these, are the two orders amending the salary ordinance relative to the salary of the Assessors and amending the Assessors ordinance.

If the latter passes, that increasing their salary will go through also. The chief point about the amendment is, that it provides that the chairman shall be on duty in the office at all times during regular business, unless engaged in field work, and in his absence one of the assistant assessors shall be on duty.

Another matter that will come up is the proposed ordinance furniture movers. This ordinance will enable the police and firms who do a credit business to keep track of parties who try to leave the city without settling their obligations.

The one matter, however, upon which a discussion will probably take place is the report of the special committee on the revision of the City Charter. Every member has had an opportunity to thoroughly post himself in regard to the changes suggested and they will probably be all ready to discuss the various amendments proposed.

CHIEF WILLIAMS COMMENDED FOR FORETHOUGHT

Chief Williams is being commended for his forethought in stationing a hose wagon, with a crew of firemen, on duty evenings at the corner of Hancock and Granite streets. Many of the stores in City Square are profusely decorated for Christmas and it is a well known fact that these dehorations are very inflammable taking but little to start a blaze. With a crew of firemen on duty, during the evening hours, when the stores are open blaze that might start can be quickly extinguished without a bell alarm.

HILLER—HILLIARD.

Everett O. Hiller was quietly married to Miss Pearl Hilliard Thursday evening at the home of his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Brown of Lincoln avenue, Wollaston.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward A. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church and was witnessed by guests from Wollaston and out of town.

Mr. Hiller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hiller of Hyde Park. The couple will be at home to their friends after January first at Hotel Oxford, Boston. The bride is a New Jersey girl.

ALLEN—FEAREBAY.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Burr on Billings street was the scene of an unusually pretty wedding Thursday evening, the contracting parties being Mrs. Burr's sister, Miss Lucy Furbush Fearebay, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Charles T. Fearebay of 38 Concord street, Holliston, Mass. and Rev. Eugene Vernon Allen of Jonesboro, Maine.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. George H. Cheney, pastor of the Appleton street M. E. church, Neponset, formerly of the First M. E. church South Framingham, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen left on the evening train for Maine. They will make their home in Jonesboro.

DEBATE ON RECIPROCITY

The tin can and dump committee was called upon to report and resolutions were set forth giving thanks that brother Taylor had been spared nearly another year of his useful life.

Improvements to the church building were brought up and steps taken to augment the finances of the church.

DROWNED WHILE TRYING SKATES GIVEN TO HIM FOR CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Walter Quist Falls Victim of Thin Ice In Pathetic Affair At Wilson's Quarry

Lad 12 Years Old Son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac A. Quist

In his anxiety to test a pair of skates, which his father had purchased as a Christmas present for him Walter J. Quist, the twelve year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac A. Quist, of Hillside street, was drowned shortly after ten o'clock this morning in Wilson's Lower quarry, off Centre street, a place which has before been the scene of pathetic drownings. It seems that the Quist boy, in company with three other companions, Jalmar Seppala, also of 8 Hillside stree, Toive Kuja of Hillside street, and George Djerf of West street journeyed to the vicinity of the quarry shortly after eight o'clock this morning, in an tndeavor to enjoy themselves among the rocks.

The Quist boy had his skates with him and after an hour had passed away in play, put them on and started to skate about. His companions had warned him not to skate, as the ice was constantly cracking beneath him and he was liable to go under it at any moment. He skated about for nearly an hour, while in the interim his other playmates enjoyed themselves in diverse ways, paying practically no attention to Walter as he skated.

Finally the three youngsters were attracted by the cracking of the ice and the calling of Walter for help. They immediately ran to assist him but were unable to reach him. The water, in which the Quincy boy was struggling for his life, was about ten feet deep. High rocks surrounded the water on all sides and it would require a long pole to reach the drowning youth. Young Seppala happened to have a hockey stick with him, and excited as he was by the predicament of his playmate Quist, managed to stand on an impending rock and endeavor to pull Walter out of the water. His first try failed to reach him. At the second attempt young Quist grabbed the hockey stick but did not have enough strength to hold it, thereby going down for the third time within the sight of his three terror stricken companions.

Charles Christen of Station street and Nicholas Werme of Hillside street arrived on the scene, and after procuring a long pole, with a hook atached to the end, were enabled to pull the boy from the water, in which he had been for about a half hour. The police auto was called but the boy had been brought to land before it arrived. Christen and Werme, together with Officer Patrick

NOTICE

Christmas Day

MONDAY, DEC. 25th, Christmas Day, the edition of the Ledger will be omitted. Tuesday The Ledger will contain an account of the observances of the day.

Andy Carnegie says $25 a week is enough to get married on. Guess he never bought any household furniture on the instalment plan.

5,000 scientists meet soon at Washington. Is it safe for all these scientists to take these long journeys about the country without their wives?

Harvard won't play foot ball again with the Carlisle Indians. Slowly but surely the Red Brother is being eliminated from modern civilization.

The Los Angeles women voted against socialism. They probably realized that having the government do everything would increase the cost of living.

Some captious persons say the seven governors now touring the East, are over eating. We maintain that even a governor is entitled to a square meal.

Too bad the English princesses were ship-wrecked, but the chance to fish them out of the water would give enterprising young men an opportunity to acquire a dukeship.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Pacific coast manager for a carpet firm, has had a salary raise. The fact that he neither writes for the papers nor takes photographs probably counted in his favor.

How are you going to feel peace and good will Christmas, when your Best Girl has just given you a fluffy collar bag, into which your collars must be put, while formerly you could simply chuck them into the closet?

Good for William H. Teasdale and the Quincy Board of Trade. After weeks of negotiation and letters Quincy is to have an evening train to Boston that will accommodate theatre goers and seem more like old times when we had more frequent service. Beginning New Year's day, Jan. 1, the 6.59 P. M. train from Braintree will stop at Quincy at about 7.04 every week day, except Saturdays.

A train was also asked for West Quincy but only the one for the Centre was secured, a case of a half loaf being better than none.

Now that we are to have the train, those going to Boston evenings should bear it in mind that there is a train at 7.04, even though it is not on the time table and demonstrate to the railroad management that the train is a necessity and appreciated.

Now if the gap between 12.19 and 1.22 could be filled in with a train for the matinee girl most every one would be fairly contented until the long anticipated four track service goes into effect.

Working women all over the Northwest are figuratively up in arms today over an editorial in the current issue of Cathedral Chimes, edited by Rev. William C. Hicks, dean of All Saints' cathedral of Spokane, who advocates the repeal of the Chinese exclusion act or its modification to permit the importation of several hundred thousand orientals for domestic service. Members of the congregation also are divided over what the editor-pastor terms a possible solution of the servant girl problem. Dean Hicks says: Servant girls, of course, are human like the rest of us, and one must not blame them for seeking minimum of work at the maximum wage, but when by their talk they make you feel that before accepting a position as helper in your home you ought to take your children out in the back yard and chop their little heads off, such scorn and indignation ought to be meted out to them, that they would not care to ask such questions at the next place to which they apply. The admission of Chinese would solve one of the greatest problems.

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.

This newspaper is an ardent champion of the incoming administration, it firmly believes in its integrity, as a whole and its honest and fearlessness individually. We bespeak for its success in the accomplishment of many things under consideration and the proper fulfillment of the trust which is theirs through election to the various important offices.

We heartily belive the sentiments contained in the following communication. We endorse it thoroughly and firmly believe "that the incoming Mayor is disposed to accept such views."

The letter follows:

Dec. 22, 1911.

Mr. Editor:

As a change in administration is very near in our city, I venture a few remarks concerning it.

Our prospective Mayor will come into the office with the very best wishes and expectations from his fellow citizens. All thoughtful men in our city look forward to his incumbency with the expectation that he will "make good."

It is safe to say that he will come into office unpledged; excepting that every true man taking such an office is pledged to the giving to the city the very best service in every respect that his powers enable him to give, and I would suggest that in fulfilling that expectation he is bound to retain in office every qualified servant who has been tried and found efficient; not displacing any for political reasons and subjecting the city to the risk of less competent servants, who have not been tried and proven.

The old-fashion way of regarding public offices as public spoils has very largely passed away, and in the opinion of the writer, a man who grants anything in the way of an office as a reward for any political work or as a recognition for any political party, is to that extent recreant to his pledges.

In the opinion of the writer, the public office is a public trust and the corporation of the City of Quincy should be tried with the same regard for economic value as is common with smaller chartered corporations.

Believing that the incoming Mayor is disposed to accept such views, we anticipate the future conduct of the business of the city while he is in office will show that he is a man who carries theentire interest of our city as a unit incapable of sub-division into partisan service and partisan rewards.

BOOMS AND PANICS.

Disappointment is expressed by business men that trade still seems depressed.

And yet, taking all the cities of the country outside New York, in which city the vagaries of stock speculation cause irregularity, the bank clearings for 1911 up to Dec. 1 were one per cent better than in 1910, nine per cent better than in 1909, and twenty-eight per cent better than in 1908.

Men who produced useful commodities should not allow their faith to be paralyzed by Wall street's disappointment because conditions are not satisfactory from the speculative viewpoint.

Speculators make their money by rapid alternations of hope and fear. In order to sell securities at fancy prices, they must boom values to a point beyond reason. And when they take the down side of the market, they must hammer it to levels below actual values. The Wall street trader's interest is to see the market move, which way makes little difference.

The interest of the producer of useful commodities is quite different. He prospers of course in such boom times as we had in 1906. But these boom times necessarily result in over confidence, in expansion of credits on too small capital.

One day some one gets scared, and asks for a dollar. Then other people want a chance to look at their money and see if it is really there. It is found that most business men's assets consist of some one's else promise to pay. There is not enough capital to go around. The cloud capped eminence of men's dreams falls with a crash.

Then follows a year or two of depression. The sensible business man would rather have three years of cautious moderation, like 1909, 1910, and 1911, than three years of extreme buoyancy followed by a period of dark despair and idleness, like 1906, 1907 and 1908.

In 1906, about a year before the actual crash, the Bank of England saw signs of coming storm, and began to get out of debt, at a time when our speculators were doubling their stakes on the Red or the Black. Considering the chills and fever of American temperament, the preser cautions fears are a blessing in disguise.

Jes' a little bit o' feller—I remember still—
Ust to almost cry fo Christmas, like a youngster will.
Fourth o' July's nothin' to it New Year's aint a smell!
Easter Sunday—circus day—jes' all dead in the shell!
Lordy, though! at night, you know, to set around and hear
The old folks work the story off about the sledge and deer,
And "Santy" skootin' round the roof, all wrapped in fur and fuzz—
Long afore
I knowed who
"Santy Claus" wuz.

Ust to wait, and set up late a week or two ahead;
Couldn't hardly keep awake, n wouldn't go to bed;
Kittle stewin' on the fire, and mother settin' near
Darnin' socks and rockin' in the skreeky rocking-cheer;
Pap gap', and wonder where it was the money went,
And quar'l with its frosted heels, and spill his liniment;
And we a-dreamin' sleigh bells when the clock 'ud whirr and buzz—
Long afore
I knowed who
"Santy Claus" wuz.

Size the fireplace, and figger how "Old Santy" could Manage to come down the chimbly, like they said he would;
Wisht that I could hide and see him—wondered what he'd say
Ef he ketched a feller layin' fer him thataway.
But I bet on him, and liked him, same as if he had Turned to pat me on the back and say, "Look a-here, my lad.
Here's my pack—jes' he'p yours'l like all good boys does!"
Long afore
I knowed who
"Santy Claus" wuz.

Wisht that yarn was true about him as it 'peared to be—
Truth made out o'lies lik that-un's good enough fer me.
Wisht I still wus so confidin' I could jes' go wild
Over hangin' up my stockin's like the little child
Climbin' in my lap to-night, and beggin' me to tell
'Bout them reindeers, and "Old Santy" that she loves so well:
I'm half sorry for this little-girl sweetheat of his—

SANTA CLAUS IN WISE HUMOR.

By A. B. WILLIAMS.

THE idea came to me when I was sitting in the park with my wealthy little niece, Dorothy, her rich doll and its expensive white perambulator.

"Santa Claus needn't bring me anything; I c'n do without," said the self sacrificing, elegantly dressed little mother, "but I hope he won't forget Claribel. She's been good."

"How would she like furs—muff and collar?"

"She's two 'plete sets now," Dorothy snid, "one for days and light ones for evenings."

"And a watch," I suggested—"has Claribel a little gilt watch?"

My niece clapped her hands enthusiastically. Would I use any pull I might have with Santa Claus to secure a gold watch for Claribel?

"Does your doll hang up her stocking?"

"No. but she'd like to."

I rummaged through a drawer in which were kept odds and ends, seemingly useless, yet too good for the scrap basket. Yes, the needed had been saved—a pair of finger worn, but fresh, long wristed, last summer's white silk gloves. Secretly I cut a pattern from Claribel's pink stocking and measured also the doll's neck and waist. Using the pink sock as model, I made two pretty white silk stockings from the glove wrists, washed, pressed them, and handed one to Dorothy.

"Hang up this stocking of Claribel's with yours Christmas eve, and I've heard indirectly that Santa Claus will slip a gold watch into it."

I, happening to own two patent leather belts, cut the narrower one down to the width of the small buckle which fastened it, shortened it to the exact measure of the doll's waist, stuck holes with a big hatpin into the opposite ends, and into those holes the buckle prong fitted.

From the leather scraps I fashioned a little bag and, cutting a very narrow strip, sewed this to the bag and so attached it to the belt. A small square of white silk was next bound with pink ribbon and a pink C outlined in one corner. This little handkerchief was placed in the bag with just a corner protruding. The entire effect was successful.

At the drug store I got a round pill box, covered it with a confectioner's pretty label advertisement, lined it with lace paper and filled it with the smallest pill candies purchasable.

At the same store I procured a long, empty powder box, pasted a holly picture over its top, copied in fine letters the autograph of a well known florist, filled the box with tiny paper roses and in small writing worded on a miniature card: "Claribel, the American beauty. Kriss Kringle."

The bonbons contained a similar card, "From an Unknown Admirer."

I made two stocks, one tailor finished and one dressy. A doll's mirror, necklace and fan were removed from the conventional card and tied in separate packages. The chief present, the watch, an ingenious toy, with picture set in back and gilt chain—bought at very small cost—I placed in a dainty white jewel box, in which had been sent a small stock pin.

Finally, Christmas eve, Claribel's various presents, prettily wrapped and tied in different colored papers and ribbons, filled and overflowed the mate to the empty stocking which Dorothy had faithfully pinned to the mantelshelf. The empty stocking she found later, mysteriously placed among the toys.

Not only Dorothy and Claribel, but the adults, enjoyed the unpacking of the doll stocking Christmas morning.

St. Nick and Santa Claus

HOW NAMES ORIGINATED

NICHOLAS, bishop of Myra, in Lycia, Asia Minor, was born at Patara, in Syria, about 280 A. D. He is the chief patron saint of Russia, patron of numerous seaports, patron saint of children, especially schoolboys, poor maidens, travelers, merchants and sailors, and is one of the most popular saints of the Christian church.

He became a priest and a monk and rose to be abbot; made a pilgrimage to Palestine and on his return was chosen bishop. The working of miracles upon a stupendous scale was attributed to him. It was believed he quelled storms at sea, foretold the future, multiplied loaves of bread and even raised the dead. He died on Dec. 6, 326, and was buried at Myra.

His remains are claimed by both Bari, southeastern Italy, where they were said to have been taken by merchants in 1084, and by Venice, where they are said to rest in the Church of St. Nicholas, on the Lido.

In Russia and some other European countries Christmas gifts come from St. Nicholas, who is severe of manner, but kind to all good little boys and girls.

SANTA CLAUS is no relation to St. Nicholas, though his name is often confounded with that of the holy patron of children.

Santa Claus is a sort of modern and somewhat pagan saint. He is jolly, as if he lived well, and always smiles.

His name came originally from the Dutch, who had some difficulty in saying St. Nicholas—or St. Nicholaus, as they spell it—and so shortened it to saint, or Santa Claus, the last word being in part the last syllable of the saint's name.

Santa Claus is better known in America perhaps than in any other country. He has no place in any list of saints, though his sole business is doing good.

He is believed to live at the north pole, though Peary saw nothing of him there. He travels with reindeers.

Kriss Kringle or Kriss Kinkle is a name sometimes given Santa Claus. This comes from careless speech on the part of the Germans, just as the name of Santa Claus comes from the careless Dutch.

In German Carist Kindlein means Christ Child, the giver of all gifts.

ENGLISH LITERARY CLUB OF FINNISH SPEAKING PEOPLE GIVES FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Class Ably Directed By Arvi Heinonen Shows Wonderful Development In Three Months' Time

Addresses By Mayor-Elect Stone And Others

The first entertainment of the English Literary club of the Finnish speaking people, took place in Italian hall, Water street, Thursday evening, and was attended by a large number, the majority of whom are members of the club. The affair began at 7.30 o'clock and concluded shortly before eleven. The Quincy Temperance society's band provided the music for the occasion and rendered a number of selections that were greatly appreciated, in addition to music for the various talent.

The program opened with a selection by the orchestra. This was followed by an address of welcome, delivered in a very able manner by Arvi Heinonen, teacher of the club. In his remarks, the speaker said that it was the initial attempt on the part of the members at a function of such a nature and added that it was prepared on short notice. He said that the choir, which was to render a number of songs, had only been organized two weeks previous and concluded by thanking those of American parentage and birth who were present on the occasion.

Another selection was in order from the orchestra, followed in turn by the reading of a paper by one of the students, Impi Hakkila, who gave a very interesting and detailed story of "Glimpses of Finland through American Eyes." His reading and account of his experiences was highly instructive and received much applause at the hands of the audience He portrayed to his audience the different historical places and depicted the many pleasing scenes that met the gaze of the traveller.

The choir next gave a selection which was very favorably received. A reading on "Our Club" was given by Arvi Heinonen, who gave an account of the formation of the club, its aims and purposes and the success with which it is meeting at the present time. A noticeable feature of the affair was the fact that the club was only organized three months ago, and all those who were participating had begun the study of the alphabet at that time. The orchestra again favored those present and recitations were given by members of the club.

Hannes Heinonen gave a reading that brought forth much applause, following which impromptu addresses were given by the city officials and teachers in the public schools who were present at the event, including Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone, John L. Miller, chairman of the school committee, William H. Teasdale, Henry Upton, principal of the Willard school, Forest Wilson, principal of the Hancock school, and Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, teacher in the Willard school.

The Mayor-elect was given a very enthusiastic ovation as he arose to address the gathering and delivered a very instructive discourse on "Citizenship." He congratulated the Finnish people on the formation of such a club and outlined the many benefits that would accrue the many benefits it would have to bear in moulding the ideal types of manhood and womanhood. He suggested a number of topics which should command the attention of the members and was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

John L. Miller confined his remarks to the value of an education, outlining the benefits that could be derived from study and showing the worth of an educated man or woman to the community. He praised the work already being accomplished by the club and exhorted the members to continue along the same lines. He gave a number of instances where different opportunities were available and urged the members of the club to take advantage of them. He too, was warmly applauded.

Henry Upton, principal of the Willard school, told of the influence the home had in teaching the child the proper use of the English language, He showed the part played by the father and mother and the older members of the family in teaching the child the elements of education. He also complimented the club on its origin and added that its value was of great worth to the city as a whole and that the members would be able to familiarize themselves with matters of vital concern.

Forest Wilson, principal of the Lincoln school, gave a statistical account of the progress of the various pupils in the public school, beginning with the primary school and terminating with college life. He brought forcibly to bear upon those present the necessity of being conversant with the different movements of the day and informed that the work of the club was being extended along these lines to a great degree. He gave a percentage of the different number from class to class in the various grades of the school and concluded by praising the members of the Literary club for the sacrifice of their time and application to various problems of importance.

Following the speeches, the teacher of the class was presented with a beautiful hairbrush and comb, bearing the inscription.:

To our teacher
Arvi Heinonen
For your services
From thankful pupils
Dec. 21, 1911
"Work and conquer, your friends rejoice at the fruits of your work."
THE COMMITTEES.

Refreshment Committee—Mrs. Impi Hakkila, Mr. John Hakkila, Mr. Otto Hakkila and Miss Hilma Lehtonen.

Refreshments were served, after a vote of thanks had been extended to the speakers. After refreshments, Samuel Hervimaki gave a reading and the grand march, which was led by Arvi Heinonen and Mrs. Impi Hakkila took place. The affair, which proved to be a success in every way, concluded with a Santa Claus observance, which ended with all present singing "America."

FOUND IN TEMPLE OF "SUN WORSHIPPERS"

Nation-Wide Search For Boy Heir to Millions Rewarded

Chicago, Dec. 22.—George Lindsay, 12 years old, sole heir to the millions of the late W. H. Lindsay of Philadelphia, has been removed from the temple of a "Sun Worshippers'" cult and placed under the charge of the juvenile court, at the request of relatives.

Charles R. Lindsay, uncle of the boy, is responsible for the action. After a nation wide search the uncle and detectives in his employ found him in the "temple" here. The boy's mother, who placed him in the "temple," is said to be known among the cult as "Vahdah."

One of the charges made by the boy's uncle was that the lad was kept on a diet of grapes and beer. The Gerry society and other juvenile organizations aided in the search. He is said to have been in the "temple" about six months.

The boy is now at his mother's home here. She has been ordered not to return him to the "temple." Judge Pinkney will hear the case Jan. 4.

WATCHMAN IS ACCUSED

Police Think Him Responsible For Man's Death In Foundry

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 22.—On a charge of murdering Charles Ayres in the engine room at the Page Storms Drop Forge company's foundry in Chicopee, Jacob Godek, the watchman at the plant, was placed under arrest.

Ayres apparently entered the engine room to warm himself. He had been out of work and, according to Godek, Ayres took the watchman's revolver from a shaft in the engine room and shot himself.

NOTICE TO RUSSIA RATIFIED BY TAFT

Final Step In Treaty Abrogation Has Been Taken

Washington, Dec. 22.—President Taft signed the joint resolution of congress abrogating the treaty of 1832 between the United States and Russia. Only Secretary Knox was present at the time.

It is understood that owing to the delicate situation which has arisen between this country and Russia over Russia's discrimination in the matter of passports for Jewish citizens of the United States, President Taft has decided to give as much as possible of his time and personal attention to the diplomatic negotiations for the framing of a new treaty.

Many Democrats in the house, some of whom were foremost in denouncing Russia, will co-operate with the president and the state department in the negotiations with Russia for a new covenant.

Q.—The Apostle says "And to make all see what is the fellowship of THE MYSTERY, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God."—Ephesians iii, 9. What is this great and profound "mystery?" (O. Y. L.)

Answer.—Elsewhere (Colossians i, 26, 27) the Apostle explains what this hidden mystery is "among the Gentiles;" that it is "Christ in you the hope of glory." In the 11th verse following the one related to the question, the Apostle points out that a plan or Divine purpose had been arranged in the wisdom of God. He says, "According to Plan of the Ages which He formed for the Anointed Jesus our Lord."—Corrected Translation. This Divine Plan, formed before the foundation of the earth (Acts xv, 18) is an arrangement whereby all of the kindreds, nations and families of the earth are to be blessed through a certain "Seed." Who this seed should be is the "mystery" that has been concealed for the ages. It was first mentioned to Adam and Eve, in the words of the Lord, addressed to Satan—the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. (Genesis iii, 15.) This was the first glimmering of hope given to the race that it would eventually be delivered from the dominion of sin and death into which it had been plunged by the disobedience of father Adam. The "Seed" was next mentioned in that great oath-bound covenant which God made to Abraham, saying, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Hebrews vi, 13-20; Genesis xxii, 18.) Isaac was not the promised seed, but the promise was repeated to him and also to Jacob. The Lord, in His dealings with the Jewish nation, the descendants of Jacob, continually kept alive the hope of the coming of the promised "Seed," in the promises and in the prophecies made to them. They were looking for the Messiah, the promised Seed, when the Lord Jesus presented Himself to that nation as their promised deliverer. The Lord was crucified; the Seed had not yet come. What was the matter? The Apostle explains the "Mystery." The promised "Seed" was to be made up of a class, and was not to be a single individual. He says "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's Seed and heirs according to the promise."—Galatians iii, 16, 28, 29.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

A splendid holiday bill of all-star vaudeville is announced for the week beginning with Christmas Day at B. F. Keith's Theatre. No less than four splendid features of headline calibre are included, among them being the Old Soldier Fiddlers, composed of Col. J. A. Pattee, two boys in blue, and two sons of DiDixie. These fiddlers cannot read a note of music, playing entirely "by air," as they call it. They all fought at Gettysburg and by a strange co-incidence their regiments were opposed to one another. B. A. Rolfe's "Leading Lady" is a big musical comedy with Marguerite Haney, Ralph Lynn, and a company of pretty girls. This is one of the best tabloid musical plays ever seen in vaudeville, and Ralph Lynn, the comedian from the London Gaiety, manages to keep his audiences in a constant scream of laughter all the time he is on the stage. Alber's Polar Bears, the largest and finest group of the species in captivity, have just completed a long engagement at the New York Hippodrome, where they were acclaimed by the metropolitan dailies the greatest trained animal act ever seen in the city. This feature will be of especial interest to the throngs of youngsters who flock to B. F. Keith's during the holidays. Albert Hole, the celebrated English boy soprano, will be another feature and others to appear are Arthur Pickens & Co., in a comedy sketch and the McGinnis Brothers, Dancing Cadets.

CASTLE SQUARE.

After its grand holiday opening Friday evening, "The Wizard of Oz" will begin its week at the Castle Square Theatre with two Christmas holiday performances that promise to fill the house to the very doors. This is the fourth of Mr. Craig's musical spectacles, but it excells them all in variety, in humor, in musical features, in dancing and in scenic splendor. The transformation scenes are especially marvellous and startling, and they, with the quaint and curious figures of the Scarecrow, the Tin Woodman, the Frolicsome Heifer, the Cowardly Lion and others human and animal will attract children of all ages, and amuse no less their elders. The cast is unequalled. George Hassell and Donald Mack respectively as the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman Walter Walker as the Wizard, Morgan Wallace as King Pastoria, Arthur Hill as the Cowardly Lion, Mabel Montgomery as Tryvie Tryfle, Mabel Colcord as the Lady Lunatic and Mary Young as Dorothy Gale, with many other players in the leading roles and a chorus of forty singers, give "The Wizard of Oz" the best presentation it has ever received in Boston. Large audiences are assured during the coming week, and it is certain that this will be the most popular of all Mr. Craig's Christmas productions.

SUNDAY CONCERTS.

Another Sunday concert will be given at the Castle Square, and the program will have a holiday attractiveness. Motion pictures of the latest subject will be shown, and the artists who will vary the entertainment with music and humor are the best of their kind and the leaders of their profession. The overture begins promptly at eight o'clock, and the program continues for two hours and a half. A special inducement is made by opening the entire second balcony to ladies, at the small charge for seats of only ten cents.

A bright number of the Wollaston Herald, the club organ, under the editorship of Councilman-elect A. N. Murray was read. Especially clever was an editorial dealing with the supposed management of the paper and telling what it was doing for the community.

Solos by James Falconer, accompanied by Fred Sutermeister were enjoyed including "The forge," "King of the Main" and "A guid New Year to ane an' a'," the chorus of the last being sung by the audience.

"Resolved: that reciprocity would be beneficial to Canada," was a debate in which the affirmative was taken by Rev. Wesley Wiggin and the negative by George Taylor.

Three judges were appointed consisting of Albert N. Murray, Wesley Rhodes and Walter C. Sanders, the first named serving as chief justice."

For the affirmative Rev. Mr. Wiggin spoke of the benefits to Canada as a self evident truth. The great market for Canadian natural products was mentioned. Cuba, Porto Rico and the Phillipines were instanced as examples of the benefits in letting down the bars.

George Taylor, attorney for the negative told of the intelligence of the Canadian people. If reciprocity was beneficial they would have accepted it.

There were unlimited farms and mines they were capable of developing themselves. If reciprocity was in force before long they would have "Johnny Fitz" as premier of Canada.

The pastor undoubtedly had the best of the argument but the crafty and misplaced eloquence of Mr. Taylor so confused the judges that three separate opinions were registered. The scribe is still in doubt as to the outcome.

Refreshments were served and president Ewertz wished all a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

BAY STATERS IN CHARGE.

Massachusetts republicans have leased the entire eighth floor of the Auditorium Hotel at Chicago for the republican national convention in June. Executive secretary Chas. S. Groves has just returned from Chicago where he made the arrangements. The republican delegation stayed at the same hotel four years ago when they went to nominate Mr. Taft.

ARMY OF CZAR IS ADVANCING

Persian Constitutionalists Refuse to Submit Tamely

ARMED CLASH IS REPORTED

Teheran, Dec. 22.—Serious fighting between the Persian Constitutionalists and the Russian troops is reported to have occurred, in a telegram from Tabriz. No details are given.

It was understood that unless Persia decided by Dec. 21 to accept the terms of the Russian ultimatum demanding the dismissal of W. M. Shuster, the American acting as treasurer general, the commander of the Russian troops now concentrated at Kasbin would be ordered to advance on Teheran. The troops number about 4000 of all arms. The Russian troops concentrated at Kasbin reached there from Rosht on Nov. 29.

Kasbin lies about ninety-six miles northwest of Teheran, which could be reached by forced marches of all arms in about three days. A determined dash by a strong force of Cossacks might, however, place Teheran, a walled city with ancient defenses, in Russian hands within twenty-four hours.

The nature of the country is rather unfavorable for such an enterprise. The road, though excellent, rises for the first forty miles rapidly to an altitude of 7000 feet, but the last fifty miles are level, although sandy and stony.

The dismissal of Shuster has been demanded by Russia in her ultimatum dealing with the Persian difficulty. For some days the national council has refused to accept the cabinet's proposals with reference to meeting the Russian demands.

In presenting the question before the council on Dec. 18, the foreign minister represented that the cabinet had made every effort to retain Shuster, but the plight was desperate. Russia had refused to abate her demands and Persia was threatened by the ex-shah on the one hand and Salan-Ed-Dowleh on the other. He argued that the cabinet should be empowered to concillate Russia.

Despite his appeals, the deputies insisted that the retention of Shuster was Persia's only hope and that nothing could be gained by yielding.

In a discussion of foreign affairs in the house of commons on Dec. 14, Foreign Secretary Grey said that the British government had made no objection to the demand by Russia that Shuster be withdrawn. He added that Shuster's intentions were good, but the spirit of the Anglo-Russian agreement could not be upset and two great nations embroiled by the action of any individual.

CAMPAIGN FUND GIFT

Letter Clears Roosevelt of Asking Harriman For $250,000

New York, Dec. 22.—Correspondence between George R. Sheldon, treasurer of the Republican national committee, and Theodore Roosevelt s just made public. It gives detailed denial to the rumor, current since the 1904 national election, that Roosevelt asked E. H. Harriman to contribute to the election campaign fund, and that Harriman raised $250,000, or donated it, to aid Roosevelt's election.

This rumor long had been denied by Roosevelt, but heretofore none of those connected with the Republican national committee had given an explanation.

SOLVE GAS MYSTERY AT WEYMOUTH

Gas From Broken Valve Passed Underground 100 Feet

ELDERLY COUPLE PROSTRATED

The mystery of how the gas which caused the sudden illness of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Bates, an elderly couple living at 214 Washington street, Weymouth Landing, Wednesday evening, reached their home, which has no gas pipes, was solved Thursday by employes of the Old Colony Gas Company.

They found that gas, escaping from a faulty valve in the Washington St. main, had passed underground for nearly 100 feet to the cellar of the Bates' house, by means of an old drain pipe, filling the cellar and permeating the house, so that Mr. and Mrs. Bates escaped death by a narrow margin.

John F. Bates, aged 78, and his wife, Helen Rebecca Bates, aged 76, live with their grandson, Fred Bates, aged 18.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last evening Mrs. Bates was taken suddenly ill and was taken to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles I. Newcomb, at 113 Washington street.

Dr. P. F. Virgin, who was called, saw that Mrs. Bates showed symptoms of gas poisoning, but from inquiry he learned that there were no gas pipes in the Bates house. Mrs. Bates quickly rallied and today is out of danger.

Meantime Mr. Bates, who had decided to pass the night in his own home, was taken ill before 11 o'clock.

The grandson ran out and called Dr. N. V. Mullen, who found the elderly man unconscious. Dr. Mullen smelled gas, and, though he could not guess its source, at once threw open the doors and windows of the house.

He then had Mr. Bates taken to the home of his son, J. Franklin Bates on Broad street. This morning when Mr. Bates regained consciousness he could remember nothing of the events of last evening. Tonight, however, he is believed to be quite recovered.

GREAT CHRISTMAS RUSH

Postoffice Employes Are Ordered to Work Next Sunday

Washington, Dec. 22.—The crush of holiday matter in the mails is so great that Postmaster General Hitchcock has issued orders that postoffice clerks and carriers must work Sunday in the distribution of letters and packages. This is done despite the department rule.

Instructions have been given to the postmasters in the larger cities to hire wagons and teams. The present indications are that the pressure of Christmas mail this year will be greater than ever before.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN ORANGES ARE SERVED.

NOT only are oranges now moderately abundant, but they are wholesome, and we are learning to serve them in almost as many ways as apples. Oranges are good for those who suffer from indigestion. They should form some part of the Christmas feast.

How Served.

This fruit may be served raw or cooked. Some persons think that cooking destroys the delicious flavor.

Oranges are very wholesome eaten for breakfast before other food. They may be served in the skin, the orange being cut across the middle and eaten with a spoon.

When the skin is to be taken off an orange it will come off easier if the fruit is dipped in boiling water.

When slicing an orange be sure to remove the seeds. Oranges are sometimes served peeled and quartered. The inner skin should then be cut and the seeds taken out.

Sugar ought never be added to oranges until just before they are to be served.

Orange Dishes.

Orange Salad.—Almost every one who likes fruit salads has a favorite recipe for orange salad. The simplest method is to peel and quarter the oranges, dip each piece into a dressing of lemon juice and olive oil and arrange them on fresh lettuce leaves, together with blanched English walnuts or pistachio nuts. Grapes may be combined with the nuts and pieces of orange. Mayonnaise dressing is served with this.

Orange Cocktail.—A delicious temperance drink in which the Christmas healths may be drunk is made with oranges.

Squeeze the juice from half a dozen oranges. With a very sharp knife cut up the pulp of a firm orange and mix with it chopped figs and dates.

Pour the orange juice over the chopped fruit. Add a few drops of lemon and a dash of pineapple juice if it is convenient. Serve in small glasses, with a candied cherry or a couple of grapes floating on the surface.

Orange Shortcake.—For the layers take one and a half cupfuls of sifted flour, a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix these together and stir in a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter and the yolk and the white of an egg beaten separately. Bake in square shallow tins. When baked butter the top and cover with thin slices of orange. Put a layer of cake on top of this and add more slices of orange. Serve with whipped cream.

ADVENTURE

By JACK LONDON

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Joan returns with the Martha in good condition. Her white assistants describe her business shrewdness. Sheldon refuses to let her run the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Wrapped in matting, well oiled, free from rust, and brand new, two Winchesters were first unearthed. Sheldon did not recognize them. They had not come from Berande; neither had the forty flasks of powder found under the corner post of the house; and, while he could not be sure, he could remember no loss of eight boxes of detonators. The absence of any cartridges made Sheldon persist in the digging up of the floor, and a fifty pound flour tin was his reward. With glowering eyes Gogoomy looked on while Sheldon took from the tin a hundred rounds each for the two Winchesters and fully as many rounds more of nondescript cartridges of all sorts and makes and calibres.

The contraband and stolen property was piled in assorted heaps on the back veranda of the bungalow. A few paces from the bottom of the steps were grouped the forty odd culprits, while behind them, in solid array, the several hundred blacks of the plantation. At the head of the steps Joan and Sheldon were seated.

"Look at it," Sheldon said to Joan. "We've been sleeping over a volcano. They ought to be whipped"—

"No whip me," Gogoomy cried out from below. "Father belong me big fella chief. Me whip, too much trouble along you, close up, my word."

"What name you fella Gogoomy!" Sheldon shouted. "I knock seven bells out of you. Here, you Kwaque, put 'm irons along that fella Gogoomy."

Kwaque, a strapping gang boss, plucked Gogoomy from out of his following, and helped by the other gang bosses twisted his arms behind him and snapped on the heavy handcuffs.

"Me finish along you, close up, you die altogether," Gogoomy, with wrath distorted face, threatened the boss boy.

"Please, no whipping," Joan said in a low voice. "If whipping is necessary, send them to Tulagi and let the government do it. Give them their choice between a fine or an official whipping."

Sheldon nodded and stood up, facing the blacks.

"Manonmie!" he called.

Manonmie stood forth and waited.

"You fella boy bad fella too much," Sheldon charged. "You steal 'm plenty. Me cross along you too much. S'pose, you like 'm, me take 'm one fella pound along you in big book. S'pose you no like 'm me take 'm one fella pound, then me send you fella along Tulagi catch 'm one strong fella government whipping. Plenty New Georgia boys, plenty Ysabel boys stop along jail along Tulagi. Them fella no like Malaita boys little bit. My word, they give 'm you strong fella whipping. What you say?"

"You take 'm one fella pound along me," was the answer.

And Manonmie, patently relieved, stepped back, while Sheldon entered the fine in the plantation labor journal.

Boy after boy, he called the offenders out and gave them their choice, and boy by boy each one elected to pay the fine imposed.

Gogoomy and his five tribesmen were fined three pounds each, and at Gogoomy's guttural command they refused to pay.

"S'pose you go along Tulagi," Sheldon warned him; "you catch 'm strong fella whipping and you stop along jail three fella year. Savvee?"

Gogoomy wavered.

"You take 'm three fella pound along me," Gogoomy muttered, at the same time scowling his hatred at Sheldon and transferring half the scowl to Joan and Kwaque. "Me finish along you, you catch 'm big fella trouble, my word. Father belong me big fella chief along Fort Adams."

"That will do," Sheldon warned him. "You shut mouth belong you."

"Me no fright," the son of a chief retorted, by his insolence increasing his stature in the eyes of his fellows.

"Lock him up for tonight," Sheldon said to Kwaque. "Sun he come up put 'm that fella and five fella belong him along grass cutting. Savvee?"

"There will be trouble with Gogoomy yet," Sheldon said to Joan, as the boss boys marshalled their gangs and led them away to their work. "Keep an eye on him. Be careful when you are riding alone on the plantation. The loss of those Winchesters and all that ammunition has hit him harder than your cutting did. He is dead ripe for mischief."

* * * * * * *

"I wonder what has become of Tudor. It's two months since he disappeared into the bush, and not a word of him after he left Binu."

Joan Lackland was sitting astride her horse by the bank of the Balesuna, where the sweet corn had been planted, and Sheldon was leaning against her horse's shoulder.

"Yes, it is a long time for no news to have trickled down," he answered, watching her keenly from under his hat brim and wondering as to the measure of her anxiety for the adventurous gold hunter. "But Tudor will come out all right. He did a thing at the start that I wouldn't have given him or any other man credit for—persuaded Binu Charley to go along with him. I'll wager no other Binu nigger has ever gone so far into the bush unless to be kai kai'd."

"Look! Look!" Joan cried in a low voice, pointing across the narrow stream to a slack eddy, where a huge crocodile drifted like a log awash. "Ugh! The filthy beasts! I hate them! I hate them!"

"And yet you go diving among sharks," Sheldon chided. "Just the same, I wish I could swim as well as you. Maybe it would beget confidence such as you have."

"Do you know I think it would be nice to be married to a man such as you seem to be becoming," she remarked, with one of her abrupt changes that always astounded him. "I should think you could be trained into a very good husband—you know, not one of the domineering kind, but one who considered his wife was just as much an individual as himself and just as much a free agent. Really, you know, I think you are improving."

She laughed and rode away, leaving him greatly cast down. If he had thought there had been one bit of coyness in her words, one feminine flutter, one womanly attempt at deliberate lure and encouragement he would have been elated. But he knew absolutely that it was the boy and not the woman who had so daringly spoken.

Joan rode through twenty acres of uncleared cane. The grass was waist high and higher, and as she rode along she remembered that Gogoomy was one of a gang of boys that had been detailed to the grass cutting. A little farther on she heard voices and reined in and listened. It was Gogoomy talking.

"Dog he stop 'm along house, night time he walk about," Gogoomy was saying. "You fella boy catch 'm one fella pig, put 'm kai-kai, belong him dog along one big fella fish hook. S'pose dog he walk about catch 'm kai-kai, you fella boy catch 'm dog alfee same one shark. Dog he finish close up. Big fella marster sleep along big fella house. White Mary sleep along pickaninny house. One fella Adamu he stop along outside pickaninny house. You fella boy finish 'm dog, finish 'm Adamu, finish 'm big fella marster, finish 'm white Mary, finish 'm altogether. Plenty musket he stop, plenty powder, plenty tomahawk, plenty knife fee. Sun he come up we long way too much."

"Me catch 'm pig sun he go down," spoke up one whose thin falsetto voice Joan recognized as belonging to Cosse, one of Gogoomy's tribesmen.

"Me catch 'm dog," said another.

"And me catch 'm white fella Mary," Gogoomy cried triumphantly. "Me catch 'm Kwaque he die along him quick."

When Santa Called on Doubtful Boy

JOE was one of those boys who didn't believe in Santa Claus. He had been sitting in front of the library fire on Christmas eve, glancing now and then at the uncurtained window through which he could see the snow falling. Suddenly he heard the tinkle of bells and went to the window to look out. A little old man with the whitest of hair, the reddest of red cheeks and the merriest of brown eyes was driving up.

"Hello, hello, there!" he called.

Joe ran to the door.

"How d'ye do?" called the little old gentleman. Then he put his hand into his pocket and fished out a huge card. On it was printed "Mr. Santa Claus, Christmastown, North Pole."

Then the old gentleman pulled out a book. Joe could see that in it was a list of names of children. Some of them had black marks beside their names.

"KNOW A BOY NAMED JOE JINGLE?"

"Know a boy named Joe Jingle?" asked the little old man, keeping his finger on a name beside which there was a very black mark.

"Y-e-e-s," answered Joe. "He lives here."

"Ah, indeed," chirped the little old gentleman. "I hear that he is one of those smart boys who don't believe in Santa Claus. He doesn't believe in me! What d'ye think of that? When I first began to make my Christmas rounds many, many hundred years ago there wasn't a boy or girl in all the world who did not know me and believe in me, and I never forgot one single child. But after awhile the world grew so big, so many children were born into it, that it was very hard for me to get around to them all.

"By and by things got so bad I had to get the fairies—only the good fairies, of course—to go about and make up a list of all the boys and girls in the world and to find out what they wanted for Christmas and if they believed in Santa Claus or not. I have all the names in this book here. Do you think Joe Jingle deserves anything for not believing in me?"

"I—I s'pose not," said poor Joe. "But if I promise to tell him about meeting you and prove to him that you're real p'raps you'll forgive him this time."

Old Santa Claus shook his head sadly. "It always makes me feel very bad to think anybody needs proof of me. A boy or girl ought to believe what their parents tell them about old Santa Claus."

"If I—I mean if Joe had only seen you come down the chimney once I'm sure he'd never have doubted that you were real," said Joe eagerly.

"That was all very well in the old days," replied Santa sorrowfully. "But they make the chimneys so narrow these days, and what with steam heat and gas logs in the city houses I haven't any chance at all to make my Christmas calls on children in the good old fashioned way."

"If you don't go down chimneys much how do you manage to fill all the stockings?" asked Joe.

"Oh, that's easy!" cried Santa. "I have formed what I call a parents' league. I learn from each parent just before Christmas what is best to give each child, and when it comes Christmas eve the fairies leave the presents at each house. I go about the country just seeing that everything goes right."

"GOOD NIGHT AND A MERRY CHRISTMAS."

Here Santa's little horse began to paw and toss its head.

"Well, I must be getting along," cried Santa, and he climbed into his sleigh, and as he picked up his reins he called out, "Good night and a merry Christmas to you!"

He chirruped to his horse and in a moment was out of sight down the road, though the tinkling of the sleigh-bells could be heard for a long time after.

* * * * * * * *

The next thing Joe knew he was being shaken by the shoulder and his father's voice was saying in his ear: "Why are you snoozing here by the fire? You ought to have been in bed long ago. It's almost time for Santa Claus to come."

"I've seen him myself. I do believe in Santa Claus. Please ask the little fairies to tell him Joe Jingle is going to be a good boy now."

TAFT MESSAGE REVIEWS YEAR

Efficiency and Economy In All Government Departments

LEGISLATION IS RECOMMENDED

Troublesome Question of Central Bank Is Eliminated In Dealing With Currency Reform—Plans to Improve Service In Army Indorsed—Congress Advised to Prepare For Canal—Other Subjects of Interest

Washington, Dec. 22.—President Taft sent to congress a message in which he reviews the work of the departments for the year. He finds increasing efficiency and economy in all. The message, however, is devoted chiefly to recommendations for new legislation, and the president believes that a matter of first importance is monetary reform. Regarding this he says:

"It is exceedingly fortunate that the wise and undisputed policy of maintaining unchanged the main features of our banking system rendered it at once impossible to introduce a central bank; for a central bank would certainly have been resisted, and a plan into which it could have been introduced would probably have been defeated. But as a central bank could not be a part of the only plan discussed or considered, that troublesome question is eliminated. And ingenious and novel as the proposed National Reserve association appears, it simply is a logical outgrowth of what is best in out present system, and is, in fact, the fulfillment of that system."

The president urges that there be a "properly measured government representation" in the association and declares a fair recognition of both national and state systems.

The president declares that the credit of the country abroad was never better than now, instancing the sale of the Panama 3 percent bonds, which held out no special inducements for bankers.

The changes in the war department to promite efficiency are approved in general, but Mr. Taft opposes bills now pending in congress which would make promotion slower and enlistments longer.

As the Panama canal nears completion—it will be finished by July 1, 1913—legislation for regulation and control is necessary; something relating to the government of the zone and as to tolls.

A river and harbor bill sufficient to continue uncompleted projects is favored.

Several suggestions are made in connection with the department of justice, but most necessary seems to be something to prevent delays of litigation.

The navy is praised as in good condition and the president believes it should be maintained; higher grades than rear admirals are favored, its personnel increased by 2000 and the smaller navy yards abandoned.

The president hopes and expects that the commission appointed to investigate the subject of employers' liability and workmen's compensation will suggest "legislation which will enable us to put in the place of the present wasteful and sometimes unjust system of employers' liability a plan of compensation which will afford some certain and definite relief to all employes who are injured in the course of their employment in those industries which are subject to the regulating power of congress."

The president urges the extension of inland waterways and tells the progress of work already under way.

The $220,000 postal surplus is alluded to, and the mesage calls for a rural parcels post.

The president recommends a contributory pension system for government employes; an extension of the term of service of the special board of engineers on the waterways from the lakes to the gulf; power in the president to remove clerks of federal courts for cause; payment of the French spoliation judgments. In conclusion the president renews his recommendation that offices be kept free from politics.

TRIBUTE OF FRIENDSHIP

France to Offer Bronze Bust of "La France" to United States

Paris, Dec. 22.—France is arranging another imposing testimonial of her friendship and affection for the United States. Today a public subscription was opened to offer a bronze bust of "La France," by the French sculptor, August E. Rodin, which will be placed at the base of the monument to be dedicated to Samuel W. de Champlain, the French navigator and explorer, at the tercentennary of the discovery of Lake Champlain, to which he gave his name and which is to be celebrated next June.

Like the gift from the people of France of Bartholdi's "Statue of Liberty," the presentation of "La France," which is the figure of a woman, marks historically another epoch in the relations of fraternity between France and the United States of America.

GIRLS AT $500 EACH

Six Hundred Said to Be For Sale In Los Angeles Russian Colony

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 22.—Declaring that the local Russian colony was a marriage market, wherein young girls were bartered like cattle by their parents, Elsie T. Navkoff, 17 years old, while in the juvenile court on a charge of a delinquency, screamed that she would bare the secrets of her race rather than to marry a stranger to whom she alleges her parents were trying to sell her.

She declared that in the Russian quarter, with a population of about 4000, there were 600 young girls for sale at an average price of $500.

"They have sold me to a man I have never seen," the girl cried. "I will die before I will marry him. I love an American and he loves me, and we will be married as soon as I can get away from my people."

QUINCY A. A. MAKES GOOD.

The Quincy A. A. basket ball team more than made up for the deftat suffered last Wednesday, at the hands o the strong St. Joseph's quintet, by administering an overwhelming defeat to the much heralded St. Alphonsus combination, in St. Mary's hall, Thursday. The visitors were rather late in arriving, yet despite this, the three hundred who were present waited until the end of the game, which occurred shortly after eleven o'clock. The local boys were on their mettle all the time and from the beginning, tothe end of the contest there was nothing to it but Quincy A. A., although at times a sensational feature, on the part of the losers was contributed by Durkin, who seemed to be the only man on the Roxbury team who was able to show up to advantage.

This was the first appearance of the St. Alphonsus team in Quincy this year and as the members of the buff and blue have always been represented by a formidable contingent, a large crowd turned out to witness the contests, of both first and second teams. The work of the second teams was of the high order and its members came in for their full share of praise from those who were in attendance. Manning on account of injuries, did not appear in the lineup. He was not missed however as every player in the aggregation accredited himself in fine style.

The first team emerged in triumph with a 41 to 16 score, while the local second team was victorious to the tune of 41 to 9. For the senior team the work of D. Duggan was of the exceptional variety. All of his baskets were caged from difficult angles. Boyle also displayed rare form and seems to display better ability as a basket ball player in each game. His defensive work in preventing his opponent from securing a goal was highly commended by those present.

For the second teams Jenkins, H. Chapman and Dackers excelled for Quincy, while Driscoll and Quinn played well for the losers.

BOY DROWNED

J. Milford, worked in vain to rescuscitate the drowned boy.

Dr. John T. Reynolds was called and pronounced the lad dead. In the absence of medical examiner Jones, Dr. J. C. Fraser of Weymouth viewed the body before it was given over to the undertaker.

A number of people were attracted to the scene of the drowning and much talk prevailed over the fact that precautions should be taken to prevent youngsters playing in the vicinity. The quarry hole has frequently been a swimming resort for numbers of Finnish bathers in the summer season.

Walter was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Quist. He was ten years old last May and was a pupil of the fifth grade in the Willard school.

FLIES FIFTY MILES IN NEW HYDROPLANE

Atwood Makes Record In Airship Fitted With Pontoons

Providence, Dec. 22.—Harry N. Atwood, the aviator, reached here yesterday afternoon in his hydroplane from Lynn, a distance of fifty miles. Atwood established a record in distance traveled in a machine of this kind. He landed in a cove in Narragansett bay.

The aviator had the wind at his back from the time he left Lynn until he reached Newport, and traveled at between sixty and seventy miles an hour.

Upon reaching Newport he turned to come up Narragansett bay. Finding the wind in his face, he was compelled to reduce speed. He flew between two and three thousand feet in the air, and broke the record by fifteen miles for distance traveled in an airship fitted with pontoons.

ERRAND BOY'S LUCKY FIND

Gets New $100 Bill For Restoring Lost Gems to New York Woman

New York, Dec. 22.—Jimmy Scully, an errand boy in a tailoring establishment, found in the street a necklace of 200 shining stones and 39 blood red ones. Jimmy thought the stones were glass and stowed the necklace away with the idea of giving it to his little sister on Christmas day. Yesterday, however, he innocently displayed his find to one of the men in the shop, an uproar followed and an expert on precious stones was called in.

It was determined by the experts that the necklace was composed of diamonds and rubies, and worth something like $10,000.

Advertisements were scanned and a reply to one inserted by a distracted woman of fashion revealed that the necklace was the property of Mrs. Mary Steinman of Tuxedo Park. In her happiness over recovering her gems she made Jimmy a present of a brand new $100 bill.

WANTS VICE PRESIDENCY

No Other Political Office Appears to Appeal to Sherman

Washington, Dec. 22.—Subsequent to a call at the White House by Vice President Sherman, wide credence was given to a report that Sherman does not desire to be the Republican candidate for governor of New York. It further was reported, apparently on the highest authority, that unless his party desired him to run again for the vice presidency, he would retire from politics March 4, 1913.

The president, it is said, is being urged to interest himself in the vice presidential situation. If Taft is to be nominated, his friends have suggested that his choice of a running mate should be known before convention time. It is reported that some of the New York Republicans had recommended that Sherman be retained on the ticket.

VICTORY FOR GRAND TRUNK

Gets Right to Parallel New Haven Tracks In Providence

Providence, Dec. 22.—The last bar between the Grand Trunk railway and the Providence waterfront was taken down last night when the board of aldermmen voted to allow the road to lay tracks parallel to those of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad on Allen's avenue. There was but one dissenting vote.

The common council voted two weeks ago to allow the Grand Trunk to utilize Allen's avenue, the only available route to the harbor, but the aldermen refused permission on the grounds that the city was giving the Grand Trunk a perpetual franchise.

The committee on railways then took up the matter and reported favorably on the petition last night previous to the vote being taken by the aldermen.

HOOPER IN STATE PRISON

How Tennessee Executive Seeks Cases Worthy of Pardon

Nashville, Dec. 22.—Fearing he would be subjected to the criticism that befell his Democratic predecessor, Malcolm O. Patterson, who was liberal with Christmas pardons, Governor Hooper, Republican, left his office in the state house and entered the state penitentiary on the outskirts of the city.

He will stay there for two days and acquaint himself, he declares, with every man, and if he finds cases he believes worthy of pardon he will include them in his proclamation of Yuletide clemency.

FOOTBALL.

The thread makers never expected to win the game against the Eagles, but nevertheless they put up a most determined fight. On more than one occasion it looked as if they would be successful in getting the ball into the net.

The visitors travelled with only seven players. They were successful inobtaining men to fill three of the vacancies after their arrival in Quincy, but throughout the game they pluckily tried to win points with ten men, playing a postion vacant in the forward line.

Ward played a great game for his team. It was mainly through his efforts that the score against the visitors was not larger than 3 goals to nothing. After the first goal had been scored against them, he made a determined effort to equalize. This rallied his team mates, and for a while play remained dangerously near to the Eagle goal.

The Eagles also were minus two of their regulars, Sharples and Rennie thinking that the ground would be unplayable failed to put in their appearance. The ground, however, truned out to be in fair condition even after twelve hours of constant rain.

It must have been the case that the heavy ground suited the play of Dan McDonald. He was out to beat the threadmakers, and he worked hard. He time and again, was prominent with brilliant runs, and the manner in which he took the ball away from his opponents on Saturday was fine to witness. The old saying that "quid gear gangs into little bulk" was never better exemplified than in the case of "Dannie." From the first days that he played in Fore River he has proved himself a most able exponent of the game, and he continues to improve in play, although not in stature. One of the pluckiest players, that ever kicked a ball, it is not surprising that he should always be a thorn in the side of the heftiest opponents. He did not succeed in scoring goals on Saturday but he had much to do with the victory of the Eagles.

The McGregors had to postpone their game last week owing to the wretched condition of the Park.

A game which will be stubbornly contested takes place Saturday when the Mcgregors will try concusions with the famous Riverdale team. The game takes place on the ground of the latter, and the McGregors have chosen the following team: Haldane, goal; R. Lewis and McLean, backs; A Rae, Tom Robertson and D. Melville, half-backs; Raleigh, Simpson, T. Richie (centre) D. Melrose and T. Melrose, forwards.

The trophy won by the team representing Washington street school in the Association football school league is now on view in the window of Mr. Cook, chemist. The winners played good football throughout the series and we congratulate. This game is a good one for the schools to take up.

The Eagles again break up their nest, and tomorrow they will travel to Pawtucket, there they will meet a strong combination representing the Howard and Bullough team. The game has to be an American Cup one, and is the third round of this contest. The Howard and Bullough lads are the proud holders of this cup, the most coveted trophy in American association football. They are putting forward all efforts to retain the honor of champions for another year, and they are by no means overlooking the fact that the Eagles are a team which are hard to beat. The combination which will take the field against the Eagles is an exceptionally strong one, some players coming long distances, to line up against the Eagles. We have all confidence in the team chosen to represent the Eagles putting up a fine game with the Pawtucket lads, and not only that but we believe that the Eagles will come out victorious, and qualify for the semi-final. Be that as it may the game is attracting the attention of all football enthusiasts in the East, and it will be a big surprise if the gate is not a record one. The shipyard will close down at twelve o'clock so that those who wish to go to Pawtucket to witness the game may do so. The team that has been chosen to bring honors to Quincy is as follows:

Sharples, goal; Hendry, Melville, backs; Elliot, Boyd, half backs; Campbell, centre; Moran, McDonald, Rennie, Carruthers, forwards; Harrison, centre.

CORRUPTION AT POLLS

Two More Men Are Held as Result of New Bedford Probe

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 22.—In the investigation of corrupt methods in this city at the state election Judge Milliken found Antone A. Sylvia guilty of the illegal influence of a voter at the state election. He also found probable cause in the charge of conspiracy against Sylvia. Sylvia was held in $1500 bonds for the superior court.

George "Pomp" Lawton was found guilty of having promised a reward and of paying money for the votes of three different men at the state election. Probable cause of Lawton's guilt also was found in a charge of conspiracy to influence a voter. Lawton was held in bonds of $2500 for the superior court.

PACKERS LOSE A POINT

Court Refuses to Strike Out the Anti-Trust Counts In Indictment

Chicago, Dec. 22.—The ten Chicago packers on trial for criminal violation of the Sherman law lost in the first skirmish of their trial when Judge Carpenter overruled the motion of the defendants to strike out counts two and three of the indictment, charging criminal violation of the Sherman law.

The court also ruled adversely on the motion to have the jury instructed to disregard the allegation of government counsel in the opening statement regarding the absorption of the Schwartzschild & Sulzberger company and the New York Butchers Dressed Meat company by the alleged packers' combination.

COLLEAGUES IN COUNCIL SHOW HIGH ESTEEM HELD FOR PRESIDENT BRYANT

Is Presented With Beautiful Gavel At Adjourned Meeting Which Closes Work For Members of 1911

Rulings Affecting Street Railway and Charter

PRESIDENT BRYANT.

The City Council did not do a thing to the proposition to revise the charter Friday evening, at the last meeting of the year. The report of the Committee recommending a number of changes in the charter was taken from the table, the last thing in the evening.

Councilman Richards immediately arose and offered a minority report, that no action be taken on the revision of the charter at the present time, and moved the substitution of the minority for the majority report. Without debate of any kind, the minority report was accepted by a rising vote of 11 yes and 5 no.

This was but one of the important matters disposed of at the last meeting. Another matter was the increasing of the salary of the Assessors. The order called for an increase of the salary of the chairman to $1,200 a year and of the assistant assessors to $800. Before the council got through with the order, the salary of chairman had been fixed at $1,500 and that of the assistant assessor at $700.

Councilmen Campbell, Jenkins and Studley were absent.

A communication was received from the Mayor, with inclosure from the Commissioner asking for an additional appropriation of $285 to repairs of public buildings. Laid on the table until later, when Councilman Smith offered an order transferring that amount from interest of temporary loans account. The order was adopted.

The Mayor forwarded for confirmation, the names of Mabel McQuade and Temple A. Winslow as public weighers. They were confirmed. Later, however, on motion of Councilman Gardner the vote was reconsidered and he moved to lay on the table.

He did not want the question settled until it had seen if the coal company, for which they were employed, were properly doing business. The coal pockets at Wollaston were classed as a nuisance and the residents had employed counsel who had matter in hand.

Councilman Smith could not see what difference confirmation would make. He did not think that the council should discuss the merits of the case.

Councilman Duffy hardly thought it right to take sides in this question.

Councilman Gardner did not want the Council to take sides, but when there was a possible loss of thousands of taxable property, he thought that care should be exercised.

Councilman Cherrington thought that if the people of Wollaston were taking interest in this matter, the council should.

Councilman Bailey said that at a public hearing, over fifty citizens had appeared against a stable being erected. It was the unanimous opinion that property would be damaged. The location is not a proper one for a coal pocket. If the confirmation of these parties would give the concern any strength, he hoped that they would be held up.

Councilman Richards questioned if the council had a right to take sides in this matter. He doubted if it would interfere with their business, for they could hire someone to weigh their coal.

Councilman Leslie said that there was strong objection to the coal pocket in Wollaston.

Councilman Bolster could not see why the people did not have a right to do business.

Councilman Soderqren thought that the council should take sides.

On a rising vote of 11 yes and 8 no the appointments were laid on the table.

APOLOGY.

President Bryant said that he desired at this time to ask the indulgence of the council to make a personal apology to Councilman Leslie. At the last meeting he had called the councilman to order stating that he had spoken on a question three times. He had found, on consultation with the clerk, that the councilman had not spoken at all on that question, and he desired to apologize.

Councilman Leslie said that he knew that he had not spoken on the question, but he realized what a strain the President had been under that evening and the apology was accepted.

A petition of the Telephone Co., for a relocation of one pole on Hancock street was granted.

STREET RAILWAY SERVICE.

The special committee on street railway service reported at length as follows:

The Committee met early in September at which representatives of the Bay State St. Ry. Co. were present At this meeting the council made the following suggestion to the company.

That there was a crying need of a waiting room, with sanitary arrangements in City Square.

That there was an urgent demand for a 10 minute car service to Quincy Point, from 10 to 12 o'clock on Saturday nights, to relieve the congestion now prevalent during these hours.

That there was need of a car on the Newcomb Square line, to meet the last trains from Boston on Wednesday and Saturday nights.

That there was a demand for 15 minute car service to Quincy Point every evening until 10 o'clock P. M.

The lack of men and cars and the constant breaking of all schedules, when one car breaks down or men were absent.

The need of a more direct route to Squantum, as proposed by the Squantum Improvement society.

That the numerous delays and breaking of schedule time, caused by the second and third class rolling stock on this division breaking down and the need of better cars to replace them.

The representative of the Bay State Street Railway Co. took some of these propositions under consideration and others they refused to consider. They stated that a waiting room in Quincy Square, as proposed, was up to the city and not the railroad and refused to consider it.

A more direct route to Squantum was turned down as being impossible

The poor condition of rolling stock was denied and considered to be in good condition.

COMMISSIONER CRANE FILES REPORT WITH MAYOR

Many Matters Considered Affecting Water Front With Important Recommendations

Personal Work of Official With Results

Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane who has been making a study of the possibility of transportation facilities by water has submitted the following interesting report to the Mayor:

To His Honor, William T. Shea,
Mayor of Quincy.

Dear Sir:—

As Commissioner of Water Fronts, Waterways and Navigation of the City of Quincy under your appointment, I have the honor to shbmit the following report, as regards the transportation by water as it affects the business of the city.

There was received and shipped by water in the year Nov. 1, 1910 to Nov. 1, 1911—

166,887 tons of 2,240 lbs. an increase of 20,000 tons from last year.

There was received at the Quincy wharves about six million feet of lumber.

312 vessels arrived and departed from this port, including tugs, steamers and barges.

The shipments of granite by water amounted to 63,120, tons.

The Balance of freight handled at Quincy's wharves consisted of coal, sand, clay, steel machinery and manufactured articles.

QUINCY POINT BRIDGE.

The draw was opened 1,484 times last year; 96 times more than in 1910. In my last report I recommended the repairs of the piers and the widening of the draw. This recommendation was approved by Your Honor and a petition to the Harbor and Land Commission and a bill put through the State Legislature resulted in the repairs being made. The center piers are practically finished and are a first-class job, reflecting great credit on the County and Bridge Commissioners and the two engineers in charge, Mr. H. T. Whitman and his assistant engineer, Mr. Frederick L. Tupper.

The widening of the draw and the changing of the operating power from hand to electricity will decrease the time of opening and closing about 65 percent and will be of great benefit to the travelling public.

This office recommends the lighting of the whole bridge in a first-class manner by electricity. The immense amount of travel, especially in the summer season, absolutely demands better lighting, and Quincy should insist that this is done.

WEYMOUTH FORE RIVER.

The prompt and efficient help given your Commissioner at Washington by Senators Henry Cabot Lodge, W. Murray Crane and Representative Joseph F. O'Connell resulted in the United States Government making an appropriation of $140,000.00 for Weymouth Fore River for the removal of Channel Rock and the straightening of the channel to Quincy Point Bridge.

This work is progressing slowly but the dredgers are working every day and satisfactory results will be obtained.

QUINCY RIVER.

When the Public Dock is established on Quincy River, I recommend a strong and earnest effort by the City for an appropriation for dredging the channel. This must be secured from the State of Massachusetts.

COMMISSIONER CRANE.

A Belt Line Electric Freight Railroad along our Water Front from Fore River to Neponset River.

I recommend the cooperation of the City Government with the Bay State Street Railway Company in the establishment of a belt line electric freight railroad which shall connect the Fore River Ship Yard railroad with the Wharves of Messrs. Patch and Sheppard, the Bay State St. Ry. wharf, the lands of Messrs. Thomas and Whiton, the Baker Yacht Basin, the Gavin land, the Faxon and Lelois land, the Johnson Lumber Wharf, the Quincy Electric Light and Power station and the New York New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Atlantic. It is my belief that the city should have a bill put through the Legislature giving them the right to take land for such purpose, by right of eminent domain.

PUBLIC LANDINGS.

The recommendation of this office as regards public landings has borne some fruit, as the City has purchased a location at the foot of Bay View Ave., Houghs Neck, and has appropriated $2,000.00 to build run, floats and retaining wall. I would recommend a future purchase of a location at Squantum and also at the Causeway near the Old Willow House lot below Quincy Woods. These localities are becoming congested and the future needs for a public landing will be very

Christmas Day

MONDAY, DEC. 25th, Christmas Day, the edition of the Ledger will be omitted. Tuesday The Ledger will contain an account of the observances of the day.

Detective Burns may have got the McNamaras, but could he go into school and find out who frew dat apple when teacher wasn't looking?

John D. having retired from being head of Standard Oil, can spend all the time he wishes losing golf balls in the long grass.

We feel confident that the Three Wise Men from the East would wholly disclaim responsibility. for the scenes in the dry goods stores the night before Christmas.

The Suffragettes advise women to practise throwing stones straight, but for some time at least we would choose to be the target rather than the instructor.

It was a much more serious breach of international etiquette for Uncle Sam to tell Russia she has broken the treaty than it was for Russia to do the violating.

The complaint is made that you can't get a jury to convict a good looking woman of any crime. If we had women juries, perhaps then the trouble would be that every good looking woman would be found guilty.

The infanta Eulalie has stirred up all kinds of rumpus in Spain by writing a book. Had she lived in this country, no one would have known about it except the postman that brought back the rejected manuscripts.

A pretty custom of recent years and one that is becoming more general each year is the decorating of graves of loved ones in the lemeteries. Many lots at Mount Wollaston with garlands and wreaths of evergroen and sprays of holly bear mute testimony of loving remembranle.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

About now some of our economists wake up annually, and deplore the gullibility of the farmer, who sweeps the young spruces, firs, and hemlocks off his growing wood lot for a pittance of ready money.

And yet over in Germany, where the dance around the Christmas tree reaches its acme of enthusiasm, they have the best developed forestry in the world. On their hillsides instead of slashing down the trees as you would mow the grass in a hay field, they thin out the small trees, in the interspaces between the larger ones. This makes the larger trees grow better; and the Christmas tree by product makes a regular incidental income.

About 4,000,000 Christmas trees are used anuually in the United States. If set four feet apart, they would grow on 1,500 acress. This loss is trifling compared with the havoc of forest fires.

And who can compute the good done by the little tree, as an expression of the Christmas spirit in the city home, where suggestions of God's out doors are all too rare?

It seems as if the grown ups enjoyed it even more than the children.

YOUNGSTERS WERE HAPPY

Annual Christmas Tree Celebration At Houghs Neck

PLEASED THE TOTS

The Bungalow Dance hall, at Houghs Neck, was taxed to its utmost Friday evening on the occasion of the annual Christmas tree celebration. This is an event which is looked forward to each year with great anxiety and the celebration greatly eclipsed any of those held in previous years.

Two large Christmas trees, placed at either end of the hall, presented a most attractive appearance. Decorations of all sorts were placed on the trees, and the various colors of electric lights that were entwined among the adornments had the effect of producing a scene of beauty and splendor. Nearly every child in the section was in attendance, and exactly three hundred and twenty-nine happy youngsters received presents from Santa Claus, who was very cleverly impersonated by Abel Brown, one of the most popular figures of the Houghs Neck district.

Ice cream, coffee and cake were served in abundance to those present and a large number ofthe mothers and fathers, as well as the young men and ladies of Houghs Neck, participated in the exercises.

The affair started at 8 o'clock and the presents had all been distributed at 9.30. Dancing was here indulged in and terminated a most successful Christmas observance at 11.30 o'clock.

Santa Claus was assisted in giving out the presents by Warren Williams, Hiram Darron, Mrs. Neil J. Regan, Mrs. Jason L. Harvey and Mrs. Hiram J. Darron. The last three mentioned have conducted the Christmas tree exercises for the children of Houghs Neck for the past five years, and their untiring energy and ceaseless activity for the welfare of the children, have been greatly appreciated, as is evidenced by the success the movement meets with every year. The music for the occasion was kindly furnished by Geo. Low, the well known theatrical manager.

It was expected that the Mayor and other city officials who had been invited would be present but owing to a meeting of the City Council, they were prevented from attending.

The majority of Americans were brought up in the country. The little tree brings a reminder to many of the hilarity of childish excursions to the wood lot for holiday decorations.

How the laughter of children's voices did echo in the still spaces of winter! If silence came for a moment, you could hear the neighbor's boys chopping down their tree a couple of miles away.

Landed among your prosaic furniture and bric-a-brac, the Christmas greenery insensibly suggests the everlasting hope. The power that preserves this buoyant life amid winter's sleep will surely preserve the human heart evergreen, amid the white silence of death!

Love for nature is a spark that is nearly dead in the hearts of people who live the abnormal and uneconomic life of the great cities. Perhaps in some of them the little hemlock stranger from the hillsides may stir the longing for the more wholesome life of the country. In some hearts the little visitor may be a missionary preaching the loveliness, the health, and the economic rewards of living close to Mother Earth.

THE WATER FRONT.

Commodore Frank Fessenden Crane is a hustler, a loyal Quincy man "of the first water" and one who, with a few others, are going to place our city on the map through the proper publicity of the important water front advantages which the city enjoys.

Mr. Crane, as commissioner of the Dock and Water Front, has filed his report with the Mayor. We publish it in full today and it is well worth reading. Many imnportant matters that are suggested, will, if carried out bring this section an unprecedented era of prosperity.

Of course, neither the commissioner or any one else can handle this great matter alone. What is needed is cooperation of an untiring nature.

We have sufficient confidence in Mayor-elect Stone and the incoming administration to feel that a proper backing will be given. We therefore expect great things to happen in the near future regarding our great water front.

COMMISSIONER'S REPORT

great . A public landing float should be placed at the park near the bath house at Quincy Point, and be in charge of the attendant.

PUBLIC DOCK.

That the public dock matter is conceded to be of vital interest to the granite industry is well known. Hon. Edward H. Sandberg's bill which passed the Legislature, authorizing the City to issue bonds to the amount of $100,000.00 to build such a dock, is proof that the Massachusetts State officials agree as to that fact.

This office is preparing a series of plans and locations which will be submitted to Your Honor in a few weeks and the needs of our great granite industry will be a matter of the first consideration by me.

FUTURE DEVELOPTENT ON THE WATER FRONT

I wish to call the attention of Your Honor and the City Government to a matter of vital importance to this section of Boston Harbor and to the business interest, not only of the City of Quincy but of all the surrounding towns. It is a well-known fact that the Port of Boston needs a good dry dock, and that such a dock only reaches when it is near a large ship yard with all modern appliances.

Quincy has the ship yard and the finest skilled shipwrights in the world, and this City should make every effort to have this dock located near our great Fore River Ship Building Co.'s works, which employs over three thousand men, with a large mechanical equipment and capable of building first class vessels of all types. This yard at present does very little repair work, chiefly because it has no dry dock. It is frequently obliged to send work, which it would otherwise do, to New York and is unable to bid upon work which would naturally come to Boston, and which now goes either to New York or Neport News. It is estimated that repair work amounting from $150,000 to $200,000 per annum goes to the docks south of us. The Underwriters complain of the excessive cost of repairs to vessels in Boston so that if a dry dock is to be located in Boston Harbor it should be under such conditions that the work done therein shall be performed at least cost. This can only be secured in the immediate vicinity of a works employing an adequate number of men of all trades required for ship repair work, and with adequate machinery for handling and manufacturing, forgings, engines boilers and hull work.

The facilities of our own Fore River Ship Building Company are vastly superior in these respects to anything in New Cork. I therefore believe that public Dry Dock would be most useful if located in the vicinity of these works, and where accessible for railroad communication. Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Hingham should combine in a strong and definite effort to have the location of the Public Dry Dock near the Fore River Ship Building Company works.

This is a matter of great importance and I ask the support of the Executive and the City Government, believeing that as a City, Quincy will be more justified to use every possible effort to locate the public dry dock here; the same to be built by the State of Massachusetts, which would reduce the cost of maintenance to a minimum, because of its freedom from taxation and the low rate of interest at which the State can obtain the necessary funds. The size of the dock advised would be 1,200 feet long and 110 feet wide, and would cost appriximately one million and a half dollars.

PERSONAL WORK BY THE COMMISSIONER.

Appeared before the United States Naval Board of Engineers at Washington, D. C. and recommended the appropriation of $140,000.00 for the removal of channel rock and the widening of Weymouth Fore River.

Examined the Dock System of Montreal, by order of the Mayor.

Attended Conventions at Providence, R. I., and Richmond, Va.

Attended all Hearings at the State House before the Harbor and Land Commission and the Committee on Harbors and Public Lands, that related to any matters on Quincy's Water Front.

RESULTS.

Appropriation by the United States Government for Weymouth Fore River $140,000.00.

Appropriation by the Harbor and Land Commission for a Basin at Houghs Neck. $5,000.00.

Appropriation by the City Council for a Public landing $2,000.00.

There was no cost for the above to the City of Quincy.

(Signed) Frank Fessenden Crane, Comsr. Waterfronts, Waterways and Navigation.

The Rayo Lamp

It Never Flickers
The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light.
The Rayo is the best lamp made.
It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room.
The Rayo is an economical lamp, too.
You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house.
The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and rewick. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.

BRIEFS

A MERRIE CHRISTMAS.

The October term of the Norfolk Superior Civil Court concluded its session of 12 weeks Friday afternoon with the calling of the cases remaining on the October docket, preparatory to the making of the list for the January term of eight weeks, which opens Monday morning, January 1st.

The usual Christmas entertainment of the Universalist Sunday school will be Wednesday evening, Dec. 27, in the church vestry.

A Christmas vesper service is to be held Sunday at four o'clock at First church, for which the organist William Ellis Weston has prepared a special musical program.

Following the usual lustom at Christ church there will be no session of the Sunday school tomorrow.

Feb. 2 is the date set for the annual ball of Quincy's police at Music hall.

This evening at 6.30 the Sunday school of First church will hold a Christmas service in the church with carols, readings and short talk by Rev. Adebert L. Hudson who has come from the south to take charge of the Christmas services of the church. At 7 the Sunday school Christmas party will be held in the chapel. There will be a Christmas tree also a Christmas play in which the younger scholars will take part under the direction of Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis.

The Christmas party of the Wollaston Methodist Sunday school will take place Tuesday evening when a concert program and other good things will be enjoyed.

As Sunday is Christmas Sunday the Murray class would like to see all its members present. All young men invited to attend its session at the Wollaston M.E. church at 12. The contest is still on between the Royal Daughters and the Wiggin class. The latter is ahead so each class wishes a full representation. Mrs. F. H. Morgan conducts the Epworth League. There is sure to be a good number present. You want to be one of them. There will be a praise service.

The work of installing a new pipe organ of Memorial Congregational church has begun. Plans are made to dedicate the organ Jan. 6.

The young people of the Atlantic M. E. church are to sing Christmas carols on the streets of Atlantic, Christmas eve. This is an old English custom which is very popular in Great Britain. The young people have been under the direction of Miss Margaret Holbrook.

EVERYBODY HAPPY AT QUINCY HOME

Joyous Celebration Prepared By Mrs. N. G. Nickerson

MR. & MRS. VAUGHN ASSIST

The spirit of the joyous Christmas season was shown in a most fitting manner at the Quincy Home Friday afternoon, when all the occupants were treated to a Yuletide party of a most enjoyable nature. The affair began at two and ended about four o'clock.

The Christmas tree celebration took place on the upper floor. The tree was handsomely and artistically arranged with ornaments of a varied nature and corn balls, oranges, apples and candy added to the pretty effect. The untiring work of Mrs. Nathan G. Nickerson, a member of the philanthropic committee of the Women's club was greatly in evidence, as the whole success of the affair is due to her ceaseless activity and efforts, in behalf of the members of the home, who deeply appreciated the manner in which everything was conducted.

Every woman was given a white apron and a fancy box of Lowney's chocolates and the men oranges, apples and candy. In addition to these gifts, sugared dates were given to all. One thing which elicited the greatest joy and enthusiasm was the graphophone loaned for the occasion by W. G. Shaw, whose son, Guy, directed the selections played on the instrument.

A reading by Mrs. Charles A. Spear, 89 years old and one of the oldest residents of the city, proved a source of especial pleasure. She read in a clear and forceful manner the poem entitled "Christmas Bells." Great applause greeted her.

Numerous other gifts were presented through the energy of Mrs. Nickerson, including jars of jelly and delicious cake, which were partaken of at supper.

Mrs. Nickerson was highly complimented on the success of the affair and expressions of gratitude were heard in appreciation of her ability and good will toward the residents of the Quincy home. Mrs. Nickerson was ably assisted by a committee composed of Mrs. Rufus B. Tobey, Mrs. A. L. Parker, Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Jr., Mrs. Edwin I. Beal and Mrs. Charles A. Spear. Mr. and Mrs. William Vaughn, are also to be congratulated for their part in making the affair a huge success for the home people.

ITALIAN PUSHED MAN INTO QUARRY

As a result of a quarrel Friday afternoon, between an Italian and a Finn, the latter is in the City Hospital with a broken rib and the former under arrest forassault.

Just how the row started is hard to tell, for neither of the men speak English and up to date, the police have not heard the true inside facts of the case. This much is known, that the men quarrelled and it is alleged that during the fight the Italian pushed the Finn, whose name is Chas. Kiveojo, into one of the quarries. Besides getting wet, the Finn had a rib fractured by striking on a rock as he went down and he is now at the City hospital. The Italian was arraigned in court this morning and held in $500 until Dec. 28.

Anty Drudge Suggests an Essay.

Fair Graduate—"My commencement essay is on 'The Indisputable Superiority of Mind over Matter.'"

Anty Drudge—"Why not make your essay about practical things: 'How Fels-Naptha Has Lightened Woman's Work.' After you are married, and have a house of your own, you will find that Fels-Naptha has done more to take the sting out of housework than anything ever invented."

The three great forward steps in woman's housework are:

The modern range in place of the old fireplace and kettle;

The sewing machine in place of laborious hand-sewing;

Fels-Naptha soap, which makes it easy to wash clothes in cool or lukewarm water, without boiling or hard rubbing.

Of these three, Fels-Naptha saves the woman more back-breaking labor, more time, more money, and does more to make life pleasanter than either of the others.

At the very first, you can see how it saves time and labor, but perhaps you'll wonder how Fels-Naptha saves money.

In two ways: First it saves the cost of coal or gas to heat water and boil the clothes.

Then the clothes last longer when washed with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water.

Their fibre isn't weakened by boiling nor strained by hard rubbing.

You can't realize just what a help Fels-Naptha is until you've tried it in your own washing.

Why not begin next washday?

Fels-Naptha easy way of washing in place of the tiresome, tedious back-breaking method.

Use it according to directions on the red and green wrapper, winter or summer.

ADVENTURE

This much Joan heard of the plan to murder, and then her rising wrath proved too much for her discretion. She spurred her horse into the grass, crying:

"What name you fella boy, eh? What name?"

They arose, scrambling and scattering, and to her surprise she saw there were a dozen of them. As she looked in their glowering faces and noted the heavy, two-foot hacking cane knives in their hands, she became suddenly aware of the rashness of her act. If only she had her revolver or a rifle, all would have been well. But she had carelessly ventured out unarmed.

"To much talk along you fella boy," she said severely. "Too much talk, too little work. Savvee?"

Gogoomy made no reply, but, apparently shifting weight, he slid one foot forward. The other boys, spread fanwise about her, were also sliding forward, the cruel cane knives in their hands advertising their intention.

"You cut 'm grass!" she commanded imperatively.

But Gogoomy slid his other foot forward. She measured the distance with her eye. It would be impossible to whirl her horse around and get away. She would be chopped down from behind.

She lifted her riding whip threateningly, and at the same moment drove in both spurs with her heels, rushing the startled horse straight at Gogoomy. He swerved aside to avoid the horse, at the same time swinging his cane knife in a slicing blow that would have cut her in twain. She leaned forward under the flying steel, which cut through her riding skirt, through the edge of the saddle, through the saddle cloth, and even slightly into the horse itself. Her right hand, still raised, came down, the thin whip whishing through the air. She saw the white, crooked mark of the weal clear across the sullen, handsome face, and still what was practically in the same instant she saw another member of the band, over ridden, go down before her, and she heard his snarling and grimacing chatter—for all the world like an angry monkey. Then she was free and away, heading the horse at top speed for the house.

Out of her sea training she was able to appreciate Sheldon's executiveness when she burst in on him with her news. Springing from the steamer chair in which he had been lounging while waiting for breakfast, he clapped his hands for the house boys; and, while listening to her, he was buckling on his cartridge belt and running the mechanism of his automatic pistol.

"Ornfiri," he snapped out his orders, "you fella ring big fella bell strong fella plenty. You finish 'm bell, you put 'm saddle on horse. Viaburi, you go quick house belong Seelee he stop, tell 'm plenty black fella run away—ten fella two fella black fella boy." He scribbled a note and handed it to Lalaperu. "Lalaperu, you go quick house belong white fella marster Boucher.

"That will head them back from the coast on both sides," he explained to Joan. "And old Seelee will turn his whole village loose on their track as well."

In response to the summons of the big bell Joan's Tahitians were the first to arrive, by their glistening bodies and panting chests showing that they had run all the way.

Sheldon proceeded to arm Joan's sailors and deal out ammunition and handcuffs. Adamu Adam, with loaded rifle, he placed on guard over the whaleboats. Noa Noah, aided by Matapuu, was instructed to take charge of the working gangs as fast as they came in, to keep them amused and to guard against their being stampeded into making a break for them selves. The five other Tahitians were to follow Joan and Sheldon on foot.

"I'm glad we unearthed that arsenal the other day," Sheldon remarked as they rode out of the compound gate.

A hundred yards away they encountered one of the clearing gangs coming in. It was Kwaque's gang, but Sheldon looked in vain for him.

"What name that fella Kwaque he no stop along you?" he demanded.

"Here, you fella Babatani, you talk 'm mouth belong you."

Babatani stepped forward in all the pride of one singled out from among his fellows.

"Gogoomy he finish along Kwaque altogether," was Babatani's explanation. "He take 'm head 'b'long him run like h—."

In brief words and with paucity of imagination he described the murder, and Sheldon and Joan rode on.

A mile farther on, where the runaways' trail led straight toward the bush, they encountered the body of Kwaque. The head had been hacked off and was missing, and Sheldon took it on faith that the body was Kwaque's. He had evidently put up a fight, for a bloody trail led away from the body

IN SYMPATHY WITH IDEA.

Chairman Hugh Bancroft of the new Boston Dock Board notified Mayor Fitzgerald, Friday, that he and his associates are fully in sympathy with the idea of establishing a public landing on the water front just as soon as possible.

He says the board will be glad to receive any plan the city Government may present and will do all it can to have such plan favorably acted upon by the War Department. A landing was proposed by the city some time ago at Northern-avenue Bridge, but it was not approved by the War Department.

It is proposed that the trouble with Russia be referred to the Hague court, but the judges might drop dead if they got a case to decide.

"E. E. Gray Co., has one of the prettiest Christmas windows in the city."

We think he is about right and shows good taste in his judgment.

☞It is welcome news to many to learn that Daggett's orchestra of eight pieces is to play for the dance o the Quincy Tennis club on the twenty-eighth. Several years ago Mr. Dgget played or nearly all the Quincy dances, and his orchestra was the most popular of any. Mr. Daggett gave up playing for dances, devoting himself to concert and other work; but now he is accepting some engagements for dances.

PATRIOTIC CALENDAR.

J. S. Swingle "The Extra Dark Man," is sending out an "extra large" calendar that is a beauty. The coloring is in beautiful soft pastel tones and the scene represented is the painting by Henry Mosler of "Ring, Ring for Liberty," Philadelphia 1776. On the Fourth of July when the motion to adopt Declaration of Independence passed the majority of the Assembly although not signed by all of the delegates, the old bell-ringer in the belfry awaited anxiously with trembling hope the signing. He kept saying: "They'll never do it! They'll never do it!" but his eyes expanded and his grasp grew firmer when the voice of the blue-eyed youth reached his ears in shouts of triumph as he flew up the stairs of the tower, shouting "Ring! Ring! They've signed! Ring! Ring for Liberty!"

MONUMENT FOR CANTON.

The contract for cutting and erecting the Soldiers' Monument for Canton has been awarded to the firm of J. N. White & Sons of West Quincy whose design was accepted from a number offered.

The monument will be of blue Westerly granite, and will be ready for dedication by Memorial day. The ball which is to go on top of the monument will be cut of blue Quincy granite, and the contrast between these two granites will be effective. The base will be five feet six inches square and the total height 15 feet.

On one side of the die will be carved the regulation Grand Army button and on the front crossed flags and the arms carried by the various branches of the service. The main shaft of the monument is round and is of a simple but very graceful design.

The dance of the Quincy Tennis is always is always one of the jolliest of the Quincy dances, and coming in the holiday season, an especially large number of the college crowd is sure to be present.

Quincy friends of Mrs. Roy Steward, nee Clara Merrill will be sorry to learn of her illness of appendicitis at a hospital in Washington, D. C., her home being in that city since her marriage early in the fall.

Charles T. Bailey of Hancock street has gone to Montreal, Canada, to be with his parents at Christmas.

* * *

Miss Mildred V. Tobin of Center street has returned for Christmas from Wellesley, where she is engaged in teaching.

* * *

One of the social affairs of the holiday season looked forward to by many of our people is the dance at Alpha hall on Thursday evening of the Quincy Catholic club. Besides an able committee of club members several well known men will assist as follows: John W. Walsh as floor director and Joseph A. Dasha, Charles C. Hearn, Edward J. Murphy, Daniel J. Deasy, Thomas J. Dunphy, Lawrehoe W. Lyons, Edward D. Barrett, William L. Russell, John J. Deasy, John A. McGowan, Robert E. Foy, John J. Reardon, Edward J. Dunn Leo J. McMaster, Marcus Mahon, William A. Carey, Harry McGrath Michael Walsh, Dr. James H. Maloney, Dr. C. J. Lynch, Dr. D. B. Reardon, Dr. Joseph Harkins, John Heaney, Robert McDonnell and Peter M. Sullivan as ushers.

INDOOR CRICKET NEgT.

Physical director Louis F. LaRose of the local Y. M. C. A., has invented a new game which he calls "indoor cricket," and has drawn a set of rules to govern the game. The first demonstration will be given at the Cambridge Y. M. C. A., at 2 P. M., Dec. 28, before the Physical Directors' Society of Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Mr. La Rose contends that the new game is superior to indoor baseball in that it may be played on a small floor area, that no foul balls count, thereby making the game livelier, and because the pitcher, or bowler, must deliver the ball underhand so as to strike the floor before it reaches the batter, causing fewer fly balls and more grounders, keeping the fielders constantly on the alert.

The demonstration will be by two picked teams of High School boys.

CITY COUNCIL

It was denied by the representatives of the company that it was running with as few men as possibe.

The need of 10 minute service to Quincy Point on Saturday nights was taken under consideration and nothing done.

The proposition of giving 15 minute service to Quincy Point was adopted, being the only proposition that was adopted.

In regard to the Street Railway paying better attention to the improvements propose and suggested were taken under consideration by the company, and has been since. We find that little if any attempt has been made to change unsatisfactory conditions pointed out by the committee and the committee offers the following resolutions:

RESOLVED:

That the City Council of Quincy do hereby condemn the present service as provided by the Bay State Street Railway as being inadequate and an imposition upon the citizens of Quincy and do also condemn the business policy of the Bay State Street Railway Co. as being totally regardless of the needs and wants of the city and its citizens.

The special committee, appointed under the ordinances to examine the Woodward Fund and Property, reported stating it that had verified the statement of the treasurer of the fund and found the amounts to agree with the amount in the Granite bank. The securities had been examined and found to be of the market value, as appeared on that day in excess of the book value. They had examined all of the personal notes and mortgages and found them proper. They had also checked the Treasurer's figures of the real estate, held by the managers and found that in the anual report, it had been the custom of the managers to state only the amount of invested funds held by them. The committee suggested in the future reports that the managers make an account of all the property in their hands.

The report was accepted and the recommendation adopted.

On motions, the following matters were referred to the next City Council.

Communication from Mayor relative to Teel pond; sidewalk on North Payne street, granting street railway a relocation of tracks on Squantum street; $5,000 for finishing hall in Quincy school; to purchase land for school in Ward Three; appropriating $1,500 to grade the Cranch school lot; and to look into sites for playgrounds in Ward One.

PRESENTATION.

Councilman Nowland, rising to a question of personal privilege, said that he desired to go a little into the history of the past three years. He spoke of several matters which had come up during that time such as water meters, half holiday and the like and it seemed as though he had always been in the minority. Last year he had been a candidate for President of the council and while he thought that he had votes enough, he had found when counted up, that he was again in the minority. Tonight, however, he was pleased to say that for once, at least, he was in the majority for on behalf of the whole council he took pleasure in presenting to President Bryant a gavel, in appreciation of the able, just and disinterested manner in which he had presided over the present council. As the speaker handed over the gavel, the council arose and stood while President Bryant replied.

President Bryant, in accepting the gift, said that the presentation of a gavel to him was something that he appreciated very much. This was the thirteenth year that he had been a member of the council, several of which he had been the president. As ha been stated, the position was one hard to fill. You have got to keep your head clear and be familiar with parlimentary law. Particularly so here, when you face 22 men who are looking for you all the time. It was not right to be arbitrary, but the council had made rules and it was the duty of the president to see that they were lived up to. He had endeavored to do this and to expedite the business of the council so as to get home early. He wanted to say in closing, that the presentation of the gavel was one of the most gratifying things he had ever had happen, and he wanted to thank the members from the bottom of his heart.

The gavel is an ivory one with black ebony handle. Across the face of the front of the gavel is a gold plate upon which is the following inscription.

"Presented to Charles M. Bryant, by the members of the Quincy City Council, 1911."

ASSESSORS.

The order providing that the Assessors should meet at certain times and that the chairman should be on duty during each business hour was passed to be ordained.

FURNITURE MOVERS.

The order establishing an ordinance relative to building movers, came up for a second reading. The rules were suspended and the question was on passage. There was considerable debate as to the advisability of passing the ordinance, but it was finally passed by a vote of 11 yes and 8 no.

ASSESSORS' SALARY.

The order increasing the salary of the Assessors was taken from the table. This order provided that the salary of the chairman of the board should be increased from $800 to $1,200 and of the assistant assessors from $600 to $800.

Councilman Nowland moved to amend by making the salary of the chairman $1,500, and of the asssistant assessors $700.

Councilman Sodergren moved reference to the Finance Committee. Motion lost.

The amendment of Councilman Nowland was adopted and again that gentleman was in the majority.

The order was then pased to be ordained by a vote of 12 yes and 8 no, those voting no were Councilman Bailey, Branch, Craig, Duffy, Gardner, Parlee, Smith Sodergren.

The report of the special committee on revision of the charter was taken from the table and as noted above was rejected.

BOUQUETS.

The usual votes of thanks were extended to the Clerk of the Council, the City Messenger and City Auditor.

Adjourned at 8.50.

OWNED BY MRS. KITSON

Frightened by the horn of a passing automobile, a horse, attached to an open buggy, and belonging to Mrs. Henry H. Kitson, of Park Lane, broke loose from the post in front of Dr. Ellsworth's, early Monday evening and started to run. Instead of making its course homeward, the frightened animal dashed through Quincy square at a high rate of speed and running madly along Hancock street, turned into Granite street but on reaching the incline at the bridge slackened its pace, so that little difficulty was experienced by a number of young men, in bringing him to a standstill.

Outside of a broken bridle, there was no damage to either horse or carriage.

The horse is highly valued by its owner and although a spirited animal, it was the first time it ever ran away in all the years that Mrs. Kitson has owned it.

A CHRISTMAS DINNER.

C. F. Carlson, the genial restaurant proprietor on Depot street, gave an elaborate dinner to his employees, their wives and children Sunday, which was greatly enjoyed and appreciated. Mr. Carlson was truly imbued with the spirit of Christmas and such generous deeds cement more strongly the good feeling between employer and employee.

XMAS WITH THE FIREMEN.

Christmas days are those in which the firemen have to be ready, for with the usual inflammable Christmas decorations, fires are constantly threatened and if not taken quickly in hand, serious resuilts are likely to follow. The hours of the firemen were so arranged, however, that they were all able to eat a Christmas dinner at home. At the central station there was also a lunch given during the evening and a number of goodies were served. Gifts were exchanged among the permanent men.

FORE RIVER LODGE ELECTS OFFICERS

The election of officers for the ensuing six months, took place last night at a well attended meeting of the lodge held in the Protection hall. The election resulted as follows.

Noble Grand—George S. Wilson.
Vice Grand—Hugh McLaughlin.
Grand Master—William McLay.
Permanent Secretary—Geo. Pock.
Elective Secretary—David Moffat.
Treasurer—William Phillips.
Chaplain—John Barclay.
Guard—John Davidson.
Warden—James Petrie.

Brother George S. Wilson was appointed as delegate to the District meeting to be held in Boston in May 1912.

The installation of the newly elected officers, will take place at the next regular meeting to be held Friday evening, January 12th, 1912. Short speeches were made by several brothers from visiting lodges and a general good time was in order. Several new members will also be initiated at the next meeting by the new initiation staff.

BLAZE CHRISTMAS NIGHT.

The alarm from box 42 a little after 9 o'clock, Christmas night, called the department to a fire in a house on Clark avenue owned by N. Crane and occupied by a Finn family. The fire was in the kitchen and was said to have started from an overheated stove. The loss was about $50. The Chief reported some men in the house when the department arrived as being the worse for liquor, which may have accounted for the stove getting too hot.

SHUT-INS REMEMBERED.

Mrs. Frank B. Tracey of Wollaston, president of the Shut-In society, had a busy day Saturday visiting a number of public institutions in Boston, giving entertainments for the inmates and directing Santa Claus and his retinue where to find the invalids confined to their homes. Santa was instructed to present each person, 500 in all, with the remembrances sent by society. Members of society filled a thousand candy bags made by members which were presented with little souvenirs of the season.

FORE RIVER PLAYS GOOD GAME.

The contest between the Fore River and the Providence soccer teams in the New England Football Association league at Gorham field, Providence, R. I. yesterday resulted in a score of 0 to 0. The grounds were in perfect condition and the weather was of the best for fast playing. The Fore River team, which is making a big plunge for the championship, was especially good on kicking.

Holmes—You've got a Morris chair at your house, I suppose.

Henpeck—Yes.

OPEN HOUSE AT GRANITE CITY CLUB

Popular Organization Made Merry Saturday Night

THE MAYORS PRESENT

The well-known hospitality for which the Granite City club is noted was again exemplified Saturday evening, when the club, as usual, kept open house and entertained a number of visitors in addition to many of its own members. Good cheer reigned supreme from 8 to 12 o'clock and everybody was made welcome. There was no set program for the evening, the members and guests being left to enjoy themselves with pool, billiards, or cards, as each individual taste dictated.

Brooks' orchestra was present during the entire evening and gave a continuous program. In the dining room there were sandwiches, rolls, fruit, cider and coffee was also on tap during the entire evening.

Mayor Shea and Mayor-elect Stone, both of whom are members of the club, were present during the evening to help the club extend its hospitality, as was also Representative Piper, Councilmen-elect Abele and Thompson who are also members. Representative Leslie was among the guests present.

REGULAR CONCLAVE OF TEMPLARS

The regular conclave of Quincy commandery Knights Templars, falling on Christmas day, the conclave was held in the morning at 10.30. The conclave was a short one. At 11.30, the Sir Knights gathered about the festive board in one of the side rooms, where a Christmas observance was held. This included toasts to the Grand Commander and Grand Master, the reading of Christmas sentiments from other commanderies and brief remarks by some of the Sir Knights.

The table about which the Sir Knights assembled, looked unusually attractive and was adorned with three handsome bouquets of flowers. After the service, these bouquets were taken to the homes of three Sir Knights who were on the sick list.

CHRISTMAS MAIL DELIVERED.

Superintendent Hammond of the Quincy post office, with a large force of carriers saw to it that all Christmas mail was delivered. Owing to the system adopted, it was not found necessary to send the carriers out Sunday, but Monday morning there was a house to house delivery and the corps of carriers as they left the post office resembled Santa Claus, with their heavy loads of gifts.

WALTER QUIST BURIED.

The funeral of Walter Quist, the 12 year old boy who lost his life by drowning in the old Wilson quarry, Friday, was held Sunday afternoon from his late home on Hillside street. The services were conducted by Rev. George W. Palmgren of the Swedish Congregational church and were attended by the young men's class at the Willard school. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

—It is possible to go through the tables of trade and traffic and find lines and markets that show a decline but on the whole 1911 makes no bad record. It has marked a halt rather than an actual retrogression. If certain political obstructions could be removed and certain legal uncetainties rleared up 1912 would be a year of unusual activity.—New York Sun.

POLICE ARE LOOKING FOR SNEAK THIEF

Man Posing As Draughtsman Cleaned Out Several Places

WAS WELL DRESSED

Several complaints have been received by the police regarding a sneak thief who has been going about the city seeking a boarding place with robbery in view. Two such cases have been reported to the police up to date. One of these was on School street, where a gold watch was secured which was later recovered in a Boston pawn shop.

The second case was in the boarding house of Mr. McCormick, 65 Spear street. Here the fellow said that he was in search of a room. He was well dressed and described himself as a Norwegian and that he had secured employment as a draughtsman at the Fore River.

He was shown through the house and engaged a room, paying a weeks board in advance. His trunk was to arrive the following day, but up to the present time, has failed to do so. Later in the same day he was joined by a man said to be his brother. They remained but a short time in the house when they disappeared. Investigation showed that they had rifled trunks belonging to other boarders from which they secured $40 in money, two overcoats and some jewelry. The theft was reported to the police, the description of the man being similar to that of the thief who operated on School street.

Thomas A. Wetherall of Manchester, N. H., is spending a few days with friends on Linden place.

Timothy Donovan of Union street, who is engaged in business in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., spent Christmas wtih his parents.

Miss Margaret M. McIntyre of Newmarket, N. H., is spending the Christmas holidays with relaitves on Washington street.

It was a green Christmas, but an ideal day. The weather was mild and it seemed more like spring than winter.

The new 125 foot draw in the Fore River bridge, was swung into place Saturday and worked for the first time. It worked to perfection. The man bridge will be opened to foot passengers some time this week, and it will not be many days before the streets cars will be able to use it.

The Philanthropic committee of the Quincy Catholic club were also not idle and through their generosity, many other poor families were looked after. They provided dinners for many families and also saw to it that those famlies where there were children, were well supplied with useful gifts.

CHRISTMAS EVERYWHERE ENJOYABLE

Various Institutions Enter Into Spirit of Great Holiday

CHOIR SINGS

Christmas was observed at the Quincy institutions as usual. At the Quincy home, the unfortunates were given a Christmas dinner of turkey and vegetables. The Overseer also saw to it that the inmates were remembered with gifts. These gifts, however, were of a useful nature. Many were visited by friends during the day.

At the Sailors' Snug Harbor, the old salts gathered in the lounging room and told stories of other days. Only the necessary work was performed and at noon the superintendent served them with a Christmas dinner. There was some interchange of gifts among the sailors.

At the National Sailors' Home, the custom was observed as usual. Only the necessary work was done and the day was given up to enjoyment. At noon, there was a Christmas dinner, when all that goes with it was served.

At the City Hospital, the unfortunates, whom sickness kept from celebrating the day in their own homes, were made as far as possible to forget their ills. During the morning, the vested choir from Christ church, visited the hospital and sang Christmas anthems, and during the day the patients received visitors, Those whose condition would permit, were given a taste of the good things to eat. Friends also brought flowers and gifts.

SOCIALIST LYCEUM COURSE.

The Socialist Local of this City in co-operation with the State and National organizations of the Socialist Party and with a large number of Socialist publishers, has arranged that every person purchasing one dollar's worth of subscriptions to Socialist periodicals or books, shall receive free as a premium, a season ticket for the course of five lectures. A list of papers and books is printed on each ticket.

The first one of these lectures by Charles Edward Russell will be held in Faxon Hall, Thursday, December 28th, 1911; subject, "How we are gouged." The second one by Walter J. Millard in Alpha Hall, Thursday, January 11, 1912; "Why Things Happen to Happen." The third one in Alpha Hall by Rev. Benjamin F. Wilson, Thursday, January 18, 1912; subject, "The Trust Busters."

The fifth and final lecture in Alpha Hall by Lena Morrow Lewis, Thursday, February 1, 1912; subject, "Socialists at Work."

The first of these lectures to come to Quincy, Cahrles Edward Russell, is known the country over as a great writer on progressive subjects. The New York Press recently commented on him as follows: "If he lives the allotted span of life Mr. Charles Edward Russell is likely to find himself regarded in this country as a political Messiah. Certainly there has been no other contribution to the literature of economics within the century that has given such an impetus to the popular movement for public control of natural monopolies as his series on "The Greatest Trust in the World" and "Soldiers of the Common Good." This searcher, student and writer has made the subject of political economy intelligible to the great public."

Socialism is growing. No matter whether you like it or not, you have it to meet. To meet it intelligently, you must understand it. Read the literature and attend this Lecture Course—"Not to believe or disbelieve, but to weigh and consider."

—The Somerville teachers have reason to be greatly encouraged in their campaign for increased salary says the Somerville Journal. A very hearty and generous approval of the justice of their request is shown on all sides.

ENGAGEMENT OUTCOME OF ROMANCE

A Sunday paper reports the engagement of Miss Lisabelle Linnell of 86 Davis street, Norfolk Downs to Mr. Orville F. Bryant of Ashland, N. H., a chemist in the employ of the New Haven railroad. The engagement was announced Saturday evening at an engagement party tendered the young people by Miss Linnell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Linnell.

The story in the Boston paper states that the engagement is the outcome of a romance that had its inception in a coasting accident in the hills of New Hampshire a year ago. At that time, both were teachers in the high school at Berlin, N. H., and while coasting, the double runner which was being steered by a clergyman was upset and both the young people sustained injuries. They were confined indoors for several weeks as the result of the accident.

Miss Linnell is at present a member of the faculty of the Woodward Institute for girls, in the cooking department. She is a graduate of Simmons College of the class of 1909.

TEACHERS SURPRISE MR. CLARK

Alexander Clark, superintendent of the First Presbyterian Sunday school, was greatly surprised Monday evening by the officers and teachers of the school.

Following the Christmas tree entertainment, the teachers gathered in the ladies' parlor and the guest of honor was brought in and seated at the head of the circle.

Rev. Mr. Matheson, then presented him with a beautiful diamond stickpin as a token of esteem of those present. Mr. Clark was greatly moved by the surprise but thanked each and all for the beautiful gift and for the help they have been to him.

In response to the call for speeches, Mr. Alfred Bishop, Mr. William Cummings and Mr. McLeod favored those present.

Mrs. Lamont gave a recitation, "The Christmas Dinner" and George Wilson, one entitled, "The Newsboy." After a few games, refreshments were served and forming a circle all sang, "Blest be the tie that binds," closing a most delightful evening.

FRIENDS MAKE MERRY WITH THOS. A. CRAIG

Genial Railroader Celebrates Birthday Anniversary

WITH SUMPTUOUS FEAST

A pleasing incident of his Christmas celebration was the observance of his 52d birthday by Thomas A. Craig, of 11 Smith street, one of the most widely known conductors of the Bay State Street Railway Company.

Mr. Craig entertained a number of friends at dinner after which the afternoon was spent in a most enjoyable manner. He was the recipient of many good wishes and congratulations, which his ready wit enabled him to receive most happily.

MANY MADE HAPPY BY B. P. O. E.

One of principles of the Elks is Charity, and in carrying out this, Quincy lodge, as has been its custom since its institution, saw to it that many poor families in its jurisdiction were not forgotten on Christmas day. Members of the lodge were busy all day Sunday, getting baskets of good things ready for delivery Christmas morning and over 100 were prepared. These baskets contained besides a turkey, other things that go to make up a Christmas dinner. In addition to this those baskets that went to families where there were children contained besides the dinner toys and other presents for the children.

MAY RENEW WAR IN CHINA

Attitude of Leaders In the Face of Intervention by the Powers

Pekin, Dec. 26.—In the face of rumors that the foreign powers will intervene if the rebel leaders and Tang Shao Yi, envoy of Yuan Shi Kai, the premier, who represents the throne at the Shanghai conference, fail to agree, it is reported here that both rebels and imperialists are preparing for the continuance of hostilities.

That the rebels will absolutely refuse anything save the establishment of a republic is the general belief here. They have rejected the plan for a limited monarchy before and it is not believed that they will be talked into it now.

Both Tang Shao Yi and Wu Ting Fang have issued dignified appeals to the representatives of other nations to aid them in stopping intervention and to continue their neutrality.

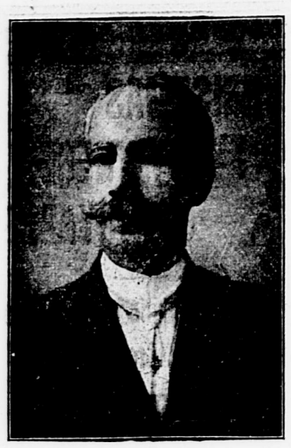
MONEY HIDDEN IN SHOTGUN

Fifty Dollars Unwittingly Used to Pepper Dog's Hide

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 26.—A dog at Swoyerville was wounded by $50 in bills and some small shot being fired into his hide. Despite the fact that he is worth $50 more or less than before he was shot, he cannot be found.

The money belonged to John Vincent, who, afraid to trust it in his pockets or his trunk at his boarding house, hid it in the barrel of his old shotgun. While Vincent was out a big dog made so much disturbance in the yard that one of the boarders received to shoot it. He slipped a shell in Vincent's old shotgun and fired at the dog.

WHO'S WHO IN QUINCY--WHY!



No man in Quincy, is more widely known in secret society circles than is Arthur W. Stetson, and the question is often asked, how does he find evenings enough to attend to them? But that is his affair.

Arthur W. Stetson is a son of the late David B. Stetson, a descendant in the eight generation of Robert Stetson. His father was a self-made man, and at the time of his death, was the oldest active business man in Quincy. Mr. Stetson, Sr., many years ago, established himself in the boot and shoe business in the store now conducted by his daughter. It was in this same building that the subject of this sketch was born in 1856, and where he has since resided. During his younger days, he was employed in his father's store for a time, but gradually worked himself into a job printer, which business he now carries on.

He has, for many years, taken an active interest in local political affairs, but has never held public office, although he has served on the Republican City Committee. He is prominently identified with the Board of Trade and has been its secretary for ten years. He also holds office in several of the orders with which he is affiliated, one of which is Financial Secretary of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., which position he has held for 21 years. He is also Lt. Col. on the staff of Gen. Raney Commander in Chief of the Patriarchs Militant, the uniform branch of the Odd Fellows. He is also the secretary of the July 4 celebration committee.

Among the many orders and societies with which he is affiliated are the following:

Rural lodge, A. F. & A. M., Quincy, Mass.; P. H. P., St. Stephen's R. A. Chapter, Quincy, Mass.; Boston Council R. & S. Masters, Boston, Mass.; Past Com. South Shore Commandery, K. Y. M. C. A. NOTES AND JOTTINGS

A Regular Weekly Feature of the Quincy Daily Ledger

No man or woman born in this country can in any degree appreciate the feelings, the attitude, and all that these express, of one born on the other side of the "big pond." This makes it very difficult to undertake the work for the "new Americans,' That it must be undertaken all must admit. That it pays has been proven over and over again. In many ways the Y. M. C. A. is the best equipped organization to undertake and to carry on such work.

It is not any one organization but really a combination and is for this, the best adapted to do the work. Many a young man would be far better off had he stayed in his home and there worked out his problem. But he doesn't. He goes to the large city to look for work; doesn't find it and some one has to help him. Few and they who land in a city with a job secured. So, many a young man from Italy; from Russia; from Poland would be far better off in some ways at least if he had stayed in his home land. But he doesn't and thereby arises the problem.

As soon as this young man lands at a point of embarkation he is met by a secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He gives the young man printed matter about America; also a card of introduction to the secretary of the Association in the city to which he is going. The secretary on the other side then advices by mail the secretary to whom he gave the young man the card that such a young man is coming to this city. In many instances the secretary in America and the young man get together and the secretary is enabled many times to be of great assistance to the stranger.

But there is another step in the process. At Ellis Island there are stationed three or four secretaries who meet these young men and start them on their way.

One step more has now been undertaken, that of sending a secretary across on the steamer with the men with whom he mingles, helping in anyway possible those who are soon to become "New Americans." Thus in a vital way the Y. M. C. A. has been related to these men. The point of contact with them has already begun.

Did you ever stop to think of the real condition of this young man when he land on these shores? Many times he has come from a small country village. He is a farm boy. This of course means he is not accustomed to a crowd. But in his way he is a clean young man. When he has landed however, oftentimes the first contact with us is with not the clean young man but one who is living by his wits.

When the young man really reaches his destination he has a hard task before him. His friends, in some cases that have come to light, having been here long enough to learn the "ropes" simply use him. Unfortunately there are foremen in some of the manufacturing plants who are not adverse to making a dollar. The man who knows the "law" approaches the foreman for a job for the newcomer. With the approach goes say a five dollar bill. The new comer was touched for ten but five sticks while the other five goes on to the foreman. The foreman puts the young man to work. He, of course, cannot speak English, which is well known before he is given the job. When he has worked five or six weeks he is discharged because he cannot understand what is told him. Then the same process is worked again upon a new man. Then the first young man in time learns the scheme and he soon becomes very suspicious of everyone. It simply demonstrates how necessary it is for someone to get into touch with these "newcomers" just as soon as they arrive to teach them English as well as help them get work and started right.

Chicago is planning to supply this point of contact by having a secretary meet trains from the East.

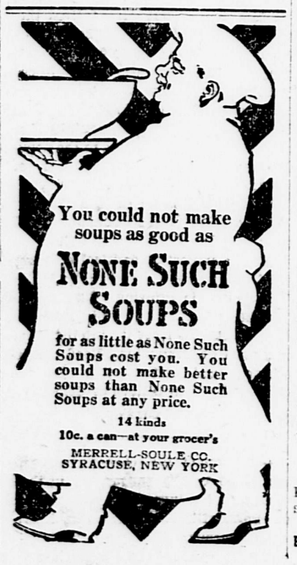
TESTIMONY.

In the Lorain pipe and tube mill a foreign-born blacksmith works. He came to Lorain from fatherland, knowing no English. He entered a class. His testimony is: I can now understand the boss and read the blue prints. I would not take $200.00 for the English I learned in the Association.

In one industrial center a group of mills agreed to provide a $10,000.00 equipment. They raised it to $20,000.00. After a year's actual work, the travelling secretary met the mill operators and asked the question: Has the Association made good? The unanimous answer was: It has done more than you promised, which was a good deal."

FUNERAL OF MRS. MITTEN.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Mitten, widow of Thomas Mitten who died in Amherst, last Wednesday, was brought to Quincy Saturday for burial in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cedetery. Prayers were said at the grave by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong of Christ church. Mrs. Miten was a former resident of Quincy moving to Amherst after the death of her husband.



GET FINANCIAL AID IN UNITED STATES

Germans Frozen Out by France, England and Switzerland

Paris, Dec. 26.—According to bankers here, the reason that the German financiers have gone to America for their loans is a result of the withdrawal of the French capital, after the money panic in Germany last July and August.

It is estimated that the Berlin and bankers of other cities have borrowed $60,000,000 from American financiers at between 6 and 7 percent.

Prior to their turning to the banks of the United States for funds it is declared that the bankers of Germany appealed to both England and Switzerland, but the French pressure brought to bear there made it impossible for them to get the loans they wished.

During the financial panic, some months ago, the French bankers discounted $300,000,000 worth of German paper at 4:75 percent.

PARDON REFUSED MORSE

President Concludes That Action Is Not Necessary at Present

Washington, Dec. 26.—For the third time President Taft has denied a pardon to Charles W. Morse, the New York banker now serving a long-term sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta.

The president received from Atlanta the report of army and civilian surgeons upon Morse's condition. He immediately summoned Surgeon General Stokes of the army, Surgeon General Torney of the navy and Captain Delaney, the White House physician, to the executive offices.

At this conference the report from Atlanta was carefully considered and the conclusion reached that Morse's illness would not justify a pardon at this time.

Safe Cracking Job In New York Evidently Performed by Experts

New York, Dec. 26.—Graduates of the newer schools in burglary operated on a safe in a 5- and 10-cent store in Harlem and got away with nearly $4000 in cash. The men entered by way of the skylight, drew electricity from a live wire to operate their drill and with nitroglycerine easily blew off the safe door.

A roll of carpet was found which had been used to deaden the noise of the explosion and beside the carpets were found kid gloves which the burglars had evidently used to avoid detection from finger prints, which have recently led to the arrest and indictment of several alleged burglars.

HOME TRADE WILL HELP QUINCY

Why the Dinner For Christmas Was Not Found

It was Christmas eve. Everybody had gone to sleep, stockings had been hung up, and the house was quite still when all at once strange sounds were heard from the pantry.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" some one was sobbing. "Oh, dear! Oh, dear! What shall I do?"

"It's the mince pie," growled the cranberries. "He's got a nightmare again."

"Keep quiet," growled the pumpkin angrily. "You have wakened the turkey."

And, sure enough, they heard the gobble-gobble of the turkey coming from the yard.

"Listen, my vegetables," said the turkey. "It was only yesterday the children came to my coop and began poking me with sticks. 'I am going to have his leg,' said one. 'And I his wing,' said another. 'And I his breast,' said a third. Now let us free the pig and all run away."

"I should like to know where we are going," said a sour pickle.

"Why, to Turkey, of course," said a sweet potato.

"Then we must lose no time," the turkey said. "Spring from your shelves and follow me."

The pumpkin, sweet potatoes, lettuce, pickles, cabbage and cranberries jumped down from their shelves. Only the mince pie was left behind, and he could not move, for he had been already chopped up and cooked.

Just then the pig began to grunt outside. The turkey had let him out.

THE PIG AND THE PIE.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" the mince pie began again. "I shall be left behind. What shall I do?"

His cries attracted the attention of the pig, who came in the pantry and looked at him.

"Shall I take you with me?" he asked politely.

"Oh, please do!" cried the mince pie.

Thereupon the pig swallowed him and trotted off to lead the procession which was waiting in the yard.

"Let us go to the old owl in the wood," said the turkey. "He is very wise and will tell us which is the way to go."

"We want to go to Turkey," simpered the cranberries.

No sooner had the cranberries said this than, gobble-gobble, the turkey swallowed them. Meanwhile the pig had eaten the sweet potatoes and the young lettuce. When they reached the wood where the owl lived only the pumpkin and the cabbage head were left, except the pickles, who were so sour that nobody would eat them.

"Hoot, hoot!" called the owl from a tree.

"Oh, Mr. Owl," said the turkey, "is that yourself?"

"No; it is myself," said the owl.

During this talk the pig had swallowed the pumpkin. As for the cabbage head, it had burst with rage at the rudeness of the owl.

All at once steps were heard, and the pig and turkey started back in fear as they saw something black coming through the darkness. It was a colored man.

"Um-um!" muttered the colored man. "Does I smell chicken?"

The turkey, with a wild gobble, started to run, but the colored man grabbed him and put him in a bag. He started after the pig. The pig tried to escape, but he had eaten so much that he could not run, and, besides, the mince pie had given him indigestion. He felt himself seized by the tail, and the blood rushed to his head. All hope was at an end when suddenly "Hoot, hoot!" called the owl.

"I DIDN'T DO NOTHIN'," CRIED THE NEGRO.

"Oh, golly!" cried the negro. "I didn't no nothin'." Next moment he was flying for his life, leaving the bag in which were the pig and the turkey.

Crawling out of the bag, they started off and ran all night, hardly stopping to take breath, until when morning dawned they found themselves in a wild, lonely forest. There the turkey became king of wild turkeys, and he now roams the woods, followed everywhere by his faithful pig.

Q.—We read in Genesis xii, 3, "And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Now my question is, how and when will this Scripture be fulfilled? (V. C. R.)

Answer.—Abraham, because of his faith and obedience was called the "friends of God; and as a friend, the Lord specially blessed him and made a wonderful promise or covenant with him, confirming it by a solemn oath, and because He could swear by no greater, He swore by Himself, that the promise should be fulfilled. (Hebrews vi, 13-18.) The world has had no knowledge of this promise, and Christian people in general have lost sight of it. It has never been fulfilled in the past, and is not fulfilled yet, and cannot be until the promised "Seed" has been developed; for the promise was—"In thee and thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." As the Apostle explains, in Galatians iii, 16, 23, 29, the promised "Seed" is Christ; and not the Lord Jesus Christ alone, but the entire Christ (the Annointed) of which Jesus is the Head, and the Church, which is His Body. When the last member of the Church, or Body of Christ, has become associated with the Lord in the heavens, the "Seed" will be complete. The Heavenly Father's blessings will flow from this "Seed" through Abraham, and his associates, all the faithful ones who lived and died before Christ who at the second coming of Christ will be made "Princes in all the earth," (Psalm xiv, 16) to all the families of the earth. In this way the Divine promise, the great, oath-bound covenant will be fulfilled.

CHRISTMAS IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Anncuncements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST CHURCH.

The Christmas service of the Sunday school of the First Church was held Saturday evening. The members of the school and friends gathered in the church at 6 o'clock, where they sang Christmas carols and listened to an address on Christmas by Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson. Following this the school repaired to the chapel which had been gaily decorated with wreaths and evergreen.

Here the Christmas festival was held. There was a two act play by the children of the school, under the direction of Mrs. Davis. At the conclusion of the play, Santa Claus entered the chapel and for the next half hour was kept busy distributing presents from a large tree that occupied a prominent place in one corner of the chapel. Every member of the Sunday school received a present and there were some special gifts for Superintendent Johnson of the Sunday school and for the sexton. Rev. Mr. Hudson was also remembered and he was also given a bouquet of violets for Mrs. Hudson.

Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, the pastor of the church, who is confined to his home by illness was not forgotten, for after the exercises, a large basket containing fruit and remembrances was sent to his home by the school.

Sunday, there was a large attendance at the morning service, Rev. Mr. Hudson preaching an eloquent sermon on Christmas and its meaning. In the afternoon there was a vesper service at which an unusually fine musical service was given by the quartet choir under the direction of Mr. Weston.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

The auditorium of the church was simply and beautifully decorated with Christmas greens, and the pulpit surrounded by tall palms with touches of red in the form of potted azaleas. Miss Marion Moorhouse, rendered beautifully two selections on the cello, in addition to the vocal music furnished by the choir.

Rev. Carl G. Horst conducted an impressive service consisting of scripture reading, the usual responsive services and a brief sermon in accord with the spirit of the season.

Reverent tribute was paid to the Master, whose steps we seek to follow, and to the life, lived so long ago, the fruits of which are made manifest in the lives of loyal disciples today.

Following the morning service, the Sunday school held its session in the vestry which consisted in singing of carols and devotional services appropriate to the day. Miss Evelyn Cummings told a story of the Christ Child by Andrea Hofar. Many parents and friends of the pupils remained to enjoy the service.

Our church now has an official seal which will be affixed hereafter to all legal documents. Those who have in their possession membership or christening or marriage certificates may have the seal of the church stamped on them at any time upon application to the minister.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held on the evening of the fourth Monday in January.

A large chorus of ladies and gentlemen under the direction of E. F. DeNormandie, choirmaster, are rehearsing the ninety-first psalm by L. W. Ballard, to be given at the Y. P. R. U. meeting Sunday evening, January 7.

The next in the series of stereopticon lectures, will be given Jan. 7 by William Ware Locke of Boston. Subject: "The Old Americans."

The Rev. Edward Cummings, who succeeded the late Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., as pastor of the South Congregational church, Boston, is to be the speaker at the next meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club, Tuesday, January 9.

All the aged members in our parish were remembered by the Flower committee with a Christmas token of Good Cheer.

Among the daily services in the Back Bay district, Boston, we call special attention to the Organ recitals, Wednesdays, at 4.30 in the Arlington Street church; Vespers Thursdays at 4.30 in the First church (corner Berkely and Marlborough); and the high noon services Wednesdays in King's Chapel.

Rev. William S. Key, the first minister of our church, will give an account of his work in the preaching circuit established by the National Alliance in Eastern North Carolina and of the schools at Swansboro and Shelter Neck, in King's Chapel on Wednesday, January 3, at 3 P. M. At the close of Mr. Key's address, the meeting will adjourn to Channing hall, where the members of the King's Chapel club will serve tea.

All who desire to make memorial gifts to our church are invited to communicate with the minister.

The Chorus choir under the leadership of E. F. DeNormandie will hold its next rehearsal in the vestry, Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock, Dec. 29.

The text of the sermon next Sunday by Rev. Carl G. Horst will be "This do in remembrance of me." The Communion service will follow the regular morning service of worship.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Wollaston Unitarian Sunday school took place Saturday evening and opened with carol singing by all in the church.

A five act play entitled "A Bachelor's Christmas" followed in the vestry which was well received.

The play opens with the finding of a well filled wallet by Harry, the eldest son of a poor widow. This belongs to a wealthly hot-tempered bachelor and through Harry's honesty is returned to him.

In the course of events the bachelor meets the widow who recognizes in him her long lost brother. She keeps silent however and lets him go away

Thinking it over he recognizes his sister and brings her and the family of five children to his home where he provides them with every comfort This entirely changes the bachelor's disposition and he becomes the kindest of men. It is Christmas and the play closes with the distribution of presents to the five children by the bachelor dressed as Santa Claus.

An interesting incident in connection with the entertainment was the fact that this same play marked the debut of Edward R. Hall, the bachelor of Saturday evening, into amateur dramatics some fifteen years ago. At that time he took the part of Rex, one of the younger children.

The cast was as follows:

Robert Chester, a wealthy hot-tempered bachelor,	Edward R. Hall
Mrs Wilton, a poor widow,	Persis A. Thompson
Harry, his eldest son,	Ronald H. Shaw
Rex,	I. Lawrence Shaw
Daisy,	Mildred E. Geddes
Dolly,	Verna L. Carr
Baby (age 2)	Miriam G. Carr
A serving boy,	Malcolm Anthony
Harriet, a maid,	Ednah Sanborn

The distribution of presents and candy to the audience by Santa Claus and a large corps of helpers closed the evening.

In charge was a committee of the Sunday school consisting of Miss Dorothy Fay, Miss Mildred Polk and Miss Gertrude Lacey. The cast was coached by Miss Mollie Brown and Miss Marjorie Fay.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

A large audience of children and friends of the Wollaston Baptist Sunday school attended the annual Christmas tree and celebration Saturday evening.

Across the front of the vestry was an elaborate scene of evergreens, with a cabin at one side, upon which was staged a fairy extravaganza entitled "In Christmas tree land,"

After a word of welcome by E. L. Durgan, superintendent of the school, Rev. Joseph Walther led the meeting in prayer. A piano solo by Leon Biganess was enjoyed.

As the scene opens, two children, Hans and Gretchen, are discovered in the forest searching for Santa Claus. Led on by various signs they discover his dwelling and sing Christmas carols to greet him.

Santa appears out of the chimney of his house and greets the children. He soon reappears at the doors accompanied by Santa Claus children and gnomes who join in the Christmas songs.

The children are provided with warm wraps and Roland Forsyth, one of the gnomes recites "I know a brownie." A Christmas tree is brought to view with presents for all, including the audience.

Composing the cast were:

Santa Claus	Charles Hatfield
Hans	Harris Christopher
Gretchen	Mabel Christopher
Santa Claus children	Howard Walther
	Russell Sears
	Clara Axeburg
Gnomes	Roland Forsyth
	Dorothy Rawson
	Clara Ross
	Ella Axeburg

The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther was given a handsome travelling bag and military brushes by the Walther class and his wife was presented with a gold chain and pearl and diamond pendant by the ladies of the churrh.

Each of the Walther Men's class was remembered with a gift mostly of juvenile significance.

Prominent among the gifts were those presented the social committee of the men's class.

Messrs Waring, Harriman, Chase and Jewell received respectively an apron, dish pan, dish mop and apron.

All of the children were made happy with presents and all enjoyed the evening. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. J. A. Jewell, Mrs. Joseph Walther and J. Arthur Sparrow.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

The Sunday morning service at the Universalist church was appropriate for Christmas. Rev. Fannie Austin, the pastor, occupied the pulpit and preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon, taking for her topic, "Christmas Gifts." She spoke of the different kinds of gifts, and the different ways of giving, but the greatest of all gifts to each and to the whole world, was the gift of "Our Saviour." A large audience was present.

The music was especially fine, beautiful Christmas anthems were rendered, Mrs. Cutter of Weymouth presiding at the organ.

The decorations were exceedingly beautiful, and it was through the generosity of George F. Spooner of Revere road that this artistic display was made possible. The committee, assisting Mr. Spooner were: Miss Maude Cudworth, Mrs. Harriet Lombard, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, Charles Hobart, Bartlett Spooner and Freeman Hyland.

WASHINGTON STREET CONGREGATIONAL.

There was many a little heart brightened at the Christmas festival held in the church Saturday night. With Santa Claus, a pretty tree and many gifts of an appropriate nature the evening was delightfully spent.

Sunday morning the pastor preached an inspiring sermon, taking as his text—"Peace Upon Earth Good Will Toward Men." A choir of sixteen voices, under the direction of T. 3. Pollard, sang three beautiful anthems. Fine music by the Quincy Point Orchestra with violin and cornet solos was also appreciated.

At 4 o'clock the Children's concert was given and heartily enjoyed. At this service a beautiful gift was presented to Ruth Knights in recognition of faithful attendance, the little girl having been present every session for 15 months.

Regular monthly meeting of the Men's club will be held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. S. T. Spear, Educational Secretary Y. M. C. A. of Boston will be the speaker. All men of the Point are cordially invited to be present. Social session at the end of the meeting, with refreshments.

The usual mid-week service will be held Friday night.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

A great audience assembled Sunday morning, where in place of the regular preaching service, a concert was given under the auspices and management of the Sunday school.

Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith presided at the organ and played in her usual efficient and acceptable manner.

In addition to various exercises by department classes and individuals of the Sunday school, an orchestra of ten instruments, besides the great organ and a choir of over thirty voices, rendered several selections under the leadership of Musical director Amos D. Albee. The church and chapel were handsomely decorated with laurel wreaths and festoons by the decorating committee, Mrs. E. B. Neale and Mrs. James Mitchel, assisted by Mr. E. W. Campbell.

In spite of the unusual length of the morning service, 314 gathered at the regular session of the Sunday school to enjoy the exercises.

At 3.30 the Junior Endeavor society met in the chapel in charge of Miss Ethel M. Campbell. At this service the children sang Christmas hymns, quoted verses and heard a loving message on "Peace."

At the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6 o'clock "The Gift That Transfoms the World," was the subject and Ernest C. Roberts the leader. The meeting was a fine one and was very largely attended.

At 7 o'clock the regular evening preaching service was held. Christmas hymns were in order and the large chorus sang two selections under the leadership of A. D. Albee.

Many have expressed the hope that this chorus will become a permanent institution and sing occasionally, if not at every Sunday church service.

The pastor preached a strong message, appropriate to Christmas. Subject: "The Man Who Differed in Which he Showed the Uniqueness of Christ." This subject was his tenth in a series of sermons, on "Men Who DID THINGS."

This evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Porter, 109 Taylo - street lead by Deacon George E. Thomas.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel. Subject: "The December Number of Missions." What do you find in it interesting and profitable." Let each one kindly bring his magazine with him and take some part aside from the singing.

CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Solemn and impressive services marked the observance of Christmas Day in all the Catholic Churches of the city. Masses were celebrated in the morning at various intervals and vespers terminated the services in the evening.

In St. John Church, masses were celebrated at 5, 7, 8, 9 and 10.30 o'clock, the first was a high mass and the last a solemn high mass, which was said by the pastor, Rev. John J. Coan, who also delivered the sermon. Rev. Patrick J. Scannell and Rev. John J. Casey assisted at the solemn high mass and at vespers.

In St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, the 5 o'clock Mass was said by the pastor, Rev. Henry T. Grady. Other masses were celebrated at 6.45, 8, 9.15, and 10.30 o'clock. The last was a solemn high mass and the officiating clergyman was Rev. William J. Duffy who also preached the sermon. Both priests assisted at vespers.

In the afternoon, the usual Christmas celebration for the children of the Sunday school took place and instead of giving out candy, as was heretofore the custom, each child was presented with a handsome prayer book by the pastor.

In the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, the masses took place at 6, 8 and 10.30 o'clock. Rev. James F. McNiff officiated at the first mass, while the pastor, Rev. John P. Cuffe celebrated the last mass, and also the vesper service.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The Bethany Church Bible school Christmas tree exercises Saturday evening were in the form of a 'Giving Christmas Service" where each class was asked to bring some special gift, and anything else they chose in the way of games, toys, books, clothing, etc., to be distributed in homes where otherwise there would be very little of the Christmas joy.

The exercises opened with singing and prayer also recitations by Ralph Hayden and Elizabeth Pratt after which Santa Claus was introduced and offered to deliver to some poor boys and girls whatever was brought to him.

The entertainment consisted of the original and unique way in which many of the gifts were presented by members of the classes. As for example Mr. LaRose's class of boys gave two dozen cans of milk, so two boys dressed as farmers with big tin milk pails, carried the cans of milk in their pails, they also had two pumpkins which when given to Santa Claus he "mistook for oranges."

Some boys from Miss Lewis' class got Santa "on a string' but he found a bag of flour at the other end after much work of hauling in the line.

A boy representing the Makaria class hauled to Santa Claus a toy cart filled with coal which represented the ton of coal they gave to keep a poor family warm.

The sweetest gift was from Miss Laura Hayward's class when five girls each with a five pound bag of sugar, marched up and presented their offering to Santa.

The Friendly class had a large box which five men worked across the platform and handing Santa a string told him to be careful of the contents. When he took the cover off toy gas balloons to which was attached a $7 bill broke away and floated to the top of the room, much to the enjoyment of all, and the discomfort of Santa.

All of the thirty-three classes gave something, some clothing, others money to buy shoes, pay house rent, etc., and Santa made merry with them all.

At the close the school distributed to the little folks toys, and a box of candy to all.

The decorations consisted of a large tree that looked very pretty with its ornaments and a number of smaller trees which gave a forest effect.

About thirty poor people will have had a happier Christmas because of the generous response in this Giving Service.

The services at Bethany church. Sunday morning, were appropriate to Christmas. Rev. Asher Anderson supplied the pulpit and preached an uplifting and inspiring sermon, taking his text from the 5th chapter of 2d Corinthians 14th verse. The thought which pervaded the discourse, was the love of Christ to us and our love of Christ to Him. We should do deeds of charity and kindness, not from motive but principle, not for the approval of the public, but in a quiet, unostentatious manner, "for inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me." A good sized congregation was present which listened with thec losest attention. Appropriate Christmas anthems were rendered. Madame Morey presiding at the organ.

The church was very tastefully decorated approproate to the day.

The Sunday school gave a Christmas concert at four o'clock. Madame Morey, who had charge of the musical part of the exercises won many favorable comments upon the very praiseworthy manner in which the program was carried out. The recitations were as follows: "The Old Old Story," Myrtle Parker, Marion Horton, Beatrice Sherman; Recitations, Marjorie Sidelinger; "Little Followers of the King," Wallace Kerr, George Copeland, Richard Loud, Robert Sharp, Edgar Horton; singing by Frances Sherman, "What Little Folks Can Do"; "Why?" John Wentworth; "The Message of the Christmas Bells,', Lillian O'Brien, Ada Williams, Floris Williams, Frances Fitts, Dorothy Fitts. These recitations were interspersed with singing by the boys' choir which was excellent.

Rev. Asher Anderson gave a short address on the formation of character. He also explained the significance of the gifts of the Wise Men to Jesus, Gold Frankincense and Myrrh His remarks were very pleasing and interesting.

The afternoon's entertainment closed with a song "Good Night," by Frances and Beatrice Sherman, who sang very sweetly in subdued voices, a very satisfactory conclusion to a very nice concert.

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

The Sunday school party held in the vestry of Memorial church Saturday night was a grand success and enjoyed by young and old. The main feature of the program was the dialogue which, through the efforts of Miss Phyliis Smith was worthy of the loud applause it received. The letters which the children had written to Santa Claus were very comical, especially the one by James Kennedy, who represented a poor boy asking for an automobile. Miss Smith made an excellent country post-mistress.

The boys' chorus made a fine showing and Herman Kay and Albin Johnson did credit to themselves and the chorus in the selection, "Life Forevermore." Miss Phoebe Buckley gave an excellent Christmas reading. Santa Claus appeared and made the children happy by giving them presents and candy.

W. F. Blake, superintendent, was presented with a large easy chair by Rev. T. W. Davison in behalf of the Sunday school. Mr. Blake heartily responded, expressing his appreciation to the officers and teachers as well as the pupils.

The Christmas concert of the church and Sunday s hool under the direction of Mrs. Lyndon Gurney was pleasing to the large audience. The children showed the excellent training they had received. The program was varied by exercises by the primary department and the different classes.

Recitations were given by Barbara Hobbs, Ruth Beeman, Eleanor Phillips Annie Kennedy, Laura Bean, Jessie Smith, Augusta MacMahon and Barbara Wells. Recitations were also given by Mrs. Gurney's class and Miss May Buckley's class.

The Sunday school rendered several numbers under the direction of Mr. James Houston. The senior chorus also rendered several anthems. A solo was sung by Miss Jordine Davison, with a violin obligato by Miss Emma Walker.

The church was decorated by festoons of evergreen and holly, hanging from the rafters and along the sides of the wall. This was done under the direction of Mr. Fred Burditt.

FRIENDS HERE INTERESTED IN LETTER

A letter has been received by relatives in Maine from Miss Elizabeth S. Perkins, missionary to China which will interest her friends here in Quincy. Miss Perkins is related to Dr. Henry C. Hallowell and Miss Hallowell of Hancock street and it will be remembered that about three years ago the ladies of Bethany church dressed a lot of dolls for her being interested and desiring to help her in her work. Miss Perkins left her home in Alfred, Maine, Sept. 2, 1907, for China. She was commissioned by the American Board and is supported by the western Maine branch of the woman's board of missions.

Writing from Foochow under date of Nov. 15, Miss Perkins says: "There is a mail closing today, so I want to write you a little of my doings these past few days. You probably know from the newspapers long before reading this letter all about the revolution in China, how the provinces, one after another, have gone over to the Republicans and that the Imperialists—namely, the Manchus, who are the reigning dynasty—are trying to get control again.

"The crisis came in Foochow Nov. 9 and the Republicans got the walled city. Public sentiment is all in favor of the Republicans. We were in Diong-loh, so did not know anything about what was happening until all was over. The Diong-loh magistrate didn't know what to do when he heard that his superior in Foochow had gone over and said he supposed he should have to go, too. So he opened wide the prison gates and set all the men free, giving them money to go home. It reminded one of the year of jubilee in olden times.

"Everyone was happy. The students said, 'We Chinese are all very clever. It took you Americans several years to get your independence. China has done it in a month.' We are not sure that she has done it completely. Reports from Pekin now are that the Imperialists are coming down with a fleet to recapture Foochow. Everything was so happy among the people, save for the fear of pirates, thieves and incendiaries, that I was really surprised last Sunday night to receive a letter from Mr. Beach saying the consul had ordered us to come to Foochow, because the de facto government had declared that it could not be responsible for the safety of foreigners in the country stations.

"There was no help for it but to close the three boarding schools and pack our trunks. Monday afternoon the Beaches had dinner at my house. Then we all went to Pagoda together by chairs sending the baggage and several children by boat. We left everything peaceful and found Pagoda likewise. Tuesday morning we came on to Foochow by launch, I am visiting Mrs. Sites, Mr. and Mrs. Beach are at Mrs. Macey's near by. Miss Dornblaser is at Mrs. Ward's. There is no alarm felt here by anyone. Most people feel that it was a great pity to call us all in. But we have to obey the consul and Capt. Root of the gunboat which has come in to take care of us.

"There is a United States torpedo boat destroyer and a repair ship at Pagoda, a German and an English gunboat. The latter has anchored in Foochow for the Red Cross and Miss Dornblaser and her sister have been in nursing since Saturday morning. The wounded have many of them, gone home, or are better, so that not so many foreign nurses are needed. I'll be in a position to hear the news straight soon, and my next letter will be more interesting. We are in no danger. I know you have been worrying about me and I am sorry a letter is so slow, but no news is good news, so I shall not cable."

FOLLOW OLD ENGLISH CUSTOM

The old English custom of marching about the church and rectory, singing oldtime English songs and carols, was a feature of the Christmas celebration at Christ church Saturday evening. All of the singers were Englishmen, who had been accustomed to take part in these observances at home and the effect was beautiful, attracting a large crowd of all denominations. After this, there was a Christmas festival in the parish house, with a tree. There was the singing of carols and the distribution of Christmas gifts to the scholars of the Sunday school.

It is considered certain that the Great Northern railway will be kept in the Hill family. It may go to George T. Slade, son-in-law of James J. RICHESON RECEIVES CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Special Dinner is Given to Minister In His Cell

Boston, Dec. 26.—Many Christmas gifts were received at the Charles street jail by Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, accused of having murdered Miss Avis Linnell. The minister has been pronounced out of danger from his self-inflicted wounds. He is still very weak, however.

A special Christmas dinner was served the prisoner in his cell, which was prepared for him by some of the parishioners of the church where he formerly presided.

It is declared that the prosecution will not take the initiative in asking for the appointment of a commission to determine the accused man's sanity. So far his attorneys have made no move toward this end, but one of his lawyers has declared that the minister's self-mutilation indicates clearly to him an abnormal mind.

LYNCHING QUIETLY DONE

Negro Taken From Unguarded Lock-up and Shot to Death

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—King Davis, a negro, aged 28 years, who last Saturday night shot and killed Frederick A. Schwab (white), at Fairfield, was taken from the lockup at Brooklyn, a suburb of Baltimore, yesterday, and shot to death by a small party of unknown men.

Davis was dragged to a spot about 200 yards from the station and shot four times. His body was not discovered until several hours later by a passer-by.

No all-night guard is kept at the station and the police had no knowledge of the affair until the finding of the body was reported. Chief Irwin says he has no clue to the perpetrators of the deed.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

ON North Church to Look Once More as in Paul Revere's Day—A Plan for Restoring its Interior—"Boston's Mme. Curie" to be Nobly Memoralized—Two out of Three Children in Hub's School are Physically Defective, Says Physician's Report—Psychology Is Used to Protect Little Ones from Street Car Accidents.

The famous old North Church, from whose belfry was hung the signal which started Paul Revere on his illustrious ride, is to be restored in its interior finishings to look as in the Revolutionary days. Christ Church, more popularly known as the "Old North" Church, is the oldest religious edifice in Boston. In 1806 various changes were made in the interior of the church, some of which still remain, but the plan of restoration is to date as far back of that as is possible. After this work is completed the church will be open for services, and there will probably be more or less institutional work carried on there in the future. It is to be made fireproof and will be improved exteriorily by an open green space around the building. Among the relics and valuable antiquities which have become the property of the church in its nearly two hundred years of existence is its priceless communion service, the gift of England's royal family, one which every visitor to the historic old landmark desires to see.

Two-thirds of Boston's school children are physically defective. So it is pointed out in a preliminary report made by Dr. William J. Gallivan, chief of the Boston health department's division of child hygiene, on the basis of an examination carried on during the past three months. Dr. Gallivan reports that out of 42,750 who were inspected only 14,957 could be classed as normally healthy children. He also states that if this proportion holds out through the 101,634 children in the public schools, the number of defectives will reach above 66,000. Mayor Fitzgerald, to whom the report was addressed, expressed deep concern over the existing conditions and has requested that the chairman of the consumptives' hospital department also make a report. Dr. Gallivan's report, which covered the first three months of his term in office, is accompanied by a table showing the defects in detail as they were found in each child examined. The results, if correctly reached, show a wide field for improvement of home and school conditions.

Boston's Mme. Curie, the late Mrs. Ellen Richards, for years a leader in the laboratory research work in chemistry and sanitary engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is to be memorialized through a fund of one hundred thousand dollars which is being raised with a view to carrying on her various lines of work. Mrs. Richards was the founder of the American Home Economics Association, and the fund will be controlled by a responsible board composed of members of this association and of Mrs. Richards' family. The money will be expended in part to establish on a firm foundation the Journal of Home Economics, which is the official organ of the association, and in maintaining scholarships and prizes to encourage research work on the problems which occur in the home life. It is gratifying to all Bostonians who were at all familiar with Mrs. Richards' faithful and efficient work at the Institute of Technology to know that she is to be honored in such a useful and appropriate manner.

Using psychology to save life appears to underlie the remarkable prize competition which the Boston Elevated Railway Company has established among school children of the territory which it serves. Youngsters need from time to time to be made to think about the dangers of street cars and automobiles which have become a necessary part of the life of the streets. What more logical way is there of directing their minds to these dangers than to inspire them through cash prizes to write rhymes warning their fellow schoolmates against the perils of the highway? This progressive traction company, at all events, which has done many other things for the welfare of its patrons and employees, has never undertaken a more popular project than that of offering 204 cash prizes in gold for the best poems not exceeding 24 lines concerning caution in the streets, particularly as relating to street cars. The manuscripts are to be in the hands of the company by January 1, 1912, this giving the children of high school age an incentive to devote a portion of their Christmas holidays to composing lines which may win a bright coin ranging in value from the little $2.50 piece up to the first prize of fifty dollars. Throughout the country this subject of the safety of school children is agitating electric railway managers and many efforts have been made to bring about co-operation between school authorities and traffic experts. The modern public service corporation believes in even going out of its way to increase its usefulness and to eliminate unnecessary evils and causes of irritation. Nowhere, however, has a more obviously practicable scheme been put into operation, or on a more liberal scale than in Boston where the Elevated management begins its notice with the statement: "The serious injury or death of a small child as a result of a trolley accident arouses the keenest sympathy of the public and all connected with our Company" Fenders and life guards of the best types available for use in this climate very greatly decrease the chances of injury from collision with the electric cars, but it is realized at 101 Milk street that the best possible safeguarding is avoidance of carelessness.

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Aruuga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Aruuga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Jon Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleron tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Joan returns with the Martha in good condition. Her white assistants describe her business shrewdness. Sheldon refuses to let her run the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

CHAPTER XIX.

A MESSAGE FROM THE BUSH.

ONCE they were well into the thick bush, the horses had to be abandoned. Papehara was left in charge, while Joan and Sheldon and the remaining Tahitians pushed ahead on foot. An hour later, following along a wild pig trail, Sheldon suddenly halted. The bloody tracks had ceased. The Tahitians cast out in the bush on either side, and a cry from Utami apprised them of a find. Joan waited till Sheldon came back.

"It's Mauko," he said. "Kwaque did for him, and he crawled in there and died. That's two accounted for. There are ten more."

Crossing one of the quiet jungle spaces, where naught moved but a velvety twelve inch butterfly, they heard the sound of shots.

"Eight, Joan counted. "It was only one gun. It must be Papehara."

They hurried on, but when they reached the spot they were in doubt. The two horses stood quietly tethered, and Papehara, squatted on his hams, was having a peaceful smoke. Advancing toward him, Sheldon tripped on a body that lay in the grass, and as he saved himself from falling his eyes lighted on a second. Joan recognized this one. It was Cosse, one of Gogoomy's tribesmen, the one who had promised to catch at sunset the pig that was to have baited the hook for Satan.

"No luck, missie," was Papehara's greeting, accompanied by a disconsolate shake of the head. "Catch only two boy. I have good shot at Gogoomy, only I miss."

"But you killed them," Joan chided. "You must catch them alive."

The Tahitian smiled.

"How?" he queried. "I am have a smoke. I think about Tahiti, and breadfruit, and jolly good time at Bora-Bora. Quick, just like that, ten boy he run out of bush for me. Each boy have long knife. Gogoomy have long knife one hand and Kwaque's head in other hand. I no stop to catch 'em alive. I shoot like h—. How you catch 'em alive, ten boy, ten long knife and Kwaque's head?"

The scattered paths of the different boys, where they broke back after the disastrous attempt to rush the Tahitian, soon led together. They traced it to the Berande, which the runaways had crossed with the clear intention of burying themselves in the huge mangrove swamp that lay beyond.

"There is no use our going any farther," Sheldon said. "Seelee will turn out his village and hunt them out of that."

Never had runaways from Berande been more zealously hunted. The deeds of Gogoomy and his fellows had been a bad example for the 150 new recruits. One by one the boys were captured. Gogoomy alone remained at large, and, as the pursuit closed in on him, he conquered his fear of the bushmen and headed straight in for the mountainous backbone of the island. Sheldon, with four Tahitians, and Seelee, with thirty of his hunters, followed Gogoomy's trail a dozen miles into the open grass lands, and then Seelee and his people lost heart. He confessed that neither he nor any of his tribe had ever ventured so far inland before, and he narrated for Sheldon's benefit most horrible tales of the bushmen.

"Gogoomy he finish along them fella bushmen," he assured Sheldon. "My word, he finish close up, kai-kai altogether."

So the expedition turned back. Nothing could persuade the coast natives to venture farther, and Sheldon, with his four Tahitians, knew that it was madness to go on alone.

That night, after dinner, Sheldon and Joan were playing billiards when Satan barked in the compound and Lalaperu, sent to see, brought back a tired and travel stained native who wanted to talk with the "big fella white marster." Sheldon went out on the veranda to see him.

"What name you come along house belong me sun he go down?"

"Me Charley," the man muttered apologetically and wearily. "Me stop along Binu."

"Ah, Binu Charley, eh? Well, what name you talk along me? What place big fella marster along white man he stop?"

Joan and Sheldon together listened to the tale Binu Charley had brought. He described Tudor's expedition up the Balesuna, the dragging of the boats up the rapids, the passage up the river where it threaded the grass lands, the innumerable washings of gravel by the white men in search of gold, the first rolling foothills, the man traps of spear staked pits in the jungle trails, the first meeting with the bushmen who had never seen tobacco and knew not the virtues of smoking, their friendliness, the deeper penetration of the interior around the flanks of the Lion's Head, the bush sores and the fevers of the white men, and their madness in trusting the bushmen. One morning Binu Charley noticed that the women and children had disappeared. Tudor, at the time, was lying in a stupor with fever in a late camp five miles away, the main camp having moved on those five miles in order to prospect an outcrop of likely quartz. Binu Charley was midway between the two camps when the absence of the women and children struck him as suspicious.

"My word," he said, "me savvee too much trouble close up. Me run. My word, me run."

Tudor, quite unconscious, was slung across his shoulder and carried a mile down the trail. Here, hiding new trail, Binu Charley had carried him for a quarter of a mile into the heart of the deepest jungle and hidden him in a big banyan tree. Here, and from the direction of the main camp, he had heard two rifle shots. And that was all. He had never seen the white men again.

"There is only one thing to do," Sheldon said to Joan. "I'll start the first thing in the morning."

"We'll start," she corrected. "I can get twice as much out of my Tahitians as you can, and, besides, one white should never be alone under such circumstances."

Sheldon sent for a gang boss and told him to bring ten of the biggest, best and strongest Poonga-Poonga men.

"Not salt water boys," Sheldon cautioned, "but bush boys—leg belong him strong fella leg. Boy no savvee musket, no good. You bring 'm shoot musket strong fella."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FOR LOBSTER LOVERS.

MANY persons do not care for lobster. There is little nourishment in its flesh, and it is not easy to digest. Fresh lobsters are expensive, and fastidious persons balk at our barbarous method of cooking the lobster alive.

Lobsters are best from December to April.

Lobster Recipes.

Here are some recipes that may appeal to lovers of lobsters:

Creamed Lobster.—Cut into dice a pint of lobster meat and prepare this mixture: A dozen mushrooms, sliced thin and heated in a cup of their juice, with a slice of onion. Thicken with butter and flour and brown. Remove the onion and add a quarter pint of stock, two drops of tabasco sauce, a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Heat the lobster meat in this and serve hot.

Spanish Lobster.—Chop fine a green pepper, a tomato and a slice of onion. Mix and cook in a tablespoonful of butter till tender, then add three-quarters of a cupful of stock and let it simmer for five minutes. Put in the meat cut up and when heated serve at once.

Rissole of Lobster.—Boil the lobster. Take out the meat and mince it fine. Pound the coral smooth and grate for one lobster the yolks of three hard boiled eggs. Season a batter of milk, flour and well beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of milk and one of flour to each egg. Beat this batter well and mix the lobster with it gradually till it is stiff enough to roll into balls the size of a large plum. Fry in fresh butter or the best salad oil and serve either warm or cold.

Canned Lobster.

Deviled Lobster.—Deviled lobster can be made with canned lobster, if fresh lobster is not convenient. Half a can will be needed. Melt one ounce of butter in a pan, add one tablespoonfull of chutney and one tablespoonful of made mustard. Have a few slices of bread fried in fat and keep them hot. Heat the mixture in the pan, add the lobster, chopped finely, and a few breadcrumbs. Stir till boiling, then place on the hot bread and garnish with cut lemon and parsley.

A la Newburg.—Cut the meat in one two-pound can of lobster into small pieces. Put two ounces of butter in a pan and when hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour and mix smooth. Then add a cupful of good cream and the lobster. Rub the yolks of three hard boiled eggs to a paste with a little cream and stir into the lobster. Season to taste with salt, pakrika and a little grated nutmeg. Serve at once.

THE PRITCHARD MURDER

Police Bending Their Efforts Toward Arrest of an Italian

Boston, Dec. 26.—The Hyde Park police are still attempting to locate the Italian, whose identity they have discovered, who they believe is the slayer of Brigot Pritchard, the 18-year-old domestic stabbed to death last Friday night.

As soon as the man is located he will be arrested. Every other clue has been abandoned. To find the suspect is the sole object to which the police are bending their efforts.

DIPLOMATS IN DEEP THOUGHT

Over the Close Friendship of Once Bitter Foes

A RUSSO-JAPANESE ALLIANCE

Washington, Dec. 26.—How thoroughly united the bitter foes of a few years ago have become was shown in a cable dispatch received yesterday, telling of the first dinner of the Russo-Japanese society.

It was held Sunday night at the Japanese embassy in St. Petersburg, and Baron Ichiro Motono, the Japanese ambassador at St. Petersburg, and M. Kokovsoff, the Russian premier, exchanged toasts of the most friendly character.

What the now apparently strongly bound alliance means is causing the diplomats of several other nations considerable thought.

Among the possibilities is the acquisition of portions of Chinese territory by both the Russians and the Japanese. The positions of both these great powers in the east make their joint discussion on any purely eastern question a possible cause for the most serious consequences if their joint discussion does not meet with the approval of Great Britain, France and Germany. It contains all the possibilities for one of the greatest conflicts of modern times, with Japan and Russia together.

It is of more than vital interest to the government of the United States. With the treaty difference awaiting a settlement between the United States and Russia, and with the Japanese casting longing glances toward the Philippines, the chances of the United States becoming deeply interested in any move made by Russia and Japan is very apparent.

It was reported in a cable dispatch from Tokio that the Japanese statesmen were much pleased at the prospects of a commercial war between the United States and Russia, arising over the treaty differences, although nothing confirmatory of this report has been received from the American ambassador at Tokio.

It is known here that both Russia and Japan have come to a thorough understanding as to the Chinese situation. Both are ambitious of expanding by way of Chinese territory. Any interference with the designs of either might provoke consequences so serious that the result may be conjectured.

The strong hand of England may be necessary to keep the peace of the Far East.

PASSENGERS IN PANIC

Royal Mail Steamer Collides With Barkentine Off Cape Hatteras

Norfolk, Dec. 26.—Driven many miles off her course by a strong northeast gale while trying to find her way, the barkentine Mabel Myers, from Searsport, Me., to Richmond, collided with the Royal Mail steamer Orotava, from New York to Havana, about seventy-five miles off Cape Hatteras.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

HARVARD 28—YALE 10.

What was to have been the star attraction Saturday night in the Y. M. C. A. basket ball series, turned out to be a one sided victory for Harvard. Yale was clearly outplayed in all parts of the game and only the "never-give up" spirit and playing of Edgar Nicholl, Yale's center, prevented a much larger score. Kemp again demonstrated that he is away above anyone else at center for he not only scored 8 goals for his team, but helped in all the passing and blocking of his team mates. Diveen was clearly off form, the floor and did not seem to display for he missed many easy goals from the ginger that he exhibited in the Army game.

2nd GAME.

The addition of Sutermeister to the "Michigan" team and Robertson to the "Navy" seemed to work wonders with both teams. The passing and shooting was at all times good and several of the goals scored were spectacular: "Bobbie" getting one shot from the center of the floor that was a "dandy." Every man on the Michigan squad scored one basket, while P. Wood and E. Parker were the only men who did not score for Navy.

Wood missed enough chances to win several games for his team, and Parker also had many opportunities to put the game on ice. "Jack" Melville was in the game from start to finish and his fine passing to Cobb was responsible for most of his goals. It was either teams game up to the last two minutes of play and while the crowd in the gallery was cheering and rooting for their favorites, Sutermeister "sneaked" one over on Cobb by going up the floor and receiving a perfect "out of bounds" pass from Chell and dropping it in the basket for the victory.

The final score was 19 to 18 in favor of Michigan.

3rd GAME.

The addition of "Dave" Morris to the Columbia team was expected to wake up other members of the tailender squad and those who saw their game with Tech will agree that Columbia will do much better in their future games.

The "old timer" not only scored 5 goals himself, but was in every play and if his team mate Porter had been able to "cage" even a small percentage of his tries, the victory would have gone to Columbia.

Booth played a slashing game the first half and secured 5 baskets, but seemed to go all to pieces the second half of the game. Tech scored 10 points the second half to three for Columbia and during the latter part, the game was all Techs. Djerf was the bright star of the game, for he not only played a fine game against Morris but scored a basket with a fine shot of over 50 feet. The final score was Tech 24, Columbia 21.

STACKS OF MAIL.

The letters from the Quincy centre and Wollaston post offices, were accompanyed on their morning delivery, Christmas morning, by a carriage in which were large sacks of mail for the carrier to deliver. It would have been impossible for any carrier to have taken out the load of mail without this aid. As it was, the carriers were enabled to deliver all Christmas mail by 1 o'clock.

SAD ACCIDENT OCCURS AT ATLANTIC

Morris Schulman Instantly Killed In Front of Station

PARENTS LIVE IN CHELSEA

Christmas was indeed a sad day for the parents of Morris Schulman, aged 22 years, of Chelsea, who was killed Saturday afternoon at the Atlantic station, just before he was about to leave for his father's home.

The young man had been at work for Alexander Darr, a milk dealer of Atlantic, living at 28 Walnut street. Saturday afternoon he went to a barber shop on the east side of the tracks and after leaving there started to cross the tracks in front of the depot to Hancock street.

He had reached the centre of the outer rail, when the first section of the 1.43 outward train, which the young man evidently had not seen or heard, struck him in the back. The young man was thrown some distance and when train hands reached him he was dead. Medical Examiner Jones was notified and the body turned over to Undertaker Hall. At the morgue, on searching the young man's clothing, a card was found, showing that he had been an attendant at the Chelsea evening school.

Chief Burrell telephoned to Chief Shannon of Chelsea and the indentity of the young man was fully established Saturday night, his father came from Chelsea to Quincy and arranged to have the body taken to Chelsea.

GOVERNOR AND WIFE VISIT STATE PRISON

Foss Promises to Commute Death Sentence of Phelps

Boston, Dec. 26.—Mrs. Lilla S. Foss, wife of Governor Foss, visited the prisoners in the state prison yesterday, bringing Christmas cheer in person, while her husband interviewed Silas N. Phelps in his cell adjoining the death chamber.

While the governor talked for nearly three-quarters of an hour with Phelps, who has been condemned to die next week, bringing as a Christmas present his promise to do all possible to commute the sentence, Mrs. Foss, the first wife of a governor to visit the prison, called on Jesse Pomeroy.

With the exception of his mother, Pomeroy, in all his long thirty-five years of confinement, had seen no other woman until the first lady of the commonwealth called on him in person.

The Christmas day was the most potentious in the annals of that gray-walled structure. It was the first time that a governor ever interviewed a prisoner already in the shadow of the electric chair.

KEEPING TABS ON DELEGATES

Taft Will Thus Devote Most of His Time This Winter

TRIPS ARE BEING LAID OUT

Massachusetts, New York and Ohio Are Essential to His Success In Campaign For Renomination—Consultations Are Helping Him Some—May Not Be Easy to Have New England Delegates Instructed

Washington, Dec. 26.—All the sign readers here conclude that President Taft will spend considerable time out of Washington during the delegate making period of the early winter months. With this conclusion firmly in mind, they are not at all surprised at the invitations now pouring in upon the president at the White House.

Opportunity to speak affords excuse, of course, for visits. Visits supply the opportunity to arouse some interest among the voters and incidentally to keep closer in touch with the political status. The president has already been in New York, where he had quiet talks with Republican leaders, and there is little doubt that he will go there again and again before New York Republicans line up for the election of delegates.

The situation is all the more noteworthy, because it is already announced that the president will make a trip to Ohio late in January and to Massachusetts in March, making two speeches at Boston.

Such states as Massachusetts, New York and Ohio are tremendously essential to the president's success in his campaign for renomination. Many local workers can come to Washington to consult with him about politics. They are already coming, and the procession will continue for many weeks with little cessation.

Most of the visitors are not of sufficient prominence to attract much attention and they almost invariably conceal the real nature of their errands to the capital for reasons that are obvious. But with all that, it is claimed the president cannot acquaint himself with the details as fully as is possible when he is on the ground in person. Furthermore, the interest of the workers, as well as of the average run of voters, is likely to be quickened by the president's appearance.

How much his plans for visiting the larger and more important Republican states will be extended is a matter for conjecture. He may go as far west as Indiana and Illinois. In both those states there will be a battle probably for Republican delegates.

Every Republican in the senate and house from Massachusetts is a Taft man, and every one of them state it as his opinion that the president will have all the Bay State delegates for renomination.

In private conversations, not all of them are altogether sure it will be easy to instruct the delegates. The usual procedure in most of the New England states, including Massachusetts, has been not to instruct, although it was not so in 1908. That gives something of an argument, however, against instructions to the next convention.

The question has not been discussed very closely among the Massachusetts Republicans here, because of efforts, now so well under way, for a presidential preference primary. If the voters of the state are allowed an opportunity to say whom they prefer for the nomination, their verdict will constitute the most binding of instructions. Delegates who are chosen under primary instructions would not be easily stampeded. They would hardly yield on the candidate they were supporting until his case appeared absolutely hopeless.

Much of the president's reliance is upon New England. The Republican voters of that section are usually steady. While there is plenty of politics over presidential nominations in those six states, there is less treachery and more fealty inside the local organizations than is the case in New York.

BIG STRIKE MAY RESULT

Coal Miners Want More Pay, Shorter Day and Other Concessions

New York, Dec. 26.—There may be a general strike of coal miners early next year unless employers meet demands for increased wages, an eight-hour day and other concessions.

President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America has sent a call to all the unions to stand firm for the changes. Lewis asks that no wage contract be signed by a district in any part of the country until all wage contracts are negotiated. He says the owners must yield if that policy is followed.

Conditions at Tabriz Reported to Be Appalling—Russia Gives Notice That It Will Take Justice Into Its Own Hands, Giving a Lesson to Be Long Remembered—National Council Is Dissolved

Teheran, Dec. 26.—The national council, which has stood firmly for the retention of W. M. Shuster, the American treasurer general, and for resistance to Russian aggression, has been ordered dissolved by Regent Nazir-el-Mulk. Troops have been posted about the parliament building by the war minister to prevent the deputies from entering.

Russian losses are declared to have been very heavy in the two days and more of fighting, especially at Tabriz. The vice governor of Tabriz has telegraphed that conditions there are appalling.

"I swear before God," he telegraphs, "that innocent women and children are being butchered in cold blood." After saying that 500 Persians have been slain there, he adds: "The Russians ignore our overtures for the cessation of hostilities."

In ordering reinforcements from the Caucasus to Tabriz, the director of the Persian department of the Russian foreign office declared:

"Russia will take justice at Tabriz, Resht and Enzeli into her own hands and show no mercy to the fidais and revolutionary dregs who are shedding Russian blood. The lesson which we intend to give will long be remembered."

The Russian permanent detachment outside of Tabriz, 600 strong, has occupied Basmendj, on the Kasgin road. They have been unable to communicate with the small Russian legation guard within the city. Orders have been given for the Russians not to reply to the sniping by the fidais, who are entrenched in the battered citadel.

Conditions have become more quiet at Resht and Enzeli. Among the Persians killed at Resht has been Governor Zagirdle's son, a well known revolutionist.

The Russian reinforcements from Djulfa to Tabriz are making slow progress. Colonel Knigge, commanding the permanent detachment, has telegraphed here that he can reach Teheran in six forced day marches.

The cabinet yesterday afternoon notified W. M. Shuster, the American treasurer general of Persia, of his dismissal from office. This follows the decision of the national council and the ministry to submit to the demands contained in the Russian ultimatum. The cabinet intimated to Shuster that they would communicate to him later their plans concerning the turning over of his accounts.

Nature of Charges Against Russian Count Not Made Public

New York, Dec. 26.—Count Andre De Gourowski, who was arrested under mysterious circumstances in October last upon his arrival here from Europe, was taken again to Ellis island by an officer from the immigration headquarters there.

The count was brought here from Lynchburg, Va., where he was arrested on orders from Washington. The nature of the charges against the Russian have not been made known to the immigration authorities here.

The count is to be arraigned before the special board of inquiry at Ellis Island. The charges against him will there be made known from Washington and he will be given an opportunity to disprove them.

WORK IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

Safe Blowers Succeed In Opening Department Store Vault

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 26.—Safe blowers visited Lynn in broad daylight and succeeded in opening a cault in Goddard Bros.' department store in the centre of the city and getting away without being detected.

They only got about $500, the small amount being due to the fact that the storekeepers, by special arrangement with the banks of the city, were enabled to deposit their day's receipts at the close of business Saturday night.

The men used nitroglycerine and the police are satisfied that it was the work of professionals.

Boom In Woolen Mills

Providence, Dec. 26.—Christmas brought good cheer to the Olneyville factory district, where the worsted and woolen industry has been dormant for almost two years. Within a short time most of the mills have begun running on full time. The talk today is that the demand for goods from this district will very soon result generally in all-night work.

CHRISTMAS IN OUR CHURCHES

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

Christmas was observed at St. Chrysostom's church with the usual special and impressive services. At 7 A. M. the rector Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra celebrated Holy Eucharist. At 10 o'clock Holy Communion and a sermon filled with Christmas spirit and an inspiring musical program was rendered by the mixed vested choir.

The church was elaborately decorated with ropes of laurel, evergreen and wreaths, not only the sanctuary but the entire body of the church was effectively and appropriately decorated. On the altar were two large brass vases filled with calla lilies on either side of the crucifix and with the white embroidered hangings always symbolical of the Christmas season and at the early service the electric light softened the greenery and all added to the festivity of the occasion.

The annual Christmas tree and festival was held Saturday evening at 6 o'clock. There was a carol service and following the distribution of gifts on the tree there was a party for the upper grades of the Sunday school in the parish rooms in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Northup. A little Christmas play was given by the young folks, games were played, and ice cream, cake and candy were served.

FIRST U. P. CHURCH.

The children's Christmas entertainment at the First U. P. church on Monday evening, was a grand success. The church was packed to its utmost capacity. The program lasted about an hour and a half, after which the presents were distributed to the children by Santa Claus. Much credit is due the superintendent, Mr. John Russell, and the teachers and officers of the school, for their efficiency in arranging the program, and to Mrs. Malcolm McKinley in training the children to sing. The young ladies of the Golden circle also rendered valuable assistance in making the entertainment a grand success.

OUTSTUDYI G AMERICANS

Rapid Strides by Foreign-Born Children In Public Schools

Harrisburg, Dec. 26.—Warning that children of foreign-born parents are outstripping American boys and girls in the public schools of the state is contained in the annual report of Dr. Schaeffer, state superintendent of public instruction. Schaeffer's unfavorable contrast between the attitude of American children and those of foreign-born parents is drawn in the following paragraph:

"Children born of foreign parents realize the advantages thus placed within their reach. Many of them study with a zeal and earnestness which will make them winning competitors alongside of American youth, who waste their time at social functions and in the gratification of self, instead of practising the self-denial which lies at the foundation of all true success."

IF ROOSEVELT IS ELECTED

Colonel Could Never Be Driven From White House, Says Watterson

Atlanta, Dec. 26.—"If Roosevelt is put in the White House in 1912 we will never get him out again except feet first."

This was the statement of Colonel Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, in commenting on the Republican situation throughout the country.

Mr. Watterson expressed the belief that the long looked for change of parties was at hand, but he has not declared his choice for the Democratic nomination.

He said that in his opinion the Republicans could not elect either Roosevelt or Taft, and said the election of the former president, abrogating the third term tradition, would be a step toward absolutism.

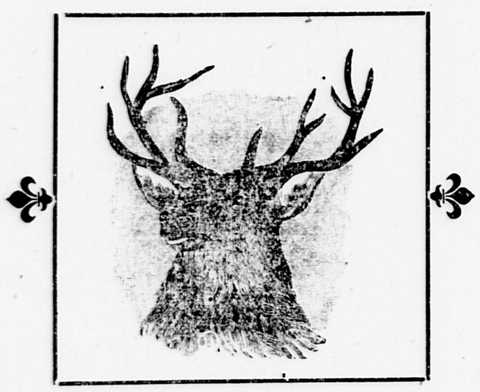
ANNUAL VISITATION OF DEPUTY EXALTED RULER TO QUINCY LODGE OF ELKS

Large Attendance At Meeting Held In Alpha Hall Tuesday Evening

Degree Exemplified Upon Two Candidates



The annual visitation of Frank J. Condon, District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of the southeastern district, to Quincy lodge of Elks, took place Tuesday evening and was the occasion of a large attendance. The meeting was held at Alpha hall and due honors were accorded to the deputy and suite by the officers and members of the lodge. The deputy was accompanied by the following suite:

Charles F. J. McCue, P. E. R. of Cambridge lodge 835 and member of the Grand lodge committee on tuberculosis sanitarium, as acting Grand Esquire; Peter McCan, P. E. R., of Chelsea lodge 938 and Past District Deputy of the North East district, as Grand Leading Knight; James J. Meagher, P. E. R., of Somerville lodge 917, as Grand Loyal Knight and Joseph D. Irwine, E. R., of North Attleborough lodge 1101 as Grand Lecturing Knight.

The degree in its new form was exemplified upon two candidates, after which there were addresses by the grand officers.

The district deputy made a most stirring address in which he told of the phenomenal growth of Elkdom. There were now 1,200 lodges and the increase in membership during the year had been 29,000. The total membership of the order was now 360,000.

The order, he said, was one of the most charitable in the world. Its charity was of the quiet kind that was not given publicity to the world. As an illustration, he stated that during the year, $460,000 had been expended by the lodges in charitable work and over $4,000,000 since its institution. The order was truly American and a promoter of good citizenship. An order that imparts a new and truer meaning to our grand old flag, the stars and stripes.

The deputy also told the lodge that it should be careful and see to it that none but good and worthy men were admitted to membership. Race or creed was not recognized and had no place in the order. Enrolled as its members were senators, representatives, lawyers, physicians and men from every walk of life.

The remarks of the others on the suite were equally as inspiring and it is to be regretted that they can not be given in full.

At the close of the business of the evening, an adjournment was made to Union hall, where Caterer Thompson served a banquet, the menu of which was as follows:

Ambassador Salad Lobster Salad
Chicken Salad
Chicken Croquettes and Peas
Small Rolls Iced Olives
Salted Nuts Selected Fancy Cake
Harlequin Ice Cream
Frozen Pudding
Cocoa Chocolate Mousse
Bisque Glace
Cigars Cigarettes

While the brothers were busily engaged in partaking of the good things set before them, the hands of the clock pointed to the hour of 11, an hour most sacred to all Elks. Immediately there was a deathlike stillness as with bowed heads the brothers listened to the Elks' toast by Brother Joseph Schafer of Chelsea lodge.

Aside from brothers of Quincy lodge, there were many visitors from lodges in the state, including Senator Butler of Chelsea.

CHRISTMAS PARTY AT CHRIST CHURCH

The annual Christmas party for the senior classes of Christ church, took place in the parish house Tuesday evening and was largely attended. Erastus Osgood, the well known entertainer kept those present in a state of enjoyment for about an hour and received great applause for his many witty selections.

Dancing was enjoyed to a late hour and refreshments brought a most successful affair to a close. The music for the occasion was furnished by different members of the school.

FORMER RESIDENT IS DEAD

The many Quincy friends of Nahum J. Kidder will be sorry to learn of his sudden death at South Boston, Tuesday, where for the past 27 years he has been a patrolman attached to Station 12.

Previous to his appointment as a member of the Boston Police department, Mr. Kidder resided in Quincy where he was in provision business in the store now occupied by Johnson Bros. in City Square.

Monday night while on duty Mr. Kidder was seized with pains in his chest, near his heart. Lieut. O'Neil relieved him from further duty, and he went to his home. Tuesday he was not much improved, and consulted his physician and hoped to secure relief through the medicine prescribed but he passed away before he had received the medicine.

Tuesday afternoon shortly after 12 o'clock he entered the drug store of George Alexander, 160 Dorchester avenue, to have a prescription filled. He handed the paper to Charles Alexander, and was then seen to waver and fall while standing at the counter. He fell sideways to the floor and died instantly. Capt. Thomas C. Evans was immediately notified.

Throughout South Boston Patrolman Kidder was well known and respected. For more than a quarter of a century he had performed faithful duty as a policeman, and won the respect of all the residents. He was born in Mansfield, Vt., Feb. 10, 1852, and was educated in the public schools of that town. He came to Boston when a young man, worked in various lines, and was appointed a patrolman Dec. 24, 1884. He was assigned to Division 6, was transferred to Division 16, Jan. 23, 1909 and then to Division 12, Nov. 26, 1900. For many years he covered the route of Broadway and Dorchester, G and Old Harbor streets. He was a member of Bethesda lodge, I. O. O. F., and of the Boston Police Relief Association. He is survived by a wife and one daughter.

A very pretty home wedding, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Merritt, Elm place, Christmas afternoon, united Ralph Guild Merritt, formerly of Quincy, now at Middlebury, Vt., and Miss Ethel J. Bingham, a talented young lady of Middlebury. Rev. C. H. Dickinson, D. D. of Boston, a former pastor of the bride officiated, and during the ceremony Mrs. George W. Penniman of Mattapan an aunt of the groom, played the wedding march from Lohengrin. The double ring service was used, and the happy young people were united as they stood beneath a large bell of white. The rooms were decorated and adorned in white, and the sun was adiant as the impressive ceremony took place.

Only the immediate families of the contracting parties were present including brothers and sisters of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Merritt from Middlebury, Vt., Mattapan, Scituate and East Weymouth. Following the ceremony, refreshments were served. Many beautiful gifts were received.

HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATES

Will Hold Annual Election This Evening

MANY WILL SPEAK

The annual election of officers of the Houghs Neck Associates will take place this evening in Associates' hall, It is expected that a large number will turn out for the event, although the contests are not as exciting this year as they have been in previous years.

The principal contest will be for the presidency of the organization, which position is being sought by Thomas F. Phillips, a prominent real estate man, and Henry W. French, a member of the board of registrars. It was reported last evening that Mr. Phillips was not to be a candidate even though his election would be easily assured, since Mr. French was defeated for the position last year by James E. Wall, the present incumbent. Mr. French was a former president of the Associates, but his power among the Houghs Neck residents, has since waned, owing to the attitude he took on the school question.

The affair this evening will be marked by many impromptu addresses and will conclude with a clam chowder supper. The newly elected officers will be installed on New Year's night and plans are now well under way to increase the membership of the organization.

REGULAR MEETING OF REVERE W. R. C.

Libby, department president of Lynn; Mrs. Caroline Morse, department special aid of Reading; Mrs. Dorcas Lyman, past department president of Faneuil and others from other cities and from Connecticut.

At the close of the meeting the retiring president Mrs. Emma E. Marnock served ice cream and crackers.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Some people can't seem to enjoy their Happy New Year, until they get the new resolutions safely buried.

The White House Christmas was a quiet family party, and if Mr. Taft deposited the turkey in Mrs. Taft's lap, the public will never know it.

Mr. Sherman says he is willing to be vice president again. We don't see how Sunny Jim will ever get on in the world, if he will continue to live this life of idleness.

After a few more Christmases, it may become customary to summons people to court for failure to swap even and obtaining presents on false pretences.

Russia now threatens to double the duties on goods from this country. She seems to realize the great benefits of removing your nose in order to make your cheek feel better.

Now that the holiday festivities will soon be over, there will be no social events to record save a few quiet home lynchings in various parts of the country.

Mr. Roosevelt gets 500 letters a day. We trust he shows due interest in his correspondence by waiting around the post office while the postmaster is popping them into his box.

The Springfield, Mass., Republican says a taste for walking is better than twenty motor cars. As the only advantage of walking is that it gives you good health, it will never be really popular.

Treasurer Shuster having committed the crime of running the Persian treasury for the benefit of the Persians, our "traditional friend" Russia decides he must be sent home to America in disgrace.

Now for the summing up. The Mansfield News says: "Some will find a large balance on hand, many will find a comfortable balance, a few will find that they have about broke even, and still fewer will find themselves in debt with discouraging outlook. May the new year bring success and prosperity, in greater proportion than ever."

SEATS FOR WOMEN.

As one result of the rough and tumble life of Chicago, it has been proposed to organize a "Seats for women association," with such mottoes as "Women may attend on a pedestal, don't make her stand in the aisle."

Meanwhile, what has become of the chivalrous proposals of Mr. Stafford of St. Louis, who a year or two ago was asking men to join a "League of politeness," the members of which were to wear a blue button as the badge of this modern knighthood? All a woman then had to do, on entering a crowded car, was to look about, and nestling up to the blue button, she would be automatically accommodated with a seat.

Every family having children knows how difficult it is to make your boy brush his hair before breakfast. How much more so to upset the customs of grown-ups. Woman has always been the leader in manners and customs. Marion Harland, talking about this subject, says she counted 48 baby carriages on the sidewalk one Sunday morning, the mothers and nurses making pedestrians turn out into the street while they gossiped.

The store clerk who has just been jostled out of his job by Miss Fluffy Ruffles, who having no family to support is willing to work for less wages, does not always feel much inclined to give up his seat to Fluffy's sisters. They seem perfectly able to take care of themselves. The chivalrous habits of the fathers were born of a condition when one sex was considered strong and the other weak. The chivalry grew out of this condition of inequality.

Now that we have got by all idea of inequality, and think only of distinction of function, the acts set in motion by the idea of inequality tend to disappear.

This is how most men feel theoretically. But there is some blood of the gentleman of the old school still running in our veins, as we hope, so that the sight of the standing women and sitting men of the modern street car seem an unpleasant upheaval of nature, and indicating the vanishing of the finer flavors of the older days.

OVERDRESSED SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The Child Welfare League of New York has been investigating the manner of dressing school children. It was found that many girls under sixteen were doctoring their fresh skins with cosmetics, and trying to better nature by wearing corsets, false hair, etc. How is it with your youngsters here?

Ethel Barrymore once remarked that it is necessary not merely that a child's dress fit her figure, but that it fit the conditions in which she lives and the means of her parents. That kind of fit is commonly overlooked.

A striking fact in the New York investigation referred to, was that private school children, largely from wealthy homes, dress much more simply than public school children.

While the children of the English royal family of course have regal garments stowed away for special occasions, when ordinarily seen on the street they would probably look more simply dressed then the average American youngster.

It can be accepted as a general rule that the higher up in the social scale, the fewer ruffles and the less lace appears on the children's clothes.

A child's dress should be like the frame about a picture. Ruskin once said that the purpose of a picture frame is to "preserve a space of silence about a picture." He meant that a gaudy frame detracts attention from the painting, while a plain frame isolates the picture from other objects, and draws attention to the subject delineated by the artist.

Similarly a gaudy frock draws attention from the sweet child face which is infinitely more alluring than anything the best dress-maker in Paris can produce.

Hard work, neglect of health, and rapid living produce lines in the faces of grown ups, from which attention may be somewhat drawn by the artifices of dress. That is, the picture having become faded, you may perhaps conceal its defects by putting a higher emphasis on the frame.

But the child's face needs no such concealments. It is a picture fresh from the hand of the Divine Artist. The more inconspicuous the frame, the higher the beauty of the face so full of the mystery and wonder of life's morning hour!

WOMAN IN THE SPOT LIGHT.

Looking over the "Readers Index of Periodical Literature" the other day, we noted the impressive array of articles about women. This catalog, as many of our readers know, is an index of all the articles published in over 100 leading magazines. The last four years' index contains an astonishing list of 22 pages in fine type, cataloging the articles about women, including "Woman Suffrage," "Employment for Women" and the like.

Turning back to the heading "Men," with accompanying sub-heads, we found that the articles under these captions took only a half page!

Which seems to indicate that the magazine editors of the United States and England find that articles on the specific activities of women draw just 22 times as many readers as articles on the specific activities of men.

A very large proportion of this enormous mass of literature deals with the efforts and successes of women in occupations formerly closed to them. When one looks at the strapping girls turned out by the colleges, and at the puny men in the stores and offices of a great city, even jobs supposed to require physical strength will not be reserved to one sex indefinitely where such work brings attractive rewards.

RECEIVES UNIQUE GIFT FROM AFAR

Miss Helen Rhines of Miller Stile road who is spending the Christmas holidays at home has received a gift from a distant land which is giving her much pleasure. It is a little parkee made from a baby reindeer. A parkee is an outer garment made from the skin of animals or birds and worn by the Eskimos.

A few years ago Miss Rhines had an Indian girl from Alaska in her class who since her return to Alaska is working among her people giving them the benefit of her education in this country. She writes most interesting letters to Miss Rhines and in one of them spoke about having a beautiful new parkee and asking Miss Rhines if she did not think it fine. Miss Rhines wrote back that if she knew what a parkee was she might be better prepared to congratulate her on having so nice a one,—hence the Christmas gift.

The parkee received is a miniature of those worn in the snow countries of the north and fits a good sized doll. The fur is beautifully soft. The garment slips on over the head. The skirt and sleeves and hood are ornamented with tassels of fur and shows good workmanship in the making. It was several weeks coming from Alaska but is in perfect condition.

NEBRASKA'S PRIMARY LAW

It Will Show Whether Roosevelt Is or Is Not a Candidate

Washington, Dec. 27.—Whether Theodore Roosevelt will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for president will be put to the acid test in the Nebraska presidential primary of April 17, according to studies of the Nebraska law made at a progressive headquarters.

The presidential primary law of that state provides that a candidate for nomination may withdraw his name from the ballot. The reasoning is, therefore, that if Roosevelt's name is placed upon the ballot without his express sanction, he has only to withdraw it to show to the country that he is not and will not be a candidate before the Chicago convention.

By the same process of reasoning, if Roosevelt permits the Nebraska primary to pass without withdrawing his name he will have served notice upon the country that he is actively in the field and is willing to receive indorsements wherever they may be given.

RAILWAY IS LOSING MONEY

Will Suspend Line Because of Compulsory Cut in Fares

Dedham, Mass., Dec. 27.—Because they were forced to reduce their fares by an order of the supreme court, the board of directors of the Dedham and Franklin Street Railway company announce that after Jan. 1 and until further notice, cars running between Dedham and Medfield will be discontinued.

They claim that in the last seven months they have lost $4500 because the courts ruled that under their franchise the fare in these towns should be only 5 cents, and as they were charging 6 cents, ordered them to reduce the fare.

Previous to last May, when the courts ordered the company to reduce its fares, the residents of Westwood were obliged to pay 12 cents to ride from Dedham, and 18 to Medfield.

HAUNTED MURDERER GIVES HIMSELF UP

Follows Advice of Priest After Making a Confession

Baltimore, Dec. 27.—Haunted by visions of his victim John H. Martin surrendered to the police here, declaring that he was the man who murdered William H. Micklee, an old storekeeper in Seventh street, Washington, on Nov. 17 last.

He did not know that the man he assaulted was dead until he read it in a newspaper. He says also that someone else had been arrested for the crime. The memory of his deed and the thought that an innocent person might suffer for it drove him to a confesional, where he told his story to a priest. It was on the advice of the latter, Martin said, that he surrendered himself.

CLEARS HIS CONSCIENCE

Fugitive Embezzler Asks New York Police to Lock Him Up

New York, Dec. 27.—Moved by the spirit of Christmas and the fact that he was stranded here with but a few dollars left out of $4000 embezzled in Evanston, Ills., sixteen months ago, John Fielding, aged 57, made a dramatic confession at police headquarters here.

With halting step and trembling voice he approached the lieutenant, said that his conscience was cleared by telling his story, and asked to be locked up.

The police have locked Fielding up pending communication with the Evanston authorities. Fielding said he had a wife and family in Evanston, and a little property with which he hoped to cover his embezzlement.

IT PAYS TO SMILE

Chicago Policeman Has Abundant Evidence to Prove the Fact

Chicago, Dec. 27.—William Gibbons, Chicago's "smiling policeman," is about to quit the department. Gibbons has stood for years at the Bush street bridge and boasts that he knows every automobile owner in Chicago.

Gibbons went to headquarters and showed a letter signed by Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury.

"Do you see this?" said Gibbons. "It is from the secretary of the treasury, and I found something inclosed, too."

Gibons' Christmas presents for years are said to have amounted to more than any other Chicago policeman's. He says it pays to smile.

TAKES TO THE WOODS

Sheriff Evades Mob After Double Murder and Lands His Man

Cairo, Ills., Dec. 27.—Lewis and Frank Ramsey, white, and brothers, were shot and killed near Fulton, Ky., by Rufus Barfield, a negro, who was later captured by the sheriff.

The sheriff took the negro into the woods when he heard that a mob was forming. Later he caught a train for Paducah, where Barfield was put in the McCracken county jail.

MINISTERS TO BE WITNESSES

Called Upon by Prosecution in the Richeson Case

WRIT OF PROTECTION ASKED

Desired by Rhode Island Clergyman During His Presence In Boston—Step Taken Toward Effort to Exclude Press and Public From Trial of Alleged Slayer—Order For Three Hundred Talesmen Issued

Boston, Dec. 27.—A stir was occasioned at the Pemberton square courthouse when Rev. George E. Horr, D. D., president of the Newton Theological institute, was summoned as a witness by the government in the case of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson and subjected to an examination which lasted several hours.

President Horr was to have been the officiating clergyman at the wedding of Richeson to Miss Violet Edmands of Brookline, which was slated for Oct. 31, but was made impossible by the arrest of the prospective groom for the alleged murder of Avis Linnell.

The head of the theological school was interrogated by Assistant District Attorney Lavelle. He was accompanied to the district attorney's office by Charles S. Pierce, a student at the school and a former roommate of Richeson. Pierce was examined at length also. He was placed under $300 bonds last week to insure his appearance as a government witness at the trial on Jan. 15.

Neither Horr nor Pierce was a witness before the grand jury. Both are said to be more intimately acquainted with the accused minister than anybody in recent years. That is why the prosecution summoned them. Horr has been one of Richeson's stanchest friends.

The government is to introduce as a witness Rev. George H. Holt, a Baptist clergyman with a pastorate in Jamestown, R. I. Holt was announced as the fiance of Rose Edmands, and a Cambridge newspaper stated that they and Richeson and Violet Edmands were to have figured in a double wedding.

Yesterday afternoon Judge Pierce of the superior court issued a writ of protection on the application of Assistant District Attorney Hallett. Hallett's petition cited that Rev. Mr. Holt was to be a witness for the prosecution at the trial from "Jan. 15 to Feb. 5," and wished to be protected during his appearance in the city. The cause for the protection was not stated, but it is evidently due to some civil action.

There are other important developments in the case. At the state house a petition to the legislature was presented by Attorney Ralph W. Gloag, representing private interests, asking for the enactment of a special law which would make it possible to keep the trial of Richeson private.

Attorney General Swift and former Attorney General Parker both declared that they considered such a law would do more harm than good and intimated that it would be unconstitutional.

Notices were sent by Clerk Manning of the superior criminal court to the clerks of Boston, Revere, Chelsea and Winthrop for lists of voters to act as jurors in the Richeson trial.

Clerk Manning asked that 300 names be selected of talesmen to appear for examination for jurors in this great murder case. Although the order does not refer to this as a special venire, it is "special," as the jurors will not report until Jan. 15, whereas the regular jurors for the January sitting of the superior criminal court will report for duty at an earlier date.

FIVE BULLETS IN HER BODY

Woman Pleads For Husband After He Terribly Wounds Her

Somerville, Mass., Dec. 27.—Frank E. Ryan of Boston fired five shots from a revolver into the body of his 19-year-old wife on Winter street, this city, last evening, and might have escaped but for the eleverness of a 16-year-old boy, who followed him on a bicycle and brought about his arrest.

Ryan, when arrested, admitted the shooting, declaring that his wife had been unfaithful.

In a dying statement last night Mrs. Ryan said that her husband probably was insane. She expressed the hope that in event of her death he will be committed to some insane hospital, rather than suffer the penalty for murder.

Q.—The Apostle Peter says "knowing this first that no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any PRIVATE INTERPRETATION."—II Peter i, 20. Does this mean that no one should try to interpret the prophecies? (N. E. D.)

Answer.—More than one-half of the Bible is made up of prophecies, and the major portion of these relate to the last times, or the last days, and more particularly to the New Dispensation that is just beginning to dawn upon the world; and which will supersede the present existing order of things. Surely all of these writings were not given for ornament, or just to fill out the covers of the book! The Apostle, in the preceding verses, narrates how he, in company with some of the special followers of the Lord, had been eyewitnesses to the transfiguration on the mountain, and also how they had heard the "voice from heaven." Sight and sound are two of the most convincing evidences that one could wish for; and yet the Apostle goes on and says "We have a more sure word of prophecy" to which we do well to give heed until the day dawn. It is all clear and simple when we give the right translation from the Greek word that is rendered "interpretation,"—"Knowing this first that no prophecy of Scripture is of any private setting forth, for not at any time was prophecy brought by the will of man, but men from God spoke, (set forth the prophecies) being moved by the Holy Spirit."

A program sure to please men has been arranged by the Legislative committee under whose auspices the affair is given. Mrs. Emily Bishop who has met with great success in her dramatic scenes from sessions of Congress at Washington. has been secured as the entertainer and the Hospitality committee is arranging for a spread.

* * *

Gentlemen's night at the Quincy Women's club on the evening of Jan. 8th is arousing more interest than usual because of the fine entertainment arranged. Mrs. Emily Montague Bishop, who will recite "Scenes from the United States Senate" is said by those who have heard her, to give a living picture of the senate with all the non-essentials and distracting details left out. Her "Scenes" are better than the senate itself. She is well equipped for masterful presentation of her subject, for she studies her characters at first hand—from the gallery of the United States Senate; she has "intimate knowledge of things congressional" and large experience as a speaker and dramatic reader. Mrs. Bishop's scenes are an entertainment and a revelation. They make clear "how things come to pass" in Washington.

CLUB WOMEN'S PRAYER.

"May we be kept from pettiness; may we be large in thought, in word and deed.

"May we be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking.

"May we put away all pretence, and meet each other face to face without self-pity and without prejudice.

"May we never be hasty in judgment and always generous.

"May we take time for all things, and thus be made to grow calm, serene, gentle.

"May we put into action our better impulses, straightforward and unafraid.

"May we try to realize that it is the little things that create differences; in the big things of life we are as one.

"And may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all."—Somerville Journal.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Special services in observance of Christmas day were held at the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday. At the morning service the pastor, Rev. T. C. Martin preached on "What is the joy of Christmas?" He took his text from Luke 2-16. "And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in a manger."

Mr. Martin said that the joy of discovery was the real joy of Christmas and told of what happiness we find we can give to others round about us, and also that we find more happiness in giving joy and pleasure to others than in receiving gifts ourselves. Miss Catherine B. Hodgkinson and Mr. C. A. Goucher sang a duet "Who is he?", Mr. Brown, organist.

Sunday school met at 12.15. The Junior and Epworth League services were omitted. At 7 P. M. the Sunday school rendered their annual Christmas concert. Miss Sarah Fuller and Lawrence Martin sang solos, and the members of the various classes took part in recitation and exercises. The older members of the Sunday school assisted the regular Sunday evening choir. A feature of special interest to the children was a telephone conversation between the pastor, Rev. T. C. Martin, and Santa Claus in which Santa promised his very best efforts to reach the church on Monday.

Monday evening the annual Christmas tree and entertainment was held in the vestry. The program consisted of recitations and songs by the Sunday school; readings by Miss Edna Burke, Bessie Nichols and Miss Hilda Francis, and tableaux entitled "Christmas Eve," "Christmas Morning," and "Christmas Night," by members of the primary class. At the close of the entertainment, Santa Claus paid a short visit to the school and distributed gifts, candy, nuts and fruit.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

The Christmas season was observed by the Wollaston Methodist Sunday school Tuesday evening with a Christmas tree and program of recitations and music.

The evening opened with an organ voluntary during which the primary department marched in. Carols were sung and prayer was offered by the pastor, Rev. Wesley Wiggin, followed by responsive reading.

"Merry Christmas" a recitation by the infant department was followed by "Six little Christmas bells" from the primary grade.

"There is joy in our hearts" was recited by Robert Bliss and "A substitute" by Ida Hoyt. A stereopticon was put into operation under the direction of Lee Brooks and Clarence Cassidy, Christuas views being thrown on the screen.

WILL BE "TRAITORS" THERE

Roosevelt Will Not Attend Big Peace Dinner In New York

New York, Dec. 27.—Close on the heels of one great peace meeting which was broken up by a section of the audience opposed to the ratification of President Taft's proposed treaties with England and France, clouds of disagreement have spread about what is being planned as one of the greatest peace dinners the country has ever seen here, next Saturday night.

It has developed, according to a member of the committee in charge of the dinner, that former President Roosevelt has replied to a semi-official invitation to the function, at which President Taft will be the principal speaker, with a letter declaring that his sentiments were wholly at variance with those to be expressed at the affair, and censuring as "traitors" to their principles all who accepted invitations to the dinner without agreeing with its purposes.

MAY END TRIPLE ALLIANCE

Italy Considering Break With Germany and Austria-Hungary

Rome, Dec. 27.—An exchange of communications between the Italian foreign office and the chancellors of other European powers is proceeding at the present moment with the greatest activity. The subject of the communications is the war in Tripoli, but the question of the renewal of the triple alliance between Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy is also being discussed.

The negotiations regarding the triple alliance are of the most important character, as it is conceivable that they might even result in the withdrawal of Italy from the alliance and the consequent strengthening of the triple alliance between Great Britain, France and Russia.

DOCTOR AND FOUR WOMEN INDICTED

Charged With Being Implicated In Death of Miss Bolduc

Boston, Dec. 27.—An indictment in seven counts was returned by a special session of the grand jury last evening before Judge Hardy, against the five prisoners who have been held without bail the past few days, accused by the police of causing the death of Mary Bolduc, a 20-year-old Manchester, N. H., mill operative, whose body was found in the apartment of Mrs. Jennie H. Shattuck, 47 Woodlawn street, Forest Hills.

Mrs. Annie M. Reed, who conducted a Tremont street house, and Miss Mary A. O'Neil, an assistant in the employ of Dr. John D. Ferguson of Manchester, N. H., were indicted as principals who performed an illegal operation.

Dr. Ferguson, whose information given the Manchester police resulted in the discovery of Miss Bolduc's body, was indicted in four counts as an accessory before and after the fact. Mrs. Shattuck and Hattie M. Hezlitt, who was employed in the Shattuck apartment, also are indicted in four counts as accessories before and after the crime.

Six Hundred Moros Forced to Capitulate to American Troops

Manila, Dec. 27.—The Moros, who several days ago retired to the top of Bud Dajo, in the island of Jolo, which they had fortified, have capitulated to the American troops.

The Moros numbered 600 and defied an ultimatum issued by Brigadier General Pershing, ordering the disarmament of natives in the district. Their supplies were cut off, and they were surrounded by American infantry. Finally they were forced to yield through hunger, and marched out and laid down their arms.

Prior to the surrender a desperate band of twenty tried to force an outpost, but were repulsed. Several of the Moros were killed, but there were no American casualties.

Though prominent in politics for a number of years, Miss Hadrich is not a suffragette.

Shanghai, Dec. 27.—As no reply has yet been received by Tang Shao Yi to his dispatch to Premier Yuan Shi Kai pointing out that the acceptance of the idea of a republic is the only means of securing a peaceful solution, the revolutionaries are demanding vigorously the immediate election of a president of the republic and asking that the government of China shall be proceeded with without any further notice being taken of Pekin.

The revolutionaries are now showing a more united front than ever. Nanking is regarded by them as the most suitable place for the capital of the new republic.

THE COUNTRY'S MEAT SUPPLY

Was to Be Controlled by Beef Trust, It Is Contended

CAPITAL OF HALF A BILLION

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Details of the plan for a $500,000,000 merger of the Armour, Swift and Morris interests in 1902, by which the government contends it was sought to control the meat industry of the country, were revealed in the trial of the ten Chicago packers before United States District Judge Carpenter.

The contract, which was dated May 31, 1902, was read to the jury and offered in evidence by counsel for the government. The original agreement was produced in court by Albert H. Veeder, attorney for Swift & Co., who was called by the government as its first witness.

Attorney Veeder testified that the plans for the merger were abandoned, and that in March, 1903, the National Packing company was organized to operate certain independent packing companies purchased with a view of including them in the big company.

Under the terms of the agreement, the three large packing corporations and their subsidiary companies, together with recently acquired independent companies, were to be merged into one concern.

The indicted men are J. Ogden Armour, president of Armour & Co.; Louis F. Swift, president of Swift & Co.; Edward F. Swift, vice president of Swift & Co.; Edward Morris, president of Morris & Co.; Edward Tilden, president of the National Packing company; Arthur Meeker, general manager of Armour & Co.; Thomas J. Connors, superintendent of Armour & Co.; Louis H. Hayman, general manager of Morris & Co., and Francis A. Fowler, department manager of Swift & Co.

Armour, Swift and Morris were to receive bonds and preferred stock of the new company in payment for the value of their tangible property. In addition to this, the promoters were to receive $25,000,000 worth of the new company's stock for intangible property and a large block of common stock for their good will, this amount to be fixed by the earnings of the different plants during the first year of the new merger.

The promoters planned to borrow $90,000,000 to finance the corporation. The apraised valuation of Armour, Swift, Morris and their subsidiary companies was given at $180,000,000. Each of the three promoters deposited $1,000,000 with a Chicago bank as an evidence of good faith, but they were compelled to drop the plan because of the failure of certain New York capitalists to furnish the funds needed.

Veeder was on the witness stand throughout the day and will continue his testimony today.

Previous to the calling of Veeder to the stand the defense made an unsuccessful attempt to have excluded from the government's case all transactions prior to 1905 on the ground that the immunity plea which freed the packers when they were indicted seven years ago should apply to that period.

Counsel for the packers put their motion in writing, but Judge Carpenter, while reserving his decision to give the government time to reply, indicated that he would deny the motion.

WHOLE TOWN IS DIGGING

Sunken Spanish Treasure Believed to Be In Georgia River

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 27.—Digging for gold has become a regular occupation of settlers along the St. Mary's river from King's Ferry to Coleraine. Near the latter place the inhabitants are especially active.

The work has progressed to such an extent that a levee has been constructed along a portion of the river to keep the water back when the tide is high in order that there may be no interference with the search for the treasure believed to have been sunk there during the Spanish occupation. The entire population of Coleraine is digging in the swamps.

WINS SCHOOL DEBATE BY WHISKY EXHIBIT

Schoolboy Startles His Audience In a Prohibition State

Atlanta, Dec. 27.—The production of a flask of whiskey by a student at the boys' high school during the course of a debate on the subject, "Resolved, that Georgia's present prohibition law should be repealed," had a potent influence in persuading the judges to grant a decision in favor of the affirmative.

L. A. Pinkussohn, the leader of the affirmative, was striving to convince the judges that the prohibition law was a failure, and that it was not being enforced and could not be. He charged that it was being violated every day, and, as proof of his statement, startled the large audience of students and parents by pulling from his pocket a flask of whiskey, which he dramatically waved before them, exclaiming:

"This flask was purchased by me, a minor, a student of the boys' high school, within a stone's throw of where I am standing."

PROGRESSIVES IN ACTION

La Follette, Clapp and Others Begin Their Campaign In Ohio

Columbus, O., Dec. 27.—Intending chiefly to endeavor to swing sentiment to the Ohio Progressive Republican league supporting the presidential candidacy of Senator Robert La Follette, the whirlwing campaign of progressive orators in Ohio started last night. Senator Clapp, one of the original La Follette presidential advocates, opened the campaign with an address at Salem.

Senator La Follette invaded President Taft's home state today. Gifford Pinchot will deliver two addresses in behalf of the progressives and Senator Miles Poindexter one.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 27.—While in a fit of insanity Mrs. Charles Carle of Waterloo attempted to kill her five children with a paring knife. Two of the children, Mildred, aged 2, and Alfred, aged 1, were so severely slashed that they were removed to a hospital. Three other children escaped by running.

The frenzied woman then turned the knife on herself in an attempt to commit suicide and succeeded in cutting an artery in her wrist. She is in a serious condition.

FOR seven mortal years on end
Sim Lucas courted Mary Burr
Till folks begun to apperhend
He wouldn't never capture her.

An' swore, by jing, he'd never quit
Till she give in an' named the day
When she'd love, honor an' obey.

HE'D dog her ev'rywhere she'd go.
No other feller got a chance
To take her out to any show
Or party, festival or dance.
An' allus of a Sunday night
We'd see the same familiar sight
Of Sim a-waitin' by the door
To take her home f'm church once more.

THE women all took sides with Sim,
An' some talked plain to Mary Burr,

As jes' the fittin' man fer her.
But Mary wouldn't budge a peg.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Joan returns with the Martha in good condition. Her white assistants describe her business shrewdness. Sheldon refuses to let her run the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

They were ten picked men that filed up on the veranda and stood in the glare of the lanterns. Their heavy, muscular legs advertised that they were bushmen. Killing was their natural vocation, not weed cutting; and, while they would not have ventured the Guadalcanar bush alone, with a white man like Sheldon behind them, and a white Mary such as they knew Joan to be, they could expect a safe and delightful time. Besides, the great master had told them that the eight gigantic Tahitians were going along.

"Plenty strong fella fight," Sheldon warned them in conclusion.

They grinned and shifted delightedly.

"S'pose bushmen kai-kai along you?" he queried.

"No fear," answered their spokesman, one Koogoo, a strapping, thick-lipped Ethiopian looking man. "S'pose Poonga-Poonga boy kai-kai bush boy?"

Sheldon shook his head, laughing, and dismissed them and went to overhaul the dunnage room for a small shelter tent for Joan's use.

It was quite a formidable expedition that departed from Berande at break of day next morning in a fleet of canoes and dingeys. There were Joan and Sheldon, with Binu Charley and Loisiegu, the eight Tahitians and the ten Poonga-Poonga men, each proud in the possession of a bright and shining modern rifle.

Binu Charley led the way onward into the rolling foothills, following the trail made by Tudor and his men weeks before. That night they camped well into the hills and deep in the tropic jungle. The third day found them on the runways of the bushmen—narrow paths that compelled single file and that turned and twisted with endless convolutions through the dense undergrowth.

Here, in the midmorning, the first casualty occurred. Binu Charley had dropped behind for a time and Koogoo, the Poonga-Poonga man who had boasted that he would eat the bushmen, was in the lead. Joan and Sheldon heard the twanging thrum and saw Koogoo throw out his arms, at the same time dropping his rifle, stumble forward and sink down on his hands and knees. Between his naked shoulders, low down and to the left, appeared the bone barbed head of an arrow. He had been shot through and through. Cocked rifles swept the bush with nervous apprehension, but there was no rustle, no movement; nothing but the humid, oppressive silence.

"Bushmen he no stop," Binu Charley called out, the sound of his voice startling more than one of them.

"My word! Look 'm that fella," he continued, brushing aside the leafy wall of the runway, and exposing a bow so massive that no one bushman could have bent it.

The Binu man traced out the mechanics of the trap and exposed the hidden fiber in the tangled undergrowth that at contact with Koogoo's foot had released the taut bow.

They were deep in the primeval forest. Binu Charley took the lead as they pushed on, and trap after trap yielded its secret lurking place to his keen scrutiny. The way was beset with a thousand annoyances, chiefest among which were thorns, cunningly concealed, that penetrated the bare feet of the invaders. Once, during the afternoon, Binu Charley barely missed being impaled in a staked pit that undermined the trail. There were times when all stood still and waited for half an hour or more, while Binu Charley prospected suspicious parts of the trail.

Where a slight runway entered the main one Sheldon paused and asked Binu Charley if he knew where it led.

"Plenty bush fella garden he stop along there short way little bit," was the answer. "All right you like 'm go look 'm along. Walk 'm easy," he cautioned a few minutes later. "Close up, that fella garden. S'pose some bush fella he stop, we catch 'm."

Creeping ahead and peering into the clearing for a moment, Binu Charley beckoned Sheldon to come on cautiously. Joan crouched beside him and together they peeped out. On one edge of the clearing was a small grass house, open sided, a mere rain shelter. In front of it, crouched on his hams before a fire, was a gaunt and bearded bushman. The fire seemed to smoke excessively, and in the thick of the smoke a round dark object hung suspended. The bushman seemed absorbed in contemplation of this object.

Warning them not to shoot unless the man was successfully escaping, Sheldon beckoned the Poonga-Poonga men forward. Before the bushman could shoot his swift enemies were upon him. He was rolled over and over and dragged to his feet, disarmed and helpless.

"Why, he's an ancient Babylonian!" Joan cried, regarding him. "He's an Assyrian, a Phoenician! Look at that straight nose, that narrow face, those high cheek bones and that slanting, oval forehead and the beard and the eyes too."

IN FRONT OF IT CROUCHED A BEARDED BUSHMAN.

"And the snaky locks," Sheldon laughed.

"My word, bush fella kai-kai along that fella boy," Binu Charley remarked.

So stolid was his manner of utterance that Joan turned carelessly to see what had attracted his attention and found herself face to face with Gogoomy. At least it was the head of Gogoomy—the dark object they had seen hanging in the smoke.

Nor was Joan's horror lessened by the conduct of the Poonga-Poonga boys. On the instant they recognized the head, and on the instant rose their wild hearty laughter as they explained to one another in shrill falsetto voices. Gogoomy's end was a joke. He had been foiled in his attempt to escape. He had played the game and lost. And what greater joke could there be than that the bushmen should have eaten him?

The Poonga-Poonga men's laughter died down, and they regarded the spectacle with glittering eyes and gluttonous expressions. The Tahitians, on the other hand, were shocked, and Adamu Adam was shaking his head slowly and grunting forth his disgust. Joan was angry. Her face was white, but in each cheek was a vivid spray of red. Disgust had been displaced by wrath, and her mood was clearly vengeful.

Sheldon laughed.

"It's nothing to be angry over," he said. "You mustn't forget that he hacked off Kwaque's head and that he ate one of his own comrades that ran away with him.

"And don't forget," Sheldon added, "that he is the son of a chief and that as sure as fate his Port Adams tribesmen will take a white man's head in payment."

"It is all so ghastly ridiculous," Joan finally said.

"And—er—romantic," he suggested slyly.

She did not answer and turned away, but Sheldon knew that the shaft had gone home.

MAKING BEETS POPULAR.

MANY families do not care for beets because they are always served to them in the old fashioned form of boiled beets dressed with butter. There is no reason why they should not appear in a dozen different styles.

Boiled beets are often spoiled by cutting them when they are peeled. Boiling cut or scraped beets destroys their flavor and color.

Only tender beets should be selected for cooking, a tough or stringy beet being hopeless. You can't boil it tender.

For the Table.

Young or tender beets are the only kinds to boil. They may be sliced for the table, dressed with butter and pepper and salt or cut in dice and dressed with white sauce.

Pickled beets are spiced and served with vinegar. They make a nice relish.

Beets may be cut into dice, into strips, into slices or into fancy forms and used.

Any of the vegetables left over from dinner can be made into a luncheon salad with beets. Peas, beans, beets or asparagus tips are excellent for this purpose. Tomatoes, lettuce and cucumbers require only a few minutes to prepare. Add cold meats diced with nuts, celery or cabbage. All of these can be dressed with mayonnaise.

Egg and Beet Salad.—Beets in thin slices may be alternated with slices of hard boiled egg on a base of lettuce leaves and dressed with mayonnaise.

Use of Beets.

Beet Pudding.—Boil new beets until they are tender, then peel and cut in dice. Take a pint of milk to a pint of beets, two or three beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste and grated nutmeg. Put these into a baking dish and bake until the custard has set. Serve hot.

Beet and Celery Salad.—Cut up a boiled beet into thin slices and steep in vinegar, pepper and salt. Prepare in the same way some potatoes, a few celery roots and, if liked, a few mushrooms. Season with salt, pepper, oil and vinegar and a little chopped pepper and tarragon. Drain and pour mayonnaise over it.

Latticed Beets.—Take the cutter used for latticed potatoes and cut slices of beets into lattices. Combine these with chopped celery and cut up olives. Lay on lettuce leaves and dress with mayonnaise and slices of hard boiled eggs.

NEW MOVE IN THAW'S BEHALF

Trial by Jury as to Sanity of Stanford White's Slayer

RELEASE WITHIN TWO MONTHS

Matteawan, N. Y., Dec. 27.—From a source of reliability which cannot be questioned has come an announcement that Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, who has been a patient in the state hospital for the criminal insane here for several years, will be a free man within two months. The information comes from one close to the Thaws and to the hospital authorities, though permission to make public the name of the informant is emphatically denied.

For many months the Thaws have been preparing for another attempt to effect the liberty of the slayer. Detectives have been in their constant employ, and prominent New York lawyers, among them Clarence J. Shearn, have been in constant touch with Thaw. Representatives of the lawyers have visited the hospital and have had many conferences with Thaw.

The plan decided upon is to obtain another writ of habeas corpus and demand a trial by jury as to the sanity of the patient. It was said by the informant that Dr. May, medical superintendent of Matteawan, would be called to testify as to Thaw's sanity, and that May would state that since he has been watching Thaw he has not noticed any evidences of dangerout insanity.

Dr. May was asked some time ago to make a statement as to Thaw's condition, and refused. He said he would do so if Thaw ever demanded another hearing, but as a state official he did not think it would be just for him to do so before testifying in court.

The informant also stated that Evelyn Thaw had stood in the way of his release for some time by alleging that he had threatened to kill her if he was freed. It was stated that she was soon to marry again, and was now planning a divorce. A New York physician is said to be her intended husband.

Thaw some days ago informed one of the inmates in his ward with whom he has been quite friendly that he had only a few more months to stay at the hospital, but warned his friend not to repeat the statement to any one. Several attendants who come in close contact with Thaw state that they are willing to testify that they have watched him carefully for a long time and that no evidence of insanity is noticeable.

Boston Politician Wanted by Police Is on Way to Chile

Boston, Dec. 27.—Frank J. Linehan, former state senator from Boston and a fugitive from justice, is now on his way to Valparaiso, Chile, according to a friend who is in a position to know. It is said that Linehan selected Chile for his refuge because the treaty between that nation and the United States does not provide for extradition in cases involving charges similar to those pending in his case.

Linehan, who was under $5000 bonds, failed to appear for trial on an indictment charging him with conspiracy, forgery and uttering, larceny and receiving stolen goods in connection with alleged lumber frauds on the city of Boston. He has defaulted and has not yet been arrested.

DISTURBANCE ON TROLLEY CAR

Lands Party of Seven In Court This Morning

CASE GOES OVER

One adult and six juveniles were arrested at Braintree Thursday night, for creating a disturbance on the street cars. They are some of those employed in one of the shoe factories and are inclined to be rather fresh. They have an idea that it is funny to rock the car, pull the bell rope and otherwise make themselves a nuisance to the passengers.

Tuesday night they were particularly obnoxious and the police made a raid on the car and placed the gang under arrest. They were all in court this morning and their cases went over for hearing until next Tuesday. As stated above, the most of the offenders are juveniles and under the law their names can not be used.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Any one who has seen the two basket ball teams of the Quincy Athletic Association perform this season, need be told othing further concerning what is to be expected when the strong teams of St. Mary's Association in Charlestown invade St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, Friday evening for the rst time this season. Basket ball has been given an boom in local circles this year, through the efforts of the Temple street organization and the number of fans noticeable in attendance at each game is sufficient proof that the games are meeting with approval, and at the same time creating intense enthusiasm.

The members of both teams of the Quincy A. A. can compare favorably with the best players on any of the teamsteams that now constitute the league, and any one who has not seen a local basket ball game this season, will be amply repaid for his trouble of journeying to West Quincy tomorrow evening. Those who have seen other games, require no further words with reference to the calibe of team work displayed. The schedul is now well under way and a good crowd of rooters will prove an invaluable asset in enabling te local boys to carry the honors.

A soccer football contest of the high order, one too that is being awaited with keen anxiety by all local lovers of the pastime, is billed for next Saturday afternoon, at the Fore River grounds, when the strong Howard and Bullough combination try conclusions for the American cup honors, in the fourth tie off, with the Fore River contingency. The local team has been putting in some strenuous practise during the past week and the game Saturday afternoon, which will be walied promptly at 2.45 o'clock, will certainly be a struggle for blood.

From start to finish, there will not be a dull or idle moment, for the rivalry that exists between both faction is of the most intense kind. The game, from present indications, will be the best ever played on the local grounds and any one who absents himself from it will miss an attraction rarely offered.

A roller skating race is to take place at the Coliseum this evening an the manageunt has made preparations to accommodate a large crowd.

If the entries that have been rereived and the reputations of those who are to compete can be taken as any assurances of what is to occur, then the second annual indoor meet of the Italian American A. C., to be held i the Coliseum on the evening of the first day of the coming year, should resolve into one of the best indoor attractions ever offered to the local sporting bloods. Athletes will come fro all quarters and the headliners that have already been announced are sufficient to prove a great drawing card for hundreds of local sporting bloods. Numerous local runners have also entered and the meet will no doubt be a gala one from every standpoint.

Mrs. George W. Morton of Spear street is enjoying a visit from her sister and husband Mr. and Mrs. Paul P. Baxter of Ketchum, Idaho, formerly ofthis city.

A ROPE OF WATER.

Berthelot's Test That Showed Its Tensile Strength.

THE COHESION OF MATTER.

Perfect Planes of Metal or Glass When Brought Into Contact Will Adhere to One Another as Though They Were Glued Together.

It is well known that liquids are among the least compressible of substances; this in spite of the fact that they have the property of conforming to any shape of vessel or of yielding to any forces, no matter how small, which tend to change only their shape.

Thus, to squeeze water into nine-tenths of its volume under ordinary conditions would require a pressure of no less than 3,000 atmospheres, or 45,600 pounds, to the square inch. This property of being almost incompressible is best illustrated perhaps by an experiment tried centuries ago, wherein an attempt was made to compress water by filling a leaden shell with it and then, after closing, hammering and squeezing the shell. The only effect of the tremendous pressures produced in this way was to cause the water to penetrate the minute pores of the lead and exude in drops like perspiration on the outer surface of the shell. The same effect was found for a silver shell.

But, while it is a familiar fact that liquids will resist an enormous force of compression, the companion fact that they are also capable of withstanding tension is not so generally known. At first sight this statement may appear ridiculous. When water may be so readily dipped from a pail or poured from one vessel to another, how can it be capable of withstanding tension? If, however, we prevent change of form we find that pure water is capable of bearing fifty atmospheres of tension, or 750 pounds to the square inch.

If it was possible, then, to utilize this property by making a "rope" of water we should find it capable of sustaining a good fraction of the weight that could be borne by an ordinary rope of the same size. But it must be admitted that the task of making a rope out of such material would be rather difficult, to say the least, notwithstanding the fact that it possesses this desirable property of tensile strength. Because of its inability to resist a deforming force it would have to be inclosed in a tube; but, while it would here be in condition to withstand compression, as from a piston in the tube, any attempt at "stretching" the liquid in this way would simply result in pulling away the piston from the water surface.

However, this tensile strength was actually found by Berthelot in the following way: A strong glass tube sealed at one end and drawn out very fine at the other was filled nearly full of water and then closed. The tube was then cautiously heated until the water had expanded and completely filled it. It was then slowly and carefully cooled back to its original temperature, when it was found that the water had not contracted, but still filled the tube.

It is almost a universal law that a small extension in volume of a body requires the same magnitude of force to produce it as to cause a similar amount of compression, the forces, however, being tension in one case and compression in the other. With this law in mind it is readily seen that the water that now fills the tube must be under tension, since previously at the same temperature it did not quite fill the tube—that is, it has actually been stretched or expanded beyond its normal volume for this temperature, and from our knowledge of the forces that would be required to produce the corresponding compression we can figure out what this tension must be.

The ultimate particles or molecules of matter we believe to be held together by powerful forces, known variously as cohesion or adhesion, but being in any case forces of attraction, and these forces tend to prevent any expansion of the matter, be it solid or liquid. It might be thought that these forces would cause two bodies in contact to adhere to each other, but particles have to be so near together to be acted upon by them that it is difficult to bring bodies into such close contact that an appreciable area of one is within this distance of the other.

However, two clean pieces of lead can readily be pressed so closely together that they will adhere, and a set of copper cubes was once made with such true faces that when a dozen of them were piled one on top of the other the series adhered together so well that the whole could be lifted from the top one. But the best example is furnished by pieces of optical glass whose surfaces have been worked so plane that when pressed together they will as readily break at some other spot as at this plane.

Perhaps it is unfortunate that these useful forces, which hold all matter together and keep it from collapsing into impalpable dust, are confined in their action to such a limited range. If this were not so, a break of any sort could be fixed by merely bringing together the broken ends. Glue of any kind would be unnecessary.

But even this state of affairs would have its drawbacks. A book laid on a table would have to be pried off with a wedge, and the same instrument would be required to open it. Everything would stick to everything else, and the pleasure of walking would be lost in the tedious process of prying first one foot and then the other from the viselike grip of the sidewalk or the floor.—Boston Post.

GALA TIME AT ANNUAL DANCE

Italian Mutual Relief Society Celebrates In St. Mary's Hall

OFFICERS ELECTED

St. Mary's hall, West Quincy was the mecca of attraction for fully four hundred people Tuesday evening, the occasion being the twenty-first annual dance of the Italian Mutual Relief Society. The event is always looked forward to with great interest by the Italian inhabitants of the city, and the affair last evening greatly eclipsed any of the dances held in previous years.

The Hancock orchestra of five pieces furnished music, and after a number of selections, played from eight until nine o'clock, dancing was in order until two this morning, with a short intermission taking place at eleven o'clock. Refreshments were served during the evening and the affair was pronounced most enjoyable from every standpoint.

Salta Lamanchi was in charge of the floor and was assisted by the following aids: G. Malnati, O. Muretti, L. Mereo, R. Piccinio, C. Pagnani, P. Rizzi, A. Rizzi, P. Rasetti, A. Realini, G. Regianini, E. Tettimelli, F. Tolari, G. Taltalmacclida, G. Tartori, F. Tartori, C. Cantardini, T. Vergobbi, F. Vergobbi and C. Guerra.

The officers of the society for the coming year are: L. Guiseppini, president; H. Muretti, vice president; J. Benedetti, recording secretary; and V. Albonetti, financial secretary.

IN AID OF DAY NURSERY.

A very pretty dancing party was given in Colonial hall Tuesday evening in aid of the Day Nursery. The patronesses were Mrs. Paul R. Blackmar, Mrs. Charles M. Bryant and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Odd Way the Plays Were Recorded Back In the Sixties.

The baseball public of today, accustomed to the minute reporting of games, wherein each run is compounded and many a play analyzed, is offered the account of a game played in Syracuse in 1868. The contestants were the Central Citys of Syracuse and the Athletics of Philadelphia, and the score was 41 to 12.

The game was delayed a half hour by the difficulty in finding an umpire. Then the report goes on to state:

"The game opened loosely upon both sides, and at the end of the first innings the score stood Athletics 5, Central City 4, each side making its tallies promptly from the loose playing of the out club. After the first inning the Athletics played more carefully, while the Central Citys grew more careless until the fifth inning, when they became more demoralized than was the Union army at the battle of Bull Run.

"Considerable dissatisfaction was manifested and expressed, and in two innings rightfully so, at the evident one sided decisions of the umpire.

"We will not particularize, but suffice to say that several of the players on both sides did well, while others, especially the Central City side, were not fully up to their standard efforts. The following is the

CARING FOR CUT GLASS.

How to Handle Delicate Ware So It Will Retain Beauty.

It is seldom that the girl who sells the cut glass in the big department stores can tell you precisely what to do in order to preserve these beautiful and expensive articles, but one young lady, who owns several costly pieces and who is overenthusiastic concerning them, says that with the proper care they are a joy forever and a delight to behold.

As a warning she says that it requires considerably more care and attention than does silverware, as cut glass will not stand any rough handling while being polished. This brittle article is actually the most fragile in the world of the housewife. It seems to await its chance to shatter, and therefore if the following rules are adhered to breakage will be reduced to the smallest percentage:

Keep it in a china closet that has a rail or support that will avert its slipping.

Make sure that the shelf is strong to hold the weight if the pieces are large.

Never rinse under running water.

Prepare water for washing in a wooden pan or dish tub and fold a towel on the bottom so that the pieces can rest on its cushiony layers.

Make the water tepid, add ammonia and have just a good white soap, a camel's hair brush (sold for this purpose) and a lintless cloth.

Rinse with water of the same temperature and dry with a soft towel, polishing afterward with tissue paper that comes for this purpose, or you can use a new clean chamois.

Do not put grease of any kind in these pieces, not even butter, as grease makes them cloudy, and you can never polish them as brightly after so using.

Brushing should always be done with the softest brushes procurable. Stiff brushes scratch unmercifully. But a brush must be used to clean the crevices, so it cannot be dispensed with.

Never use tacks or buckshot to clean the inside of bottles, jugs and pitchers, but the ground shell of an egg, salt and lemon or a little white vinegar.

A piece of raw potato soaked in a carafe or any of the deeper pieces will help to make brightening a light task and cleaning still easier.

Liberty and Independence.

When the presidential struggle between Clay and Jackson was at its height it is related that a band of emigrants from Kentucky and the then other western states commenced to settle on the north side of the Missouri river and called their county Clay and the county seat Liberty.

At the same time another lot of emigrants from Virginia and other southern states pitched their tents on the south side of the Big Muddy and called their county Jackson and the capital Independence. And so it remains to this day. Clay stood for liberty and Jackson for independence.

Ancient Greeks Had Trades.

In the days of their greatest prosperity the Greeks probably excelled all other nations in the variety and excellence of their manufactures. Their sons were often the great scientists of their age, for Thales of Miletus, one of the "seven wise men of antiquity," was an oil merchant; Socrates was a stone mason, who, like Hugh Miller, left the quarry and bench to become the teacher of nobles; Aristotle compounded drugs while trying to solve his "problems," apparently proposed by other tradesmen, artists, musicians, architects and engineers; Plato and Solon had callings as well as studies and political activities. So, too, all were soldiers, and few men in Athens failed to take their places in the phalanx or galley when Athens called on her sons to battle.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Mayor-Elect Stone Takes Over Office Of Chief Executive On That Day At Noon

Brief Sketches Of Members Of City Council

MAYOR-ELECT EUGENE R. STONE

The twenty-fourth year of the City government of Quincy will be inaugurated at 12 o'clock noon next Monday, and although the ceremony will follow that of other years, the fact that Mayor Shea who has been the Chief Executive for four years, retires, and a new Mayor takes the reins of the city, will be inducement enough to attract a large audience, that they may hear first hand, what recommendations the new Mayor may have to make, as to the policy he intends to carry out during the year.

The councilmen elect are expected to be seated inside the enclosure as early at 11.55, for promptly on the hour, the inaugural party will enter the chamber. They will come from the first floor by the stairway near the reporters' table. First will come City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, who has performed the same function during all these years. Then will come Mayor Shea and Mayor elect Stone, City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray and Rev. Charles P. Marshall of the Washington street Congregational church, the chaplain of the day.

The City Clerk will preside during the first part of the ceremony. His first duty will be to administer the oath of office to the Mayor elect. He will then call the roll of Councilmen elect, who will rise and be administered the oath of office.

The new Mayor will then be presented and will deliver his inaugural address. The address will probably be about the usual length and as in other years the Mayor will doubtless omit the reading of several pages of figures, as they will appear in print that same afternoon in the Ledger.

This over, the council will proceed to organize by the election of a President. This will be done by roll call, each councilman as his name is called giving the name of his choice. After the President has been sworn in, the City Clerk will step down to the clerk's desk and the council will proceed to the election of a clerk, clerk of committees, City Messenger, and City Auditor. The clerk of the Council will be sworn, and the council is then in position to go ahead with business.

The first thing on the program will be the drawing of seats. Usually a motion is voted that the old members be permitted to retain their old seats.

This over, a motion is usually made to adopt the rules of the Council of 1911 as the rules for 1912.

Communications are then received from the Mayor and these will include among other things the appointment of a hundred or more constables.

There are usually a number of stereotyped orders introduced the first meeting. These include orders authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of taxes; authorizing the Mayor to have his inaugural address and the reports of the city officials printed; authorizing the clerk to have the calendar and rules printed and authorizing the Mayor to sign deeds and releases of the Adams Temple and school fund. With one exception, these orders are usually adopted. The one exception is the order borrowing money in anticipation of taxes. This is referred either to a special committee or to the Finance committee when appointed.

OFFICIAL IS ON THE JOB

Sealer of Weights Cantfill Overcomes Difficulty

ABOUT SWORN WEIGHERS

Complaint has been made that the Wollaston Coal Co., is not living up to the law in regard to having its coal weighed by a sworn weigher. The citizens need have no apprehension on that score however, as the Sealer of Weights and Measures, James M. Cantfill is on his job. Some days ago he visited the plant at Wollaston and sealed the platform scales used in weighing coal and informed the company that its coal must be weighed by swern weighers. The Company therefore applied for the appointment of two weighers, which as is well known the City Council did not confirm but laid on the table. This left the company without its own weigher. This morning Sealer Cantfill again visited te plant at Wollaston and found that this temporary difficulty had been overcome by the employment of Frank Curtis who is a sworn city weigher. It is understood that the teams are loaded during the morning and Mr. Curtis goes down in the afteroon and weighs the coal. Sealer Cantfill is keeping a close watch to see that the law is not violated. It is understood that new applications have been made to the Mayor for appointment of weighers and action on them will come up before the next City Council.

It is claimed by the coal Company that the City Council has no right to interfere with its doing a legitimate business by refusing to confirm the appointment of their weighers and that the courts have so decided. It is claimed that a test case has been tried out similar to the situation that now exists here and the court has decided against te Council.

Should the new council refuse to confirm the appointment, it looks as though there might be some interesting developments.

ASKS RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS TO INVESTIGATE

Watson B. Fearing of Weymouth has sent a communication to the Railroad Commissioners asking the board to investigate the question of rates for the shipment of milk over the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Mr. Fearing says that he ships milk from Weymouth and East Milton to Quincy, Hingham and Dorchester, and that he has to pay 5 cents a can and 13 3-4 cents for the large-sized cans, and he believes this to be more than the railroad charge on large shipments. He says he believes it is more than the company charges for longer hauls. He therefore asks the Board to ascertain what the tariff is, compare the different rates, if there are any, and to recommend a reduction on the can rate.

WINNERS AT GRANITE CITY WHIST

Some good scores were made at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. The top score was made by F. E. Wharton who won 52 points and lost 10, giving him 83-9 per cent. G. H. Field was second with 42 won and 17 lost a percentage of 71-1.

The monthly prizes were awarded to G. H. Field, F. E. Wharton and William E. Hingston. As usual a lunch was served after the tournment.

WANT MORE MEMBERS

Order of Moose Will Try To Increase To 600

INITIATION

A largely attended meeting of the Quincy lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, was held Wednesday evening in Greenleaf hall. Vice dictator Oscar S. Sandberg, presided owing to the inability of Dictator Leon C. Claflin, te perform the duties owing to sickness. Twenty-two members were initiated.

JOSEPH HALTER.

The degree work was ably exemplified by the regular degree team, under the direction of Edward Killin. A noticeable feature of the occasion was the presentation to the local lodge of a large moose head by Geo. Martell, who secured it from a friend who had shot the moose in Maine. A committee of three, consisting of Oscar S. Sandberg, Leon C. Claflin, and Edward Wexler, were appointed to have the moose head properly mounted and placed in the lodge rooms.

National Organizer Arthur W. Hayden was present and gave a very interesting and instructive talk, at the same time urging the members to increase their numbers to 600, so that work on the new clubhouse could be started at once. It was also announced at the meeting that Leon C. Claflin, the present dictator, had been appointed deputy supreme dictator for the order in the state of Massachusetts. This came in the form of a Christmas present to Dictator Claflin, who received the hearty congratulations of the various members on his election to the new office, at the conclusion of the meeting.

The time for the closing of the charter has been set for next Wednesday evening.

MADE HAPPY AT PRETTY XMAS PARTY

The Sunday school connected with the Universalist church gave a Christmas party and tree in the vestry last night. The vestry was full of children with their parents and friends. Rev. Fannie Austin the pastor, opened the exercises with the reading of "The Birds' Christmas Carol," by Kate Douglas Wiggin. A well-laden tree, which the children were looking upon with expectant eyes, was the grand feature of the evening. Santa Claus was present and each child was remembered generously. Miss Edith Hyland sang a solo and after the tree there were games and music. At the close of the exercises, Miss Austin bade the children goodnight, and extended to all present "A Happy New Year" greeting.

FINE SPEECHES ENLIVEN OLD SETTLERS' REUNION

Many Prominent Citizens Attend Annual Event In Protection Hall

Friendly Passage-At-Arms Between Notables

Every available seat was taken in Protection Hall, Wednesday evening, the occasion being the Old Settlers' reunion. Fully three hundred people taxed the scene of the gathering in observance of the annual event. The affair began at eight o'clock with a banquet and concluded with dancing at midnight. Many notable men were among those in attendance and the City Officials played a most conspicuous part in the celebration.

Seated at the head table were Mayor William T. Shea, Mayor-elect Eugene R. S. Stone, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg, Dr. John H. Ash, Representative-elect Walter E. Piper, William H. Teasdale, Otto Gellotte and Andrew Anderson. A very enhancing repast was partaken of, the menu comprising turkey, escalloped oysters, potato salad, lobster salad, rolls, coffee, ice cream, frozen pudding cake and fruit. At the conclusion of the banquet Otto Gelotte, in a few words, which were sincerely re-echoed by all, delivered the address of welcome for the Scandinavian Americans and introduced Andrew Anderson as the toastmaster of the evening.

Mr. Anderson proved himself equal to the occasion and began at once to give vent to merrymaking. In a humorous way, he introduced as the first speaker, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg, one of the foremost members of the association and a prime mover of the project of having such annual observance. Councilman Sandberg at once launched forth into his usual style and added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. Councilman Sandberg seemed to be unable to refrain from political discussions. He was about to tell a few things concerning City Hall affairs, but realizing that he had been limited to but five minutes, added: "The Mayor himself is here, and as he has had four years sway as chief executive, I feel that his remarks will be confined mostly to telling you how his office has been conducted during his regime." Councilman Sandberg felt sure, he asserted, that the Mayor's words would be greatly appreciated.

He then proceeded to talk upon the Old Settlers' Club and concluded by asking all to stand and drink a toast to the health of all who were gathered in the merry party. This concluded his part in the entertainment.

The toastmaster was keenly awakened to the situation and stated that since Mayor Shea had already been spoken of at length, it was only meet that he should be called upon to speak next. The Mayor was greeted by three vociferous cheers and the applause that went forth within the hall, was almost deafening. The Mayor, in his usual happy way, experienced no difficulty in finding words to convey his opinions to those present, and more than reverted the tables when he said, "Evidently my friend Sandberg has been the victim of some hallucination, for I am going to tell you nothing about the affairs of the city and I will make no mention at all regarding the manner in which I have performed my duties as chief executive during the past four years."

Mayor Shea then took occasion to pay tribute to Councilman Sandberg, who had always opposed him, but made a decided hit: when he said "Take politics away from Sandberg and you will be unable to find a better fellow. I have never heard him say anything against a man's character, but when he is involved in politics, he is to be carefully watched." His Honor refrained from talking on any political subject, confining himself solely to the advancement and progress of the Scandinavians whom he had met. The Mayor seemed to be a master of the history of the race and gave an instructive account of the development made by its members in this city.

Mayor Shea took those present by surprise when he said, "I am out of politics for good, but in the future, as has been the case in the past, I will always entertain a deep affection in my heart for the members of your race, who so loyally rallied to my support while I was a candidate for office and I desire to take this opportunity to express to you my heartfelt appreciation for the support you have given me and for the confidence and esteem you have displayed at all times in my behalf. I have always endeavored to conduct the affairs of the city in an unbiased manner and I now feel that the honor conferred upon me for the past four years by the citizens of Quincy will allow me to rest safe in the satisfaction that my endeavors have met with success." The Mayor was given great applause when he concluded his remarks.

Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone was given a reception similar to that accored Mayor Shea. He said that he esteemed it a great pleasure to be present and thanked those who have supported him the past campaign, assuring them at the same time that he

From the way some of the politicians talk, you would think God was under the special protection of their party.

As Gen. Wood says this country is not prepared for war, we trust Congress will restrain its desires and decide not to have any.

The modern hustle for money suggests that some people have forgotten that the present styles for shrouds have no pockets.

The Supreme Court is trying to reduce the cost of litigation. This is right. Public amusements should be provided at popular prices.

The farmers who discuss the price of butter should get down back of the horse sheds where none of the police can overhear them combining in restraint of trade.

The scenes described in Dante's Inferno have been considered rather fanciful, but not by any one who ever did shopping the night before Christmas in the big cities.

The artists complain that wealthy people are buying automobiles instead of pictures. That gives the artists a fine chance to paint automobile bodies, thereby getting money to cut their hair and give the children a turkey dinner.

Somerville residents believe that to keep its good teachers and maintain a standard of instruction, salaries should be increased to allow teachers to meet the increased cost of living and have circulated the following petition:

"Inasmuch as the standing of the Somerville schools is threatened by the present low salaries of the elementary teachers, we, the undersigned citizens of Somerville, do therefore respectfully petition that the elementary teachers of the city be granted such increase in the remuneration for their services as will save the city from sinking to an inferior place in the educational work of the Commonwealth and enable these teachers to meet justly the increased cost of living."

The elementary teachers have been making a fight for more pay for some time. The present expenditure for schools in the city is approximately $300,000 per year. The question will come up before next year's board of aldermen, which has the power to make the necessary appropriation.

THE NEWSPAPER AND THE COMMUNITY.

We never knew a newspaper so yellow and sloppy and inaccurate that it did not have one good side, its interest in home betterment. It has become a fundamental tradition of the newspaper profession ,that it must give its cordial support to any proposition tending to advance the interest of the local community.

If a yellow newspaper feels this obligation, how much more does it rest on the heart of newspaper workers who take a serious view of their obligation toward the community. Hence publishers and editors feel a keen desire for heart to heart talks with their readers, to know what suggestions they can make as to lines of town betterment for which their journal might exert its influence.

We might therefore take occasion to say, that if any of our readers have suggestions to make tending to the upbuilding of this community, why not write us a letter for publication, or come in and talk it over?

As the relation between a community and the newspaper is a reciprocal one, so the newspaper can not accomplish the largest results without the cordial backing of the locality whom it represents. In towns where merchants don't advertise much, and people borrow their newspaper copies of a neighbor, public journals do not give an attractive picture of the place when they circulate about the state.

The more liberal the backing given a newspaper, the more it can improve. In our experience of newspaper life, we have found that most publishers put the bulk of increased returns back into their property. An increase of sales and advertising means more up to date presses and type setting machinery, cleaner typographical appearance, more money spent for reporting, correspondence and editorial work.

As a newspaper thus grows in attractiveness, it grows in power. It is read with keener attention in newspaper offices, legislative halls, and business places far and near. An impression is given around the state that the town it represents is growing more prosperous. Hence every time you advertise or subscribe for a local newspaper, you at the same time help build up a far reaching agency for community promotion.

FAST LIVING OF TODAY.

On President Taft's last visit to New York, he declared in an address that one of the chief faults of our age is that people are living too fast. Yet at the very time he was handing out this sage advice, Mr. Taft was doing a day's work consisting of speaking at five dinners, laying a cornerstone, doing Christmas shopping, and receiving political leaders, not to speak of the railroad journey from and to Washington.

Thus it happens that the simple life preachers often live a life of extreme complexity. President Taft's best friends would tell him that he should stop fast living himself and remain in Washington getting up sleep in anticipation of prospective vigils with Congress.

And yet men who are doing big work like our presidents and captains of industry usually seem much less flustered than comparatively leisurely people, who hustle down to breakfast mornings as if they were taking a boat for Europe and it was the last one for a month.

The secret of doing large work calmly is to make the other fellow do the little things. We once knew the superintendent of a factory employing 100 men, who would take an hour or two of his own time to build a box that he could have bought of a carpenter for fifty cents. At the same time the expansion of his business was being clogged by a lack of system and supervision, through which goods were not being delivered on time.

The Arabians have a proverb that "Hurry is the devil." They would not approve of the way Mr. Taft tears about the country, nor would they like the life of the American business man or society woman. Yet we shall never be content to live in tents, nor live solely on breakfast food, nor wear gingham uniforms, all of which would tend to a life as simple as that lived by the serene sons of the desert.

WHO IS IT?

Braintree has a resident who has always been called "a little odd"; and perhaps explains his reputation:—

He formerly lived with his father in Scituate, but about 20 years ago he built a new house. When he was driving out of his father's yard with his household goods, bound for the new house, the horses made the wrong turn. He let them go their own way; and they finally stopped away over in Braintree.

He then inquired for a vacant house, moved into one which he found, and has lived in Braintree ever since. "A little odd!"—Boston Record.

EARLY DAY CORONERS.

Their Inquests Covered a Wide Variety of Subjects.

It has been supposed and legal historians have told us that the office of coroner was originally instituted by King Alfred with that of the sheriff, both being designed to aid in keeping the peace when the earls gave up the wardships of the county. The legal historians are wrong, according to Dr. F. J. Waldo of the British Medico-Legal society, who has traced the history of the coroner and his ancient office as far back as the year 1194.

In early days the coroner had a wider and more general jurisdiction than he now enjoys. Coroners were wont to "hold their views" not only upon deaths where an investigation was considered necessary, but also upon various serious crimes which were treated as occasions for the raising of revenue for the crown. The mission of the coroner to the state was not alone to investigate crimes and bring felons to justice. He superintended the forfeiture of money and personal property by criminals to the crown, for the recording of which he was responsible. These forfeitures were not confined in cases of violence and death to the property of the person who could be held directly responsible, but included animals and instruments to which loss of human life under any circumstances might be traceable.—New York World.

NOVEL AND PRACTICAL.

To Mr. A. S. Campbell, a Boston man, belongs the distinction of inventing one of the most novel articles placed on the market within recent years. His invention is the "Cello" metallic hot water bottle, which, in a very short time has attained remarkable popularity and an enviable record of sales.

While the inventor is president of the A. S. Campbell Company, a Massachusetts corporation having a well established reputation in the manufacturing of electrical specialties for launches and automobiles, he saw the need for a hot water bottle which would combine beauty and utility with indestructibility and which would do away with accidents and dissatisfaction experienced so often in the use of rubber bottles. The result of his genius was the "Cello" hot water bottle which is made entirely of copper, heavily nickled, shaped to fit any part of the body, and so strongly braced by its scientific construction that one may sit or lie on its flat side without harming it.

At the New England Exposition under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of Boston, so well was the "Cello" hot water bottle received where it was first introduced to the public, and where hundreds of visitors were daily attracted to the company's neatly arranged booth, that it was made a regular product of the factory. Doctors and nurses who observed the "Cello" display at the fair recommended the bottle to hospitals, sanitariums, and to their patients. It was immediately adopted in the Massachusetts State Sanatorium for Tuberculosis, situated at North Reading, while inquiries have come from similar institutions in all parts of the country.

Since October first the sales of the "Cello" bottle have grown so rapidly that the capacity of the plant, although increased from time to time, has been severely taxed. In Boston, where the factory is situated, druggists and other dealers report an unparalleled demand, which is now being felt in surrounding towns.

A series of demonstrations by a nurse, started recently by the A. S. Campbell Company through cities lying north of Boston, created such a demand, that orders were received from all the druggists in the first city visited for the "Cello" bottle. So many requests for the services of the company's corps of trained nurse demonstrators followed, that they are booked ahead for months.

Braintree's two local druggists F. A. Smith and W. A. Torrey, receiving a large number of inquiries, placed orders for the "Cello" hot water bottle through Mr. P. Robinson, a member of the Campbell firm, residing in Braintree.

An "ad" appearing in the Observer, together with the window displays, resulted in the sale of more than fifty of the "Cello" bottles during Christmas week. The local dealers anticipate further sales, and will have a sufficient number of bottles in stock to supply the trade.

During the Christmas rush the "Cello" factory has run night and day, producing a thousand of bottles a day in order to meet this great demand, and it is a tribute to the efficiency of the organization that all orders accepted up to date have been promptly filled.

Each step of the manufacturing process receives the personal supervision and care of the inventor, so that the company, already having a well established reputation in the making of electrical specialties, can readily stand back of the five year guarantee stamped on each "Cello" bottle.

RAILROAD CLOSES BIG COAL CONTRACT

Five Years' Supply Is Ordered For the Mellen System

Boston, Dec. 28.—Through the Boston office, the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad has just closed a five-year contract for coal for the New England lines on the Mellen system. The contracts have been entered into with the Coastwise Transportation company as carrier, and the Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke company as producer.

The Mellen system is adopting the policy of so contracting for its coal requirements as to insure a prompt delivery and uniformity of quality in its coal purchases, which last year for locomotive fuel alone reached $5,131,000 for some 1,750,000 tons on the New Haven, $1,863,000 for 1,425,000 tons on the Boston and Maine and $1,002,000 for 306,000 tons on the Maine Central, or a total of $10,997,000 for 3,481,000 tons for the three roads.

THE BIG PEACE DINNER

Formal Invitation to Roosevelt Has Not Been Extended

New York, Dec. 28.—Representatives of the citizens' peace dinner to be given Saturday night sought out Theodore Roosevelt yesterday to ascertain whether he held such views on questions of peace that he would find it inconvenient to attend the dinner.

Roosevelt had already been informally invited and to that invitation replied in a seven-page letter, which Millard J. Bloomer, secretary of the executive committee, absolutely declines to make public.

Tuesday night a formal invitation was drawn inviting the ex-president, but it was understood that the invitation was withheld in order that Bloomer might go over and sound Roosevelt in the matter.

MUST DIE IN CHAIR

Commutation of Murderer Phelps' Sentence Is Refused

Boston, Dec. 28.—The governor's executive council refused to commute the sentence of death imposed on Silas N. Phelps to life imprisonment. The vote was five to two against the commutation of the sentence, and Phelps will be electrocuted some time next week.

Governor Foss visited Phelps on Christmas day and has been in favor of commuting his sentence. Numerous requests, both for and against commutation, had been received by the members of the governor's council.

Says He Deserves Death

Belvidere, Ills., Dec. 28.—When Charles Richards was sentenced to life imprisonment here for the killing of his wife, he implored the court to make the sentence death instead. He pleaded guilty and told the judge his sentence should have been the heaviest imposed by law.

Yuan Expected to Retire From Politics, Thus Bringing Power of Manchus to Speedy End—Fully Realizes That Opposition Will Not Accept His Views—Unable to Reconquer the Lost Provinces

Pekin, Dec. 28.—The Empress Dowager Yo-Ho-Na-La has summoned the leading princes of the imperial clan to meet Premier Yuan Shi Kai in order to discuss the proposal made at the Shanghai conference.

It is considered not to be improbable that Yuan Shi Kai will endeavor shortly to withdraw from active politics, in which case the power of the Manchus will not last many weeks.

The attitude of the imperialist delegates to the Shanghai peace conference, coupled with the discontent of certain Manchu factionss which profess to doubt the loyalty of Yuan Shi Kai, are the motives given for the possible retirement of the premier.

Representative members of the imperial court, according to an authoritative source, have signified to Yuan their willingness to agree to an abdication. The court, the same authority states, realizes that there is no hope for it in the retention of three or four detached sections of the country and semi-loyal provinces and hopes to obtain better terms by agreeing to the proposed referendum on the question of the form of government.

Premier Yuan Shi Kai fully realizes the republican spokesmen gathered at the peace conference at Shanghai are not likely to accept his proposition for a carefully elected assembly representing the entire empire. He is of the opinion the republicans know time will favor his (Yuan Shi Kai's) plan.

The premier is certain he could win several battles with the modern army at his disposal, which is better equipped and greatly superior to the rebel forces, but as he is unable to obtain any loans he would be unable to reconquer the lost provinces.

Yuan Shi Yai will in all probability resign his office after making the best terms possible for the throne.

Yuan regrets what he considers to be Tang Shao Yi's desertion. He suggests that Tang Shao Yi might become president of the republic, which is an office he himself would not accept.

To Arbitrate Trouble

Washington, Dec. 28.—The state department's cable advices confirm the press reports of the virtual agreement between Yuan Shi Kai and Tang Shao Yi to let a national convention decide between the imperialistic and the republican causes.

Would-Be Assassins Beheaded

Amoy, China, Dec. 28.—A plot was discovered here to assassinate Governor Yuan and General Choy by imperialist soldiers. The ringleaders were decapitated.

SAYS HE WILL TELL ALL

Stranger Had Suitcase Full of Dynamite In Non-Union Town

Pittsburg, Dec. 28.—"I'm going to clear myself. I will not take all the blame for this, and the rest of them will have to take their medicine along with me," is the utterance credited to George Bridges, a stranger arrested at Monessen, Pa., while carrying a suitcase containing seventy-two sticks of dynamite and a roll of fuse.

Bridges weakened under the police sweating to which he had been subjected, and, according to the authorities, declared he would make a clean breast of it when taken before a magistrate for examination.

Little is known of the man. He appeared at Monessen several weeks ago. Eight thousand non-union men are employed in the mills of the town. Their holiday pay was $227,000.

RAMMED AMIDSHIPS

Coal Laden Steamer Is Sunk With Three of Her Firemen

Halifax, Dec. 28.—In a collision at Green island, about 100 miles east of Halifax, the British steamer Renwick was rammed amidships by the French mail steamer St. Pierre Miquelon, and went down, carrying three of her crew with her. The others, including Captain Chapman, were saved by the French steamer, which arrived at North Sydney last night with the survivors on board. The three men lost were firemen.

The St. Pierre Miquelon was bound from Halifax, and the Renwick was on her way from Port Hastings to Bridgewater, coal laden. The French steamer was uninjured.

Q.—Is the doctrine of predestination taught in the Scriptures; and is it true that some were predestinated to be saved to Heavenly glory, while others were equally predestinated to an eternity of misery and woe? (H. R. C.)

Answer.—Yes: predestination is clearly taught in the Scriptures, as expressed in the language of the Apostle "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the first born among many brethren" (Romans viii, 29). Here it is distinctly stated that a class was foreknown and that the Lord predestinated that the members of this class should all be conformed to the likeness of His Son. That is to say, that all who would be of the elect class and joint-heirs with Christ of the Heavenly glories must develop Christlike characters, as it had been Divinely fore-arranged that Christ was to have associated with Him "many brethren" of whom He would be the "firstborn." This Scripture does not necessarily imply that individually the members of this class were foreknown and predestinated but that the class was so known and arranged for. The Bible nowhere teaches that God predestinated any to eternal torment.

—"And the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Ecclesiastes xii, 7. What is the meaning of the word "spirit?" What is it that returns to God when death takes place? (C. R. H.)

Answer.—The usual interpretation of this expression is, that at death the individual, the real, or inward personality, leaves the body and wings its flight to that vast place where God dwells and from whence the Universe is controlled. This thought has given rise to the theory, that, after all, death is not real, but merely the transition from the earthly to the heavenly conditions. Hence the definition of death as formulated in the religious teachings of many that "death is spiritual separation from God." But this Scripture disproves the common definition, by saying that at death the spirit returns to God! As this statement of the Sacred Writer is an unqualified one and applies to all who die, it would not do to say that the "spirit" is the individuality or personality, because it would mean then that all, both bad and good, at the instant of death would go direct to Heaven. The "spirit" is the breath of life which returns to the Creator who is the Source, or Fountain of all life.

MEAT PACKERS' COMBINATION

Veeder Gives Some Further Inside History

CONTRACTS READ TO JURY

Plans Fell Through Because Bankers, Scenting Panic, Refused Loan of $90,000,000 to Carry Out Merger—Only Name by Which Old Packers' Pool Was Known Was "Postoffice Box No. 247"

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Albert H. Veeder, attorney for Swift & Co., and the first witness for the government in the trial of the ten Chicago packers, testified yesterday that the defendants made two efforts to organize a merger in the summer of 1902, but in both instances their efforts to finance the enterprise were unsuccessful.

The first plan was to include the Armour, Swift, Morris and Cudahy interests with a capital of $923,000,000 divided as follows: Bonds $141,750,000, preferred stocks $168,750,000 and common stock $612,000,000.

The second plan to capitalize at $525,000,000 failedbecause of a stringent money market, New York bankers scenting a panic. E. H. Harriman, James Stillman and other financiers were to have received $10,000,000 as commissions.

The account of the two proposed mergers was related chiefly by counsel for the government reading to the jury contracts and agreements entered into by interested parties, and counsel who then offered the documents in evidence.

The late Gustavus S. Swift was to have been president of the merger, Edward Morris and Michael Cudahy were to have been vice presidents, and J. Ogden Armour chairman of the executive and finance committees.

The witness testified about the organization of the National Packing company March 18, 1903, but denied it had any connection with the proposed merger.

The appraised value of the tangible assets and the annual earnings of the four companies of the proposed big company on Aug. 2, 1902, was given in a statement attached to the contract as $197,500,000, with annual earnings of $20,375,000.

"After the merger plan had fallen through Michael Cudahy dropped out of the partnership with Armour, Swift and Morris and at his request was released from all obligations imposed by the contract," said Veeder. "The National Packing company was then organized to carry on the business of the concerns purchased."

The name of E. H. Gary of the United States Steel corporation was brought into the case when government counsel read a notation at the close of the contract for financing of the big merger.

The notation authorized Attorneys Veeder and Krauthoff to execute the contract for Armour, Swift, Morris and Cudahy, with E. H. Gary as legal representative of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the syndicate.

Contacts, under which the combination of packers purchased the six competitors mentioned by Veeder, were then read to the jury.

Veeder said that under the merger agreement each of the contracting parties was required to turn over at least 30 percent of the stock of the concerns it was proposed to consolidate.

The witness produced the contracts made by Armour, Swift and Morris in June, 1902, for the purchase of six competing companies prior to the organization of the National Packing company.

The concerns acquired by the combination then were:

The United Dressed Beef company of New York, the Fowler Packing company, the Anglo-American Provision company, the G. H. Hammond company, the Omaha Packing company and the St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision company.

The only name by which the old packers' pool, which held secret meetings prior to 1903, was known was "postoffice box No. 247," according to counsel for the government.

This mysterious gathering which the government asserts sought to fix the price of meats and suppress competition at weekly meetings in the Veeder offices, had no name which Veeder could remember.

Further secrets of the projected combination with $525,000,000 capitalization, which was balked through the failure of eastern bankers to loan $90,000,000, are expected to develop through the testimony of Veeder, who will continue his testsimony today.

It is believed that Veeder's cross-examination will be brief, as he has been an unwilling witness for the government, because of his close relations with the packers since 1885.

OLD SETTLERS' REUNION

would try to carry out the affairs of his office without fear or favor. He told those present that he had aspired for the office of Mayor some time ago and created great laughter when he said, "I believe I would have been Mayor at that time, had it not been for Mayor William T. Shea."

Mayor-elect Stone paid a tribute to Councilman Sandberg and told of an incident where the congenial "Ed" had once stopped a run-a-way horse. He made quite a hit, when, adopting a form of expression savoring of the Mayor Fitzgerald variety, he asserted: "As I look before me, I am convinced that the Scandinavian girls are the most beautiful to be found." Mr. Stone added that his wife being absent, he was able to speak to the ladies present in that manner.

He then went into an interesting account of the positions of the Scadinavians in Quincy and outlined a few of the policies which he intended to adopt this coming year. Conditions of various natures were touched upon and the mayor-elect was heartily applauded when he had finished speaking.

Orin Nelson urged the Scandinavian Americans to branch forth into all departments of industry. He made a decide hit when he boomed Councilman Sandberg for Mayor, following the term of office of Mayor-elect Stone.

Harry Nichols gave an interesting talk on various matters and was greatly applauded.

Gustave Wilbus talked along the same lines and he too received great applause.

Councilman Robert Craig gave an interesting account of his experiences with different Scandinavians and told of the progress that had been made in his section of the city. Like the other speakers his remarks received great applause.

Dr. John H. Ash, was given a great ovation as he was introduced and certainly merited it, for his remarks were delivered with force and eloquence and he proved himself to be the orator of the evening. The doctor asked to be excused for his late arrival, and his excuse was drowned with happy acceptance, when he added "I was detained on account of the arrival of your youngest settler, who came into the world a short time ago."

The doctor gave a sterling address on "Manhood" and his remarks teemed with advice and instruction to those present. in order that good and faithful citizens might be rounded out. He dwelt at length on ideals and customs and was accorded thunderous applause when he had brought his remarks to a close.

Representative-elect Walter E. Piper made a short speech which was right to the point. He said he had noticed the Mayor-elect pay a tribute to the girls present. Mr. Piper added that the move was made in an effort to get the Quincy representatives in the incoming legislature to work for woman suffrage. "The Mayor-elect is playing for women's votes," continued Mr. Piper. The representative-elect from the fifth district was widely applauded .

The principal speaker of the evening, J. L. Larson, a professor of history and economics in Allen school, West Newton, concluded the speech making. He gave a detailed and a most highly instructive discourse on the position of the Scandinavian American throughout the different parts of the United States. He told of his travels in the various states and the conditions with which he had become acquainted, both by application and observation. He dwelt at length on the development of the Scandinavians in Texas and in other sections ofthe Southern and Middle states.

He told of a recent interview he had with Commissioner General of Immigration, Daniel O'Keefe, and the many interesting and educational matters that had been brought to his notice on account of the conspicuous position of the Scandinavian American. He praised the city of Quincy for being the most beautiful in the country. He paid a glowing tribute to the Quincy men of the Revolutionary period and added that the opportunities of such a city were beyond the expression of words.

Professor Larson told of the position of the Scandinavian American in relation to the industries of the country, both technical and mechanical and showed where the members of the race were rapidly coming to the front in walks of life.

He spoke of the members who were prominent in political and public life and urged those who lived in Quincy to take an active part in the affairs of the city. He gave an instructive resume of different matters in which the Scandinavian American had been involved and paid a glowing tribute to those member s who had met with great sucess. He related a number of pleasing anecdotes and told a few stories which were received with great pleasure. Mr. Larson proved himself to be a very able speaker, possessing a fine command of words, clear. distinct voice. and imbued with the spirit of all good orators, that of being born of conscious worth. He was loudly applauded when he had finished his address, which lasted nearly half an hour. and the party repaired to Electa hall. to enjoy the dancing which terminated at midnight. The affair was pronounced a huge success and eclipsed any of the celebrations held in previous years.

A Pane of Glass

By MARY HOADLEY GRISWOLD

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

THERE was no reason why John Dorman should not have replaced the pane of glass as soon as it became broken. Especially was there no valid reason why he should have postponed it until holiday time. It would have saved him some labor and Mrs. Dorman much annoyance had he been more prompt, and there would have been no story to tell.

John Dorman was the village undertaker. In the house of mourning he was sympathetic, tactful and considerate. In the social circle he was witty and a teller of good anecdotes. At home he governed his children discreetly, cherished his wife tenderly and lost no chance to have fun. That was the true reason for his neglect of the broken windowpane.

Who broke the window glass or how does not matter. It was the library window, and that did matter to Mrs. Dorman when John tacked a square of pasteboard into the sash to stop the draft till such time as he should attend to it properly. Mrs. Dorman had her own views as to propriety of appearance, and a pasteboard pane in a front window of an otherwise artistic dwelling on the main traveled road was distinctly out of harmony. In vain John begged her to remember that a thing is beautiful according to its usefulness; that the pasteboard pane kept out the cold and no doubt was at that moment the preserver of their lives by preventing the entire family from taking pneumonia. The missing pane of glass continued to be a favorite topic of conversation with Mrs. Dorman, or, rather, of monologue, since John after awhile became merely a listener. However, the pressure which Mrs. Dorman brought to bear by means of language impelled the dallying John to move in the matter.

He selected as his opportunity the afternoon before New Year's day, when Mrs. Dorman was out shopping. Expertly he cut and fitted the pane of glass, putted it in place, tacked the pasteboard back outside the new glass and removed all traces of his labor. He found time also before Mrs. Dorman's return to step into Neighbor Allen's a moment. It seemed that such an event as the replacing of that oft sung pane of glass should be celebrated in all neighborliness. The Allens quite agreed with Mr. Dorman, and the little surprise prepared for Mrs Dorman seemed quite complete.

That evening John Dorman sank into his easy chair before the grate and picked up the evening paper with a view to reading. Mrs. Dorman, however, forestalled him, having something on her mind.

"That missing pane of glass is no credit to the house, John. I had not realized how disreputable that bit of pasteboard looks stuck into that window. It may stay there tonight, for the wind is on that side of the house, but tomorrow morning, glass or no glass, that pasteboard shall go into the stove. There has been delay enough." Mrs. Dorman spoke as one determined.

"I'll see to it first thing in the morning," promised John.

A little later the Allens came in and sat down with Mr. and Mrs. Dorman to a game of whist. As the second hand was being dealt Mr. Allen shivered slightly. A moment later Mrs Allen, also seeming to feel the draft, asked permission to throw a wrap across her shoulders. As the hand progressed Mr. Allen shivered again and unconsciously turned up his coat collar, consciously turning it down again when his wife remonstrated.

It was evident that the room was too cool for comfort. John Dorman could understand that, but could not speak consistently since it was due to his own negligence. Mrs. Dorman, however, was governed by no such restriction. She laid down her cards and took up the window subject.

"It is cold here, and I know it is cold. Why shouldn't it be with a pane of glass broken in that west window as it has been for a month? I have asked John to repair it time and again, and yet nothing but a sheet of pasteboard keeps out the weather. I expect no less than pneumonia for the entire family and for every one else who has the courage to venture in to sit with us for an evening. Perhaps, John, you will find it more convenient to bury us all than to set one little pane of glass."

"Really, my dear," he apologized, "I do mean to attend to it. It should have been done long ago. I give you my word of honor I will have that glass set tomorrow morning."

The words, intended to soothe Mrs. Dorman's mind, did divert her thoughts, but in a manner entirely foreign to the plan of John.

She sprang up with an air of determination and seized the brass handled poker from the fire set on the hearth.

"I will see to it now that you keep your promise tomorrow morning," she cried. "That miserable sheet of pasteboard shall not be your excuse another moment."

With a thrust of the poker Mrs. Dorman attempted to annihilate the pasteboard pane. There was a crash of shattered glass, a tearing of pasteboard, and then indeed the west wind penetrated the room. Mrs. Dorman masterfully concealed her surprise at finding the glass had been set. She saw at once the joke; she saw also that the joke was not entirely upon herself. Tomorrow morning John would reset that glass, and it would not be a task to his liking either.

THERE WAS A CRASH OF SHATTERED GLASS.

With perfect composure Mrs. Dorman restored the brass handled poker to its place on the hearth and remarked hospitably:

"As the glass cannot be replaced until morning, let us adjourn to the sitting room and finish the rubber there. Afterward, John, I am sure you will be glad to step over to Hilton's and bring us vanilla and chocolate mixed."

WHITE LEAVES PRISON

Lawrence's Ex-Mayor, Convicted of Graft, Receives Pardon

Boston, Dec. 28.—William P. White, formerly mayor of Lawrence, who was sentenced to serve three years in jail and to pay a fine of $1000 for graft while holding office, was pardoned by Governor Foss and the executive council. White was sentenced in July of last year.

The charge upon which White was convicted was of conspiracy to bribe former Alderman Legendre in an effort to remove James A. Hamilton as the head of the Lawrence fire department.

When White was found guilty and sentenced by Judge Schofield he was still acting as mayor of Lawrence. A few days later he resigned his office.

ENGLISH MILLS CLOSE

Trouble Over Non-Unionists Leads to Lockout of 160,000 Weavers

Manchester, Eng., Dec. 28.—All of the mills belonging to members of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners in the north and northeast of the county of Lancashire were closed last night and will not reopen until farther notice.

Thus 160,000 weavers are locked out and about an equal number of spinners will be reduced immediately to half-time, with every prospect of a complete stoppage of work if the trouble should be prolonged.

The hopes that an American named Riley and his wife, the two non-unionists whose employment originated the strike in the Helene mill at Accrington on Dec. 20, which led to the lockout last night, would consent to join the union and thus obviate a rupture between the employers and the workers, have been finally shattered. The Rileys have resisted every inducement thrown out to them to join the union, and announced that their determination was unalterable.

CROWD HORROR-STRICKEN

Hundreds Witness Fatal Accident to Man In Boston Subway

Boston, Dec. 28.—Drawn beneath the trucks of a moving electric car in the Park street subway at 6:45 o'clock last night, Daniel J. Kelley of Cambridge received injuries from which he died two hours later.

Hundreds of spectators who filled the station in the height of the evening rush watched in horror his frantic but futile efforts to escape. Women shrieked and children cried as the sudden tragedy was flashed before them.

Pinned beneath the rear trucks of the car, Kelley lost consciousness before he could be extricated. For six minutes the station force worked wildly before the big car could be hoisted so as to release the body beneath it. Even many mature men sobbed aloud, and at times the great crowd grew hysterical with excitement.

FIVE HELD IN BAIL FOR WOMAN'S DEATH

Accused In Bolduc Case Are Scored In Court

Boston, Dec. 28.—Annie M. Reed, Mary A. O'Neil, Dr. John D. Ferguson, Jennie A. Shattuck and Hattie M. Hezlitt, the five defendants indicted by the grand jury for connection with the death of Marie A. Bolduc, the 18-year-old Manchester, N. H., girl, were arraigned before Judge Bell in the superior criminal court. All five pleaded not guilty.

Annie M. Reed and Mary A. O'Neil, the two principals in the case, who were charged with performing an illegal operation, were held in $6000 bail each. The other three, charged with being accessories before and after the fact, were held in $3000 each.

District Attorney Pelletier, in order that Judge Bell might have some information on the case, related in court that the arrest of the defendants had uncovered one of the worst nests in this city and disclosed one of the worst conditions known for many years.

HARRIS AND BLANCK FREED

Not Responsible For Fire In Which 147 Lives Were Lost

New York, Dec. 28.—The state failed to fix the blame for the fire of March 25, 1911, in which 147 young shirt waist makers, in a factory on the top floors of the Asch building, were burned, suffocated or driven to jump to their deaths upon the pavements nine floors below.

A verdict of "not guilty" was returned by the jury in the case of Harris and Max Blanck, proprietors of the factory known as the Triangle Waist company, the only persons indicted for the horror. The jury was out an hour and forty-five minutes.

CITY FATHERS WHO TAKE OFFICE MONDAY, JAN. 1, 1912

EVERYTHING IN READINESS FOR THE INAUGURATION

There are several other officers for the council to elect. Sometimes they are elected at the first meeting and sometimes at future meetings. The officers include two trustees of the City Hospital, members of the council, a member of the managers of the Woodward Fund, not a member of the Council. In the latter case, the nomination must lay on the table at least two weeks before election.

It is in order for the President to appoint his standing committees although not compulsory at this meeting.

Before adjournment, a motion is usually voted to suspend rule and to adjourn for one week.

The City Council is composed of 23 members, three from each ward and five at large. For the convenience of the public the Ledger has prepared the following table giving the name of each councilman, his years of service, age, birthplace and business. Brief sketches of the Council are also given:

RALPH W. HOBBS.

After an absence of a year, Ralph W. Hobbs returns to the City Council as a member at large and will probably for the third time, take the President's gavel in hand to preside over the deliberations of the council of 1912. Councilman Hobbs first saw service in the council of 1906 as a representative from Ward Six and was returned during the years 1907, 1908, 1909, and 1910. During his first three years he served on all of the important standing committees, including the Committee on Streets, of which he was chairman. In 1909 he was elected as President of the Council and served for two years retiring at the end of the year 1910, at which time he was presented by the council with a handsome ivory gavel in appreciation of the impartial manner in which he had presided over the deliberations of that body.

At the municipal election of 1910, he was a candidate for Mayor on the Republican ticket, but failed of election.

He was born in Boston, Nov. 1, 1870, but has been a resident of Atlantic for a number of years. He is engaged in the real estate business, being connected with one of the largest real estate houses in Boston. Some years ago he took up the study of law and will soon be admitted to the bar. He is a member of Wollaston Masonic lodge and the Squantum Yacht club.

GEORGE W. ABELE

Councilman at Large from Ward One in the Council of 1912 is no novice in the City Council, as he has served in that body in 1908 and 1909. During these two years he served on the standing committees of Streets, Sewers and Water Supply and Finance. It was due to the persistence of Councilman Abele, while a member of the Committee on Streets, that the committee inaugurated the method that has since been followed of laying out new streets under the act authorizing the assessment of betterments.

He is a lawyer by profession and was born in Boston Feb. 22, 1875. He prepared for college in the Roxbury Latin school and graduated from Harvard in the class of '97 and from Harvard law school in the class of 1900.

He is a member of the Board of Trade, Masonic fraternity and of the Boston and American Bar association.

ALBERT N. MURRAY

Of Wollaston, who was elected as Councilman at Large in the council of 1912, was born in Rockport, Mass., in 1873. At the age of 14 years he found employment in a printing house in Boston where he learned the printers art. He was advanced from journeyman to foreman and started in business for himself in 1898. He is now the president of the Murray & Emery Company and has one of the largest printing establishments in New England, his company being known for the quality of its work and for its integrity.

Councilman Murray is active in many ways. He is a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and of the Quincy Board of Trade and has become well known in Wollaston, where he has resided for the past six years, for his energy and public spirit. He is also well known in Masonic circles, a director of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. and vice president of the Wollaston parents and teachers association.

JOHN R. RICHARDS

Who has served as a member of the City Council for three years as a representative from Ward Three, returns to the council of 1912 as a member at large. He is a native of Plymouth, England, where he was born Sept. 28, 1865 but has been a resident of Quincy since 1879.

He learned the granite cutter's trade when a young man and this business he has always followed. Soon after learning his trade, he commenced the manufacture of granite under the firm name of Craig & Richards, but for several years has carried on business under his own name. During the past year he has been a member of the Finance Committee and the Committee on Licenses and Ordinances. He has always been affiliated with the Republican party and has been a member of the Ward Three committee for several years. He is also a member of the Board of Trade.

EDWARD J. SANDBERG

There is probably no better vote getter in the city than is Councilman at Large Sandberg, who returns to the City Council of 1912 for his third term. He is almost too well known to need an introduction, for he served the city as its representative in the General Court during the years 1906 and 1907. He is a contractor by occupation and was born in Sweden in Oct. 21, 1866 coming to America in 1886. He received his education in his native town and for two years was employed with the engineering corps of the Skone & Holland Railroad Co. Coming to Quincy he soon found employment with Henry Barker, with whom he remained two years, when he commenced business for himself as a teamster and contractor, in which he is still engaged.

He has always been active in local affairs as well as in the affairs of the Swedish Lutheran church. He is a member of the several branches of Odd Fellows, Quincy lodge of Elks, Board of Trade, Quincy Yacht club and a past president of the Scandinavian Republican club.

CHARLES A. ERICSON

There has probably been no more persistent worker for his ward in the City Council, than has Councilman Ericson, who is returned to the Council of 1912 for his third year. He is a native of Sweden, having been born in Tissling, Oct. 19, 1873. He learned the builders' trade in his native town and in 1895 came to America and has since made his home in Quincy. In 1904 he started in business for himself as a builder and during the past few years has erected many houses in Quincy. He is also the owner of a large tract of land on Cranch hill, which he has developed, as well as being the owner of much other real estate in Quincy.

He is a member of the Foresters of America, Scandinavian and other clubs and Quincy Board of Trade. During the past year he has served as a member of the Finance Committee, also as a member of the Committee on Streets.

JOHN R. S. ROSS

Whom the citizens of Ward One returned to the City Council of 1912, is naturally by his place of residence, the spokesman for Houghs Neck. During the past year he has been learning the ropes and the experience gained will stand him in well during the coming year. Although born in Boston, he has been a resident of Quincy for many years and is thoroughly acquainted with the many needs of the city. Born in 1873 he received his education in the public schools of Boston and at Comer's [illegible]. Coming to Quincy in 1[illegible] he was employed in the grocery of John F. Merrill until 1900, when he went to Houghs Neck to assume charge of the grocery of A. H. Dunham, where he has since been employed.

He is a member of Wollaston Masonic lodge, St. Stephen's chapter Quincy Commandery, Aleppo Temple Mystic Shrine, Quincy Yacht Club, Quincy Lodge of Elks and The Houghs Neck Associates.

WILLIAM P. THOMPSON

Who will represent Ward One in the City Council of 1912, is a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was born April 1874. He was educated at Bowdoin college, being a member of the class of 1894. After graduating, he entered Harvard law school in the class of 1897. He was admitted to practice in 1898 and has since followed his profession. While in the law school he was connected with the office of George Swasey, a well known Boston attorney, and immediately on being admitted to the bar he associated himself with that office.

He came to Quincy in 1901 and three years later opened a law office in the Adams building, in connection with his Boston office. The office of Councilman will be his first public office, although he is the present Vice President of the Quincy Board of Trade. He is also a member of the Granite City club.

JOSEPH CARRUTHERS

One of the two new Councilmen from Ward Two, is an Englishman by birth, having been born in Cumberland, England, Sept. 24, 1862. He received his education in the public schools of his native town, afterward serving an apprenticeship as a joiner. He came to America in 1887, landing in New York. From New York he went to Wilmington, Del., thence to Newport News, from which place he came to Quincy in 1901 to enter the employ of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., as a draughtsman on ship joiner work, and at the present time he has entire charge of that department at the Fore River.

The office of Councilman is his first experience in public office and he says that he shall endeavor to serve Ward Two faithfully, and give the best there is in him for the development of the city.

He is a member of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F. and Rural lodge A. F. & A. M.

During the years 1908 and 1909 he taught an architectural class at the Y. M. C. A. evening school, having taken up that line of work since coming to the United States.

STEPHEN L. DEVANEY.

Who will represent Ward Two in the City Council of 1912, has the distinction of having received the largest vote, in precinct two at the recent election ever accorded a candidate, in this ward. Councilman Devaney was born in East Boston, Dec. 23, 1885, but with the exception of about three months has always resided in Ward Two, Quincy. He graduated from the Washington school in 1899 and from the High school in the class of 1903.

Leaving school he obtained employment at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., as a time keeper, where he was employed for some years. He is now employed, however as a salesman.

Who is returned to the City Council of 1912 served during his first year as a member of the Committee on Streets and on the Committee of Fire and Police. He is a native of Cohasset, where he was born Aug. 28, 1871. Leaving school, he obtained employment at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. plant where he learned the machinist trade. He then took up steam yachting, serving an apprenticeship in the engine room and was soon able to pass the examination which gave him a license to run any size steamship. He has been in the employ of the Electric Boat Co., for some years, as chief engineer of the yacht Starling which is used to convey the submarines on their trials.

He is a member of a number of masonic bodies, being a 32d degree Mason of the Essex Consistory. He is also a member of several Marine and Yacht engineers associations, and the Pilgrim Monument association.

ROBERT B. CRAIG

Councilman Craig is one of those Councilmen who rightly believes in asking questions, if he does not understand the purport of matter under consideration, that he may be able to vote intelligently on the matter. This is an excellent fault and one that others should follow. He served on the Street Committee and Fire Department committees in the council of 1911 and received a very flattering vote at the recent election. He is a native of Scotland, where he was born in 1878, coming to America with his parents when two years of age. His parents settled in Quincy, where he has since resid[illegible] After obtaining his education, he learned the granite business, afterwards taking up blacksmithing, at which he is at present employed. His parents came directly to Quincy and settled in Ward Three, where he has since resided. After completing his education in the public schools, he entered the piano business with Vose & Sons which trade he thoroughly mastered. He is at present head salesman for the Kraft, Bates & Spencer Co., which firm through Councilman Ross has done a large business in Quincy. The office of Councilman is the first public office he has ever held and it is worthy of note that at the recent election he received the highest vote of the three elected from Ward Three.

He is the secretary of the Water Street Presbyterian church and is also a member of Rural Lodge of Masons and Clan McGregor, O.S.C. He is married and has two interesting children.

HARRY T. BOYD

Soon after leaving school, he became engaged in the granite business and at the present time is representing one of the largest wholesale dealers in the country, as a buyer, The New York Granite Co.

He is a member of St. Mary's C. T. A. & M. R. society, and has served that organization as its secretary and as a member of the board of trustees. He is also a member of Ave Marie council Knights of Columbus, holding the office of Deputy Grand Knight at the present time.

The office of Councilman is his first public office.

CHARLES W. BAILEY

Has always been ready to take hold of any matter when called and has made it his custom to post himself upon the question under consideration, before he casts his vote. He is one of those members who is not afraid to say what he thinks and for that reason commands the respect of his colleagues. He was born in Scituate in 1872, but has been a resident of Wollaston for a number of years. During his early years, he was employed in a jewelry store, but at the age of sixteen secured a position in the Boylston National bank of Boston, where he has since been employed, working in every department, until at the present time he holds an important position with this great banking institution.

The office of Councilman is the first public office he has ever held. He is a member of John Hancock lodge I. O. O. F. and was one of the organizers of the Wollaston Tennis club, inc., one of the leading social clubs of that part of the city. He has been the treasurer of the club from its incorporation.

CHARLES L. GILLIATT

One of the new members, of the City Council of 1912 from Ward Five, is one of the ward's well known business men, being President and General Manager of the A. B. Robbins Iron Co. whose plant is located at Norfolk Downs.

Councilman Gilliatt was born in Digby, Nova Scotia, in 1874. At the age of 16 years he went to Worcester to learn the trade in the ornamental iron business. Here he was employed by three different firms, at one time being superintendent for the firm with whom he learned the business. In 1901 he associated himself with the A. B. Robbins Co., and as stated above is at present its President and General Manager.

He attended school in Digby, and studied architecture at Worcester, which he found necessary in his line of business. Returning to Boston he took a course in structural engineering under Prof. Rockwell. He has been a resident of Quincy for four years.

He is a member of the Wollaston Yacht club, The Park and Downs Men's club, Quincy Commandery, K. T. Order of the Eastern Star and of the Master Builders Association and the New England Iron League.

Walker Machine Co., of Boston. For the past nine years he has been in the employ of the Standard Rivet Co., of Boston, for which firm he was at one time a salesman. He is now general foreman.

He resides at 43 Botolph street and is a large taxpayer. He has always been interested in public affairs, although never before having held any public office. He is a Mason, being affiliated with the following organizations, John Abbot lodge of Somerville, Somerville Royal Arch chapter, De Molay commandery and Aleppo Temple Mystic Shrine.

JAMES H. CUNNINGHAM.

No member of the City Council of 1912 has been more prominently identified with public affairs, since Quincy became a city, than has James H. Cunningham, who will represent Ward Six. Councilman Cunningham was born in Boston in 1864 and nine years later came to Quincy with his parents locating at Atlantic, where he has since resided. He received his education in the public schools of Quincy, graduating with high honors. He was during the early years of the city prominently identified with the Democratic party, but affiliated himself with the majority party of the city many years ago.

His first appearance in public affairs of the city was under Mayor Fairbanks, when he was the inspector of the Board of Health. He was elected to the City Council of 1892 serving on the Committee on Sewers and Drains. From that time on, he has been before the public the greater part of the time.

In 1902, 1903 and 1904, he served as Overseer of the Poor under Mayor Bryant and in 1905, 1906 and 1907 as Tax Collector under Mayor Thompson. In 1906, upon the death of County Treasurer Charles H. Smith, he was elected by the County Commissioners to serve as County Treasurer for the balance of that year.

He went out of office with the advent of Mayor Shea, but did not remain out of public life long for he soon received a civil service appointment as agent of the State Board of Charity which position he still holds.

ERNEST E. SODERGREN

One of the three representatives from Ward Six in the new Council was born in New Britain, Conn. twenty-nine years ago and received his education in the schools of his native place. When fourteen years of age he removed with his parents to Cambridge, where he made his home until he entered matrimony with one of the fair daughters of Dorchester. In the winter of 1904-05 he built himself a home on Hunt street, Atlantic, where he has since resided. He is a large real estate holder in Quincy, aside from being foreman of the plant department of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. He is a member of Wollaston Masonic lodge and of several social organizations.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon Islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Cleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Joan returns with the Martha in good condition. Her white assistants describe her business shrewdness. Sheldon refuses to let her run the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

CHAPTER XX.

THE HEAD HUNTERS.

"THAT fella boy he sick," Binu Charley said, pointing to a Poonga-Poonga man whose shoulder had been scratched by an arrow an hour before.

The boy was sitting down and groaning, his arms clasping his bent knees, his head drooped forward and rolling painfully back and forth. For fear of poison, Sheldon had immediately scarified the wound and injected permanganate of potash; but in spite of the precaution the shoulder was swelling rapidly.

"We'll take him on to where Tudor is lying," Joan said. "The walking will help to keep up his circulation and scatter the poison. Adamu Adam, you take hold that boy. Maybe he will want to sleep. Shake him up. If he sleep he die."

The advance was more rapid now, for Binu Charley placed the captive bushman in front of him and made him clear the runway of traps. Once, at a sharp turn where a man's shoulder would unavoidably brush against a screen of leaves, the bushman displayed great caution as he spread the leaves aside and exposed the head of a sharp pointed spear, so set that the enemy passerby would receive at the least a nasty scratch.

The sun sinking behind a lofty western peak brought on an early but lingering twilight, and the expedition plodded on through the evil forest—the place of mystery and fear, of death swift and silent and horrible, of brutish appetite and degraded instinct, of human life that still wallowed in the primeval slime, of savagery degenerate and abysmal.

They turned aside from the runway at a place indicated by Binu Charley and came to an immense banyan tree half an acre in extent that made in the innermost heart of the jungle a denser jungle of its own. From out of its black depths came the voice of a man singing in a crooked eerie voice.

"My word, that big fella marster he no die!"

The singing stopped, and the voice faint and weak, called out a hello. Joan answered, and then the voice explained:

"I'm not wandering. I was just singing to keep my spirits up. Have you got anything to eat?"

Tudor, having pulled through the fever and started to mend, was still frightfully weak and very much starved. So badly swollen was he from mosquito bites that his face was unrecognizable. Joan had her own ointments along and she prefaced their application by fomenting his swollen features with hot clothes. Sheldon, with an eye to the camp and the preparations for the night, looked on and felt the pangs of jealousy at every contact of her hands with Tudor's face and body. Somehow, engaged in their healing ministrations, they no longer seemed to him boy's hands.

The morning's action had been settled the night before. Tudor was to stay behind in his banyan refuge and gather strength while the expedition proceeded. On the far chance that they might rescue even one solitary survivor of Tudor's party. Joan was fixed in her determination to push on. With Tudor, Adamu Adam and Arahu were to stop as guards.

Binu Charley led the way, by proxy, however, for by means of the poisoned spear he drove the captive bushman ahead. They plodded on, panting and sweating in the humid, stagnant air. They were immersed in a sea of wanton, prodigal vegetation.

Caught by surprise fifteen feet in the air above the path in the forks of a many branched tree, a bushman dropped like a shadow, naked as on his natal morn. It was hard for them to realize that it was a man, for he seemed a weird jungle sprite, a goblin of the forest. Only Binu Charley was not perturbed. He flung his poisoned spear over the head of the captive at the flitting form. It was a mighty cast, well intended, but the shadow, leaping, received the spear harmlessly between the legs and, tripping upon it, was flung sprawling. Before he could get away Binu Charley was upon him, clutching him by his snow white hair. He was only a young man and a dandy at that, his face blackened with charcoal, his hair whitened with wood ashes, with the freshly severed tail of a wild pig thrust through his perforated nose and two more thrust through his ears. His only other ornament was a necklace of human finger bones. At sight of their other prisoner he chattered in a high querulous falsetto, with puckered brows and troubled, wild animal eyes. He was disposed of along the middle of the line, one of the Poonga-Poonga men leading him at the end of a length of bark rope.

"Close up he stop," Binu Charley warned them in a whisper.

Even as he spoke, from high overhead came the deep resonant boom of a village drum. But the beat was slow. There was no panic in the sound. The runway now became a deeply worn path, rising so steeply that several times the party paused for breath.

"One man with a rifle could hold it against a thousand," Sheldon whispered to Joan. "And twenty men could hold it with spears and arrows."

They came out on the village, situated on a small, upland plateau, grass covered and with only occasional trees. There was a wild chorus of warning cries from the women, and spears and arrows began to fall among the invaders. At Sheldon's command the Tahitians and Poonga-Poonga men got into action with their rifles. The spears and arrows ceased, the last bushmen disappeared, and the fight was over almost as soon as it had begun. On their own side no one had been hurt, while half a dozen bushmen had been killed.

"Poor brutes," Joan said. "They act only according to their natures. To eat their kind and take heads is good morality for them."

"But they should be taught not to take white men's heads," Sheldon argued.

She nodded approval and said: "If we find one head we'll burn the village. Hey, you, Charley! What fella place head he stop?"

"S'pose he stop along devil-devil house," was the answer. "That big fella house, he devil-devil."

It was the largest house in the village. Into it they went. Crouched before a slow smoking fire, in the littered ashes of a thousand fires, was an old man who blinked apathetically at the invaders. His task, it seemed, was to tend the fire, and, hung in the smoke they found the object of their search. Joan turned and stumbled out hastily, deathly sick, reeling into the sunshine and clutching at the air for support.

"See if all are there," she called back faintly and tottered aimlessly on for a few steps, breathing the air in great drafts and trying to forget the sight she had seen.

Upon Sheldon fell the unpleasant task of tallying the heads. They were all there, nine of them, white men's heads, the faces of which he had been familiar with when their owners had camped in Berande compound and set up the poling boats. Binu Charley hugely interested, lent a hand, turning the heads around for identification, noting the hatchet strokes and remarking the distorted expressions.

Other heads, thoroughly sun dried and smoke cured, were found in abundance, but, with two exceptions, they were the heads of blacks.

"Me savvee black Mary, me savvee white Mary," quoth Binu Charley. "Me no savvee that fella Mary. What name belong him?"

Sheldon looked. Ancient and withered, blackened by many years of the smoke of the devil-devil house, nevertheless the shrunken, mummylike face was unmistakably Chinese. How it had come there was the mystery. It was a woman's head, and he had never heard of a Chinese woman in the history of the Solomons. From the ears hung two inch long earrings, and at Sheldon's direction the Binu man rubbed away the accretions of smoke and dirt and from under his fingers appeared the polished green of jade, the sheen of pearl and the warm red of oriental gold. The other head, equally ancient, was a white man's, and Sheldon wondered what forgotten beche-de-mer fisherman or sandalwood trader had gone to furnish that ghastly trophy.

Telling Binu Charley to remove the earrings and directing the Poonga-Poonga men to carry out the old fire tender, Sheldon cleared the devil-devil house and set fire to it. Soon every house was blazing merrily, while the ancient fire tender sat upright in the sunshine, blinking at the destruction of his village. Every member of Tudor's expedition was accounted for, and it was a long, dark way out of the head hunters' country. Releasing their two prisoners, who leaped away like startled deer, they plunged down the steep path into the steaming jungle.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOMEMADE GINGERBREAD.

A POET has sung with reason the charm of homemade gingerbread. "What fragrant umber shadowed cake." Made well, gingerbread is delicious; otherwise it is an abomination. If possible it should be served hot, well spiced and moist rather than dry. In families where there are children gingerbread is a desirable addition to the dessert list, for eaten in moderation it satisfies the childish craving for sweets and yet is thoroughly wholesome.

A True and Tried Recipe.

Soft Gingerbread.—Take six cupfuls of flour, a cupful each of milk and lard, three cupfuls of New Orleans molasses, two teaspoonfuls of soda, three eggs and two tablespoonfuls of ginger. Beat the yolks of the eggs and add to them the lard, the milk, soda, molasses, ginger and flour in the order named. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth and add them to the gingerbread mixtuge. Bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour.

Cheap Gingerbread.—Combine in the order named the following ingredients: A cupful of molasses, a teaspoonful of soda, a tablespoonful each of ginger and melted butter, a half teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of hot milk and two cupfuls of flour. Bake in a deep square pan which has been well greased.

For the Children.

Gingerbread Cakes.—To one pound of sifted flour allow half a pound of pounded loaf sugar, three-quarters of a pound of fresh butter, one pound molasses, one nutmeg grated, the weight of a nutmeg of pounded mace and as much of pounded cinnamon, one ounce of pounded ginger, one ounce and a half of candied orange and lemon peel cut small, one-half ounce of blanched sweet almonds cut in long thin bits and two well beaten eggs. Melt the butter with the molasses and when nearly cold stir in the eggs and the rest of the ingredients. Mix all well together, make into round cakes and bake upon tins.

Lemon Gingerbread.—Grate the rind of three lemons. Mix the juice with sugar to sweeten. Mix the rind with a pound of flour. Add half a pound of New Orleans molasses, half a pound of melted butter and the lemon juice. Mix altogether with a half ounce of ginger and bake in a slow oven.

BIG SHAKEUP IS ABOUT DUE

Sensations Promised in Government Printing Office

ALWAYS HOTBED OF TROUBLE

Washington, Dec. 28.—One of the most sensational investigations of the season is promised soon with respect to the conduct of the government printing office. It is foreshadowed in the fact which has just become known that wholesale stealing of the expensive leather used in binding has been going on for a long time and that six employes already have been discharged, but it is known also that the congressional commission to investigate the bureau has in hand much more evidence of wrongdoing of the same kind.

This, it is said, will lead not only to many discharges and a more or less complete reorganization of the force, but has decided the commission to investigate the mammoth government printing office from top to bottom.

The bureau always has been a hotbed of trouble, due to the existence of factions among the employes, each pulling against the other, some of them organized on union and non-union lines, and others representing the "office" and "non-office" crowd.

About four years ago Samuel B. Donnelly succeeded E. B. Stillings as public printer and few of the troubles of the great establishment have come to public attention. In the present case the employes not only stole the leather but, with their remarkable skill and excellent tools, made it up into novelties, which they had been selling at high prices.

Congress authorized to look into the affairs of the government printing office a special commission consisting of Senators Smoot of Utah, Page of Vermont and Fletcher of Florida, and Representatives Barnhart of Indiana and Focht of Pennsylvania. This comission has been working steadily, with headquarters at the Capitol, and is now determined to make a thorough job.

SHRINKAGE OF $4,800,000

Rhode Island Coal Stock Slumps to 47 Cents a Share

Boston, Dec. 28.—Rhode Island coal stock, originally promoted by Henry M. Whitney and in which Governor Foss held a large interest, yesterday slumped to 47 cents, the lowest point ever reached by the stock, which sold as high as $12.50 in 1909. This represents a shrinkage in market valuation of about $4,800,000.

Heavy liquidation from some mysterious source created much excitement on the curb and caused renewed talk of the split between Governor Foss and Whitney, which has widened since the latter refused to support the governor for re-election.

Additional interest was added to the situation resulting from the slump when Foss asserted in answer to queries that he was no longer a large shareholder in the Rhode Island Coal company.

Gotch had announced that the match would be his final appearance before the public to defend his title.

YOUNG WOMAN HAS "MASHER" ARRESTED

Claims He Followed Her, Goes In City Hall For Help

THE MAYOR ASSISTS

An attractive but excited young lady dashed into City Hall this morning and then into the Mayor's office thinking that it was the police station. The young lady said that she was a school teacher in a Maine town, but was visiting friends in Quincy for a few days and had been very much annoyed by a man who had persisted in following her everywhere she went. At first she paid no attention to him but as the following continued she had become frightened.

According to her story, the first she saw of the man was early Wednesday evening in City Square. The man, she said, followed close behind her. When she entered a stoer he remained outside until she came out, when he again took up the trail. She had tried to get away from him by going into different buildings but was unable. The man followed her to the house near Union street, where she was a guest.

This morning she started out to visit some of the stores and the first person she saw after leaving the house was this same fellow. She tried to dodge him but was unsuccessful and thinking that City Hall was the police station she entered and saw the Mayor.

Mayor Shea, always gallant, immediately got busy and telephones Chief Burrell for one of his gum shoe men. A few minutes later Inspector Goodhue entered the hall and the man was pointed out to him. The lady was told to go out on the street again andthe officer would look after her. The young lady was game and leaving City Hall walked about City Square. Then came the man and behind him the gum shoe officer.

Meanwhile the adventure was being watched by Mayor Shea and others in City Hall to see the outcome. Every time the lady stopped, the man did also and when she would turn about and go in another direction he would do the same thing. This continued for a few minutes when Officer Goodhue grapped him and placed him under arrest.

The man proved to be a German and when questioned by the officer said that his name was Gustave Gebhart, that he came from Germany two years ago and with the exception of four months in Cambridge he had lived in Lynn. He said that he had a wife in Lynn and that his home was at 23 Ray street. He denied following the lady either Wednesday night orthis morning. He said that he was 40 years of age andthat he came to Quincy seeking work at the Fore River yards Wednesday. He emphatically denied following the lady and said that he went to his boarding house at 60 Germaine avenue at five o'clock Wednesday night and did not come out again.

According to the police they have been looking for a man who has been following unprotected females for some days. They doubt, however, if this is the man. He was arraigned in court for being idle and disorderly and was held, in order that some of the ladies who have been annoyed may come to the police station and see if he is the party that has been following them.

The young lady in today's ase positively identified him as the man who followed her Wednesday night and said that while she intended returning home today that she would remain over a few days longer to see the case out. The man is apparently a little lacking mentally.

BRIEFS

Ernest Smith of Washington street has returned from a visit in Beverly.

ALLEGED SLAYER'S DEED

Blows Up House and Is Killed as Arrest Is Imminent

Buffalo, Dec. 28.—Policemen Ahearn and Flynn were searching a house in Ray street for Paul Lutz, suspected of having murdered a woman, when an explosion wrecked the building and hurled the officers into the street. Ahearn was badly burned and bruised, but Flynn escaped with a few bruises.

Half an hour before the police had been notified that a murder had been committetd at the house. The officers found that Mrs. Ida Schultz, 56 years old, had been beaten over the head with a blunt instrument and was dying.

A search was begun for Paul Lutz, who had occupied rooms in the house. The officers were preparing to break in his door when the explosion occurred. A search of the ruined building revealed the body of Lutz in the debris. Lutz had been acting strangely of late and the woman had ordered him to vacate his rooms.

GIVE VIEWS ON RICHESON

Clergymen Closeted With District Attorney at Boston

Boston, Dec. 28.—Several clergymen who knew Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson as a student in the Newton Theological seminary and as a pastor of the Baptist denomination, who will testify for the government when he is tried Jan. 15 on the charge of murdering Avis Linnell, were closeted for several hours with District Attorney Pelletier yesterday.

Rev. Dr. Horr, president of the Newton Theological seminary, and Charles S. Pierce of Tyler, Tex., told the district attorney what they knew of Richeson. It is expected that both will throw light on Richeson's relations with Miss Linnell and Miss Violet Edmands, the latter of whom Richeson was to have married on Oct. 31.

Rev. George H. Holt, pastor of the Baptist church at Jamestown, R. I., also told the district attorney what he knew of Richeson's actions.

EIGHTEEN ARE KILLED AT CHARITY DINNER

Many Others Seriously Ill In Berlin Municipal Shelter

Berlin, Dec. 28.—Eighteen inmates of the Berlin municipal shelter for the homeless died during the night from poisoning and a large number are dying or seriously ill from the same cause.

The number of destitute men who took refuge in the institution was 4414. Some of them brought with them scraps of extra food in order to give a Christmas touch to the frugal meal of bread and soup served out to them by the authorities. This extra delicacy consisted in many cases of spoiled smoked herring, of which a large number partook.

The municipal night shelter of Berlin is an institution which provides sleeping accommodation and a meal to any destitute person who is forced to take refuge there at night. In the course of the last twelve months it has given shelter to over 1,000,000 persons who were entirely without means of subsistence.

REYES' FATE IN DOUBT

Belief That Rebel General Will Be Exiled to Europe

Mexico City, Dec. 28.—The fate of General Reyes, who surrendered Monday, after his failure to stir up a rebellion, is in doubt. While many believe that he will be condemned to death, a high military authority is quoted as saying that Reyes will not even be sentenced to imprisonment for sedition, nor will he be extradited to Texas for trial for violating the United States neutrality laws.

General Reyes, this man believes, will be exiled to Europe and kept under military espionage. It is understood that President Madero is disposed to have him treated leniently. A term of imprisonment, it is said, would be equivalent to a life sentence, as the general is 74 years old.

SMUGGLING INDICTMENTS

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 28.—Three indictments were returned by the United States grand jury against alleged smugglers of opium and Chinese, one of them being Miss Ethel Hall, frequently referred to as the "queen of the smuggling ring."

The others indicted were Reynold Scott and Antonio Seliz, the latter said to have been at one time governor of Lower California.

STARTS IN REAL ESTATE BUSINESS

Readers of the Ledger will be pleased to learn that one of Quincy's well-known young men, Elmer F Ricker of Whitney Road, has opened an office at 1416 Hancock street, for the transaction of an Insurance and Real Estate business.

Mr. Ricker, always a resident of Quincy, after preparation at Thayer Academy, graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the class of 1903. Since that time, and until the past summer, he has been associated with his father, H. E. Ricker, as manager of the long established firm of E. Ricker & Son Company, cutters of granite for buildings, in Boston and vicinity. Finding granite cutting no longer profitable, because of the rapidly increasing use of concrete in its place, the Rickers sold out their plant very successfully during the past summer.

Through training he is well prepared to take up the duties of a real estate agent in Quincy. Having had considerable business experience, being a property holder and for several years in charge of various properties in Quincy and Weymouth, he should be well versed in matters relating to Insurance and Real Estate.

Mr. Ricker states that it was his unbounded faith in the future growth of Quincy as a manufacturing and residential city that induced him to take up this line of work. He has an attractive office centrally located.

HENDERSON—GOULSON.

Alexander Henderson of Copeland street, and Miss Katherine H. Goulson of Granite street were united in marriage by Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the Wollaston Baptist church, at the parsonage on Wednesday evening. The ceremony took place at seven o'clock, the single ring service being used. The couple were unattended. Both are well known in Quincy where they attend the Calvary Baptist church. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Henderson will reside at 70 Copeland street, West Quincy.

CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook of Bellevue park entertained her Norfolk Downs music pupils Tuesday evening at her home at a Christmas party. The young people arrived at eight o'clock and spent a most enjoyable time playing games. About ten o'clock refreshments were served which consisted of dainty sandwiches, fancy crackers, and chocolate. There was a Christmas tree with a remembrance for every one. Miss Holbrook was the recipient of a number of pretty gifts. Among those present were Misses Harriman, Grace MacKenzie, Henrietta Robinson, Eldeine M. Young, Anna Byorkman, Annie Thomas, Mabel Doring, Louise Tuttle, Mabel Morrison, Gladys Hamm, Ruth Parker, Dorothy Fratus, Masters Basil Delano, and Francis McCabe.

GRANITE TRUST COMPANY.

The Board of Bank Incorporation, constituted under the provisions of section four, chapter five hundred and ninety of the Acts of nineteen hundred and eight and acting uder the powers conferred upon it by chapter three hundred and seventy-four of the Acts of nineteen hundred and four, hereby certifies that public convenience and advantage will be promoted by the establishment of a trust company in the City of Quincy, to be known as the Granite Trust Company. This certificate shall be null and void if the said Granite Trust Company is not legally incorporated on or before July 1st, 1912. In testimony whereof the members of the Board hereto affix their names at Boston, this twenty-first day of December, in the year nineteen hundred and eleven. Arthur B. Chapin, Bank Commissioner; Elmer A. Stevens, Treasurer and Receiver General, William D. T. Trefry, Commissioner of Corporations, Board of Bank Incorporation.

It will be seen by the above that Quincy is to have a trust company to be known as the Granite Trust Company which will be financed by well known business men of the city.

"Ladies," called the president of the Afternoon Whist club, "ladies, it has been moved and seconded that there shall be no conversation at the card tables. What shall we do with the motion?"

"I suggest that we discuss it while we play," piped a shrill voice from table A. And the suggestion was adopted.—The News.

THE HUMAN SKIN.

Changes In Its Hues That Have Come With the Ages.

COLOR A MATTER OF CLIMATE.

Man's Original Shade Is Believed to Have Been a Brownish Yellow—The Same Forces That Made Men White, Black and Yellow Still Operating.

Man's original color and the cause of the changes in that color to the various hues that mark the skins of the different races have long been a study among men of science.

The theory of Professor Lionel Lyde, an English scientist, is that, whatever the color of primitive man in the beginning, the conditions of life during the glacial period were such that uniformity of results must have been produced. Nearly every anthropologist is ready to admit now a common origin for all mankind. Where man originated is not known—very likely in southern Asia, possibly in Africa, certainly not in Europe, they say. His original color is supposed to have been a sort of brownish yellow not like any of the colors of mankind today, and scientists call him, for the sake of calling him something, a Condwana.

He lived in southern latitudes. This, they think, is certain. Then came migrations, and then, Professor Lyde believes, the variations of color began. Some turned white, some turned black, some brown and some yellow, all according to the climate in which they found themselves.

Climate influences worked directly and indirectly. In the tropics the skin and the intestines perform work which in temperate zones is thrown on the lungs. So when man found himself in cooler lands the increased activity of the lungs, together with the lessened light and heat, favored lightening of the skin. When he found himself in hotter climates the increased activity of the liver and the presence of great light favored a dark skin.

The old theories of race are pretty well discarded, for men of the same race, under differing conditions, would come to be outwardly very different. Thus even in Africa, which everybody thinks of as the land of blacks, black is not at all the universal color. In the Sudan, where there are great light and little humidity and no shade, the men are very black. Elsewhere in Africa, where there are forest, more humidity and less light, though about equal heat, the color is brown and even yellow.

As primitive man went on his way over the globe he adapted himself to the conditions he found. Professor Lyde thinks that it is light and not heat which is injurious. There are in the tropics dangerous X-like rays which must be stopped, and they were stopped by the darkening of the skin. Since lack of moisture also tends to give a tawny color, it is found that in rainy countries the people are fairer than in places where there are long and frequent droughts.

The race, then, that found a home in moderate and damp climates turned whiter and whiter. It is only in such climates that white skins can endure, and presumably, if the present white race was turned into a different part of the world for many hundreds of years, the whiteness of skin would gradually be lost. Perhaps, since the white man is spreading over the world to-day, it would be fair to say it will, in such cases, be lost, the whiteness being retained only in climates that have the conditions under which the race was first bleached.

Intensity of light and little humidity made black. Trade winds and little humidity gave the tinge of brown to the subtropical Mediterranean people. Then comes yellow, which Professor Lyde puts down as the result of "vast desiccating grass lands" in intemperate latitudes.

The yellow man is the product of the grass lands, with lack of humidity and seasonal extremes of temperature. The color a man exposed to such conditions would naturally take would be one which conserves heat nearly as well as white, but which also protects from light, for which combination yellow was the best, or red. The normal color of these folk of the grass lands would be changed by special local conditions, such as the presence of mountains or proximity to the sea. The mountaineers of Asia and the maritime Mongolians are lighter in color than their brothers of the inland plains.

To Professor Lyde, therefore, skin color is entirely a matter of climate. It is a well established phenomenon now because the different portions of the human race lived segregated for thousands of years in special areas, but the same forces that made men white and black and yellow are operating today, slowly, but surely. Men who change their dwelling places will still, after hundreds of generations, change also their skins as they did in the epoch of the first migrations.—New York Times.

Not Consistent.

"You are very foolish, Mary, to think of getting married. If you will give up the idea I will raise your wages a dollar a week."

"Huh—a dollar a week! That's a fine argument ag'inst marridge to be put up by a lady that's drawn $400 a month alimony."—Judge.

The soldier is the only wild animal that does not eat what he kills.—Jessup.

ALCOHOL AND MEMORY.

nfluence of Intoxicating Liquor Upon One's Mentality.

Every person who drinks alcohol to excess, says Dr. Alexander Lambert in Success Magazine, will not show every form of mental deterioration that may be produced by excessive indulgence, and the degree of deterioration in intelligence which goes to make up the sum total of mentality varies greatly in different individuals.

All who drink alcohol to excess, however, show some diminution in their judgment. Judgment means the power of recalling various memories of perceptions through the senses, which have come in from the outside world, memories of ideas, memories of emotions and all the complicated association of ideas that these bring up, and in the recalling of them weigh each one with the other and judge of the value between them. This also means reasoning and decision for action. This power of reasoning and judging is weakened in the alcoholic, and in any brain long poisoned by alcohol it is an impossibility to exercise it. Memory itself is also weakened. There is excessive forgetfulness of the recent past, and in some cases of advanced alcoholism there is absolute forgetfulness of wide gaps of years; a man may be unable to remember anything from the last five minutes back for twenty years and then remember back to childhood.

The memories of childhood are more easily stamped on the brain than are those of adult life, both because it takes less to impress a child and because there is not the complexity of ideas crowding into the brain, nor the complexity of association of ideas to be recorded. Therefore memories of childhood make a deeper impress and last longer, and so the complex memories of the adult are the first to be forgotten in the alcoholic, and those of childhood remain.

Ten Out of Five.

It was in an ideal seacoast town of Maine, to which they had fled for a lazy two weeks, that they found him, one of those "natives" with a large stock of undeveloped wit.

They were out gunning with the native as their guide. A flock of five birds flew over. Raising his gun, he took aim and fired. All five fell to the earth, and they were loud in their praises of his skill.

"That ain't nothin'!" said he contemptuously. "If I'd hed my other gun along I'd 'a' done better than that."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Mommsen's Peculiarity.

On his eightieth birthday Theodor Mommsen, the historian, received a visit from a great delegation of students, who marched out to his home, but he could not be induced to leave his work to greet them. "They see me every day at the university," he said. "Why do they want to disturb me now?"

MILTON WILD WHEN NEPONSET DAM BURST

One man was swept to his death, others had narrow escapes and several thousand persons, among whom were many girls, were thrown into a panic, early today, when the Neponset river dam at Eagle Mills, owned by the Walter Baker Chocolate Company, gave way at Dorchester Lower Mills, in the Milton district, and the released water roared down the stream like a Niagara.

EYEWITNESS' DESCRIPTION.

Roy Means, who works in Holden's periodical store, who saw the dam break, gave the following graphic description of the accident:

"I was crossing the Central avenue bridge at 8.10 o'clock when I heard a roar like the booming of many cannon. It came from the direction of the big dam. I was startled. I stopped and looked up the river.

"I saw that the old footbridge and part of the dam had been carried away and that the released water was rushing toward me in a mighty torrent. It roared like Niagara Falls.

"I saw the body of a man bobbing in the water among the ice. I saw that he was an old man, but I did not know who it was at that time. He was grabbing at the edges of the ice, but did not seem to be able to hold on.

"Almost immediately the water rose and overflowed the banks of the stream. It flooded over on to the railroad tracks, covering them and reaching up to the floor of the freight cars standing on the tracks.

QUINCY PAST AND PRESENT

Subject of Lecture At Meeting of Knights of Malta

BY C. H. JOHNSON

The Knights of Malta held their regular convocation Thursday evening in Greenleaf hall. Only a short business meeting was held. and the initiations, which had been planned. were put over till next month, so as to secure more time to hear the lecture of Charles H. Johnson on "Quincy, Past and Present." Despite the cold there was a good-sized audience and they were entertained and edified for an hour and a half by Mr. Johnson, as he told the story of Quincy's growth and development, illustrating it with photographs as he went along, with many references to our famous men and women, whose names are connected with the history of the nation. Excellent pictures of our local industries and water front were also thrown upon the screen with lucid, explanatory remarks. At the close, a rising vote of thanks was given the lecturer, the mover of the motion saying that the maximum of instruction and entertainment had been given in the minimum of time.

The skill with which the operator of the lantern kept in touch with the lecture was also favorably mentioned, each picture being produced at just the right time.

FIREMEN ARE VERY BUSY TODAY

An alarm from box 46 called out the fire department this morning shortly after six o'clock for a fire in the blacksmith shop of A. W. Woodward. West Quincy. The fire was evidently caused by sparks from one of the forges. The floor of the shop was slightly damaged.

A still alarm summoned the fire department to the rear of Kincaide's store. The damage was slight. This alarm was sounded shortly after ten o'clock.

The Wollaston firemen were called out for a grass fire this morning shortly after seven o'clock, beside the railroad tracks on Newport avenue.

The alarm from Box 432 at 12.44 this noon, was for a fire in one of the engine houses of the Granite Railway Co., situated on Rail hill, back of the West Quincy depot. Just how the fire started could not be learned, but there was a high wind blowing on the hill and for some tim it was feared that the building would be destroyed. It was a hard pull for the department but the chemical got to the scene all right. The damage was slight.

The alarm from Box 412 at 1,29 this noon was for a slight fire under the run leading to the stable of E. V. Trask on Willard street. The damage was slight.

The Wollaston apparatus was called out on a still alarm at 12.24 for a grass fire at the corner of Warren and Highland avenues.

XMAS TREE FOR MEMBERS

At Monthly Meeting Wollaston Congregational Club

THE GIFTS

The Wollaston Congregational club made merry at its monthly meeting Thursday evening with a Christmas tree for its members.

The usual supper was served at 6.30 and each member was supplied with a paper cap and tin whistle. With these appliances the staid decorum of the members vanished and for the rest of the evening youth was renewed.

At the business meeting Rufus B. Tobey reported progress for the committee appointed to investigate uses to which the new hall of the Wollaston school might be put.

Wendell F. Hull put forth a motion which was unanimously carried, that the proper authorities see to the construction of a continuous granolithic or concrete sidewalk from South Central avenue to North Central avenue on streets contiguous to the new school.

The Christmas tree festivities took place with President R. B. Locke as "Saint Nick" and Charles L. Seavey and Clarence Moulton as assistants.

To each member went some gift appropriate or otherwise. Doctors Johnson and Thompson received saws and carvers. Dr. Bowles, a local dentist, received a formidable pair of pincers. Several drummers present received a drum but were not told to beat it. The Ledger representative was presented with a pair of large pencils.

Cigars, memorandum books, magazines, calendars and other gifts were distributed with the compliments of certain club members. There were many special gifts on the tree which their recipients were compelled to open in view of the audience.

Just previous to the motion for adjournment attention was called to an alleged item in a Boston newspaper describing a fistic combat between two of the club's prominent members Rufus B. Tobey and Charles F. West.

The parties were instantly arrested by B. H. Bain, special officer and trial was instituted in the case of "Congregational club of Wollaston versus Rufus B. Tobey and Charles F. West in an action of 'oust'."

The indictment ran as follows: "Know you Rufus B. Tobey and Charles F. West that you are severally and jointly charged with the fiendish crime of jointly assaulting each other on a public thoroughfare in the town of Wollaston; to wit at the corner of Lincoln avenue and Highland avenue on the night of December 12, 1911.

"The club charges that by so doing you brought disgrace upon the head, shoulders and neck of every member thereof. This court orders your immediate arrest and trial by a jury of your peers to determine whether or not you are guilty of the aforesaid crime. So help you Webster."

The prisoners were duly sworn by C. A. Randall, clerk of court and the trial proceeded with Robert B. Locke as presiding justice.

A long array of witnesses were heard including: A. L. Baker, Dr. B. F. Bowles, Chester I. Campbell, Theodore Duplessus, Frederick L. Eastman, Wendell F. Hull, Amos T. Leavitt, W. A. Mann. Clarence Moulton, George H. Murray and E. S. Tenney.

Despite the splendid efforts of Messrs. Hogue and Perley attorneys for the defence both were found guilty by a jury of thirteen men, tried and true, and were sentenced to carry open umbrellas to the morning train on the first pleasant day.

Popular songs which all sang with C. U. Tirrell at the piano added to the evening's pleasure.

The trustees of the bridge were present to see the draw swung into place and also to see that the channel had been cleared. FELLOW SHIPPED OUT OF TOWN

Gustave Gebhart, the man arrested by Inspector Goodhue in City Square, Thursday morning while he was annoying a Maine school teacher, was given a hearing in court this morning. The hearing was held before Judge Pratt in private and the young lady in question was present and positively identified the man as the one who followed her both Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

When arrested the man stoutly denied that he had been following the lady. but this morning when arraigned, he entered a plea of guilty. It is very evident that the man is somewhat lacking mentally and the case was placed on file on payment of $4 costs. The fellow was shipped out of town.

ADDRESS ON "MANHOOD"

By Rev. Patrick J. Scannell Before Holy Name Society

OTHER SPEAKERS

The assembly hall of St. John's Parochial school was the scene of a very enthusiastic meeting last evening, held for the men of the parish under the auspices of the Holy Name society. Those in attendance were treated to some speaking of the first class order and it was ten o'clock when the meeting adjourned.

A short business meeting was in order early in the evening and plans for the observance of the Feast of the Holy Name January 14th, were discussed at length. Special services will be held in St. Mary's church, West Quincy. at 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon and it is expected that a large delegation will be present from St. John's Holy Name society.

At the close of the business meeting, the principal speaker of the evening, Rev. Fr. Patrick J. Scannell was introduced and delivered a very sterling and eloquent address on "Manhood." His remarks were interspersed with many historical reminiscences and his entire address was most interesting and at the same time instructive.

He was followed by Leo P. Neonan who spoke on "Character" and Edward J. Lennan, who gave a fine account of "The History of the Holy Name Society."

A general discussion then followed. Michael T. Sullivan presided and the other speakers included Walter Ferguson, James McIsaac, George D. Cahill. John Gutro, Christopher Barry, W. J. Gallagher and Thomas Curtin.

MADE VERY PRETTY EFFECT

Confetti German Unique Feature At Annual Charity Dance

OF QUINCY CATHOLIC CLUB

The annual charity dance, under the auspices of the Quincy Catholic club was held Thursday evening at Alpha hall and proved a most enjoyable occasion. While the attendance was not quite as large as on some of the occasions, owing doubtless to the many other events of the evening, it was an exceedingly pretty party.

Many exquisite gowns were worn by the ladies and the entrancing music by Cuff's orchestra was inspiration enough to cause few to "sit out" any of the numbers.

During the evening there were several features, such as the dreamy moonlight waltz and a confetti german. The latter was a very unique affair. Suspended across the hall were a number of wires and while the german was in progress, an arrangement was operated which caused a shower of confetti to fall from above and envelop the dancers. Aside from making a very pretty effect it caused much amusement as the ladies and gentlemen were showered with the many colored small pieces of paper.

John W. Walsh was the floor director and the ushers, who were distinguished by a gold ribbon, the club color, across the immaculate shirt front were: Joseph A. Dasha, Charles C. Hearn, Edward J. Murphy, Daniel J. Deasy, Thomas J. Dunphy, Lawrence W. Lyons, Edward D. Barrett, William L. Russell. John J. Deasy. John A. McGowan, Robert E. Foy, John J. Reardon, Edward J. Dunn, Leo J. McMaster, Marcus Mahon, William A. Carey, Harry McGrath, Michael Walsh, Dr. James H. Maloney, Dr. C. J. Lynch, Dr. D. B. Reardon, Dr. Joseph Harkins, John Heaney, Robert McDonnell, Peter M. Sullivan, D. J. S. McCurdy, Thomas Shea.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

An enjoyable Christmas festival and tree was held in Colonial hall, Thursday evening, by the Finnish lodge of Good Templars. During the first part of the evening there was a pleasing entertainment which included vocal and instrumental music and readings.

This over. Santa Claus made his appearance and distributed the gifts from a tree. Refreshments were also served.

MEMBERS OF TENNIS CLUB ENTERTAIN

At One of Season's Prettiest Dances In Music Hall

MATRONS AND USHERS

One of the prettiest dancing parties of the season took place Thursday night in Music hall, when members of the Quincy Tennis club entertained. The hall was a bower of beauty. The stage was set to represent an interior scene and across the front were hung Japanese lanterns which gave a warm and festive appearance to the hall. Fair and charming maidens and stately matrons lent grace and dignity to the occasion.

It would be impossible to enumerate all who were there or describe all of the beautiful costumes. All of the ladies were exquisitely gowned. Mrs. Burke wore pale pink satin with white lace net overdress, with silver embroidery on the corsage and pink satin sash; Miss Maud Macfarlane pink silk with white overdress heavily embroidered with silver; Mrs. Bigelow pink silk with spangled overdress; Miss Edith Bryant. rose pink brocade, with bertha of messaline and pink roses; Mrs. Slade, white, with black chiffon overdress; Mrs. Theodore Hardwick, blue messaline with ruchings of blue tulle; Miss Georgiana Lane a very elaborate white costume; Miss Louise Wilde, blue watered silk with heavy embroidered braided trimming on the corsage; Mrs. James H. Stetson, a stunning costume of black chiffon over canary silk with broad bands of black velvet and cut steel trimming. diamond necklace and diamond ornaments; Mrs. Homan, deep blue brocaded silk with daisies on the corsage.

There were many other elegant and becoming costumes. It was one of the largest and prettiest parties ever held in the city a great many young people being in attendance.

Daggett's orchestra of Boston furnished music and rendered it in their usual spirited and admirable manner. By special request the selection "Three Kisses" dedicated to the Tennis club was played and received much applause. There were eighteen numbers on the dance order but the orchestra responded to much prolonged applause giving many repetitions.

The matrons were: Mrs. Henry R.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It costs a good deal now-a-days to smuggle goods through the New York custom-house, but some people think the publicity's worth the money.

While we doubt if the United States army could lick Russia, we have untold military resources in the Daughters of the Revolution, the Colonial Dames, and the Suffragettes.

Some lively scenes have been enacted in Congress, but they are not very exciting compared with the 15 minutes before the last page of a newspaper goes to press.

The argument for preservation of our forests seems so reasonable that it will probably be a long time before Congress can be persuaded to take any action.

A paragrapher having remarked that a woman with a hobbleskirt reminded him of an umbrella poorly rolled up, some Indian rises to remark that an umbrella can be shut up.

The Indianoplis jury are trying to trace the dynamiters by examining hotel registers. If they can decipher any of the signatures, they will be able to earn high pay as hotel reporters for the newspapers.

Having looked over carefully the holiday announcements of the book publishers, we are greatly surprised to find that the Shooting Show Girls have not yet entered the ranks of authorship.

About now Mr. Lamb marches down into Wall street to acquire a belated Christmas present in the shape of a bear skin overcoat trimmed with bull's hide. Result, all the little cubs and calves have sheep food next day.

MOTHERS' PENSION BILL.

The idea of the Mothers' Pension bill, which has attracted so much attention of late, is to have fewer children in institutions and more in the homes. The great mortality in institutions and the fact that mothers will do, unpaid, what the State must pay some one else to do, has led philanthropists and politicians to agree that the best and cheapest way to board the dependent child out, is, if possible, with its own mother.

A small pension paid to the mother, during the years when her children are too young to work, under existing laws, may insure the continuance of the home, and give the mother a fair chance to take care of her children. In the case of widows with young children the usual choice has been between leaving them all day while the mother struggled to earn a livelihood, and the children were neglected and drifted into sickness and crime, or giving them up to the care of some institution, which frequently boarded them out, at a cost per child of ten dollars a month, which is what it is estimated each dependent child costs the State at present.

This separation has a double evil. Only a few years will pass, and the mother might look to the children for strength to re-enforce her own, but with the family broken up too often the institution takes her, too, at last. Separating families for poverty alone has its economic shortcomings, as well asthose of nature. Illinois has followed the example of Missouri where the pension has been tried of ten dollars a month for the first child and five dollars a month for each succeeding child, until the first child is 14 years old, when its pension goes to the next child. Colonel Roosevelt, Mr. Brandeis, Jane Addams of Hull house, Chicago, and many prominent Catholic, Protestant and Jewish societies are in sympathy with this work which was started under the auspices of the Massachusetts Congress of Mothers, and aided by the Fathers' and Mothers' club of Boston, and the Legislative committee of the Quincy Woman's club.

A mass meeting will be held in Huntington hall, Huntington avenue, Boston, New Year's night, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York will speak, and all are invited to attend.

Communications relating to this proposed bill should be sent to Mrs. Robert E. Park, Hillside avenue, Wollaston, Mass. Chairman Legislative Committee, Massachusetts Congress of Mothers, and Child Labor Committee Fathers' and Mothers' club, Boston.

BUCKNAM—KIRBY.

The marriage of Miss Agnes Louise Kirby, daughter of John H. Kirby, Sr., of Braintree, Mass., to John Sherman Bucknam of New York, took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. William Gardner Chubbuck in Roseland, New Jersey. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Alger of Fair Haven, a former pastor of the Roseland Methodist church

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, James T. Kirby, wore gown of white chameuse with an overdress of shadow embroidery, trimmed with Venetian lace She had a tulle veil, fastened with her engagement ring. Her gift from the bridegroom was a pearl and diamond necklace and her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley. The bridal attendants were Miss Florence Kirby, sister of the bride, as maid of honor and Miss Edith Allee, of Paterson, and Miss Emma DeCamp, of Roseland, as bridesmaids. The maid of honor wore a gown of blue satin trimmed with crystal net and fringe and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaids were dressed in pink satin and chiffon and carried fans, the gifts of the bride The gift to the maid of honor was an opal ring.

The best man was Howard Davenport, of Boston, and Dr. George B Ellor, of Bloomfield, and Wallace A. Bush, of Roseland, were ushers. Florence Chubbuck niece of the bride was flower girl. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Mrs. Wallace Bush. Following the ceremony a reception was held. The house was decorated with southern smilax, ferns and cut flowers.

During the reception musical selections were rendered by Miss Edith M. Allee. The bride appeared dressed in a traveling gown of old rose and the couple left for a wedding trip to Washington and vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. Bucknam will live at 2394 Seventh avenue, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck at whose home the wedding was held were formerly residents of Quincy leaving a few years ago to make their home in New Jersey. The bride is also well known in Quincy and Braintree.

The little daughter of a homoeopathic physician received a ring with a pearl in it on the Christmas-tree. Two days later she poked her head tearfully in at the door of her father's office.

"Papa," she sobbed, "papa, I've lost the little pill out of my ring!"

HAD GIVEN UP HOPE

Crew of the Randall Did Not Expect to Survive Awful Sea

Block Island, R. I., Dec. 29.—The bones of the four-masted schooner Mary Adelaide Randall of Port Jefferson, N. Y., which was driven upon the ledges west of Block isand by the roaring northwest gale yesterday, will in all probability be left on this, the most exposed point of the southern New England coast. The violent sea has had its effect on the vessel, which was bound from Norfolk for New London, Conn., with a cargo of coal, and the Randall is being slowly hammered to pieces.

The crew of nine men, who a few hours before being rescued by the Block island life saving crew had despaired of their lives and had assembled in the cabin and offered what they believed were their last prayers, are resting comfortably here, apparently little the worse for their thrilling experience.

PLOT TO DESTROY BRIDGE

What Railroad Men Think Finding of Dynamite Indicates

Chicago, Dec. 29.—What may have been an attempt to destroy the Thebes bridge over the Mississippi river at Thebes, Ills., came to the attention of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad company with the news of several children finding a quantity of dynamite with fuse attached among the timbers of an overhead bridge which spans the track approaches to the railroad bridge.

"Our informant, C. W. Mogg, station agent at Thebes," said W. J. Jackson, vice president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad, "sent a message to me saying that fourteen sticks of dynamite, with cap and fuse attached, had been found by children beneath the wagon bridge. The explosive was in a position to threaten the tracks which are used by all our trains and to wreck the railroad bridge approaches."

STEEL SCHEDULE TO HAVE PRECEDENCE

Democrats Will Not Rush Legislation on Wool

Washington, Dec. 29.—There will be a lull in Democratic wool tariff making for at least a week. Chairman Underwood of the committee on ways and means returned to the city and announced that he would shut himself up with the tariff board's report today and dig into its tables, charts and conclusions.

Mr. Underwood does not think that his party will for a moment consider the proposition of free wool unless in the extraordinary contingency of discovering unexpected facts in the mass of data submitted by the president's experts.

Mr. Underwood said the first tariff legislation to be taken up by the house would be the steel schedule. The committee will draft a revised steel schedule contemplating reductions of from 30 to 40 percent.

Actress Snyder Takes Dose of Poison In a St. Louis Hotel

St. Louis, Dec. 29.—Miss Roma Snyder, an actress recently with Zeigfeld's "Follies" company, but on the vaudeville circuit of late, drank poison in her room at the St. James hotel. She died in the city hospital.

Miss Snyder in 1906 had a prominent part with Lew Fields in "It Happened in Nordland." In private life she was Mrs. George F. Miller.

LEFT TO WILL OF THE PEOPLE

To Them Will Be Submitted Future Rule of China

THRONE AGREES TO SUBMIT

Will Abide by Any Decision Which May Be Reached by National Conference, No Matter What Form of Government It May Choose—Edict Issued After Long Debate by the Manchu Clan

Pekin, Dec. 29.—The throne has agreed to Premier Yuan Shi Kai's suggestion to refer the question of the future government of China to a national conference and to abide by its decision, whatever it may be. It is further stated that the Imperial family has decided to leave Pekin.

The decision taken was followed quickly by an imperial edict in the following terms:

"Dr. Wu Ting Fang, the chief of the revolutionary delegates to the peace conference at Shanghai, and others contend that the people of China desire a republic. This question neither the government nor a section of people is able to decide. Therefore a national conference is necessary. The clan agree to let the cabinet inform the revolutionaries and then frame regulations for a conference and arrange for an extension of the armistice. The empress dowager sanctions the calling together of a conference, as she is desirous to avoid bloodshed and to bring happiness to the people of China according to the wishes of the majority."

The dowager empress, Yuan Sui Kai and the Manchu princes of the imperial clan debated yesterday the scheme for calling together the convention. Prince Ching, former premier and minister of foreign affairs, stoutly urged the acceptance of the proposal. Prince Yu Lang, member of the grand council, and Prince Tsai Tao, former minister of war and brother of the present prince regent, on the other hand, strenuously opposed the scheme.

Those among the Manchu princes present who were in favor of the acceptance of the proposition finally prevailed and the decision was reached to leave the settlement of the future form of government in the hands of the delegates selected by the nation.

The cabinet has been instructed to draw up the regulations which shall govern the national convention and to inform the delegates to the peace conference at Shanghai that the throne is willing to abide by the decision of a representative convention, no matter what form of government it may choose.

In view of the activities of the Shanghai revolutionaries, imperial government officials consider it to be doubtful whether the rebels will agree to the long delay inseparable from the calling of a national convention. The action of the throne leaves no room for doubt that the advisers of the regent and the emperor are prepared for abdication should that course prove to be the only way of settlement.

Q.—How and when will the angelic proclamation be fulfilled?—"Behold we bring you good tidings of great joy which SHALL BE UNTO ALL PEOPLE." And again "Glory to God in the highest, and ON EARTH PEACE, GOOD WILL TOWARD MEN."—Luke ii, 10, 14. (O. S. C.)

Answer.—Many earnest-hearted, noble men and women, have wondered, in view of the long centuries that have rolled away since this glorious proclamation was heralded forth, if the angels did not over-state the matter, in saying that the "glad tidings" should reach "all people;" and that peace and good will would be established throughout the earth: Comparatively few of the race of mankind have ever heard the joyful news of a Saviour of the world. More than three-fourths of the human family are still in darkness. Billions have died in the past, "never having heard of the only Name whereby they must be saved." Peace and good will are far removed from the earth—the nations arming and preparing for war. The industrial conflict that is being waged is world-wide and thousands and millions of the poor are in want and poverty. Dynamite outrages, bread riots, mobs, strikes and lockouts, all indicate the great unrest and the lack of peace and good will. No: the angels did not over-state their message. It will be fulfilled absolutely at the second coming of Christ, when he returns to set up His Kingdom of Peace—the Kingdom of Heaven.

Q.—What are we to think of this passage found in the first chapter of Judges, the nineteenth verse? "And the Lord was with Judah; and He drove out the inhabitants of the mountain; but could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron." (W. A. H.)

Answer.—For some reason, not explained in the narrative, the Lord did not enable Judah to overcome those of the vale. Perhaps the Israelites were better qualified and equipped to contend against their foes in the mountains than those in the valley. Judah's army, apparently, was not provided with chariots while their enemies in the valley possessed those that were made of iron, with which they could ride down all those opposed to them. Then again, and more probably so, Judah and his followers may not have had sufficient faith to go forward and, under Divine direction, conquer their foes completely. In any event, the Lord did not lack in power and ability to subdue any host that may have been opposed to the forces of Judah. As narrated in succeeding verses, the Israelites failed to drive out their enemies in several instances, because they lacked in faith and obedience.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM

William Faversham will present his new play "The Faun" at the Shubert Theatre for two weeks beginning Monday, Jan. 1. In this absolutely unique comedy is promised one of the real novelties of recent years.

In this new play Mr. Faversham impersonates a faun or wood-god, the son of Pan, the god of the shepherds. Having wandered away from woods and fields—stepped from the realms of mythology to those of reality—this particular faun is discovered one night disporting himself in a fountain in the yard of a house in London. The owner thereof has just returned from a campaign on the turf which has beggared him and he is on the point of committing suicide, when his attention is attracted to the strange creature in the garden. He, in spirit of

has been increasing in popularity. The characters which Mr. Sheldon who is also responsible for "Salvation Nell," "The Nigger" and "The Boss" has drawn in his new play, do not figure among the glittering hordes of show people at a popular seaside resort. As an undercurrent to his delineation of the types that infest this great sort, Mr. Sheldon has woven a powerful love-story, in which the principals are Peter Millholland, a young New York millionaire, and Teresa Casey, a principal performer in a little sideshow at Coney Island, called the "Turkish Dream." With this material Mr. Sheldon has constructed a play of more than ordinary force full of rich humor and tender pathos. The Boston Journal said: "Not in years have actor and actress received more hearty welcome or more sustained and vigor-very funny. The runaway pair are soon penitent and beg to be forgiven. It all ends happily.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the first week of the New Year at his beautiful playhouse, Mr. B. F. Keith has arranged one of the strongest and best balanced bills of the season. No less than five headline features are promised, including several attractions new to Boston. Edgar Atchison Ely & Co. will appear in a condensed version of that merriest of farces, "Billy's Tombstones," which enjoyed a long Broadway run last season. Dealing with the mishaps that befall a football hero who embarks on a steamer for Florida with his sweet heart and her mother, and loses his false teeth on the first day out, there is a laugh in practically every line. Mr. Ely has the part of "Billy," the ex-football star, and he is supported by a splendid company. Frank Fogarty, the Dublin Minstrel, without question the best story teller now before the public, returns after a long absence with some two score of stories that have never before been heard in Boston. J. C. Nugent, the Comedian, brings a new comedy from his own pen, "The Rounder," and a genuine novelty will be Prof. Fred Andrews' "Wonder Kettle," which contains a mysterious fluid that boils eggs, fries steaks, and freezes ice cream in the most astonishing manner. Other big features will be the College Trio in a singing and dancing sketch and the Stanleys, novelty shadowgraphists. Several other features are promised, the exact nature of which has not yet been disclosed.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Wizard of Oz" is a success. Its second week at the Castle Square begins on Monday, and the same enormous audiences that have seen it the past week will continue to enjoy its spectacular features, its comic dialogue, its bright and sparkling music and its clever dancing. All the players are fully at home in the play and they make it one of the best productions of "The Wizard of Oz" ever given in Boston.

See George Hassel as The Scarecrow, Donald Meek as the Tin Woodman, Morgan Wallace as King Pastoria, Arthur Hill as the Cowardly Lion and Mary Young as Dorothy Gale and you will be happy. Especially is it an entertainment for children the large numbers that attend the matinees are evidence of the pleasure they receive from it. It is the best as well as the latest of John Craig's Christmas productions, and as its run at the Castle Square is limited, immediate application for seats is necessary.

"THE CONCERT"

"The Concert' is one of the best comedies that have been performed in Boston in the last twenty years."

That is how Philip Hale, dramatic critic of the Boston Herald characterizes David Belasco's production of "The Concert" that is now playing at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, and final adventure, brings the faun into the house and when the faun tells him at once that he knows what he was just about to do, why he was about to do it and that he can dissipate all of his troubles by giving him tips that cannot fail in exchange for modern clothing and an introduction into society, a bargain is quickly struck. He is given modern habiliments, the name of Prince Silvani, and launched on the social seas. As may be imagined, the faun, unused to the conventionalities of life, manages to stir things up at a lively pace. The play tells a captivating story and one that is sure to attract a vast deal of attention. It must not be taken from the foregoing ous applause than Miss Donnelly and Mr. Barrymore received." Miss Donnelly is assisted by John Barrymore, of "The Fortune Hunter" fame. Mr. Barrymore appears as the young millionaire, who in a moment of mental misery wanders to Coney Island, becomes an employee of "The Turkish Bream" and falls in love with the Princess Zim-Zim. Mr. Barrymore's conception of the role is one of his best achievements.

"BABY MINE."

"Baby Mine" fresh from its New York triumph, opens at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, New Year's night. Margaret Mayo, the author of "Baby which will continue there until Jan. 13. This is the play that ran a year at Belasco's Theatre in New York. It is a triumph of high comedy acting and is produced as no other manager but Belasco presents his plays.

Originally "The Concert" was a German play by Herman Bahr and it was Americanized by L. Ditrichstein who plays the principal part in it. It is a delightful satire on the tendency of women to worship at the shrine of a musical genius. Calor Arany is a great musician. He plays the piano divinely and his feminine worshippers are legion. Women flock to his home in New York, flirt with him and willingly pay him $10 a lesson. Some of that the play is abstruse or the comedy too subtle for the ordinary understanding. On the contrary, it is of the most pronounced type, giving rise to shouts of laughter. It is bright and joyous carrying the moral that the closer we are to nature, the closer we are to the good and the true, and in consequence, the closer always to happiness. Mr. Faversham has achieved his greatest success in this unusual play and his company headed by Miss Julia Opp, has been declared signally competent.

"THE PRINCESS ZIM-ZIM"

Monday "The Princess Zim-Zim," the latest play of Edward Sheldon, the young Harvard playwright, begins the third week at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. The play has already proven the season's dramatic novelty and since its first presentation

Mine" says she conceived the idea for the play from a newspaper clipping, stating that in Chicago today there are fully 3000 husbands fondling infants that are not their own, but babies adopted by their wives while the husbands are traveling and the deluded fathers are none the wiser. This is the kernel which gives rise to the laugh-producing comedy. It has to do with an adoring wife, Zoie, who, rather than go to the trouble of a lot of explanations with a fussy husband has adopted the habit of lying. Unfortunately, the husband is aware of this, but says nothing until he is told that his wife has lunched with another man. He questions her but meets with usual lying, though it really does not matter for the other man was a friend of the family and meant nothing to Zoie. The upshot of it is that Alfred, the husband, leaves home, threatening the women fall in love with him. All the while the musician's wife, a sensible American woman, remains in the background. Arany, the musician, is a creature of temperament, "a spoiled child," his wife calls him. He thrives on female adoration. To him the women are everything. He accepts their flowers and makes them pretty speeches. Occasionally he disappears from home and goes to his bungalow in the Catskill mountains. On one trip there he is accompanied by one of is married women pupils. Another pupil, jealous because the musician does not show any affection for her, suspects where they have gone and informs the musician's wife and the married woman's sane husband. The runaways are followed by the deserted pair and two of the three acts take place in the bungalow. The complications that ensue there are SENSIBLE HOLIDAY GIFTS.

Clever Selections of Dress and Gifts A Settled Plan That Helps to Stretch Resources.—Three Piece Rigs and Color Schemes.

To match ones personal cleverness against limited resources and so solve the problem that the holiday season brings up year after year a certain fixed plan must be made and followed.

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

If a woman has clothes sense,—perhaps genius is the better word—she can turn out smart apparel for herself and family at wonderfully small cost. To do this successfully she must keep herself informed of all the newest fads and select only thoe that lend themself to her material and personal needs. The veiling of one fabric with another enables a clever manager to work in half worn garments and odd bits of trimming and produce stunning results. At this season the shops offer endless opportunities to pick up limited lengths of material for a fraction of their original cost and the resourceful buyer who knows what she has on hand can often buy just enough lace, net, chiffon or marquisette to transform a passe dress into new effectiveness.

THE COLOR SCHEME.

Everyone who studies how to look well at a minimum cost should adopt a color scheme and stick to it. Then all the small belongings will match up with one another and changes can be made that increase the usefulness of each garment. Say, the color is brown, and one buys only things that will match or contrast well with brown or the tone may be blue, or gray, or black, if one is not made old by this sable color. It is a mistake to think that black is economical however, for it demands the highest grade in quality and constant brushing and sponging to look fresh. White is a fad this winter and many white gowns and suits that appear extravagant are quite the reverse. White corduroy washes easily and need only to be shaken out to resume its new appearance.

White topped shoes while extremely dressy can be readily cleaned if one has the time to do them. These are anything but pretty if not fresh.

THREE PIECE SUITS.

A well selected three piece suit will fit a woman out for an almost endless number of occasions, from shopping to a reception, lunch or theatre party. Take for instance a smartly made suit of velveteen with hat to correspond. When the coat is worn this is quiet enough to pass without notice in a shop, and when the coat is opened giving a glimpse of dainty waist and frill worn with white gloves and other pretty accessories it is quite au fait at a tea or reception, while if the waist is smart the wearer will look perfectly dressed when she removes her hat at a matinee. Of course this is all well known to many women, but too often the woman who must count her pennies loses herself and wastes her substance in old dresses and coats, with the result that she never looks right.

THE DEATH DICE.

History of an Odd Gift of the Emperor of Germany.

There is shown in the Hohenzollern museum a gift of the emperor of Germany, the "death dice," with which one of his ancestors decided a difficult case in the seventeenth century. Their history is an interesting one.

A young girl had been murdered. Suspicion fell upon two soldiers, Ralph and Alfred, who were suitors for her hand. Both the accused men denied their guilt, and even torture failed to extract a confession from either of them. Then Elector Frederick William decided to cut the knot by means of the dice box. The two soldiers should throw for their lives and the loser should be executed as the murderer. The event was celebrated with great pomp and solemnity.

Ralph had the first chance and threw sixes, the highest possible number. The dice box was then given to Alfred. He fell on his knees and prayed aloud: "Almighty God, thou knowest I am innocent. Protect me, I beseech thee!"

Then he arose to his feet and threw the dice with such force that one of them broke. The whole one showed six, the broken one also gave six on the larger portion, and the fragment split off showed one. This was a total of thirteen, one beyond Ralph's throw. The audience held its breath in amazement.

"God has spoken," cried the prince.

Ralph, appalled by what he regarded as a sign from heaven, confessed his guilt and was sentenced to death.

A CRUSHING RETORT.

Mme. Songbird Paid Her Haughty Society Patron In Full.

Last year a prominent Boston society leader, in arranging a musical surprise at an elaborate dinner given to the town's elite, called on a singer of renown to engage her services for that event. It chanced that the singer was naturally independent. On the other hand, the caller was notoriously haughty. As a result this was what transpired between them:

After the visitor had announced the import of her coming, the singer succinctly said she would sing one number for $200, and that it would be a Wagnerian selection.

"The price we will not haggle over," said the visitor, "but instead of that grand opera selection I want you to render one of the light and popular ditties of the day!"

"For the Wagnerian song, $200; for the popular ditty, $300," was the firm reply.

"But, madame," expostulated the society leader, "your classical song is much more exacting on your powers, so why should you charge more for the lighter and easier song?"

"Ah," replied the independent one, "the harder song is all fun to me; the easier one all work!"

So the price was fixed at $300.

Just as the haughty visitor was about to depart, she turned to the artist and said:

"Of course, I shall not expect you to mingle with my guests."

"Ah," was the biting retort, "I shall throw off $50."—Life.

LIST OF POISON VICTIMS GROWS

More Than Half a Hundred Succumb In Berlin

FATALITIES NOT YET ENDED

Symptoms Resemble Those of Cholera, Many Stricken Ones Dying Within an Hour After Being Attacked—Superintendent of Municipal Shelter Thinks That Deliberate Crime Has Been Committed

Berlin, Dec. 29.—More than fifty deaths have occurred since the night of Dec. 26, in consequence of ptomaine poisoning at the municipal shelter for the homeless in Berlin, while further sixty or seventy are seriously ill at various hospitals in the city.

Further cases are being rushed to the hospitals at such a rate that statistics cannot keep up with them. There is a rapid procession of ambulances from the shelter to the hospitals.

The affair is now assuming such proportions that doubts are being expressed as to whether the deaths were due to the suspected fish, to the eating of which the deaths were at first attributed, particulary since a number of cases have since been reported from another municipal shelter and from the jail.

The authorities, however still maintain that the poisoning was caused by the consumption of decayed smoked herring which the men had brought into the shelter. The symptoms of some of the patients correspond to those of cholera, but post mortem examinations have disproved absolutely the existence of cholera.

The hopes that the later cases would prove less serious than those first reported have vanished, many of the victims succumbing in thirty or thirty-five minutes after they were attacked. The ambulances coming from the shelter had repeatedly to change their destination and go to the morgue instead of the hospita, as the patients had died on the way. Others expired in the shelter before they could be reached by a physician.

The symptoms of the poisoning are fainting, which is followed by violent vomiting and death. The superintendent of the asylum expresses the opinion, based on one of the post mortem examinations, that the deaths have not been due to fish, but deliberate poisoning.

In spite of rumors among the destitute classes which patronize these institutions that there has been a deliberate plot againsts the inmates, the various shelters scattered about the city are even more crowded than before. Over 4500 men took refuge in the main institution and a crowd of physicians were present the whole night receiving reports of additional cases.

The police are carrying out a thorough investigation in order to establish the responsibility for the occurrence, but have been unsuccessful.

MAINE TOWN SCORCHED

Five Stores Are Destroyed In Midnight Fire at Pittsfield

Pittsfield, Me., Dec. 29.—Fire which started in the basement of the crockery store of T. F. Connor just before midnight last night swept through the business section of Main street, and witnin an hour five stores were in flames. The burned area was the scene of a serious blaze less than a year ago.

One of the buildings was occupied above the ground floor by a boarding and lodging house, but the occupants had sufficient warning to escape in good season.

From the Connor store the fire spread to T. H. Getchell's hardware store, Eva J. Day's millinery establishment, McAllister Bros.' market and W. F. Spear's jewelry store.

Hugh Grant, a 16-year-old son, only member of the family alive, discovered the bodies. Grant lived near this town on a farm and was reputed to be well-to-do.

THE BEEF TRUST TRIAL

Claim That $4,000,000 Was Made From $14,000 In One Year

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Objections by counsel for the defense to evidence which the government seeks to introduce regarding the operations of the Kenwood company and the Aetna Trading company halted the packers' trial and caused Judge Carpenter to excuse the jury until the arguments have beeen heard.

The government contends that the Kenwood company was one of the aleged pools used to market the packers' by-products. It is alleged that the Kenwood company dealt in oleo and the Aetna Trading company dealt in casings.

The government expects to show that the Kenwood company's profits were $4,000,000 in one year, notwithstanding it was incorporated with a capital stock of only $14,000. The profits of the Aetna Trading company also are alleged by counsel for the government to have been proportionately large.

By making inadequate allowance for these by-products in figuring the test cost of the animals slaughtered, the packers were enabled to keep the profits of the parent concerns within reasonable limits, according to government counsel.

Croker and Sons Made Defendants In Breen Alienation Suit

New York, Dec. 29.—Richard Croker, former leader of Tammany hall, and his sons, Richard Croker, Jr., and Howard Croker, were made joint defendants in a civil action begun by John J. Breen to recover $100,000.

Breen married Miss Ethel J. Croker, daughter of the former Tammany chieftain, April 28, 1910, and alleges that his wife's affections were alienated by Croker and his two sons. Breen declares in his complaint that he and his wife lived happily together until the defendants influenced and induced his wife to leave him.

Breen was a teacher of horsemanship when he and Miss Croker were married by a justice of the peace.

NEW YORK POST IS "MORALLY OBLIQUE"

At Least That Is the Impression of Colonel Roosevelt

New York, Dec. 29.—Theodore Roosevelt has returned to his attack on The Evening Post. In a statement given to the newspaper men he emphasized his original charge that The Post had knowingly misrepresented the interview he gave a reporter of that newspaper, following the publication of the correspondence between him and George R. Sheldon, treasurer of the Republican national committee, in reference to the Harriman campaign fund.

Mr. Roosevelt declares The Evening Post was guilty of "an unpardonable piece of moral obliquity" in suppressing in its published interview a phrase in which he said that he was "substantially" or "in essentials" in accord with Sheldon's explanation regarding the publication of the correspondence.

Allen, who was clever with his fists, had given Beeks a hard pounding, bruising both his eyes, and Beeks fired three shots at him later.

It was accompanied by a drop of 10 degrees in temperature.

New Year's Gifts

By EMILY GRANT HUTCHINGS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

It is worthy of comment that in all Latin countries the day for exchanging gifts is New Year's day, while in all Saxon countries it is Christmas. The reasons for this difference in customs are easy to trace. The people in the north of Europe celebrated the feast of Freyr, the winter solstice, by bestowing gifts on their loved ones and those to whom they were indebted. In Rome the time for gift giving was the feast of Janus. At the present time "Le jour de l'an" (the day of the year) is regarded in France as of far more importance than "Noel," Christmas day.

Although the habit of giving presents to the loved ones on Christmas is not unknown in France, the giving of gifts on New Year's is almost compulsory, the exchange of remembrances having degenerated into a mechanical farce. Certain absolutely useless articles are manufactured simply as New Year's gifts, and when once they have been purchased they pass into the regular New Years currency. Those who receive them this year put them away and pass them on next year to some friend or relative. It is nothing unusual for a gift to find its way in the course of a few years into the hands of the original donor, no whit the worse for its migrations. Indeed, the recipient of the much used message of affection is not offended in the least, as persons of the Anglo-Saxon race would be.

In England the regular time for bestowing gifts has always been the Teutonic holiday in honor of the birth of Christ, yet there was an established custom of giving presents to the monarch on the first day of the year, whenever that happened to be. This practice was inaugurated by Henry III., who "extorted" gifts from his subjects. These, he informed his people, might consist of such trifles as a purse of gold, a yoke of oxen, a splendid jewel, a piece of cloth worthy to be made up into a garment for royalty or any little thing the fortunate vassal could procure, even down to a pair of pigeons or a box of homemade sweetmeats.

STRUCK IT A BLOW.

Elizabeth fared better than any of her predecessors in the matter of New Year's donations.

There is a peculiar custom in the city of Berlin, that of smashing tile hats, which has been in vogue since 1848, when the students joined with the poor people to make war on the bourgeoisie, the hated class who wore silk hats as their mark of distinction. The first great riot was on St. Sylvester night (New Year's eve), and many a skull under the pretentious headgear was fractured. The native Berliner knows better than to go on the street on that night with a tall hat on unless he is out for retaliation.

When Emperor William was a young fellow, not even crown prince (it was before the death of his father and grandfather), he learned something about the methods to which a man who had a good silk hat ruined is capable of resorting. He approached a man in a shining opera hat and struck it the customary preliminary blow with his fist. Alas, the hat was of thin cloth stretched over a metal frame, and the top concealed a whole battery of sharp spikes. The prince's hand was so badly lacerated that he had to give up his sport for that night. However, he stopped long enough before setting out in search of the royal surgeon to congratulate the armored pedestrian on his cleverness.

Making the Chances Even.

In days when tavern brawls in England were frequent and swords were out on the slightest provocation common fairness demanded that the blades of chance combatants should be of equal length. In a sudden affray there would be no thought of measuring swords, so the authorities took the matter into their own hands at the gates of the city of London, where every gallant was liable to be challenged, and if the public official found any blade beyond thirty-six inches the smith stood by to snap off the steel to the required length. In Queen Elizabeth's reign this was the common practice.

PRINCE COMING TO AMERICA

Kaiser's Son Adalbert, a Clever Naval Officer, Will Lock Us Over

New York, Dec. 29.—The third son of the kaiser, Prince Adalbert, will visit the United States during 1912. Among other places, Boston is to be one of the stopping places on his tour.

It is said that the prince will probably follow in the footsteps of his uncle, Prince Henry of Prussia, as the commander-in-chief of the imperial fleet. He is already expert in the torpedo arm of the service, and is well known as a clever naval officer.

RUSSIAN COURTS IN PERSIAN TERRITORY

Iron Hand Plans to Administer a Severe Lesson

St. Petersburg, Dec. 29.—The appointment of a Russian governor and chief of police for the city of Tabriz in Persia and the assumption by the Russians of the financial control of municipal affairs there, together with the institution of exclusively Russian courts of law, is foreshadowed in the semi-official Novoe Vremya.

Wholesale arrests and trials by court martial of participants in the attacks on the Russian troops are to take place, while the constitutionalists are to be disarmed and stern measures taken for the re-establishment of order in the northern parts of Persia, where many of the towns are already occupied by Russian troops, including Enzoli, Resht, Julfa and Tabriz.

Accumulated by Old Policeman Who Is About to Retire

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.—George W. Cromwell, believed to be the wealthiest policeman in the country, at present a house sergeant on the local force, will retire on Jan. 1, after forty-nine years in service. His average salary during those forty-nine years has been less than $1000 per annum, and he will retire with more than $250,000.

Cromwell, who is 71, declares he has made his money in real estate investments, purchasing property years ago in West Philadelphia, when that section was miles from the city proper and it looked as if Philadelphia never would reach out thirteen miles from the city hall.

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Joan returns with the Martha in good condition. Her white assistants describe her business shrewdness. Sheldon refuses to let her run the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Gogoomy attacks Joan, who escapes and warns Sheldon. Gogoomy flees with other savages, and Sheldon pursues. Bushmen murder all of Tudor's party except Tudor.

Sheldon and Joan rescue Tudor, find the heads of the remainder of his party, rout the bushmen and burn their village.

That night found them back in camp with Tudor, and at high noon of third day, traveling with the current and shooting the rapids, the expedition arrived at Berande. Joan, with a sigh, unbuckled her revolver belt and hung it on the nail in the living room, while Sheldon, who had been lurking about for the sheer joy of seeing her perform that particular homecoming act, sighed, too, with satisfaction. But the homecoming was not all joy to him, for Joan set about nursing Tudor and spent much time on the veranda when he lay in the hammock under the mosquito netting.

The ten days of Tudor's convalescence that followed were peaceful days on Berande. The work of the plantation went on like clockwork. With the crushing of the premature outbreak of Gogoomy and his following all insubordination seemed to have vanished. Twenty more of the old time boys, their term of service up, were carried away by the Martha, and the fresh stock of labor, treated fairly, was proving of excellent quality. As Sheldon rode about the plantation acknowledging to himself the comfort and convenience of a horse and wondering why he had not thought of getting one himself, he pondered the various improvements for which Joan was responsible.

There were times when he was dizzy with thought of her and love of her, when he would stop his horse and with closed eyes picture her as he had seen her that first day in the stern sheets of the whaleboat, dashing madly in to shore and marching belligerently along his veranda to remark that it was pretty hospitality, this letting strangers sink or swim in his front yard.

It was patent to Sheldon that Tudor had become interested in Joan. Often after his morning ride over the plantation or coming in from the store or from inspection of the copra drying, Sheldon found the pair of them together on the veranda, Joan listening intent and excited and Tudor deep in some recital of personal adventure at the ends of the earth.

Sheldon noticed, too, the way Tudor looked at her and followed her about with his eyes, and in those eyes he noted a certain hungry look and on the face a certain wistful expression, and he wondered if on his own face he carried a similar involuntary advertisement. He was sure of several things—first, that Tudor was not the right man for Joan and could not possibly make her permanently happy; next, that Joan was too sensible a girl really to fall in love with a man of such superficial stamp, and, finally, that Tudor would blunder his love making somehow. And at the same time, with true lover's anxiety, Sheldon feared that the other might somehow fail to blunder and win the girl with purely fortuitous and successful meretricious show.

The situation was very unsatisfactory and perplexing. Sheldon played the difficult part of waiting and looking on, while his rival devoted himself energetically to reaching out and grasping at the fluttering prize. He did not belong to Berande, and, now that he was well and strong again, it was time for him to go. Instead of which Tudor had settled himself down comfortably, resumed swimming, went dynamiting fish with Joan, spent hours with her hunting pigeons, trapping crocodiles and at target practice with rifle and revolver.

But there were certain traditions of hospitality that prevented Sheldon from breathing a hint that it was time for his guest to take himself off. And in similar fashion, feeling that it was not playing the game, he fought down the temptation to warn Joan. Had he known anything, not too serious, to Tudor's detriment, he would have been unable to utter it, but the worst of it was that he knew nothing at all against the man.

CHAPTER XXI.

BURNING DAYLIGHT.

AND then it happened. Tudor made his blunder. Never divining Joan's fluttering wildness, mistaking the warmth and enthusiasm in her eyes, aroused by his latest tale, for something tender and acquiescent, he drew her to him, laid a forcible detaining arm about her waist and misapprehended her frantic revolt for an exhibition of maidenly reluctance. It occurred on the veranda after breakfast, and Sheldon, within, heard the sharp exclamation of Joan, followed by the equally sharp impact of an open hand against a cheek. Jerking free from the arm that was all distasteful compulsion, Joan had slapped Tudor's face resoundingly and with far more vim and weight than when she had cuffed Gogoomy.

Sheldon had half started up, then controlled himself and sunk back in his chair, so that by the time Joan entered the door his composure was recovered. Her right forearm was clutched tightly in her left hand, while the white cheeks, centered with the spots of flaming red, reminded him of the time he had first seen her angry.

"He hurt my arm," she blurted out in reply to his look of inquiry.

He smiled involuntarily. It was so like her, so like the boy she was, to come running to complain of the physical hurt which had been done her. She was certainly not a woman versed in the ways of man and in the ways of handling man. The resounding slap she had given Tudor seemed still echoing in Sheldon's ears, and as he looked at the girl before him crying out that her arm was hurt his smile grew broader.

It was the smile that did it, convicting Joan in her own eyes of the silliness of her cry and sending over her face the most amazing blush he had ever seen. Throat, cheeks and forehead flamed with the rush of the shamed blood.

"He—he"— she attempted to vindicate her deeper indignation, then whirled abruptly away and passed out the rear door and down the steps.

Sheldon sat and mused. He was a trifle angry, and the more he dwelt upon the happening the angrier he grew. Joan was the last woman in the world to attempt to kiss forcibly. The thing smacked of the backstairs anyway—a sordid little comedy perhaps, but to have tried it on Joan was nothing less than sacrilege. The man should have had better sense.

RICHESON IN A BAD CONDITION

Mental and Physical Collapse Feared by Counsel

TRIAL MAY BE POSTPONED

Counsel For Accused Man Says He Does Not See How Case Can Go to Court on Jan. 15—District Attorney Wants It Disposed of as Soon as Possible—Detectives to Check Over Jurors Who Are Drawn

Boston, Dec. 29.—A mental breakdown of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, under indictment on the charge of murdering Avis Linnell, the Hyannis singer, is feared. So weak was he yesterday afternoon when Lawyer Morse, his senior counsel, called upon him, that he was unable to discuss his case, and the lawyer was obliged to leave without having secured from him information desired in the working out of the case.

So great has been the strain of the last few weeks that the prisoner's mind seems to have given way under it and left him in a nervous state, bordering on prostratiotn. This, it is believed, will result in a postponement of the trial from Jan. 15, notwithstanding the earnest desire of District Attorney Pelletier to have the case disposed of at the earliest moment possible.

"Richeson is weaker mentally and physically," said Morse last night. "I called upon him at the jail with a view to talking over certain matters of importance with him. I tried to talk with him for some time, but at last gave up in despair. He was not equal to it. He was in such an extremely nervous state that he could neither think nor talk coherently in regard to the case.

"You may say for me that I cannot see how the man can possibly be placed on trial Jan. 15. The doctors say that he is improving as rapidly as could be expected. Perhaps his wounds may be in a favorable condition, but his general physical and mental condition is far from favorable. Any attempt to put him on trial at so early a date would cause a collapse which would deay the trial indefinitely."

Yesterday was a busy day with the district attorney's office. Practically all of the staff of District Attorney Pelletier was kept busy getting together the loose ends of the Richeson case, determined that the trial shall start Jan. 15, as arranged at the time of Richeson's arraignment.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Carter of Cambridge, with whom Richeson lodged for some months prior to his arrest, were closeted with the district attorney for more than an hour.

The district attorney had a conference with Chief Justice Aiken relative to utilizing the entire fourth floor of the courthouse as courtrooms, witness rooms, consultation rooms and for the accommodation of the press representatives. This section was recently added to the courthouse and comprises the first and fifth civil jury session courtrooms. It is probable that the trial will be held here.

Assistant District Attorney Lavelle, on behalf of the government, and Lawyer Morse for the defense, spent considerable time during the day going over the list of jurors from which the Richeson jury will be drawn. A detective agency has been supplied the list by Morse, with orders that every man on the list be looked up that his sentiments in regard to Richeson may be ascertained. Orders that information be secured as to what papers the jurymen have read have been given the detectives.

While Morse feels certain that the trial cannot be held Jan. 15, on account of the prisoner's condition, he is leaving no stone unturned in his determination to be prepared for all emergencies. He received reports yesterday in regard to many of the veniremen.

Richeson spends the greater part of his time sleeping, whenever sleep is possible. At times he endeavors to read, but the condition of his nerves is such that he cannot read for any extended periods. Not only do his hands shake as he holds the book, but his eyes refuse to follow the lines on the pages for long at a time. As a result, the greater part of his day must be passed either in sleep or thought, which tends to increase his nervousness.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CHOICE CHEESE.

OLD cheese if eaten after a meal will aid digestion.

Being hard to digest, cheese should be eaten only in small quantities.

Cheese cooked is more easy to digest than when eaten raw.

Cheese has a high food value. It contains about twice as much nourishment as any other food of the same bulk.

Cheese is not a suitable food for children.

Used with cereals, vegetables and meats, it is palatable and nourishing.

In winter cheese supplies a needed percentage of heat to the system.

Cheese should never be eaten alone. It digests best when taken with some other food.

Cheese is served with dessert. It appears with pie to aid the digestion of the pastry. It may also come on with the salad.

Should Be Well Done.

In cooking cheese see that it is well done, but not left on the fire till it is tough and unpalatable.

Here are some good cheese dishes:

Cheese Puffs.—Make a dough as for baking powder biscuit. Roll until a little thicker than pie crust. Spread with grated cheese and roll over as for jelly roll. Cut about one inch thick. Place these cubes upright and bake until light brown.

With Vegetables.

Cheese and Potatoes.—Prepare about two pounds of potatoes, two ounces of Parmesan cheese, three tablespoonfuls of butter, half a saltspoonful of salt and paprika. Mash and pass the potatoes through a sieve, add the butter and cheese and mix. Fill patty shells with the mixture and brown them in a quick oven. Then brush them over with melted cheese and butter, return them to the oven one minute and serve hot.

Cheese Balls.—Cheese balls are little balls served hot with green salad and toast. Beat an egg until light, add to it a cupful of grated breadcrumbs, mix well, add a cupful of grated cheese and season with a teaspoonful of tomato catsup and a pinch of paprika. Wet the hands and make little balls as big as plums. Dip each ball in egg, roll in breadcrumbs and fry in hot fat a light brown.

Cheese Souffle.—Brown a tablespoonful of butter and flour. Pour upon them a cupful of scalding milk and stir until smooth. When almost cool beat the sauce into four well beaten eggs. Stir in a cupful of grated cheese. Season with salt and cayenne pepper and pour into a well greased pudding dish. Bake until light and brown. Serve at once.

Anna Thompson.

Extremely Polite.

The forms of Mexican politeness to the stranger are sometimes embarrassing. Miss Mary Barton, who visited the country to paint landscapes and tells her experience in "Impressions of Mexico," says that "people seemed anxious to help me in all possible ways, from the railway conductor, who invited me to dine with him, to the very smart young man that I met in the postoffice when I had a number of invitations in my hand and who offered to lick the stamps for me."

COMMITTEE ON VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Met In the School Committee's Room Thursday Night

PLAN OF ACTION

A meeting of the committee on Vocational Training for boys was held Thursday evening in the School Committee rooms. In the absence of the chairman, Frank Burgess was elected chairman pro tem. The evening was given to a discussion of the three most prominent phases of the problem the city has to solve. These three phases seem to be: first, the working out of a curriculum for the present graded and high school system, sufficiently elastic that a boy of mechanical tastes and abilities will have just as good preparation for his life work as the boy who is headed for the professions or for business; second, the development of evening continuation courses for boys who are already in the industries and who wish to educate themselves to become masters of their particular trades; third, the provision for those who leave school to enter the industries at an early age and who by part-time or half-time instruction may be developed into highly skilled workmen, the shop co-operating with the instructor.

It was voted that the chairman should appoint two members, who, together with himself should draw up a tentative report and plan of action for the full committee to consider.

OFFICIAL VISITATION.

By invitation of John Hancock Lodge 224, I. O. O. F., of Wollaston, the third degree staff of Puritan Lodge 179 of South Braintree paid that lodge a fraternal visit Wednesday evening and conferred the degree on their candidate, in a very creditable manner. The work was exceptionally well done and much praise was bestowed on the staff by the large gathering present.

Just before the final exercises the staff gathered on the floor, while High Priest John H. Macandrew in a few well chosen remarks presented to Andrew S. Johnston District Deputy Grand Master of Puritan Lodge a beautiful jewel as expressing their kind regard for the faithful service rendered that lodge. Forest Watkins vice grand pinned the jewel on. Brother Johnston was so completely surprised he could hardly express his feelings and appreciation.

The orchestra struck up the familiar tune "Blest be the tie that binds," and the brothers joined heartily in singing. It was a fitting climax to a well balanced meeting and made every brother feel at home.

After partaking of a light collation the brothers returned to their various homes feeling amply repaid for being present. General good feeling was expressed by all.

OUR DUMB ANIMALS.

"Our Dumb Animals," the excellent little monthly publication of the Massachusetts society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, blossoms out in its January issue with a handsome cover, printed in colors on fine coated paper from monotype composition, with other improvements that are expected to add materially to its popularity and extend its influence for good along its particular line of work. For forty-four years, "Our Dumb Animals" has been sent all over the world on its mission of kindness to all dumb creatures, and while it has not been self-supporting, the results it has accomplished have amply warranted the excess of expenditure over income, and thanks to the generosity of a host of public spirited citizens, the good work has been carried on and is to be continued under conditions that are confidently expected to still further enlarge its broad field of usefulness. "Our Dumb Animals" is especially valuable for young readers and should have a place in every household.

NEPONSET DAM BURSTS

"The news of the breaking of the dam spread very quickly. Men who were employed for outside duty for the Baker people launched a rowboat on the railroad tracks and tried in that way to reach the drowning man but they were unable to do anything.

"The people in the factories were greatly excited. The whole neighborhood was soon in an uproar.

For a long time the people of the little factory settlement did not appreciate what had happened. One man ran through the streets, crying: "The dam's burst—the dam's burst!"

People in a Panic.

Then came the rush of water in confirmation of his declaration. Just what the possibilities were no one had time to stop to find out. Visions of other dams that had burst and swept hundreds to death flitted before the faces of the frightened people.

The roar of the water was in their ears. Many thought that all of the big factory buildings would be swept away, not taking time to think that there was not enough water stored in the dams for such destructive work.

Some of the girls were hysterical and were unable to resume their work. They were allowed to go home.

A force of men was put to work at once to ascertain theexact damage that had been done and to repair it. Another force was sent to the upper dam that had given way to find out the cause of the accident.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The boys' meeting in Y. M. C. A hall Saturday morning will be one of unusual interest. A stirring patriotic story, "Patriarch and Patriarch's Son" or "The Lad from beyond Tuxedo," illustrated by 75 stereopticon slides will be given. The story tells of the bequeathing of "Patriotic Responsibility" upon a boy by his grandfather, a civil war veteran and its result. This is an inspiring story and is wholesome in its every detail and should call out a large number of boys who are looking for something worth while to do.

The dates for the Saturday morning meeting at the Y. M. C. A., which have been arranged by Mr. Blanchard are as follows:

Dec. 30.—"The Lad from beyond Tuxedo."

Jan. 6.—Second half of "The Lad from beyond Tuxedo."

Jan. 13—Talk by Fred H. Davis of Brown University.

Jan. 20—Boy's program: Men and Religion Forward Movement.

Jan. 27—Ben Hur.

Feb. 3—Second half of Ben Hur.

Feb. 10—Rev. W. B. Ayers.

HOW TO MAKE A FLYTRAP

Simple Apparatus Has Been Found Effective In Denver.

It is a simple thing to destroy flies by the millions with a homemade fly trap similar in construction to those in use in Denver. These traps were made by the convicts in the Colorado penitentiary.

The apparatus is simply a box, the size of a starch box or larger, of which the sides are removed, leaving the bottom and two ends, and replaced with mosquito wire. A large tin funnel about ten or twelve inches across at the top, is inserted into the bottom of the flytrap in an inverted position. The box is supported so as to be about three inches from the ground. Under the funnel is placed a saucer of vinegar, and some brown sugar is scattered around. After eating the sugar the flies go up into the funnel, the inside opening of which is near the top of the box. When the box is half full of dead flies it can be emptied by removing the funnel or by making a trap-door at one end.

How to Preserve Mauve Color.

I was delighted to find by experiment that to prevent my lavender and mauve gowns or ribbons from fading it was only necessary to put the soiled articles in cold water with common baking soda added to the proportion of one tablespoonful of soda to half a gallon of water. Let soak half an hour, then wash carefully in slightly warm soapsuds, using little soap; rinse well and dry in the shade. For other colors table salt of same proportion is most effectual to prevent fading. However, one teaspoonful muriatic acid to a gallon of water is the best thing to use for light blue fabrics, and your daintiest blue frocks are thus kept looking like new after many launderings.—Harper's Bazar.

Jam For Breakfast.

People who like to eat pastry or other irregular dishes for breakfast should be consoled to learn that no less a man than Herbert Spencer ate strawberry jam at his morning meal. He did it to avoid monotony, believing that digestion was best served by keeping the stomach entertained with variety. He is said to have told of a man who went into a decline from a too steady diet of mutton chops.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Of Ward 4 Elects Officers At Annual Meeting

COMMITTEES

The annual meeting of the Ward Four Improvement Association was held Thursday evening and was very largely attended.

President Little presided and the reports of the treasurer and secretary for the year showed the membership of the association to be over 100, that all bills had been paid and there was a good balance in the treasury.

It was voted to hold a smoke talk on Thursday evening, Jan. 11, at which time arrangements will be discussed for the annual banquet of the association to be held later. The principal speaker at this meeting will be Overseer of the Poor, James H. Elcock, who will speak on the settlement laws.

SAVING MONEY.

A Dollar a Week Put Into the Bank Is a Good Investment.

"It is mighty hard," said an unfortunate workingman some time ago to the writer, "to save up a thousand dollars by laying aside a dollar or two a week and then to take it out of the savings bank and lose it to a get rich quick swindler, as I have just done." The poor fellow could work and save, but he had not had even a kindergarten education in finance, else his story would have been different. He had never given a thought to interest and so was absolutely ignorant of growth through compound interest and, of course, had never heard of that wonderful process of accumulation known as "progressive compound interest."

One dollar deposited in a savings bank that pays 4 per cent will amount to $2.19 in twenty years. This is simple compound interest. Now, if you deposit $1 every year for twenty years, or $20 in all, the sum to your credit will have grown to $30.97.

Any wage earner can put by $1 a week. That money deposited in a savings bank for twenty years will have increased to $1,612. A deposit of $5 a week will have grown to $8,060, and this at 4 per cent will be $320 a year. There is no secret, no mystery, about this. It is as clear as the cloudless sun, and the method is just as clean and honest."—Christian Herald.

CAN'T READ THEIR LIPS.

When Actors Do Not Face the Audience It Bothers the Deaf.

"Time and time again we're asked to have our actors face the audience squarely when speaking lines that are of great importance," a theatrical manager said recently. "The explanation for the request is generally the same—that deaf people in the audience who depend on lip reading rather than hearing lose the run of the play if some important lines are spoken by a person whose lips can't be read. An actor or actress who's stuck on posing in profile is always the despair of the deaf people in the audience, as they say it's almost impossible to read lips in profile.

"Out ticket agent hears another side of the same question. People tell him when buying tickets that some one in the party is stone deaf and must read the lips of the actors in order to follow the play. Then they ask him on which side of the theater these particular seats should be located to make this lip reading the most satisfactory. Often the stage setting decides which way the actors must face, and if a deaf person gets on the wrong side of the house the play is practically lost."—New York Sun.

Too Late.

Mr. B. drove up in a hansom and entered the jeweler's shop accompanied by his valet, who carried an oblong box of steel. Mr. B. asked for a private interview, and on being shown into the office he opened the box, exposing a splendid array of diamond and pearl necklaces, earrings, tiaras and rings.

"Mrs. B.," he said, "is now abroad. Before she returns I want you to extract these stones and replace them with good imitations, selling the real jewels and giving me the money. This, of course, is to be a confidential transaction. Mrs. B. is to know nothing of it."

"My dear sir," said the jeweler, "I should be glad to do as you ask, but it is impossible. Two years ago Mrs. B. called here on the same errand that now brings you, and this errand in her case was successful. The paste jewels that you offer me are worth little more than the hire of the hansom awaiting you outside."—London Tit-Bits.

Thackeray and Colonel Newcome.

Mr. Louis Melville tells a characteristic story of Thackeray's fondness for his greatest hero. "It was outside 'Evan's,'" he writes, "that Lowell, being on a visit to London, met the novelist looking so haggard and worn that he asked if he were ill. 'Come inside, and I'll tell you all about it,' said the latter. 'I have killed the colonel.' At a table in a quiet corner Thackeray took the manuscript from his pocket and read the chapter that records the death of Colonel Newcome. When he came to the end the tears that had been swelling his lids trickled down his face, and the last word was almost an inarticulate sob."—London Chronicle.

Pretty High Hills.

A distinguished astronomer once took the trouble to measure in several paintings the size of the moon and to deduce from it the height of the mountains shown in the same picture. He found that the average height of the hills was about forty-three miles, while one giant peak raised its head more than a hundred miles above sea level. Turner, who was one of the greatest masters of landscape composition and coloring, frequently exaggerates the height of his hills with the intention of conferring upon them a majesty which otherwise they would not possess.

Happiness.

That all who are happy are equally happy is not true. A peasant and a philosopher may be equally satisfied, but not equally happy. Happiness consists in the multiplicity of agreeable consciousness. A peasant has not capacity for having equal happiness with a philosopher.—Johnson.

The bread of life is love; the salt of life is work; the sweetness of life, poesy; the water of life, faith.—Mrs. Jameson.

COUNCILMAN WAS GREATLY SURPRISED

Councilman George Gauthier was very much surprised to read in the paper recently that he had left the employ of Mr. Williams and gone into business for himself. The fact is that it has been four years since he was in Mr. Williams employ and during these four years he has carried on the carpentry business for himself, with an office in the rear of the Tirrell block on Hancock street.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Corcoran and Charles A. Lee were arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Both men were out on probation from a recent offense. This morning's cases were placed on file and they were ordered to pay $15 each on the new complaints.

Gustave Gebart was arraigned for being idle and disorderly at Quincy. Case placed on file on payment of costs.

Hugh Currie Jr., Harry Daley and Hiram Rand were arraigned for breaking and entering and larceny at Randolph.

Currie and Daley were discharged and Rand was held in $500 for the grand jury.

John Nolan of Adams street and Donald Crane of Whitney Road will return to Colgate College next week after having spent the Christmas holidays at home with their parents.

Why She Couldn't.

The elder Booth, the tragedian, had a broken nose. A woman friend once remarked to him, "I like your acting very much, Mr. Booth, but to be perfectly frank with you I can't get over your nose!"

"No wonder, madam," replied Booth; "the bridge is gone."

A Pessimist.

A pessimist is a person who tells you that what appears to be a silver lining in your cloud is only a low grade of tin foil.—Galveston News.

MURPHY'S NEWS SERVICE.

John F. Murphy of Boston has disposed of the Murphy News Service, which handles all classes and forms of literature offered for sale at news stands and in the trains and boats of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, to the Union News Company of New York. The service extends from Boston to New York on the trains, on the steamships of the New England Navigation Company, which is controlled by the New Haven road, on trains between Boston and Worcester and Worcester and Fall River. His news-stand had a place and territory which the service embraces. The Union News Company will formally take over the management of the service Sunday night.

Mr. Murphy has handled the sales of the Patriot and Ledger for many years. His newstand had a place and he enjoyed a wide patronage in the old railroad station on Kneeland street, Boston, and when the South station was built he was quick to secure rights and increase his business, giving most satisfactory service.

Yes, ma'am, an' now that I'm goin' to take hold here, I'll settle the permit business first of all. You see, I carry my own fountain pen. There, take that an' don't lose it.

What is this?

That's a permit, ma'am, for you to visit th' kitchen. It entitles you to one visit a week. If you come oftener th' permit will be taken up—an' don't you forget it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Clan McGregor No. 5 Entertains In Music Hall

COMMITTEES

If the immortal and renowned poet Robert Burns, could have visited Music Hall last evening, his heart would have been filled with complete ecstasy and satisfaction, in realizing that "Tam O' Shanter," a poem which he had written in 1790, had become the subject of a most exquisite sketch, under the same title, and furnished in onjunction with another sketch entitled "Breaking into Scotch," by the Scottish Musical Comedy Co., under the auspices of Clan McGregor, No. 5, O. S. C. The company included Thomas Henderson, John Daniels tenors, Jas. Gilbert, baritone and Douglas Morrill bass.

The musical director of the affair was Jarvis Jocylin and the manner in which everything was carried out caused it to be pronounced by the hundreds in attendance the best entertainment ever furnished by the local Clans. This seems to argue sufficiently well for the success of the event, especially when it is considered that the occasion last evening was the thirty-first annual observance.

"Breaking into Scotch" was a most pleasing sketch, showing in a way marked by many humorous incidents the encounters of an Englishman on his first visit to Scotland. The scene was laid in the northern part of Scotland and the time was supposed to be the autumn shooting season. All the movements and customs characteristic of the Scotchman were exemplified in splendid style by the members of the company and the dialect itself, teeming with its many witty remarks, kept the audience in a state of continual mirth and laughter. The cast of characters for this sketch was as follows:

Sir Duncan Dundee — Thomas Henderson
A Scotch Gentleman of Leisure
Lord Campapifax — John Daniels
An Englishman, College Friend of Sir Duncan's
Sandy — James Gilbert
A Highland Gilly
Butler — Douglas Morrill
In Sir Duncan's Service.

"Tam O' Shanter" was presented in a manner that enhanced the entire at-

QUINCY GIRL IN ROMANTIC WEDDING

Miss Edith Nord Becomes Bride of Popular Sailor

MARRIED AT NAVY YARD

Miss Edith Nord, daugther of Mr. Charles and Mrs. Josephine Nord of 279 Water street and well and favorably known in South Quincy, was the bride in a romantic marriage Friday at the Charlestown Navy yard when she became the wife of Harry Stoller, a marine.

The wedding took place Friday afternoon in the rooms of the Naval Museum and Institute at the Charlestown Navy Yard, the first ceremony of the kind that has taken place there in the nearly 100 years the rooms have been occupied by the museum, and the first wedding of an enlisted man at the Navy Yard in the memory of any one now there.

Seaman Harry Stoller, who is attached to the receiving ship Wabash, but is detailed as a member of the official launch crew of Capt. DeWitt Coffman, commandant of the yard, and Miss Edith Nord of Quincy were the bridal couple. Chaplain C. M. Charlton of the Navy Yard performed the ceremony. Mrs. Nord, the bride's mother, and Coxswain W. J. Marshal and Seaman W. C. Yates ofthe commandant's barge crew, were of the wedding party.

The wedding was to take place at the bride's home in Quincy, but it appeared impossible for groom to get away yesterday, so permission was granted to have the ceremony at the yard. Chaplain Carlton's office is in the main portion of the museum

After the bridal party arrived, the sailors in their regulation uniforms and Mrs and Miss Nord in street dress, they were escorted to the library room of the museum. That room, which is used in part as the general courtmartial room of the yard, had been cleared of all evidences of the court..

The background for the wedding group was the main exhibition hall, with its models of old warships and craft of every age, battle relics, spears, war clubs and other implements from the Pacific Islands, Chinese, Hindoo, African and South Sea idols, portraits of famous naval heroes and paintings of ships and even the bones of soldiers killed at Bunker Hill.

Seaman Stoller is a native of New York and is serving his second enlistment in the navy. His record in the service is indicated by the fact that he is a member of the picked barge crew of the commandant.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Stoller will start for a wedding trip to New York and will spend New Year's there at the home of Stoller's parents.

STILL ALARMS WERE MANY

Auto Chemical Proved Valuable on Friday

MOSTLY GRASS FIRES

Theauto chemical was kept on the jump Friday, answering still alarms for grass fires. The high wind, coupled with sparks from passing locomotives, and possibly boys with matches caused many of these fires and in every case the auto proved to be just the thing. Had it been necessary to send out the hose wagon, it would have been very trying for the horses. the only usggestion to make after Friday's experience, from a spectators point of view, is that the apparatus should be provided with a wind shield. It must have been very cold for the driver and the man who rode on the seat with him, going against the wind at thirty or more miles an hour. The wind must have cut deep. A wind shield would have afforded much protection.

Aside from the fires mentioned in Friday's Ledger, the auto went out thrice in the afternoon, once for a grass fire in the rear of the Adams Academy, for a fire on Adams street and in the early evening for one fire on Grant street. All of these were still alarms and the auto chemical was the only piece of apparatus that responded. With it, besides Chief Williams, was a crew of four or five men.

A resume of the work of the fire department Friday shows that there were three bell alarms Combination 1 responded to 3 still alarms, the auto chemical to 5 still alarms, and the Wollaston apparatus to 3 still alarms. The total loss for all these fires did not exceed $75, which speaks well for the efficiency of the department.

MANY WILL ATTEND THE INAUGURATION

Everything In Readiness For Big Event Monday

THE ADDRESS

Everything is in readiness for the inauguration of Mayor Stone, Monday noon, and the indications are that there will be none too much room in the Council chamber to accommodate those who desire to attend. The gallery has been reserved for the ladies and those in the front row will be Mrs. Stone and a party of the Mayor's personal friends. Aside from the usual seats on the main floor, a large number of chairs have been put in for the occasion. It was thought at one time to reserve a section inside the rail, at the right of the President's desk for the specially invited guests, but this has been given up. No one will be allowed inside the rail but the members of the Council and department officials. The latter will occupy the regular seats allotted to them.

It is probable that as in other years Mayor Stone will omit the reading of several pages of figures relating to the finances, as they would not be generally understood. It has been the custom for the Mayor to announce that as the figures will appear in the afternoon local paper in full, he would omit reading that part.

As far as known there will be no contests over the organization of the council and it will quickly get down to business.

Send in your January dates of entertainments, lectures, etc., for the Coming Events" column of the Ledger. It lets people know what is doing in the city and also often saves a conflicting of dates. January bookings promise a busy month socially with plenty doing for every one.

CITY OF QUINCY

EVENING DRAWING SCHOOL

The second term will open Tuesday, January 2 at 7 P. M. at the High School.

ALBERT L. BARBOUR,
Superintendent.
Dec. 30, 1911. 30-3t

HIS LORDSHIP "MAN" WILL BE GUEST OF HONOR

Any member of the Quincy Women's Club who fails to take her "gentleman" to the Club house on the evening of January 8th will have deprived herself and her husband, friend or sweetheart of a treat. No more attractive entertainment could be planned than the one announced. Strains of inspiring music will lend an air of cordiality and welcome during the arrival and seating of guests. Songs by Mrs. Frank Johnson Moore, with Miss Marion Chadwick Whiton at the piano, will open the program to be followed by Mrs. Emily Montague Bishop in "Dramatic Scenes from the United States Senate."

These "Scenes" take you to the senate gallery, give a graphic picture of the Senate in session, introduce you to Senators, "Regulars" "Progressives" and "Democrats", entertain you with senatorial courtesy—and discourtesy, give dramatic incidents of breaking senate rules and of trying to take a senator "off his feet;" in short, they measure men by their own words, and contain passages of eloquence, humor, sarcasm, flattery and indignation.

Mrs. Bishop's presentation is more than a character sketch, more than an exhibition of dramatic art; it is a vivid portrayal of senators in action and an illumination of the hidden forces that wield a powerful influence in the Senate.

BANQUET THE MAYOR THIS EVENING

Department Officials Will Say Good-bye At Informal Dinner

BIDS ADIEU TO CLERKS

The department officials, most of whom have served for four years under Mayor Shea, will take official leave of him tonight at a banquet to be served at the Boston City club. There will be no guests at the gathering, other than Mayor Shea and the committee having the affair in charge, say that it will not be a crow dinner by any means. There will probably be some speaking, but no knocking and what is said will have to be left to imagination as there will be no reporters.

Mayor Shea took his official leave of the clerks in the several departments at City Hall, Friday evening, when he presented each of them with a box of Page & Shaw's best. There were quite a few watery eyes among some of the lady clerks, when His Honor said goodby. He wished them all kinds of good luck for the new year.

His Honor has been giving his time for the past few days, to cleaning up the accumulation of papers on his desk and fixing up the office for its new occupant, so that when the hall closed this noon, it was in readiness to receive Mayor Stone on Monday.

CLARENCE HUNTER DEAD.

Clarence Hunter, for many years connected with the street railway, first as a conductor and later at the Quincy car barn, passed away Friday at his home on Wendell avenue, Wollaston, after a long illness, aged 48 years. He was a member of the Loyal Orangemen's League, and leaves a widow and several children.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

1912.

As we open the life book of 1912, with its leaves white and unstained, may we turn the page of each day with tender thought for the distressed, gentle words for the erring, and helpful acts for the needy; and when the last page is filled may the whole year's record be one of truth, loyalty and helpfulness.—Barbara Galpin.

The red haired man who has received a yellow necktie from his best girl should be warned in time, or we foresee a sojourn in Reno.

The most practical use we can suggest for the red cross stamps would be to seal up the mouths of the men who spit on the sidewalk.

If we felt that we were to be tried by a jury composed of women wearing inverted waste baskets on their heads, we should take great care to keep out of the way of the police.

Before the Republican party makes a telling appeal to the nation, it must quit the rich man's dinner table, and go down into the every day streets where the common people live, and suffer, and struggle.

An easy and effective way of manifesting an interest in the administration of the city government says the Somerville Journal is to attend the inauguration ceremonies next Monday. No invitations have been sent out and no seats reserved except the gallery for ladies. It is the people's occasion and all are equal. An outline of the proposed work of the year will be set forth in Mayor Stone's address and should merit the close attention of every citizen and taxpayer. A hall filled to overflowing will be a visible demonstration of the interest of the people in the government under which they must live and will be a compliment to the city officials as well as a reminder that they are the servants of the people and directly responsible to them.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

These resolves of amendment used to be about as much a feature of the calendar as Christmas or July 4. The weaker people were, the more fervent the heights of resolve to which they climbed amid the inspiring suggestions of the white and freshly turned new leaf.

The people who live lives showing fine qualities do a good deal of resolving on other days than Jan. 1. In fact, until their characters reached some permanence of attitude, they probably had to do some resoluting about every day of their lives. It is the men who lack backbone of their own who have to depend on such outside props as the new starting point in our artificial calendar. For the fool and his resolution are soon parted.

And yet one would dislike to throw a single drop of cold water on any human heart that on Jan. 1 or June 30, or any other day of the 365 shall resolve to display more temperance, industry, or kindness. But it takes far more than the whim of the moment to leave off a habit. The man who has come to recognize that he has used too much liquor has commonly got to do something more than sit down and swear to drink only a pint where he has engulfed a quart. He will have to revolutionize his manner of living, his haunts, companionships, amusements, and whole point of view.

PATRIOT'S ANNIVERSARY.

This week the Quincy Patriot completes its seventy-fifth volume. In all these years there have been many changes, the town has grown from town to city and from a small city to one of 35,000 population and still growing. In 1837 all the names of voters could be printed on a sheet of paper about 1x1 1-2 feet where now it takes 12 sheets 2x3 feet.

Many families who subscribed for the Patriot in 1837 are still on the subscription list, a son or grandson continuing the subscription. The Patriot has always been a home paper going into the home each Saturday morning and being carefully kept until the next issue arrived and often then not discarded but filed away or sent to distant friends.

The management and editorship has changed little in all these years the late George W. Prescott being for over fifty years the guiding hand. In 1861 when John A. Green the founder and early proprietor died his widow M. Elizabeth Green continued the business giving it her personal attention in partnership with Mr. Prescott until 1894 when failing health caused her to retire. She was a lovable woman, known to most of the Patriot subscribers and highly esteemed, as was Mr. Prescott, who kept in touch with his readers and progressive newspaper methods.

When Quincy became a city in 1889 and the firm started a daily paper, the Quincy Daily Ledger, it was thought by many that the Patriot would be crowded out but after twenty-five years of daily competition it still holds its own and continues to be the favorite paper.

At this time the Patriot is to have no special observance of its diamond anniversary but in the spring is to publish an anniversary number which will be a credit to the city and paper as well as a valuable souvenir. The edition is in the hands of W.W. Colson a member of the Boston Press club a man much in favor with newspaper men throughout the state. We bespeak for him a cordial greeting as he goes about among the Patriot subscribers getting data and matter for the "Anniversary edition."

ELECTRIC EXPRESS.

The Electric Express has been given a good test as to its promptness and reliability during the present busy holiday season, when the amount of small shipments has been unusually large and when as much of the pleasure attending the exchange of gifts depends upon their arriving at their destination in good time and in good condition.

If one may judge from the many favorable comments heard the service passed through the test of the rush of Christmas business in a very satisfactory manner. The excellent advantages of the service so well demonstrated under these conditions are even more conspicuous during the regular run of business during all seasons and that more and more shippers are constantly realizing this fact is evidenced by the steady and rapid increase in the number who are making use of this new way of express and freight transportation.

Q.—What "government," and who is referred to in the following prophecy of Isaiah ix, 6, 7.—"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the GOVERNMENT shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called THE PRINCE OF PEACE. Of the increase of his GOVERNMENT AND PEACE there shall be no end?" * (T. A. W.)

Answer.—The birth of this child was announced by the angels many centuries after this prophecy was made; and the Son that was given, was the only begotton Son of God, who entered into this world to redeem the race from sin and death. The "government" referred to, is that perfect government which will be established in all the earth when Christ the Saviour of the world shall return at His second advent to set up the FIFTH UNIVERSAL EMPIRE OF EARTH—the KINGDOM OF HEAVEN. Under the administration of the great Prince of Peace, who then will be endowed with all heavenly power and authority, all injustice and unrighteousness will be eliminated from the earth. Every incentive to wrong doing will be removed and every opportunity to make progress in the way of righteousness will be offered to the world. And we read "When the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth; the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." Then the angelic proclamation will be fulfilled—"Peace on earth, good will toward men."

ANNUAL GUILD SERVICE.

The third annual service for all the organizations of this parish will be held in Christ church, Sunday P. M., at 7.30. Seats will be reserved so that the various guilds and clubs will be massed in a body while each will have its distinct place. It is well that the working guilds should assemble in the House of God to give thanks for the work of the past year, and to receive fresh courage and inspiration for the work of the coming year. Rev. George Hodges, D. D., Dean of the Episcopal Theological school, Cambridge, will be the preacher. The key note of Dean Hodges' preaching is common sense. His sermons are practical, something to help over the rough places and make the path plain.

MALCOLM BLAKE.

Word has been received from the Queen Victoria Hospital on the Canary Islands of the death of Malcolm Blake on Dec. 17. He was oldest son of Deacon Walter F. Blake of Memorial church. Last summer while employed in Boston he felt the need of a change of climate, and decided that he would voyage to some country where the temperature would be more even. Having a knowledge of sea faring life, he shipped for Buenos Ayres.

The only letter sent to his father was one of hope and encouragement that the sea had given him appetite and that all would be well. In Buenos Ayres he was operated on for appendicitis, and when strong enough sailed for home via Hamburg, but was too ill to continue, and was sent to the hospital on Great Canaries.

The young people of Atlantic feel his death deeply, he was very much interested in church and Endeavor work. His father has the sympathy of all who know him.

PROCLAMATION BY PLAISTED

Maine Legislature to Convene In Special Session

DEFECTS IN PRESENT LAWS

Executive Says They Should Be Carefully and Thoroughly Revised Before Next State-Wide Election, to the End That People's Will Shall Be Carired Out—Prohibitory Problem Must Be Dealt With

Augusta, Me., Dec. 30.—Governor Plaisted last night issued a proclamation commanding the legislature to convene in special session March 20 to revise the election laws, redistrict the state for the purpose of electing representatives to congress, and to prepare something in the way of liquor legislation.

Proclamations were issued today ordering the primaries and elections to fill three vacancies in the state senate. The proclamation is, in part, as follows:

"Our laws relating to the conduct of elections, the making of returns to the governor and council, the tabulating of such returns and the declaration of the result thereof, are uncertain in their meaning and inadequate in substance. There is no provision in our statutes for an official inspection or recount of ballots or even for the depositing of such ballots in a place of safety.

"These defects in the law became startlingly apparent after the special election of last September. They offered opportunity for overriding the will of the people as expressed at the polls. It is imperative that before we enter into another state-wide election a careful and thorough revision of these important laws should be made by the legislature.

"In order to comply with the requirements both of our state law and of the act of congress concerning the division of the state into congressional districts, it is necessary that the legislature should pass a redistricting bill before we again elect representatives to the national congress.

"The situation with regard to the prohibitory law and its enforcement is the cause of universal complaint and criticism. No thinking man in Maine is satisfied with present conditions. Those who are pleased with the law are dissatisfied with the manner in which it is enforced. Others regard the law itself as impracticable and incapable of state-wide enforcement.

"The problem is vital and pressing. The legislature should find a means to solve it, or, at least, should be able to submit to popular vote some one or more possible solutions of it."

AS HARLAN'S SUCCESSOR

Friends of Nagel Think He Will Go to Supreme Bench

Washington, Dec. 30.—No appointment to fill the place of the late Justice John M. Harlan of the supreme court of the United States will be made by President Taft before Jan. 11, or until after Attorney General Wickersham returns from his trip to Panama. The president desires to confer with the attorney general regarding the men available.

Notwithstanding strong intimations going out from Washington that the president will decide to promote Judge Hook of the eighth circuit, friends of Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor, maintain that President Taft's mind is by no means settled as to the appointment and believe that Nagel will ultimately be the choice. Nagel is 62 years old.

SPANISH LOSS IS HEAVY

Having Serious Military Proposition With Moroccan Tribesmen

Madrid, Dec. 30.—Corrected official advices arriving here from Melilla, Morocco, show the Spanish losses in the battle with the Riffian tribesmen in Morocco on Dec. 27 to have been more severe than at first reported.

There were seven officers and sixty-one soldiers killed and eighteen officers and 210 soldiers wounded. The killed include the colonel of the Melilla regiment and three captains.

The captain general of Melilla reports that heavy Riffian reinforcements are arriving from the interior, and that there is every indication that Spain will be confronted with a serious military proposition with the Moroccan tribesmen.

A THOUGHT FOR THE DAY.

Sometimes, I think, the things we see
Are shadows of the things to be,
And what we plan, we build;
Not every hope that hath been crossed
And every dream we thought was lost
In Heaven shall be fulfilled.

NEW MEXICO READY TO ENTER THE UNION

Has Complied With All the Requirements For Statehood

Washington, Dec. 30.—A messenger has left Santa Fe, N. M., for Washington, bearing the certificate of the returning board that the territory has complied with all the requirements of congress with reference to its admission to the union.

It is expected that the papers will reach the White House next Tuesday and it is stated by Delegate Andrews that President Taft, after examining them, will issue immediately the proclamation declaring New Mexico to be one of the sisterhood of states.

It had been supposed that New Mexico and Arizona would be admitted at the same time, but more delay would ensue in the case of Arizona and the president, it is understood, has decided that New Mexico should not be obliged to wait for her new honors because her neighbor is lagging behind.

CLAN McGREGOR

tention of the audience from start to finish, and the fact that it was interspersed by the rendition of a number of popular Scotish songs, of a number members in the cast to become the subject of much prolonged applause. The sketch, which was adapted fr m the poem of the same name, was laid in the interior of an Inn in the Town of Ayr, on the evening of a market day, when the illustrious Ploughman poet may have been given the theme that his pen afterwards made famous.

Tam o'Shanter, or Thomas Shanter the cognomen being significant of a farm, was a farmer and sometimes a smuggler, of a free and easy type, given over to the enticement of the cup. It was while i such a frame of mind that Barns is thought to have taken him on a fearsome ride home and pointed out to him the "unca sichts" in the ruined Alloway Kirk. Souter Johnny was a stanch ally of Shanter's and the two made a most attractive pair.

The cast of "Tam O'Shanter" was as follows:

Tam O'Shanter	James Gilbert
Souter Johnny	John Daniels
Landlord	Douglas Morrill
Burns	Thomas Henderson

The following songs were introduced during the play:

"My Name is Geordie Tamso," "Gin I had a Wee Wife," "Wi' a Hundred Pipers," "Corn Rigs," "Mary o' Argyle" Ye Banks and Braes," "Bonnie Charlie's Noo Awa" "Willie Brewed a Peck o' Maut" "Bonnie, Bonnie Mary" "Auld Lang Syne."

They were rendered mainly in solo parts, in which all four sang the choruses in a manner seldom witnessed. The company was forced to respond to numerous encores and it was shortly before ten-thirty when the comedy was brought to a close.

At this time the chairs were removed from the hall, and dancing, which was enjoyed till three o'clock this morning, was then in order. Provosts orchestra furnished the music for the occasion and the grand march took place at eleven o'clock. It was led by Walter H. Murray and Miss Florence Williams, daughter of Fire Chief Williams, followed by about one hundred and fifty couples.

Walter H. Murray was the floor directors. The assistant floor director was James D. M. Stewart and the aids were Alex W. Russell, Alex T. Black, M. A. McDonald and Angus Martin. The reception committee included Alfred O. Doack and George S. Murray.

Refreshments were served during the intermission, which took place shortly after midnight.

The following comprise the committee on arrangements:—Alfred O. Diack, chairman, Angus Kerr, Sec. of Committee, George S. Murray, Thomas Johnston, M. A. MacDonald, Alex T. Black, Walter H. Murray, James D. M. Stewart, David T. Drummond, Alex W. Russell, Angus Martin, James M. Birnie, William Maver.

MUST STAND HIS TRIAL

Talk of Compromise In the Richeson Case Is Denied

Boston, Dec. 30.—There can be no compromise of the case against Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, charged with the murder of Avis Linnell. District Attorney Pelletier and William A. Morse, senior counsel for Richeson, each says that there has been no thought of compromise.

Mr. Pelletier said: "The statement that there was any agreement reached is without foundation. There can be only one agreement possible and that is a plea of murder in the first degree. There is no question that Richeson will be able to attend the trial on Jan. 15."

Mr. Morse was shown the statement of Pelletier, and said: "I agree with Pelletier in stating that there has been no talk or thought of compromise. I still think that Richeson is too sick a man to go through such a terrible ordeal as early as Jan. 15."

WAS NOT A SUICIDE

Coroner Hints at Motive In the Murder of Dr. Knabe

Indianapolis, Dec. 30.—"Happenings and complications" in the life of Dr. Helene Knabe, former state bacteriologist, have been uncovered that might have supplied a motive for her murder, according to the verdict of Coroner Durham, who concludes that Dr. Knabe, who was found dead in her bedroom with throat cut Oct. 24, did not commit suicide, but was killed by some person or persons unknown.

The knife slash that almost severed her head was delivered by a powerful arm while the victim, almost nude, was lying on her back atop the cover of the bed, the coroner finds, and he declares it would have been impossible for her to have struck the blow herself.

KANSAS GIRLS PREFERRED

Substantial, Eligible Bachelors Start Campaign to Secure Wives

Ulysses, Kan., Dec. 30.—As a starter of its leap year publicity campaign against the single women of the state and country, the Grant County Bachelors' club gave a big banquet here last night. Plans for systematic action toward obtaining suitable wives for members were discussed.

The club has thirty-five members, "substantial, eligible bachelors of the county." An advisory committee was appointed to conduct the campaign.

Kansas girls will be given the preference, but the "field is "open to the entire nation." Eighteen charter members who married following a previous campaign by the club were guests of honor last night.

DR. ALVAH H. DOTY

Officer Whose Resignation Is Demanded by Governor

DOTY WON'T RESIGN

Two Courses Open to Governor to Oust Health Officer

New York, Dec. 30.—Despite the demand from Governor Dix that he forward his resignation, Dr. Alvah E. Doty, health officer of the port of New York, will not resign, it was said at the office of his attorneys.

Dr. Doty's refusal to quit leaves two courses open to the governor. He can prefer formal charges against Doty and summon him to Albany to stand trial. Then, if Doty is found guilty, he can be ousted.

The other course is to send to the legislature, when it convenes next week, the name of Doty's successor as health officer. In all probability his selection would be confirmed, and Doty, who is a "hold over," would be automatically driven out of office.

BERLIN STIRRED BY POISON EPIDEMIC

Number of Deaths in Mysterious Case Now Fifty-Five

Berlin, Dec. 30.—The authorities of Berlin, Potsdam, Alexanderplatz, Hermsdorf and other suburbs are alarmed by the epidemic which originated in the municipal shelter for the homeless and which has claimed fifty-five victims, while eight-five others are in serious condition. Many of them are expected to die.

In view of the report of the director of the institute for infectious diseases that the disease is not communicable, the suggestion of a quarantine was abandoned for the time being at least, it being announced that the medical authorities are making an effort to stamp out the disease.

Two deaths have occurred at Hermsdorf and two others at Potsdam.

BLACK SPOT IN BACK

Otherwise Eskimos Are Whiter Than Caucasians at Birth

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Christian Loyden, an Arctic explorer connected with the University of Christiana, who has been in Chicago for a few days prior to his return to Norway, talked of the origin of the Eskimo, the investigation of the origin of which race he is engaged in.

"A peculiar feature of all those most northern inhabitants," he said, "is that when born they have skin even whiter than the Caucasian. But they have a tiny black spot in the middle of the back, and it is in this spot that their complexion originates. The spot grows larger and at the same time less strongly colored. Finally it spreads over the entire body."

FOOD SUPPLY CUT OFF

Snow Causes Cattle to Starve In the Pan Handle Ranges

Dalhart, Tex., Dec. 30.—With sacks of oil cake tied to their saddles, horsemen are riding over Pan Handle cattle ranges saving what cattle they may from starvation by giving them the cakes.

This is the twelfth day since a crust of snow cut off practically all food from the beasts. Reports from the range are that many cattle are being found dead. Weather conditions continue hopeless.

La Follette Also Advocates Votes For Women In Ohio Speech

Dayton, O., Dec. 30.—In nearing the end of his speech making trip in Ohio, preaching the doctrine of progressive Republicanism, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin traveled the western part of the state yesterday.

He closed the day with a meeting here, reiterating the assertion he made at the noon meeting at North Baltimore, that the supreme court of the United States assumed legislative powers never granted by the constitution in its rulings on the Sherman anti-trust law, and for the first time on the trip advocated votes for women.

SUN'S MESSAGE TO AMERICANS

China's First President For Peace and Stable Rule

NOTIFIED OF HIS ELECTION

Negotiations on Subject of Pensions to Be Offered to Former Princes and Manchu Governors Will Be Opened as Soon as Military Arrangements Have Been Completed—Executive Long Connected With Rebels

Shanghai, Dec. 30.—Immediately following the receipt of word from Nanking that he had been elected president of the republic of China, Dr. Sun Yat Sen asked that the following statement be transmitted to his friends in the United States:

"I consider it my duty to accept the presidency. My policy will be to secure peace and a stable government by the promptest methods possible. My single aim is to insure the peace and contentment of the millions of my fellow countrymen."

The news of Sun's election spread with great rapidity among the population. Crowds made their way to the house in the French concession in which he has resided since his arrival here. When he appeared he was greeted with an enthusiastic ovation. The city shows evidences of great activity.

It is believed that Sun Yat Sen will immediately demand the withdrawal of the so-called imperial troops from their strategical positions in order to avoid the possibility of conflict with troops of the republican government. As soon as this has been effected the armistice now existing will be extended and the Manchu troops will be ordered to lay down their arms or to enter the service of the republic.

As soon as military arrangements have been completed negotiations will be opened on the subject of the pensions to be offered to the former princes and Manchu governors.

Sun Yat Sen has made preparations to organize his cabinet. It is believed that the first ministry will be a strong one and that it may include some of Yuan Shi Kai's delegates, who accompanied Tang Shao Yi, the premier's representative, to the peace conference.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen is a native of Canton and was educated at Honolulu, where his father was in business. Later he studied medicine at Canton and engaged in practice there. He has been connected with the revolutionary movement for a considerable time and took a radical point of view. He was one of the promoters of a plot to seize the city of Canton in 1895. The plans of the conspirators were discovered and a number of them were put to death, but Sun escaped and reached the British colony of Hong Kong, where he became a British subject.

He was heard from next in England and the United States, where he delivered a series of lectures in order to convert the Chinese students to his revolutionary principles. While he was on a lecture tour in England in 1900 he was enticed into the Chinese legation, where he was told that he was on Chinese territory and would be deported to Pekin. This, however, was prevented, as he claimed British citizenship, and he was set free.

At a later period he visited Japan and stirred up the Chinese to revolutionary ideas. He resided for some time at Singapore in the British Straits Settlement, where he was surrounded by a bodyguard of fellow revolutionists.

He visited New York in April this year.

Lisbon, Dec. 30.—The government has imposed a decree banishing for two years Mgr. Anthony M. Bello, the patriarch of Lisbon, the bishop of Guarda and the administrator of the diocese of Oporto from their respective districts. The ground on which the banishment is based is persistent opposition to the organization of cultural associations.

It was reported recently that the government would prosecute Bello on a charge of conspiring against the republic. The name of the patriarch of Lisbon has frequently been mentioned in connection with the creation of new cardinals, it being thought he was likely soon to receive the red hat.

A Speedy Cure for

Constipation, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver Complaints, Tired Feeling, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bad Complexion, Nervousness and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

"Bloodine Liver Pills"

act gently, yet thoroughly upon the bowels, liver, stomach and digestive organs. The pills, in old and chronic cases of constipation and indigestion, act at once, without griping, nor do they leave any unpleasant after-effects, nor form a constant habit of purging, produced by other cathartic remedies.

"Bloodine Liver Pills"

restore the deranged and torpid liver to its normal condition and healthful action. Remove and prevent constipation by securing a natural and regular operation of the bowels, and relieve those unpleasant symptoms which attend a diseased or morbid condition of the liver, stomach and bowels. To assist in attaining this end, the following suggestions are offered.

REMARKS. Everyone who uses pills for their action on the liver, should know that large doses rarely prove as satisfactory as small ones. Large doses simply purge and pass out of the system, usually leaving the bowels constipated, and seldom removing the cause of the trouble, or improve the general health. On the other hand, small doses develop the alterative effect of the medicine, do not irritate or constipate the bowels, but gently stimulate the liver and prevent the accumulation of bile by directing its flow into the proper channels. Therefore it is advisable to commence by taking not over one or two pills at bedtime and increase dose as necessary.

PORTLAND, ME.

GENTS:—I find your "Bloodine Liver Pills" the most effective pill I ever used. They cause no griping or constipative after effect as most live. pills do.

Why the Butcher Had the Cleanest Market Stall.

Mrs. Smith—"Really, Mr. Slaughter, I think you have the most inviting and appetizing stall in the market—always so clean and white. You must use a brand new set of cloths and aprons every morning."

Mr. Slaughter—"Oh, no ma'am—at least not any more. Anty Drudge showed my wife how she could wash all the blood stains out with cool or lukewarm water and Fels-Naptha soap."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, Mr. Slaughter, and if you ask your wife, she will tell you that washing clothes with Fels-Naptha in the Fels-Naptha way is easier and better than any other way."

If you do your wash the Fels-Naptha way, you won't have to set the alarm two hours ahead for Monday morning.

Get up the same as other mornings and put the Fels-Naptha to work.

You'll get the wash out of the way in just about half the time.

That's not the best part of it either. With Fels-Naptha, there's no boiling and no hard rubbing.

You won't have to spend hours over a hot stove poking and stirring a boiler full of clothes with a broomstick.

That's all been done away with—completely wiped out as though it never existed.

Think what a fine thing it is to have nice, clean, snow-white clothes, without ugly streaks and yellow spots.

Almost too good to be true.

But Fels-Naptha is doing it in myriads of homes every week.

And it does it with cool or lukewarm water.

Follow the easy directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of the year.

WHY SHIVER and SHAKE

ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantation though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan routs them with a fake dynamite cartridge, and Satan drives them into trees. Their chief is punished. Morgan and Raff have Sheldon in their power.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Joan returns with the Martha in good condition. Her white assistants describe her business shrewdness. Sheldon refuses to let her run the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan refuses him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Gogoomy attacks Joan, who escapes and warns Sheldon. Gogoomy flees with other savages, and Sheldon pursues. Bushmen murder all of Tudor's party except Tudor.

Sheldon and Joan rescue Tudor, find the heads of the remainder of his party, rout the bushmen and burn their village.

It was while in this mood that the screen door banged loudly behind the heels of Tudor, who strode into the room and paused before him.

"Well?" Tudor demanded defiantly.

And on the instant speech rushed to Sheldon's lips.

"I hope you won't attempt anything like it again, that's all—except that I shall be only too happy any time to extend to you the courtesy of my whaleboat. It will land you in Tulagi in a few hours."

"As if that would settle it," was the retort. "Now, let me tell you that the Solomon islands are not big enough for the pair of us. This thing's got to be settled between us, and it may as well be settled right here and now."

"I can understand your fire eating manners as being natural to you," Sheldon went on wearily, "but why you should try them on me is what I can't comprehend. You surely don't want to quarrel with me."

"I certainly do."

"But what in heaven's name for?"

Tudor surveyed him with withering disgust.

"You haven't the soul of a louse. I suppose any man could make love to your wife"—

"But I have no wife," Sheldon interrupted.

"Then you ought to have. The situation is outrageous. You might at least marry her, as I am honorably willing to do."

For the first time Sheldon's rising anger boiled over.

"You"— he began violently, then abruptly caught control of himself and went on soothingly. "I'll call the boat's crew and launch a boat. You'll be in Tulagi by 8 this evening."

He turned toward the door as if to put his words into execution, but the other caught him by the shoulder and twirled him around.

"Look here, Sheldon, I told you the Solomons were too small for the pair of us, and I meant it."

"Is that an offer to buy Berande, lock, stock and barrel?" Sheldon queried.

"No, it isn't. It's an invitation to fight."

"But what the devil do you want to fight with me for?" Sheldon's irritation was growing at the other's persistence. "I've no quarrel with you. And what quarrel can you have with me? I have never interfered with you. You were my guest. Miss Lackland is my partner. If you saw fit to make love to her and somehow failed to succeed, why should you want to fight with me? This is the twentieth century, my dear fellow, and dueling went out of fashion before you and I were born."

"You began the row," Tudor doggedly asserted. "You fired me out of your house. It won't do, I tell you. You started it, and I am going to see it through."

Sheldon smiled tolerantly and proceeded to light a cigarette.

"There isn't any row. It takes two to make a row, and I, for one, refuse to have anything to do with such tomfoolery."

"She's not your wife," Tudor continued, as though the other had not spoken. "A fellow has the right to make love to her unless she's your—well, perhaps it was an error, after all, due to ignorance, perfectly excusable, on my part. I might have seen it with half an eye if I'd listened to the gossip on the beach. Ali Guvutu and Tulagi were laughing about it. The pair of you trapped me into making a fool of myself. How was I to know that everything was not all right? You and she acted as if everything were on the square. But my eyes are open now. Why, she played the outraged wife to perfection, slapped the transgressor and fled to you. Pretty good proof of what all the beach has been saying. Partners, eh? A business partnership? Gammon my eye, that's what it is."

Then it was that Sheldon struck out coolly and deliberately, with all the strength of his arm, and Tudor, caught on the jaw, fell sideways, crumpling as he did so and crushing a chair to kindling wood beneath the weight of his falling body. He pulled himself slowly to his feet, but did not offer to rush.

"Now, will you fight?" Tudor asked grimly.

Sheldon made as if to repeat the blow, but Tudor, white of face, with arms hanging resistlessly at his sides, offered no defense.

"I don't mean a fight with fists," he said slowly. "I mean to a finish, to the death. You're a good shot with revolver and rifle. So am I. That's the way we'll settle it."

"But men don't act this way in real life." Sheldon remarked.

"You'll find I'm pretty real before you're done with me. I'm going to kill you today. Speaking of Joan"—

"Please keep her name out of it," Sheldon warned him.

"Oh, go ahead, knock me down. But that won't close my mouth. You can knock me down all day, but as fast as I get to my feet I'll speak of Joan again. Now, will you fight? I'll give you a fair chance to kill me, but I'll kill you before the day's out. This isn't civilization. It's the Solomon islands, and a pretty primitive proposition for all that. And two men and one woman is an equally primitive proposition. We'll settle it in the good old primitive way. I can't insult you directly, I know. You are too easy going, or cowardly, or both, for that. But I can narrate for you the talk of the beach—ah, that grinds you, doesn't it? I can tell you what the beach has to say about you and this young girl running a plantation under a business partnership."

"Stop!" Sheldon cried, for the other was beginning again to vibrate and oscillate before his eyes. "You want a duel. I'll give it to you. But it is absurd. What kind of a duel shall it be? There are no seconds. What weapons shall we use?"

"I've often thought that the ideal duel should be somewhat different from the modern conventional one. No seconds, of course, and no onlookers. The two principals alone are necessary. They may use any weapons they please, from revolvers and rifles to machine guns and pompoms. They start a mile apart and advance on each other, taking advantage of cover, retreating, circling, feinting—anything and everything permissible. In short, the principals shall hunt each other"—

"Like a couple of wild Indians?"

"Precisely!" cried Tudor, delighted. "You've got the idea. And Berande is just the place, and this is just the right time. Miss Lackland will be taking her siesta, and she'll think we are. We've got two hours for it before she wakes. So hurry up and come on. You start out from the Balesuna and I start from the Berande. Those two rivers are the boundaries of the plantation, aren't they? Very well. The field of the duel will be the plantation. Neither principal must go outside its boundaries. Are you satisfied?"

"Quite."

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Found to Have Cost California Women Fifteen Cents Each

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 30.—It cost the women of California 15.3 cents a vote to win their fight for equal suffrage at the recent state election, according to reports given out at the headquarters of the Southern California Political Equality league.

Reports submitted to the league show that $26,000 was spent in the California campaign.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Leap Year Levity Begins with 1912—Dan Cupid, However, Gets a Solar Plexus—"Beautiful Boston" is Shown up in Photographs of Colonial Doorways—Tech Folk are Tickled to Move Over to Cambridge—"The World in Boston" Has Inspired a "World in Cincinnati."

Poor Dan Cupid has received a smashing blow—and so, likewise, has the patient maid who has been waiting for the new year in order to waylay some unsuspecting young man of her acquaintance by taking advantage of Leap Year. A group of hard-hearted, unromantic Solong (no votes of women, one might know) have fixed it so that even if Dan Cupid and the hopeful maiden between them corner the desired young man and lug him off to the city clerk to get a marriage license, he still has five days leeway in which to think it over, muster his courage and flee the state. On and after January 1, 1912, runaway marriages, boy and girl marriages, champagne marriages and the other tricks that Cupid delights in playing on human kind will be in large part abolished. From then on the blushing youth must file a notice of intention, five days after which he may again call at the registrar's office to obtain the license which will permit his marriage with the object of his affections. In the meantime his and her parents, guardians, relatives or friends have ample opportunity to call also and register kicks, complaints, reasons and inquiries anent the marriage. But, adding insult to injury, if it is found to be advisable to withhold a license the state withholds also the dollar paid in by the youth. And as Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island have similar laws, and Connecticut has one under consideration, things look pretty hard for the Leap Year girl and her fellow conspirator, D. C.

Beautiful Boston has been shown in a mirror to Hubbites who often forget that they need not go to the old colonial cities in this vicinity which have suffered less change than Boston to find the examples of beautiful workmanship in doorways, balconies, windows, details of all sorts connected with housebuilding. Salem, Portsmouth and the other old towns have their share, but right on Beacon Hill are found still in their original form many of the finest examples of colonial architecture, as is shown by a wonderfully attractive group of photographs exhibited first at the City Club and then at the Copley Gallery. Particularly Chestnut Street—not the lower end known as Horse Chestnut Street by reason of the multiplicity of stables and shops, but the old Chestnut Street which makes its steep way up the river side of the Hill—still retains many delightful architectural details, inconspicuous to all but those who are searching for them, yet breathing the spirit of ancient days in every line. The old style white doorways, recessed, with fan windows, or framed in the house-front, adorned by porticos of Renaissance style or unsheltered, the doors of double, single, English or Dutch variety, the old fashioned brass knockers, the hand-rails, foot scrapers, name-plates, and the dozen other little relics of the good old days when the residents of Boston would have held up their hands in horror at a vision of the motley array of architecture destined to be inflicted on the Puritan capital by their children and children's children. Such an exhibition opens one's eyes to the wisdom of looking about and discovering the really fine streets in the community before going to other places for examples of colonial architecture.

The final obstacle to removing Boston's "Tech" to Cambridge has been set aside. The west bank of the Charles River Basin between the Harvard and new West Boston bridges will soon show a new set of aspiring domes and arches. The closing of a street which intersected the proposed site was the hinge upon which the decision was hung up for several weeks. The Cambridge city fathers, however, have at last decided to abolish this street, so that all is now ready for the construction of the new Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The site is sightly and admirably situated, giving opportunities for practical experimentation in the science of navigation on the broad expanse of the Basin and affording unobstructed facilities for aerial exploits by the aviation engineers. The nearness to the street cars is not such as to cause inconvenience, while securing freedom from the jar and vibration which in late years has been found detrimental to correct experimentation in the laboratories on Boylston Street. Thus the institution which Thomas A. Edison has credited as being the most valuable of its kind in the country is given a new impetus amid suitable and convenient surroundings, and should improve in efficiency and honor as the leading technical school.

The wonderful success of the "World in Boston" missionary pageant of about a year ago, which was witnessed by upwards of 200,000 people, has proved a stimulus to a middle western city. Incidentally it has led to securing from Boston a pageant master whose training has been such that he is able to combine music and drama with the requisite religious element. The "World in Cincinnati," which is to be produced next March will be directed by Percy J. Burrell reader, graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and president of its Alumni Association, prominent in organization work of the Methodist church and otherwise deemed to be well qualified to manage the pageant in which between four and five thousand volunteers must be drilled as closely as possible to the point of perfection. Mr. Burrell, who for some years past has been a teacher and lecturer in Boston, has made a great reputation for himself through his management of the annual costume carnival of the New England Conservatory students—an affair which he originated and has managed up to this time. These carnivals, held in Symphony Hall, and attended by society folk as well as musicians, are among the most picturesque happenings of the Hub's winter. Not every one, however, who attends realizes to what an extent they owe their brilliance to the organizing ability and imaginative capacity of the president of the New England Conservatory Alumni Association. The even greater affair which Mr. Burrell goes to Cincinnati to put through is financially secured by a large guarantee fund to which leading business men have subscribed. It will be held in the Music Hall Auditorium, one of the largest in America. The Ohio city at first thought might not seem to offer so large a field for a pageant of this kind as Boston and the populous New England centres adjacent. Greater Cincinnati, nevertheless, claims a population of about half a million, and the management is expecting by means of reduced railroad rates to draw people from Pittsburg, Louisville, Columbus, Cleveland, and even Indianapolis and Terre Haute. So that it is an auspicious as well as gigantic task to which the young Conservatory man is committed.

Roscoe R. Ricker, violinist, who is to play at the Bethany church concert Wednesday evening, is a young musician of whom Quincy may well be proud. He is sure to advance rapidly in his chosen profession.

A meeting especially for men is to be held Sunday night at 7.30 in the Washington Street Congregational church. Lawrence Greenwood secretary for extension work for Men and Religion Forward Movement will speak. He is speaking forthe committee of One Hundred in all the large industrial plants around Boston. Is an interesting speaker especially in his appeal to men.

Dexter Remick, the popular janitor of the Johnson building was happily surprised this morning, when he received a crate, sent from Orange, Florida, laden with grape fruit and oranges, which had been picked by his wife, who is sojourning in these regions in company with a number of well known Quincy women. The shipment came by way of the Clyde Line, and Mr. Remick was kept busy giving his friends some of the real fruit.

QUESTION OF RESTRICTIONS

Was Considered At Meeting of Cape Cat Boat Ass'n.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Cape Cat Boat association, was held Friday evening in the office of Frank Fessendent Crane on Temple street and these officers were elected:

President—Frank F. Crane.
Vice President—Wallace N. Arnold.
Secretary and Treasurer—Dr. Frank E. Dawes.
Measurer—Ralph E. Winslow.
Executive Committee—Edgar F. Emery, Ira M. Whittemore, Herbert W. Robbins, W. S. Hardwick.
Dinner Committee—Herbert W. Robbins, G. L. Tupper.
Delegate to Y. R. A.—Ira M. Whittemore.

The question of restrictions was taken up and discussed at length. It has always been the intention of the association, that a boat entering the races should be sailed by the owner or some one of her regular crew and that the boat should not employ a so-called professional skipper, as was done at the races in Quincy the past summer, this action causing much unfavorable comment, from the fact that the professional skipper happened to be a member of the Quincy club, so that virtually he was working against his own organization.

Ralph E. Winslow, Frank F. Crane and Herbert W. Robbins were appointed a committee to pass on the eligibility of boats entering the races.

It was also voted that the helmsman shall be a member of the club which his boat represents, and that in all races of the association, the helm shall be held by the owner or an amateur.

It was also voted to use only the mainsail for the next three years, and to sail on the measurement of the water line plus one-third of the overhang.

It was also decided by vote of the association to sail only in races held between Marblehead on the north and Hull on the south.

TAFT IS PREPARING FOR THE CAMPAIGN

Will Draft Bannard as One of His Chief Advisers

New York, Dec. 30.—It is reported here that President Taft will soon ask Otto T. Bannard of this city to accept an important position in connection with the campaign leading up to the Republican national convention. In the event that Mr. Taft is nominated at Chicago next June, it is said, Bannard, if he takes part in the preliminary campaign, may continue as one of the principal advisers to the president until the votes are cast in November.

President Taft has been urged for some time by Republican leaders to take a deeper interest in the pre-convention campaign. They have pointed out the activities of friends and political supporters of Senator La Follette and the widening movement for the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt, and at last it is said that the president has consented that a Taft headquarters be opened in Washington at an early date.

THE TABRIZ SIEGE

It Is Won by the Russians After Nine Days of Fighting

Tabriz, Dec. 30.—A nine days' siege of this city by the Russian troops has resulted in its complete occupation by the Russian forces and the dispersal of the combatants belonging to the constitutional progressive party (or Fidas).

A large number of casualties were sustained by both sides. The Russians lost from 100 to 200 men, while the losses of the Fidas were very severe, although the number cannot be ascertained.

During the fighting much damage to property was done, and the Stars and Stripes, floating over the United States consulate, were shot down by a Russian shell, which, however, did no further damage to the consulate.

OBJECTIONS AND REMEDIES

Relating to the Present System of Immigration

FAIRCHILD OUTLINES EVILS

Foreigners Are Poorly Distributed, Poorly Assimilated, and Lower Living and Wage Standards of American Workmen—Closer Federal Control and Wiping Out of Contract Labor Law Are Favored

Washington, Dec. 30.—"Selection of Population by Migration" was the topic at the joint session of the American Economic association and the American Sociological society held in this city. The principal paper was read by Professor H. P. Fairchild of Yale university, who said that his purpose was to present a soberly conceived plan of reform.

In order to accomplish this end he outlined at the start the principal evils charged against immigration and analyzed each in order to ascertain to what extent the remedies hitherto proposed offer relief. He found that the chief objections to the present system are as follows:

1—We have too many immigrants.
2—The immigrants are poorly distributed.
3—The immigrants are poorly assimilated, or not assimilated at all.
4—Immigration is lowering the wages and standards of living of the American workman.
5—Immigration increases the amount of pauperism and crime in the country.
6—The present immigration movement is not a natural but a stimulated one.
7—A large part of the immigrants consciously violate the law in entering.
8—Foreign countries are not benefited by immigration as at present conducted.

The principal remedies proposed are as follows:

1—The literary test.
2—Inspection abroad.
3—A physical test, similar to the army requirements.
4—A minimum wage requirement, providing for the deportation of any alien who was earning less.
5-9—Other less important suggestions, the principal ones having to do with discriminations in favor of men with families.

Almost all of these remedies aim primarily at the objection which has to do with the number of immigrants. The great problems of distribution, assimilation, standard of living, etc., are hardly touched.

"The following plan," said Fairchild, "seeks to meet all of the foregoing objections:

"Let the government of the United States take official charge of the distribution of immigrants. To this end information should be collected from public and private sources in regard to the sections of the country where immigrants are really needed, wages, occupations, etc. This information should be supplied to the proper authorities in foreign countries.

"The immigrants should then be required to choose their destination in this country before leaving home. To help in the administration of this provision passports should be required of all immigrants, stating their destination. The United States government should keep control of the immigrants until they reach their destination.

"In accordance with this plan, the present contract labor clause of the immigration law should be abolished. Public boards and private employers should be encouraged and assisted to make contracts with immigrants. But these contracts must have the sanction of the government, and to be legal must specify a wage not below a certain minimum fixed for each locality or industry by the government. Illegal contracts should be void, and both parties subject to punishment.

"This would encourage immigrants to study conditions in this country before emigrating, and would give those who are prudent enough to wish some assurance of employment in their new home a chance to secure it legally, as they now do illegally.

"A further part of the proposed plan, which on the face of it seems to present many administrative and political obstacles, but has a theoretical and possibly a practical interest, is as follows:

"Let the immigration of unskilled laborers be limited each year to a single foreign country or group of small countries, the order to be determined by international agreement. This would help to reduce numbers and would give those countries which believed they would profit by a great and sudden emigration of their people a chance to put it into practice.

"It is a question whether the present steady emigration really reduces population in any country or does them any real good. The necessity for action upon the immigration question is pressing. It is a part of the great conservation movement, having to do with the conservation of the American people."

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The strain experienced in the basket ball in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, last Thursday by the Quincy A. A. A. was noticeable last evening at the Boston College Gymnasium, where the local team went down in a 15 to 9 defeat at the hands of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. Even "Dan" Duggan failed to display his usual form and allowed his opponent Costello, to roll up nine of the fifteen points credited to the winners.

Then too, the outlay of the basket ball court rendered it very difficult for the home team to shoot baskets with accuracy, for up to last evening it had never played on a court where posts were in large numbers. The Cathedral team was familiar with the baskets and with the posts as well and thus could readilly adapt itself to the situation. Costello and O'Leary exhibited rare form for the winners, while Boyle and Kelly excelled for the losers.

The second team, however, kept up its winning streak and managed to emerge with a 17 to 8 victory. The Chapman Brothers and Dackers furnished the sensational work for the Quincy aggregation, while the work of Foley featured for the South End team. By losing last evening the Quincy A. A. senior team dropped into third place in the greater Boston A. A. A. U. league.

The announcement made yesterday to the effect that Ralph, most familiarly known as "Left" Ford, has signed up for next year with the Utica club of the New York State league, was received with great favor by the many local fans who had followed with eager eyes the career of the Quincy youngster and there was no one to be found who would not admit that the aforementioned has all the ear marks of an effective twirler. It will be remembered that the local lad was given a tryout last year by Jesse Burkett, and even though the Worcester manager could not at that time see his way clear to retain the Quincy club artist, he paid a high tribute to him, stating that "Left" gave every promise of rounding out into a pitcher who would prove a valuable acquisition to any aggregation.

While with Worcester, he shut out the strong Syracuse team and only his youthfulness prevented him from maintaining a berth in the Worcester squad. Ford is now only 18 years of age, but has already created an enviable reputation in base ball circles. He has a fine delivery and good control. He has an abundance of curves and speed, and besides is a good fielder and hitter. His many friends were loud in their praise of him yesterday and he will be very closely watched in the future.
